CORVO, the smallest and most westerly of the Azores, about 24 miles in circumference, with a small port. It contains about 800 souls, who cultivate wheat and feed hogs.

CORUSCANT, a. [corusco, Lat.] glittering by flashes; flashing.

CORUSCATION, s. a quick, sudden, and short darting of splendour; a flash; a glittering light.

CORVUS, in Astronomy, the Raven, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

CORYMBIATED, a. [corymbus, Lat.] in Botany, abounding or garnished with bunches of berries.

CORYMBIFEROUS, a. [corymbus and fero, Lat.] bearing fruit or berries in bunches.

CORYMBUS, CORRYMB, s. [Lat.] in Botany, that species of inflorescence, in which the main axis of the bunch soon terminates, and the secondary, tertiary, &c. buds form peduncles of such lengths, that the flowers are nearly on the same level. The peduncles near the base are much longer of course than the others. Yarrow or milfoil is a familiar instance of this kind.

CORYVREKAN, a dangerous whirlpool, on the W. coast of Scotland, between the isle of Scarbia and the N. point of Jura.

COSCI'NOMANCY, s. [koskinon and mantela, Gr.] the art of divination by a sieve.

COSÉCANT, s. in Geometry, the secant of an arch, which is the complement to another arch to 90 degrees.

COSIER, s. [coaser, old Fr.] a butcher; a low-lived person. A word of contempt.

COSINE, s. in Geometry, the part of the diameter intercepted between the centre and the right sine, and always equal to the sine of the complement of the arch.

COSMETIC, a. [kosmetikos, from kosmos, Gr.] having the power of improving the personal charms; beautifying or heightening beauty.

COSMICAL, a. [kosmos, Gr.] relating to the world. In Astronomy, rising together, or in the same degree of the ecliptic, with the sun.

COSMICALLY, ad. at the same time with the sun.

COSMO'GONY, s. [kosmos and gone, Gr.] the rise, origin, or creation of the world.

COSMO'GRAPHER, s. [kosmos and grapho, Gr.] one who composes a description of the relation, fitness, figure, and disposition of all the parts of the world.

COSMOGRAPHICAL, a. relating to the general description of the world.

COSMOGRAPHICALLY, ad. in a manner relating to the science by which the world is described.

COSMOGRAPHY, s. a description of the several parts of the world; or the art of delineating its several bodies according to their magnitudes, motions, relations, &c. It consists of geography and astronomy.

COSMOPOLITE, COSMOPOLITAN, s. [kosmos and polites, Gr.] a citizen of the world; one who is at home in all companies, and in all countries.

COSSACKS, a people inhabiting originally the confines of Poland, Russia, Tatar, and Turkey, between the Jaik and the Dneister. They are divided into several branches, the Kosakki sa Porovi, or Cossacks on the Borysthene; the Kosakki Donski, or Cossacks on the Don; and the Kosakki Jaiki, which are the wildest of them all, dwelling in large villages along the banks of the river Ural, or Jaik, and the N. coast of the Caspian Sea. They are now entirely subject to Russia; and the Ukraine, or country of the Cossacks of Borysthene, is become a government under the name of Ekaterinoslav. The Cossacks are large and robust, have blue eyes, brown hair, and aquiline noses. Their towns are built of wood, like those of the Russians. Their numbers are upwards of 1,000,000, but are not certainly known.

COSSET, s. among farmers, a colt, calf, or lamb, brought up by the hand without the dam.

COST, s. [cost, Belg.] the price or money given for the purchase of a thing; charge; expence. Figuratively, sumptuousness; luxury; loss; detriment. In Law, the best thing for the lawyer, and the worst for his client.

To COST, v. n. preter, and participle preter. cost; [couster, Fr.] to be purchased or bought at a particular sum.

COSTAL, a. [costa, Lat.] belonging to the ribs.

COSTANTINAH, a large city of N. Africa, in the former state of Algiers. It is, as its name implies, of Roman origin, and there are relics of their architecture, &c. existing to this day. It has a strong situation, being almost surrounded by the river Roomelch. It lies above 200 miles from Algiers. But little is known of it, beyond its being independent, having successfully resisted the French invasion.

COSTARD, s. the head or skull. In Gardening, a round bulky apple, somewhat resembling the head.

COSTER, LAWRENCE, according to some, the inventor of the art of printing, by cutting letters in the bark of the beech, and making impressions of them with ink, on paper. From this he proceeded to use various metals; and succeeded even in printing a book. But there are many rivals to the citizen of Haarlem; and the Romans themselves, who used to stamp their Amphore with the names of the consuls in the year of the vintage, and employed a stamp, much like Coster's stereotype plates, might dispute his claim. He lived about 1430.

COSTIVE, a. [costipatus, Lat.] bound in the body; close; unpermeable.

COSTIVENESS, s. in Medicine, a preternatural detention of the feces.

COSTLINESS, s. sumptuousness; expensiveness; the great value, or sum, required for the purchase of a thing.

COSTLY, a. requiring a large sum, or much money, for its purchase; expensive. Figuratively, rare; valuable.

COSTMARY, s. [costus and Maria, Lat.] an herb, called also alcot and balsam herb.

COSTREL, s. a bottle.

COSTUME, s. dress; style of dress.

COT, COTE, or COAT, at the end of the names of places, come generally from the Saxon cot, a cottage.

COT, s. (Sax.) a hut; a cottage.

COTANGENT, s. in Geometry, the tangent of an arch which is the complement of another to 90 degrees.

CÔTE-D'OR, a department of France, surrounded by those of the Saône-et-Loire, Jura, Haute Saône, Haute Marne, Aube, Yonne, and Nievre. It is about 75 miles in each direction. A range of hills connected with the Cevennes gives name to the department. It is watered by the Seine and many of its tributaries, which rise here, or hard by; and by the Saône, and others which flow into the Rhone. It is well cultivated, and grows good corn. It is the chief district for that kind of wine called Burgundy, which constitutes the greater part of its trade.

It has a few manufactures. Dijon is the chief town. Population, about 400,000.

COTEMPORARY, a. [con and tempus, Lat.] living at the same time with another.

COT-LAND, s. land belonging to a cottage.

COTQUEAN, s. a person who officiously concerns himself with women's affairs.

CÔTES DU NORD, a department of France, lying on the English Channel, and surrounded by the departments of Finisterre, Morbihan, and Ile-et-Vilaine. It is about 80 miles in length, and 50 broad. There is a chain of granite hills running E. and W. through it, from which spring many streams that water it, of which the Rance is the chief. The coast is pointed with many capes, and almost defended by islets and insulated rocks, which make the navigation very dangerous. It has fine pastures, and good arable land, producing corn, wine, and brandy. It exports these, and the produce of its mines and quarries, iron, building-stone, coal, &c. It has some manufactures, particularly of linen cloth. The inhabitants of the coast are engaged in fishing. St. Brieux is its capital. Population, above 600,000.

COTES, ROGER, an eminent mathematician, who held the Plumian professorship of that science at Cambridge. He edited Newton's Principia, and was the author of many valuable papers relating to this subject, some of which were collected and published after his death, which happened in 1716, when his age was but 34 years.

COTESWOLD, s. a hilly plain, with several sheep-cotes, and sheep feeding. It comes from the Saxon cote, a cottage, and wold, a place where there is no wood.

COTESWOLD HILLS, a long tract of high ground in the E. part of Gloucestershire, noted for large flocks of sheep with fleeces of fine white wool; a great part of it, however, is now devoted to the growth of corn.

COTILLION, s. the name of a once fashionable dance, now forgotten.

COTTAGE, s. See COT.

COTTAGER, s. one who dwells in a hut or cottage. In Law, one who lives on a common, without paying rent, and without any lands of his own.

COTTIN, SOPHIE, MADAME, author of the well-known tale of Elizabeth, or the Exiles of Siberia, and of some other works not so well known, nor so deserving to be. Her husband was a banker at Paris, who left her a widow in the midst of the French Revolution, whereupon she left the city, and led a secluded literary and beneficent life, till 1807, when she died, aged 34 years.

COTTON, SIR ROBERT, the founder of the famous library of MSS. now in the British Museum. It was once in danger of being destroyed by fire; 200 were destroyed or damaged at the time. He was a man of great learning and renown in his day, being acquainted with most of the scholars and antiquaries of the times. He died in 1631, as he said, of grief at being shut out from his library by the arbitrary government, aged 61 years.

COTTON, s. [coton, Fr.] the down of the fruit of the cotton tree. Cotton likewise signifies a kind of cloth made of its threads when spun. Gun cotton, is a highly explosive substance, made by soaking thoroughly but rapidly vegetable fibre, such as cotton or linen, in a mixture of sulphuric and nitric acids, washing all but what is actually absorbed away, and drying it. It is too explosive for any purpose at present known save blasting.

COTTONGRASS, s. in Botany, a genus of plants whose seeds are abundantly covered with a soft cottony down. There are two British species, viz. the common, and hare's-tail. Poor people stuff their pillows with the down, and make wicks for candles with it.

To COUCH, v. n. [coucher, Fr.] to lie down on a bed; to lie down on the knees bent under, applied to beasts; to lie in wait, or ambush; to lie under as a stratum; to stoop or sink down, through pressure of a heavy burthen, or through pain, fear, or respect; to include; to comprise; to urge by way of implication; to include by way of analogy or indirectly; to incline a spear to a proper posture for attack. In Surgery, to take off a film, which obstructs the sight, called improperly, couching the eye, or couching a patient, instead of couching a cataract.

COUCH, s. a long seat furnished with a mattress, on which people lie down for repose or ease; a lay or stratum.

COU/CHANT, (kooshong) s. [Fr.] lying down; squatting. In Heraldry, applied to the posture of a beast lying with his belly on the ground, his legs bent under him, and his head looking forward.

COU/CHÉE, (kooshee) s. [Fr.] the time of going to bed, opposed to leave. The name applied to assemblies that used to be held in the French and other courts, corresponding with those still in vogue called levees.

COU/CHER, s. one who couches persons for cataracts, an oculist.

COU/CHGRASS, s. in Botany, one of the most troublesome grasses to cultivators, having a creeping root which enables it to spread rapidly, and to destroy all other plants, or mar their growth.

COVE, s. [couverir, Fr.] a small creek or bay; a shelter, a coveer.

COVENANT, s. [convenant, Fr.] an agreement between two persons. The Solemn League and Covenant, was an agreement proposed by certain commissioners appointed by the Presbyterians in Scotland, to watch over the encroachments on their liberties and consciences, made in Charles I.'s reign, by the attempt to establish Episcopacy there, binding all who signed it to resist to the death every attempt made to disparage or harm what they regarded as the true religion, viz. Presbyterianism and Calvinism.

To COVENANT, v. a. to bargain; to agree or stipulate; to agree with a person on certain conditions.

COVENANTEE, s. in Law, one who is a party to an agreement or covenant.

COVENANTER, s. one who makes an agreement with another. In History, one who signed the Solemn League and Covenant.

COVENOUS, a. in Law, fraudulent; with an intention to deceive or cheat.

COVENTRY, Warwickshire, a large city, noted for its manufactures of silks, cloths, stuffs, thread, gauzes, camlets, &c. It has communication, by canals, with Oxford, Lichfield, many other inland navigations, and with the Thames. There are several fine churches, and a noble town hall. The story of Leofric, Earl of Mercia, heavily taxing the citizens, and relieving them only on condition of the Lady Godiva, his wife, riding naked through the city, with the tradition of Peeping Tom, who was thereupon struck blind, are well known, and are commemorated by the exhibition of a mock procession annually. Coventry is 91 miles from London. Market, Friday. Fairs on May 2nd, Friday in Trinity Week, and November 1st. Pop. 30,743.

To COVER, v. a. [couvrir, Fr.] to spread, or overspread with something; to conceal under something; to hide by false appearances or specious pretexts; to overwhelm or bury; to conceal, as in a wrapper, from human sight; to incubate; to brood on.

COVER, s. that which is spread over another. Figuratively, concealment; a specious pretence to conceal or hide a person's designs, used with for. Also, shelter; a place free from danger, used with under.

COVERDALE, MILES, one of our English Reformers, the famous Bible translator, who was in the reign of Edward VI. made Bishop of Exeter, was persecuted and excommunicated by Mary, narrowly escaping the stake, and under Elizabeth was one of the Puritan leaders or fathers in London, receiving a grudging and scanty portion of royal favour in the shape of a living in town. He was concerned in Tyndale's translation of the New Testament, his own translation, Cranmer's Bible, and the Geneva Version. He also promoted by various writings the cause he had espoused. He died in 1568, aged 80 years.

COVERING, s. dress; any thing spread over another.

COVERLET, s. [couverlet, Fr.] the uppermost part of the bed-clothes; or an ornamental covering thrown over the rest of the bed-clothes.

COVERT, s. [couvert, Fr.] a shelter; a place of defence from danger; a thicket or hiding-place.

COVERT, a. [couvert, Fr.] sheltered; not open or exposed. Figuratively, secret; private; concealed by some fair pretext, or specious appearance. In Law, under protection or shelter; hence femme couverte is used for a married woman. Covert way, in Fortification, a space of ground level with the field on the edge of the ditch, three or four fathom broad, ranging round the half moons, or other works.

COVERTLY, ad. in a secret, private, or indirect manner.

COVERTNESS, s. the quality of being hidden, unperceived, indirect, or insidious.

COVERTURE, s. shelter; defence against any danger or inconvenience. Figuratively, a specious pretext or appearance to conceal a bad design. In Law, the state or condition of a married woman.

To COVERT, v. a. [couverir, Fr.] to desire vehemently what a person is not possessed of; to prosecute; or endeavour to acquire with great eagerness.—v. n. to have a strong and violent desire.

COVETABLE, a. that is proper, or fit, or worthy to be desired or wished for.

COVETOUS, a. [coveteux, Fr.] excessively desirous of; inordinately eager after the acquiring and preserving of money; avaricious, in a bad sense. Desirous, fond, or eager to possess, used in a good sense.

COVETOUSLY, ad. in a greedy, avaricious manner.

COVETOUSNESS, s. the quality of being inordinately fond of money, or eager after gain.

COVEY, s. [couvee, Fr.] applied to Game, a batch, or an old bird with her young; a number or collection of birds near one another.

COUGH, (koff) s. [kuch, Belg.] in Medicine, a convulsive motion of the diaphragm, the muscles of the larynx, thorax, and abdomen, violently shaking and expelling the air drawn into the lungs by respiration.

To COUGH, v. n. to have the diaphragm or lungs convulsed by the irritation of the mucous membrane, and thence to expel the air from the lungs with a sort of explosive sound; to make a noise by endeavouring to discharge the trachea or lungs of the lymph with which it is overcharged.—v. a. to eject by coughing, used with up.

COUGHIN, (kiffer) s. a person affected with a cough.

COVIN, COVINE, s. [convenir, Fr.] an agreement between two or more, in order to cheat a person.

COVING, s. [couvrir, Fr.] in Building, applied to houses projecting over the ground-plot, or the turned projecture, arched with timber, lathed and plastered.

COULD, [the preterimperfect of CAN.] was able to; had power to.

COULO/MB, CHARLES DE, an eminent French electrician and natural philosopher of the period of the Revolution and the empire. His researches in mechanical science were of extreme value, but his labours in electrical science made electro-statics a branch of mathematical physics. His balance of torsion, an instrument made to show the presence and amount of the least imaginable portion of electrical force; the simple means by which he showed that this electricity varied in its depth on different bodies and on different parts of the same body; his great discovery that the law of electrical forces was identical with the law of gravitation; his constant habit of fixing on those cases which admitted of mathematical measurement or computation, the intentional ratio of Lord Bacon; and the skill with which by his instruments he made almost all cases become such—these have made his name most illustrious amongst the many who occupy foremost places in this and the last age. He died in 1806, aged 70 years.

COUL/TER, s. [culter, Lat.] the sharp iron which cuts the earth perpendicularly before the ploughshare.

COUNCIL, s. [concilium, Lat.] an assembly met together to consider, examine, or deliberate on any subject. Common-council, is a court wherein are made all by-laws that bind the citizens. It consists of two parts, the upper and the lower; the upper is composed of the lord mayor and aldermen, and the lower of a number of common-council men chosen by the several wards, as representatives of the body of citizens. Priory-council of this kingdom, consists of the great officers of state, with such others as the sovereign is pleased to summon with them, who are bound by oath to advise the monarch to the best of their judgment, with all the fidelity and secrecy that becomes their station. Cabinet-council, a select number chosen out of the priory-council, with whom the sovereign determines such matters as are most important, and require the utmost secrecy. Council of war, is an assembly of the principal officers of an army or fleet, convened by the general or admiral to concert measures for their conduct in their respective operations. Ecclesiastical or general council, in Ecclesiastical History, is an assembly of representatives from the whole body calling itself the universal church. The most important of these councils are; the Council of Nice, held in the 4th century, for the condemnation of Arianism, which originated the Nicene Creed; the Council of Constance, held in the 15th century, which denied the cup in the eucharist to the laity, condemned Wicliffe, Huss, and Jerome of Prague, for heresy, and ordered the ashes of the first to be dug from his grave and cast into the river, and the other two to be burnt alive; and the Council of Trent, held in the 16th century, which fixed the Romanist Church as it is now. Provincial council, an assembly of the prelates of a province under their metropolitan. National council, is the assembly of all the prelates in a nation under their primate or metropolitan.

COUNCIL-BOARD, s. a table at which matters of state are taken into consideration.

COUNSEL, s. [counselum, Lat.] advice; direction; deliberation; prudence; secrecy; scheme; design. In Law, a person who pleads at the bar, an abbreviation of counsellor.

To COUNSEL, v. a. [counselor, Lat.] to give advice, or inform a person of the most advantageous way of regulating any point in his conduct, or ordering any particular measure; to advise any particular measure.

COUNSELLABLE, a. ready to follow the advice or persuasion of others.

COUNSELLOR, s. one who gives advice to, or endeavours to persuade, another; a confidant. Figuratively, one whose province it is to advise in matters of state. In Law, a person who is consulted on any difficulty arising in any writing, who pleads at the bar, and has been admitted as a barrister.

COUNSELLORSHIP, s. the office or post of counsellor.

To COUNT, v. a. [compter, Fr.] to number, or tell; to reckon; to esteem; to account, or look upon in any particular light; to impute or charge; used with to.—v. n. to draw as a consequence from; to found or build a scheme or argument upon.

COUNT, s. [compte, Fr.] See COUNT.

COUNT, s. [comte, Fr.] in several states of the continent, a nobleman who possesses a domain erected in a county, in rank between a duke and baron, and bears on his arms a coronet, adorned with three precious stones, and surmounted with three large leaves, whereof those in the middle and extremities advance above the rest. In England the title of earl is equivalent to that of count in foreign countries. In Law, one division of an indictment in a criminal court.

COUNTABLE, a. that may be numbered.

COUNTENANCE, s. [contenance, Fr.] the form of the face, or particular cast of the features; air, or look; confidence of mien; show; resemblance. To keep countenance, a composure of the features and complexion wherein they undergo no change. Figuratively, protection, patronage.

To COUNTENANCE, v. a. to support, favour, or protect. Figuratively, to act suitably to; to keep up the appearance of a thing; to encourage; to appear in defence of.

COUNTENCANCER, s. one who appears in behalf of, or encourages a person or design.

COUNTER, s. [comptoir, Fr.] a small piece of money used as a means of reckoning. The table or board on which goods are shown, or money told in a shop. In Farriery, that part of a horse's forehead that lies between the shoulder and under the neck.

COUNTER, ad. [contre, Fr.] in opposition to; contrary to. This word is often used in composition, and may be placed before any word used in a sense of opposition.

To COUNTERACT, v. a. to destroy the power of any cause, by acting contrary to it.

To COUNTERBALANCE, v. a. to weigh one thing against another. Figuratively, to act against with an opposite effect.

To COUNTERBUFF, v. a. to beat back a thing in motion, in a direction contrary to that in which it moved at first.

COUNTERCHANGE, s. exchange; reciprocation.

To COUNTERCHANGE, v. a. to give and receive; to change one thing for another.

To COUNTERCHARM, v. a. to destroy the effect of a charm by counteracting it.

To COUNTERCHECK, v. a. to stop by a sudden obstruction or opposition.

To COUNTERDRAW, v. a. to copy by a design by means of some linen cloth, oiled paper, or some transparent substance, whereon the strokes appearing, are followed or traced with a pencil.

COUNTEREVIDENCE, s. testimony by which the deposition of some former witness is opposed.

To COUNTERFEIT, v. a. [contre faire, Fr.] to copy or imitate with an intention to make the thing pass for an original; to imitate; to resemble. Figuratively, to put on the appearance of something really excellent.

COUNTERFEIT, a. made or copied from another, with an intention to pass for an original; forged; fictitious. Figuratively, deceitful; hypocritical.

COUNTERFEIT, s. one who personates another; an impostor; something made in imitation of another, intended to pass for that which it resembles; a forgery.

COUNTERFEITER, s. a forger; one who imitates a thing with an intention to pass the resemblance as an original.

COUNTERFEITLY, ad. with forgery; fictitiously; with dissimulation.

COUNTERGAGE, s. in Carpentry, a method used in measuring the joints, by transferring the breadth of a mortise to the place in the timber where the tenon is to be, in order to make them fit each other.

COUNTERGUARD, s. a small rampart, with a parapet and ditch, to cover some part of the body of the place.

COUNTERLIGHT, s. in Painting, a window or light opposite any thing, which makes it appear to a disadvantage.

To COUNTERMAND, v. a. [contremander, Fr.] to order something contrary to what has been commanded; to contradict or repeal an order. Figuratively, to oppose; to set oneself in opposition to the commands of another.

To COUNTERMARCH, v. n. to march in a direction opposite to that in which an army began; to march back.

COUNTERMARCH, s. in War, a change of the wings and front of a battalion, whereby the men in front come to be in the rear. Figuratively, a change or alteration of measures or conduct, opposite to those which preceded.

COUNTERMARK, s. a second or third mark put on a bale of goods belonging to several persons, that it may not be opened but in the presence of them all.

COUNTERMINE, s. in War, a subterraneous passage made by the besieged in search of the enemy's mine, to take out the powder, give air to it, or any other way to frustrate its effects.

To COUNTERMINE, v. a. to dig a passage into an enemy's mine, by which the powder may be taken out, air given to it, or means used to frustrate its intention. Figuratively, to frustrate a design; to counterwork or defeat by secret measures.

COUNTERMOTION, s. a motion opposite or contrary to another.

COUNTERMURE, s. [contremur, Fr.] a little wall built close to another to strengthen and secure it.

COUNTERNATURAL, a. contrary to nature.

COUNTERNOISE, s. a sound or noise made in opposition to another in order to drown it, and hinder its being heard.

COUNTEROPENING, s. an opening, vent, or aperture, opposite to another.

COUNTERPANE, s. [contrepoint, Fr.] a cloth or ornamental covering laid over a bed.

COUNTERPART, s. a part opposite to, or which answers, another. In Law, the half or part of any document kept by one party to an agreement, as a check on the other party.

COUNTERPLEA, s. the plea of a respondent to that of another; a reply in order to oppose the plea of another.

To COUNTERPLOT, v. a. to lay one plot against another; to endeavour to hinder the effects of, by forming and carrying on one of contrary tendency.

COUNTERPLOT, s. a stratagem or artifice opposed to another.

COUNTER-POINT, s. [contre-point, Fr.] in Music, the art of composing the harmony to a melody or air; this is single counterpoint. In double counterpoint the air is so harmonized, that sometimes one and sometimes another part sustains it, without injury to the effect.

To COUNTERPOISE, (haunterpoise) v. a. [contre and poids, Fr.] to place one weight against another; to act against with equal weight. Figuratively, to produce a contrary action by an equal weight; to act with equal power against any person or cause.

COUNTERPOISE, (haunterpoise) s. a weight which is heavy enough to counterbalance another. Figuratively, an equivalent, or thing of equal worth with another.

COUNTERPOISON, s. antidote; medicines by which the effects of poison are obviated.

COUNTERPRESSURE, s. an opposite force or measure, by which that which presses the contrary way is counterpoised or destroyed.

COUNTERPROJECT, s. correspondent part of a scheme.

COUNTERSCARP, s. [contrescarpe, Fr.] in Fortification, that part of the ditch which is next the camp, or the acclivity or exterior part of the ditch next the country, or field; sometimes it is taken for the whole covert-way, or glacis.

TO COUNTERSIGN, (kountersin) v. a. to sign an order or instrument signed before by a king or person of high rank; thus when a charter is signed by the king, and afterwards by the secretary, the latter is said to countersign it.

COUNTER-TENOR, s. one of the mean or middle parts of music, so called because opposite to the tenor.

COUNTERTIDE, s. contrary tide; fluctuations of the water.

COUNTERTURN, s. in Dramatic Poetry, the catastasis, or full growth of a play, which destroys the expectation, embroils the action in new difficulties, and leaves a person distant from that hope in which it found him.

TO COUNTERVAIL, v. a. [contra and valere, Lat.] to act with a force opposite to another; to be of equal force with another. Figuratively, to be equal to; to compensate for; to counterbalance.

COUNTERVAIL, s. equal weight or force; power or value sufficient to oppose or hinder any contrary effect, or objection. Figuratively, a compensation, or that which is of equal force with something else.

COUNTERVIEW, s. opposition, or a situation in which two persons view each other. Figuratively, opposition, or a design which is contrary to that of another. In Painting, a contrast, or situation in which two things illustrate or set off each other.

TO COUNTERWORK, v. a. to endeavour to hinder any other effect by acting against it; to contravert.

COUNTESS, s. [comtesse, Fr.] the wife of a count or earl.

COUNTING-HOUSE, s. a place or room where traders post and settle their books, or keep their accounts.

COUNTLESS, a. innumerable; without number; not to be reckoned.

COUNTRY, (kóuntry) s. [contrée, Fr.] a tract of land under one government. Figuratively, agricultural districts, in opposition to townships and cities and suburban districts; the place of any person's birth or dwelling.

COUNTRY, (kóuntry) a. rude; unpolished; uncultivated; rustic; at a distance in situation, or opposite in principles, to the court. Figuratively, rude; untaught; ignorant.

COUNTRY-DANCE, s. [contredanse, Fr.] a kind of dance formerly very fashionable, in which the dancers stood opposite to each other, the ladies in one line, and the gentlemen in another. There were very many varieties of it.

COUNTRYMAN, (kóuntryman) s. one born in the same kingdom or shire with another. Figuratively, a person bred at a distance from cities or courts. A farmer; a husbandman.

COUNTY, s. [comté, Fr.] originally signified the estate of a count, or so far as he had any jurisdiction; at present it is used in the same sense with a shire, both containing a compass or portion of the realm, into the which all the land is divided for the better government thereof; so that there is no portion of land that is not contained within some county. There are 40 counties in England, and 12 in Wales. Counties or shires are subdivided into rapes, laths, wapentakes, and hundreds, and these into tithings, &c. In all the counties, except Durham, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, officers are appointed every Michaelmas term under the denomination of sheriffs, for the executing justice; other officers of the counties are lord lieutenants, who command the militia, custodes retularum, justices of the peace, bailiffs, high constables, and coroners. Three of the counties are called palatine, viz. Lancaster, Chester, and Durham: Ely, which is in Cambridgeshire, was once a county palatine. They formerly had very great privileges, that are now very much abridged.

COUPÉE, (kóupée) s. [Fr.] in Dancing, a motion made with the leg forwards, while the other is bent and suspended from the ground. Also, the front division of a stage-coach in France, and of a first-class railway carriage in England, being like a post-chaise, open in the front, and having seats only at the back.

COUPLE, (kúple) s. [couple, Fr.] a chain or band which holds dogs together; two; a pair. Figuratively, a male and female joined in marriage.

TO COUPLE, (kúple) v. a. [copulo, Lat.] to chain or fasten two or more dogs together. Figuratively, to join two or more things of the same kind together; to join two persons together in marriage.

COUPLET, (kúplet) s. [Fr.] two verses rhyming together. Figuratively, a pair.

COURAGE, (kúraje) s. a manly bravery of mind, which enables a person to run any risks, undergo any difficulties, and confront any dangers, arising from a sense of duty, and a fear of offending Him that made us.

COURAGEOUS, (kúrajeus) a. [courageux, Fr.] resolutely bold, and undertaking any enterprise, though attended with dangers, and surrounded with difficulties.

COURAGEOUSLY, (kúrajeusly) ad. in a manner free from fear, and resolutely opposing difficulties and dangers.

COURAGEOUSNESS, s. bravery; boldness; spirit; courage.

COURANT, (kóurant) s. [courante, Fr.] any thing which is spread or published quickly; hence courant has been used for the title of a newspaper. Also, a kind of dance, formerly very fashionable.

COURIER, s. [courier, Fr.] a messenger sent in haste with despatches relating to the state; an express. Also used as the title of a newspaper.

COURTLAND, (duchy) of a province of Russia, bounded on the N. by the Gulf of Riga and part of Livonia; on the W. by the Baltic; on the E. by Minsk and Vitepsk; and on the S. by Wilna and part of Prussia. It is 250 miles long and 120 broad. The country swells into gentle hills, and is fertile in corn, hemp, and flax. It is mostly open; but in some parts covered with forests of pine and fir, and groves of oak, with much under-wood. The woods abound with bears, wolves, and elks. The villages are neat, and the habits of the people simple. It exports timber, corn, skins, and other produce of the land. The religion is chiefly Lutheran. Mittan is the capital. The population is about 500,000.

COURSE, (kóurse) s. [cursus, from curro, to run, Lat.] a race. Figuratively, the place where races are run; passage from place to place; progress; a tilt; act of running in the lists; the track in which a ship sails; a turn in order of succession, used with in. "Every one in his course;" a methodical procedure, or regular series of instruction, as, a course of philosophy, chemistry, &c. In Cookery, a number of dishes set at one time on the table. Of course, by consequence, by settled rule. In Architecture, a continued range of stones, level, or of the same height throughout the whole length of a building, without any interruption or aperture. Courses, the mainsails and foresails of a ship.

TO COURSE, (kóurse) v. a. to hunt; to pursue game; to pursue with dogs that hunt in view; to exercise in running or galloping.—v. n. to run; to pass; or make itself a passage; to rove.

COURSER, (kóürser) s. a swift horse; a war horse.

COURT, (kúört) s. [cour, Fr.] the place where a prince resides; an open space before a house; a small place enclosed with buildings, excepting an avenue which leads to it, and having no other passage at the other end. Likewise, a large hall or room where justice is publicly administered. Courts are of various kinds; and are either held in the king's name, as all the ordinary courts; or where the precepts are issued in the name of the judge, as the admiral's court. The superior courts are those of the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, the Exchequer, and the Court of Chancery. (See them under their respective heads.) A court of record has power to hold plea, of real, personal, and mixed actions, where the debt is 40s. or above; as the court of King's Bench, &c. A base court, or court not of record, is, where it cannot hold plea of debt or damage, amounting to 40s., or where proceedings are not according to the course of the common law; such as the county court, court of hundreds, court baron, &c. Court Baron is a court held by every lord of a manor within his own precincts, by common law and custom; the former is where the barons or freeholders, being suitors, are the judges; the other is that where the lord, or his steward, is the judge.

Court of Chivalry, or the Marshal's Court, of which the lord high constable and the earl marshal of England were judges. This court is the fountain of martial law, and the earl marshal is not only one of the judges, but is to see execution done. Court of Conscience, a court in the cities of London and Westminster, and some other places, where all causes where the debt and damages come under 40s. are determined. Court of Delegates, where delegates are appointed by the king's commission, under the great seal, upon an appeal to him; and is granted in three cases: 1. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause by the archbishop, or his official; 2. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause in places exempt; and 3. When sentence is given in the court of admiralty, in suits civil or marine, by order of the civil law. Court of Hustings, is a court of record, held at Guildhall, for the city of London, before the lord mayor and aldermen, sheriffs and recorder, where all pleas, real, personal, and mixt, are determined; where all lands, tenements, &c. within the said city, or its bounds, are pleadable, in two Hustings: the one called the Hustings of the pleas of lands, and the other the Hustings of the common pleas. This is the highest court within the city, in which writs of exigent may be taken out, and outlawries awarded, wherein judgment is given by the recorder. Court-Leet, is a court held by the lord of a manor wherein all offences, except high treason, are inquired into, and punished. Court-Martial, is appointed for inquiring into and punishing offences in officers, soldiers, and sailors, in a manner agreeable to the regulations of the mutiny bill. Court of Requests, was anciently a court of equity, of the same nature with the chancery, but inferior to it; and has been long since abolished. Figuratively, the retinue or persons which attend on a prince in his palace; any jurisdiction, military, civil, or ecclesiastical; the art of pleasing or insinuation.

TO COURT, (kört) v. a. to woo; to endeavour to engage the affections of a woman with a view of marriage. Figuratively, to solicit; to seek after with eagerness; to flatter; to endeavour to please; or to insinuate oneself into the good graces of another.

COURT-DAY, s. the day on which justice is solemnly administered.

COURTEOUS, (körtuous, or kurteous) a. [courtois, Fr.] affable; polite; full of respect and civility.

COURTEOUSLY, (körtuously, or kurteously) ad. in a respectful, civil, complaisant manner.

COURTEOUSNESS, (körtousness, or kurteousness) s. civil, affable, and complaisant behaviour, tending to gain the affection of another.

COURTESY, (körtsey, or kurtesy) s. [courtoisie, Fr.] an affable and polite address; an act of kindness, civility, or respect. Figuratively, the method in which women show their respect of ceremony, i. e. by bending the knees and sinking the body. In Law, a tenure, not of right, but purely by the favour and good nature of others. Courtesy of England, is applied to a right which a person has to an inheritance who marries an heiress, that has a child by him, after both she and the child are dead. Prov. Full of courtesy, full of craft.

TO COURT/ESY, (pron. körtsey) v. n. to sink the body by bending the knees, applied to the method used by women to show their respect.

COURT-HAND, (kört-hand) s. a large square character abounding in abbreviations, in which records and law proceedings were formerly written.

COURTIER, (körtier) s. one who frequents the court of princes; one who espouses the measures of the court, in opposition to those of the country; one who solicits and endeavours to engage the affections or esteem of another.

COURTLIKE, (körtlike) a. elegant; polite; resembling the court.

COURTLINESS, (körtliness) s. elegance of manners, civility of behaviour, and politeness of address.

COURTLY, (körtly) a. relating to, favouring, or flattering the court.—ad. in the manner of courtiers, elegantly.

COURTRAI, a town of Belgium, seated on the Lys. It is famous for its linen manufactures. It has also other textile manufactures. It has amongst its public buildings some very noble structures, especially some churches. It is about 25 miles from Brussels. Its population is about 20,000. Lat. 51. 0. N. Long. 3. 20. E.

COURTSHIP, (körtship) s. the act of endeavouring to gain the favour of a superior, or the affections of a woman.

COU'SIN, (kúzin) s. [Fr.] a title of relation, applied to those who are born of two sisters or two brothers. Figuratively, a title given by the king to a nobleman, especially to such as form the privy-council.

COW, s. in the plural anciently kine or keen, but now cows; [cu, Sax.] the female of the ox tribe; its young are called calves; the male, a bull; and its flesh, when killed, beef.

TO COW, v. a. [by a contraction from coward,] to depress, to keep in great subjection, so as to render a person unable to undertake any bold and generous action.

COWARD, s. [coward, Fr.] a person who is viciously timorous, or afraid of opposing danger; a word of reproach. SYNON. The coward will fire up upon the least offence, but proceed no further. The poltroon is so meantly spirited as through want of courage to take every insult calmly. The coward draws back; the poltroon dares not advance.

COWARDICE, s. an excessive timorousness, which renders a person the contempt of his adversaries, and the scorn of his friends.

COWARDLINESS, s. the quality of acting like a coward.

COWARDLY, a. fearful; timorous; pusillanimous.

COWARDLY, ad. in the manner of a person who is afraid to show resentment, or oppose an enemy.

COWBRIDGE, Glamorganshire, in South Wales. It is called by the Welch Pont-Van, from the stone bridge over the river, which soon after falls into the sea. It is seated in a low bottom, and in a fertile soil. The streets are broad and paved. The market is well supplied with corn, cattle, sheep, and provisions. It is 170 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1080.

COWBANE, s. in Botany, the long-leaved water hemlock.

TO COWER, v. n. [cerrain, Brit.] to stoop by bending the knees, applied to beasts. Figuratively, to stoop or hang over a thing, applied to the attitude of a human creature.

COWES, EAST and WEST, a sea-port on the N. coast of the Isle of Wight, divided by the river Meden, or Medina. It is a place of good trade, resorted to by merchant-ships waiting for convoy, passage-boats to and from Portsmouth, Southampton, &c., and the station of the packet, with the mail from the island to London. Pop. 4987.

COWISH, a. timorous; fearful to a vice.

COWKEEPER, s. one whose business is to keep cows.

COWL, s. [cugle, Sax.] a kind of covering for the head worn by monks; a vessel in which water is carried on a pole between two persons.

COW-LEECH, s. one who professes to cure distempered cows.

COWLEY, ABRAHAM, one of those poets whose lot has been extravagant but short-lived fame. His prose is better than his poetry; and he is the author of many of the metaphysical phrases of a Platonic cast, current in English schools of philosophy and divinity. He was a learned man. Living in the troubled times of England, he adhered to the royalist cause, and experienced the customary ingratitude of Charles II. He died in 1667, aged 48 years.

COWPER, WILLIAM, an English poet, whose influence has been of the happiest kind, and whose name has come to be a household word amongst us. Never perplexing by remote allusions, and illustrations from fields trodden only by the learned, nor by metaphysical subtleties and speculations; rarely tedious; always chaste and elegant, yet most simple and natural in style; always displaying a heart alive to all that is beautiful, and true, and holy; dealing with familiar things, and making all dealt with familiar; manly and vigorous in opposition to wrong; filled with tender, yet not weak sympathy, for all suffering; amusing with frequent sallies of humour; unstained by a thought that could pain the poorest feelings; his poems are read and loved by all, and will be read and loved so long as there remains an English home. His retired life presents nothing of great moment to record beyond his friendship for Newton of Olney, the unwearied and almost maternal love of Mrs. Unwin, and the melancholy periods of his nervous prostration, which his too susceptible spirit mistook for exclusion from all hope of Divine mercy. He died in 1800, aged 69 years.

COW-POX, s. See VACCINATION.

COWQUAKES, s. in Botany, a provincial term for the quake-grass or ladies-hair.

COWSLIP, s. [cuslippe, Sax.] in Botany, a common spring plant, with a cluster of sweet-scented, yellow, cinq-spotted, drooping flowers, a species of the primrose.

COVS-LUNGWORT, s. in Botany, a species of mullein, called also highwater, common on dry ditch banks.

COWWEED, s. in Botany, the common wild chervil.

COWWHEAT, s. in Botany, a common meadow plant, of which there are two species, viz. the crested and purple.

COXCOMB, (kizcom) s. an ignorant pretender to knowledge and polite accomplishments.

COXWOLD, Yorkshire, N. R. It is 214 miles from London. Pop. 1076.

COY, a. [coi, Fr.] modest; reserved; not submitting to the familiarities of a lover, or testifying any approbation of his advances.

TO COY, v. n. to behave with reserve and disapprobation of the familiarities of a lover; to condescend with reluctance.

COYLY, ad. with reserve; with unwillingness to admit any advances of a lover.

COYNESS, s. reserve; unwillingness to admit the advances or familiarities of a lover.

COYSTREL, s. a degenerate kind of hawk.

TO COZEN, (kizn) v. a. to impose on by feigned appearances; to cheat, trick, or defraud.

COZENAGE, (kiznaje) s. imposing upon a person by false appearances, in order to deprive him of his property; a fraud.

COZENET, (kizner) s. one who defrauds another by means of specious pretences, or false appearances.

CRAB, s. [crabba, Sax.] in Natural History, a genus of crustaceous animals, almost all of which reside in the sea, hiding themselves in holes in rocks, and under stones, or in piers; or else burrowing in the sand. Our common crab, which sometimes attains to a prodigious size, is well known, and is esteemed a great delicacy. Another species common on our coasts, is the Hermit crab, or Soldier crab, which, having no shelly covering for its body, appropriates to its use for the purpose of defence, the shells of the periwinkle, whelk, &c. according to its size. It is very pugnacious in its habits, especially against its own kind. The crabs of the tropical seas are very singular in the form of their shells, and some are thickly covered with sharp points. In Botany, a wild sour apple, or the tree that bears it. Figuratively, a sour, cross, morose person; a wooden engine with three claws, used in launching ships, or heaving them into the docks. In Astronomy, one of the signs of the Zodiac. See CANCER.

CRAB, a. It is used by way of contempt for any sour or degenerate fruit; as, a crab cherry, a crab plum.

CRABBE, GEORGE, an English poet, who has excelled in faithful representations of characters and scenes he was familiar with. After trying various modes of living, he was, by the generosity of Edmund Burke, introduced to the literary world, and at last into the Church of England. He spent his days in his different parishes, diversifying his duties with literary and scientific pursuits, and with the intercourse of the distinguished circle which his first patron had introduced him to. He died in 1832, aged 78 years.

CRA'BBED, a. applied to the temper and behaviour of a person, sour, morose, void of affability. Figuratively, disagreeable or unpleasant. Applied to writings, not easy to be understood, difficult or perplexing.

CRA'BBEDLY, ad. in a peevish, morose, sour, and unsociable manner.

CRA'BBEDNESS, s. applied to the taste, sour, or resembling that of a crab; applied to the looks, crossness; applied to behaviour, moroseness; and applied to writings, difficulty or hardness to be understood.

CRACK, s. [krack, Belg.] a sudden bursting, by which the parts of a body are separated from each other. Figuratively, the chink or chasm made by the separation of the parts of a body; the sound made by any body in bursting or falling; a sound made by a sudden and quick blow; a flaw; also craziness of intellect; a boast.

TO CRACK, v. a. [kracken, Belg.] to break into chinks; to break or split; to destroy by breaking; to make a flaw in a thing; to craze.—v. n. to burst; to split; to open in chinks; to fall or run to ruin; to make a loud noise by bursting, or from a sudden blow; to boast, used with of.

CRACK-BRAINED, a. crazy; without right reason.

CRACKER, s. a noisy boasting fellow; a quantity of gunpowder confined so as to burst with a noise.

TO CRA'CKLE, v. n. to make a loud and frequent noise, resembling that of a bay leaf when burnt.

CRA'CKNEL, s. a hard little cake.

CRA'COW, formerly the capital of Poland, and lately the capital of a republic named from it, is situated on the Vistula, which is here broad and shallow. The city and suburbs occupy a vast tract of ground. The great square is spacious and well built; the houses were once richly furnished and well inhabited, but are now either untenanted, or in a state of decay. Many of the streets are spacious and handsome; but almost every building bears striking marks of ruined grandeur. The regalia were preserved here, and in the cathedral most of the sovereigns of Poland have been interred. They were also crowned here for nearly five centuries. It has a university, now much decayed. It is 128 miles from Warsaw. Population, about 20,000. Lat. 50. 3. N. Long. 19. 57. E. The republic of Cracow was established through the mutual jealousy of the three sovereigns who had partitioned Poland, at the congress of Vienna, under the pledge of their protection. It has now been seized upon by Russia, and is incorporated with its territory.

CRA'DLE, s. [cradel, Sax.] a small wicker bedstead for children, set on rockers. Figuratively, infancy. In Surgery, a kind of case resembling a cradle, in which a limb is laid that has been lately set. In Ship Building, a frame of timber raised along the outside of a ship, by the bulge, serving to launch her with greater ease and security. In Masonry, a sort of cage, in which workmen are suspended on the side of any high building which they are repairing.

TO CRA'DLE, v. a. to lay or rock in a cradle. Figuratively, to lay or compose.

CRAFT, s. [craft, Sax.] a trade or mechanical employment; cunning; small sailing vessels.

CRA'FTILY, ad. in a cunning manner; in a manner which includes in it more art than honesty.

CRAFTINESS, s. cunning.

CRAFTSMAN, s. an artificer, tradesman, manufacturer, or mechanic.

CRA'FTSMaster, s. a man skilled in his trade.

CRA'FTY, a. cunning, full of art, whereby a person overreaches another, or carries on a design against him without his discovery; it includes the idea of selfishness, and sometimes dishonesty.

CRA'G, [crægha, Belg.] a neck, or the small end of the neck, applied to a joint of butcher's meat.

CRA'G, [cræig, Brit.] a rough steep rock; the rugged parts of a rock.

CRA'GGED, a. full of ruggedness, or uneven parts.

CRA'GGEDNESS, s. fulness of crags, or prominent rocks.

CRA'GGINESS, s. the state of being craggy.

CRA'GGY, a. uneven; broken; rugged.

CRAIL, Fifeshire, Scotland. A town seated on the mouth of the Frith of Forth. Pop. 1737.

CRA'KENEDLE, s. in Botany, the common venus-comb, or shepherds-needle.

TO CRA'N, v. a. [crannan, Sax.] to stuff by force, or to force more into a thing than it can conveniently contain; to fill with more food than a person can conveniently eat; to thrust down by force, applied to the method used to feed and cram turkeys.

—v. n. to eat more than a person can well bear.

CRA'MBO, s. a play in which one person is obliged to find a rhyme to a word given by another.

CRAMP, s. [crampe, Fr.] in Medicine, a convulsive or involuntary contraction of the muscular part of the body, attended with great pain. Figuratively, any restraint which hinders a person from exerting either the faculties of his mind, or the strength of his body. Also, a piece of iron beat at each end, by which two bodies are held together.

CRAMP, a. attended with difficulties; not easy to be understood.

TO CRAMP, v. a. to contract the muscular parts, and thereby to occasion great pain. Figuratively, to restrain, confine, obstruct, or hinder; to fasten together with cramping irons.

CRA'MPFISH, in Natural History, the torpedo, a fish which has the remarkable power of giving to any one touching it, or coming within a short distance of it, a smart electrical shock. It kills its prey by this means.

CRA'N'CH, LUCAS, a famous painter of Germany, in the 16th century. He chiefly employed himself on portraits; and he has left us fine likenesses of most of the eminent men of his age and nation. His name is most widely known associated with Luther's; of whom he was a most intimate friend. He died in 1553, aged 81 years.

CRA/NBERKIES, s. in Botany, the same with moss-berries or moor-berries; a species of whortle.

CRA/NBOURN, Dorsetshire, a town well watered with streams. It is 94 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2551.

CRA/NBROOK, Kent. It is a large and well-frequented place, and the market is the best in these parts. It is 49 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3990.

CRANE, s. [crano, Sax.] in Natural History, a bird with a long bill, neck, and legs. Also a machine used in building and commerce, for raising large stones and other weights; a long piece of iron put in a chimney, to hang pots upon; a syphon, or crooked pipe, for drawing liquors out of a bottle or cask.

CRA/NEAGE, s. the liberty of using a crane at a wharf; also, the money paid for drawing up wares out of a ship, &c. with a crane.

CRA/NESBILL, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which sixteen species are natives of England. A pair of pincers terminating in a point, used by surgeons.

CRANIUM, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, an assemblage of bones which include the brain, commonly called the skull.

CRANK, s. [crank, Belg.] the end of an iron axis turned square down, and turned again square to the first turning down; also, a contrivance, by means of a square bend in an axis or spindle, to convert the rotatory motion of the axis into a vertical motion, such as is required for working the piston of a pump; and vice versa. Figuratively, any pleasing conceit or pun formed by wresting a word from its original signification.

CRANK, v. in sea language, is applied to a ship, which is said to be crank-sided, when she cannot bear her sails, or but small sail, without danger of oversetting; and to be crank by the ground, when her floor or bottom is so narrow that she cannot be brought on ground without danger. Healthy; sprightly.

TO CRANKLE, v. n. to run in and out; to run in mazes, meanders, or windings.—v. a. to break into windings.

CRANKLES, s. an unequal surface; angles formed by the windings of the stream.

CRA/NMER, ARCHBISHOP THOMAS, one of the most distinguished agents in bringing about the English Reformation. He had obtained some notoriety for learning, before his name became world-famous by his opposing the pope's decree respecting Henry VIII's marriage. For this good service done to the king's conscience, royal favour was showered down on him abundantly, till a new lust made Cranmer's presence unpleasant to the king; he did not however seek to plant any thorns in the royal breast, and so did not lose his position of favour. The separation from Rome was meanwhile effected, and Cranmer and others, who had imbibed some of the notions of Luther, sought to guide the course of events into a similar channel to that they had flowed in on the continent. But the king was too strong, and the spirit of the age too servile, so that a secular papacy was the only result of the English Reformation at first. During Edward VI.'s reign he had greater influence, and exerted it in endeavouring to bring about a harmony and union of all the communities which had broken with Rome. In this he failed, but the incongruities of the Book of Common Prayer are the monuments of his efforts to this day. Espousing the cause of the Lady Jane Grey, he was doubly hateful to Mary, who having imprisoned him, terrified him into a recantation of Protestantism. But he speedily retracted, and was burned in 1553, aged 66 years. He was a man of considerable learning and piety; yet he was not much in advance of his first royal patron in matters of faith and discipline, and was the slave of a cowardice which at times jeopardized his character. His end was a calm and complete triumph.

CRA/NNIED, a. full of holes or chinks.

CRA/NNY, s. [crena, Lat.] a chink, cleft, or a narrow hole made in a rock or solid body.

CRAP, s. [crepa, low Lat.] a light transparent manufacture resembling gauze, made of raw silk gummed and twisted in the mill, wove without crossing, and much used in mourning.

CRA/PULLENCE, s. [crapula, Lat.] drunkenness; or the disorder of the head occasioned by excessive drinking.

CRA/PULOUS, a. drunk; sick or disordered in the head by excessive drinking.

TO CRASH, v. n. to make a loud noise; applied to that which is occasioned by the fall of several things at once.—v. a. to break or bruise by means of force. Figuratively, to drink, applied to liquor.

CRASH, s. a loud, sudden, mixed sound, occasioned by several things falling, or being dashed together. Figuratively, a sudden and astonishing commercial failure; the unexpected failure of any high hopes.

CRASHAW, RICHARD, one of our sacred poets of the 17th century. He was a divine of the Church of England of Land's school, was ejected for contumacy by the Presbyterian parliamentary commissioners, and eventually became a member of the Roman Church, and died in Italy, in 1650, aged about 45 years. His poems are of the class that Herbert is the familiar type of, and are much admired by such as can look beyond the mere dress of a thought.

CRA/SIS, s. [crasis, Fr.] constitution, or the habit of body; health.

CRASS, a. [crassus, Lat.] thick; gross; not easily running, applied to fluids.

CRA/SSITUDE, s. that state of a fluid which enables it to support solid bodies without sinking; grossness.

CRASSUS, M. LICINIUS, the partner with Julius Caesar and Pompey, in the arrangement made against the liberties of Rome. The Eastern provinces were assigned to him. He was a brave soldier, and most enormously wealthy, to which latter gift it is presumable that he owed the power he had put into his hands. He was defeated by the Parthians in 53 B. C., and put to death by having molten gold poured down his throat.

CRASTINATION, s. [cras, Lat.] the delaying a thing, which ought to be done immediately, to another time.

CRATCH, s. [creche, Fr.] the palisaded frame in which the hay is put; a manger.

CRATER, in Astronomy, the Cup, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

CRATYNUS, a comic writer of Athens, a contemporary and rival of Aristophanes. He was once the successful competitor for the prize with him. We have only the names of a few of his plays. He flourished about 460 B. C.

CRAVAT, s. a cloth worn round the neck; a neckcloth.

TO CRAVE, v. n. [craven, Sax.] to ask with earnestness and submission. Figuratively, to ask insatiably, or wish for without being satisfied; to require as necessary; to call for as a claim, applied to things.

CRA/VEN, s. a cock that is conquered, and void of courage. Figuratively, a coward, or one afraid to encounter any danger.

TO CRA/VEN, v. a. to render inactive by fear; to render a person a coward, or affect with cowardice.

CRA/VER, s. an insatiable asker.

TO CRA/VNCH, v. a. [scrantsen, Belg.] whence it is more proper to say scranchen,] to crush with the teeth.

CRAW, s. [kroe, Dan.] the crop or first stomach in birds.

CRAW/FISH, s. sometimes written crayfish; [écrevisse, Fr.] in Natural History, a fresh-water species of lobster.

TO CRAWL, v. a. [krielen, Belg.] to move with a slow motion along the ground, like a worm. Figuratively, to move slowly; to move in an abject posture, despised by all.

CRAW/LER, s. an animal which moves with its belly on the ground; any animal moving with a slow and creeping motion.

CRA/YFISH, s. the same with the CRAW/FISH, which see.

CRA/YON, s. [Fr.] any colour formed into a roll or pencil, with which pictures or portraits are drawn or coloured. Figuratively, any design or portrait formed with crayons.

TO CRAZE, v. a. [craser, Fr.] to break. Figuratively, to crush or weaken a claim, or arguments; to powder; to disorder the senses or brain of a person; to make a person mad.

CRA/ZEDNESS, s. the state of a thing broken; weakness; madness, applied to the understanding.

CRA/ZINESS, s. the state of being mad; weakness.

CRA/ZY, a. [crasé, Fr.] broken. Figuratively, weak with age; decrepit; feeble; disordered in the mind; lunatic, or mad.

TO CREAK, (creek) v. n. [an onomatopoeia,] to make a harsh, shrill, and disagreeable noise, like that of a rusty hinge, applied both to things and animals.

CREAM, (creem) s. [cremor, Lat.] the thick, rich, unctuous substance which rises on the surface of milk when it has stood for some time, used in making butter. Figuratively, the best, essential, or most valuable part of any thing; as, the cream of the jest. Cream-faced, implies pale with fear.

To CREAM, (kreen) v. n. to rise in cream; to look pale like cream.—v. a. to skim off the cream of milk. Figuratively, to take or collect the flower, best part, or quintessence of any thing.

CREAMY, (kreeny) a. abounding with, or of the nature of, cream.

CREANCE, s. [Fr.] in Falconry, a fine small line, fastened to a hawk's leash when she is first lured.

CREASE, (kreesee) s. a mark made in a thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREASE, (kreesee) v. a. to make a mark in any thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREATE, v. a. [creo, Lat.] to form out of nothing. Figuratively, to cause or produce; to occasion; to confer an honour or dignity. In Law, to give a thing new qualities, or put it into a new state.

CREATION, s. [creatio, Lat.] the act of forming or giving existence. In its strict sense, it implies the giving existence to a thing which had no pre-existent matter. Figuratively, the act of conferring titles and dignity; also, the things created; the universe.

CREATIVE, a. having the power to form out of nothing; exerting the act or power of creation.

CREATOR, s. the Being that bestows existence on all things.

CREATURE, (kreeture) s. a being which owes its existence to something else; any thing created; an animal not human; a general term for man; a word of contempt for a human being; a word of petty tenderness. Figuratively, used for one who owes his fortune to, and is slavishly at the service of, another.

CREATURELY, (kreeturely) ad. having the qualities of a creature.

CREBRITUDE, s. [crebritudo, Lat.] frequentness, or the quality of repeating the same thing often.

CREBROUS, a. [creber, Lat.] frequent.

CREDENCE, s. [credo, Lat.] belief; credit; the act of the mind whereby it assents to the truth of a person's pretensions, and places confidence in his claim to assent. Figuratively, that which gives a person a right to belief or credit.

CREDENDAS, s. [Lat.] things or articles which it is necessary to believe; those propositions or articles which are merely the objects of faith, opposed to agenda, or practical duties.

CREDENT, a. believing; easy of belief.

CREDENTIAL, (kred'ntshl) s. that which gives a right to belief and credit; that which warrants assuming any authority, and claims the respect due to one of that character.

CREDIBILITY, s. the claim which a thing may have to be assented to or believed; the quality or evidence which renders a thing fit to be assented to; probability.

CREDIBLE, a. worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CREDIBLENESS, s. the quality which renders a thing worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CREDIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be assented to; in such a manner as to claim belief.

CREDIT, s. [cred, Fr.] belief of a statement as true. Figuratively, honour, esteem, testimony, or reputation for honesty; the lending and expectation of money lent within some limited time; the faith reposed in the government by lending money at interest, which may be transferred, though not redeemable, or is promised to be repaid at a certain time. In Commerce, it signifies something sold on trust; and the credit of a person's account is that on which his payments, whether in cash or other commodities, are registered.

To CREDIT, v. a. [credo, Lat.] to believe or assent to what a person says as true. Figuratively, to reflect honour on a person or thing; to trust or confide in one; to let a person have goods on trust. In Commerce, to discharge a debt, by entering an article on the credit side of an account.

CREDITABLE, a. that may engage confidence or esteem. In Commerce, that may procure trust; honourable; estimable.

CREDITABLENESS, s. reputation; the being generally praised and esteemed.

CREDITABLY, ad. in such a manner as to keep one's reputation, or avoid disgrace.

CREDITON, or KIRTON, Devonshire. It has a considerable manufacture of serges; and was formerly the see of a bishop, removed to Exeter in 1050; the cathedral, a magnificent structure, 200 feet in length, is still standing. It is seated between two hills, on the river Credry, 181 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 5947.

CREDITOR, s. [credo, Lat.] one who lets another have any thing on trust; one to whom a debt is owing. In Book-keeping, that side of an account wherein all things which are delivered are entered; in the cash book, contains a person's payment.

CREDULITY, s. belief without examining into the truth of the thing assented to; too great easiness in believing.

CREDULOUS, a. assenting to any thing proposed as an object of belief, without examining into its truth.

CREDULOUSNESS, s. the quality of believing without examining.

CREED, s. is a brief summary of the articles of a Christian's belief. There are several ancient forms and scattered remains of creeds to be met with in the records of the primitive church; but the most universal creeds, and those which are allowed by the canons of the church, are the Apostolical, the Athanasian, and Nicene creeds. Any solemn profession of principles and opinion. "There's my creed," Shak.

CREEK, s. [creeca, Sax.] in Geography, a part of the sea which runs into the land; a port or bay. The designation of a confederacy of Indian tribes living in the S. part of the United States' territory, comprising the Cherokees, the Chocktaws, the Chickasaws, &c., who are now brought in some degree under the influence of civilization.

CREEKY, a. full of creeks and windings.

To CREEP, v. a. preter, and part. crept [crepan, Sax.] to move with the belly on the ground, applied to reptiles or animals which have no legs, such as worms and serpents. Figuratively, to grow on the ground, or upon supporters, applied to vegetables; to move slowly; to move unperceived into any place; to come unexpectedly, or steal out of a place unperceived and unheard; to behave with abjectness, or meanness of spirit.

CREEPER, s. in Botany, a plant which runs along the ground, or supports itself by means of some stronger body. In Natural History, a kind of small bird, whose manners resemble those of the woodpecker. An iron used to slide along the grate in kitchens; a grappling iron employed in bringing up drowned persons, or other objects, from the bottom of the water.

CREEPER, s. a hole or cavity into which an animal may retire to escape danger. Figuratively, an excuse; means devised to escape shame, or elude the force of law.

CREEPINGLY, ad. in a slow motion; after the manner of a reptile.

CREES, one of the most numerous of the N. tribes of American Indians; and reach from Hudson's Bay to the Rocky Mountains. They are a branch of the great Algonquin-Leape race.

CREMATION, s. [crematio, from cremo, Lat.] a burning.

CREMONA, the capital of a province of the same name, in the kingdom composed of the ancient Lombardy, Italy. It is seated on the Po, and communicates with the Oglio, by a canal. The principal streets are broad and straight, and there are some squares. It has also a few noble public buildings. It has some fine educational institutions. The country round is fertile, producing wine, oil, fruits, honey, &c. &c., in which articles the trade of Cremona chiefly consists. It once was famous as a place where the best violins were made. It is 46 miles from Milan. Its population is about 30,000. Lat. 45. 10. N. Long. 10. 12. E.

CREMOR, s. [Lat.] a milky substance; a soft liquor, resembling cream.

CRENATED, a. [crena, Lat.] in Botany, notched or jagged on the edges.

CREOLES, a name given to the families descended from Spaniards, but born in the Spanish colonies of America. These are much more numerous than the Spaniards properly so called, and the Mulattoes, which two other classes of inhabitants they distinguish; and are excluded from all considerable employments.

CREPANE, s. in Faerriery, an ulcer in the midst of the fore part of the foot, caused by a bilious, sharp, and biting humour, that frets the skin, or by a hurt given by striking the hinder feet.

To CREPITATE, v. n. [crepito, Lat.] to make a small crackling noise.

CREPITATION, s. a small crackling noise, like that produced by the burning of thorax, parching of peas, &c.

CREPT, the participle of creep.

CREPUSCULE, s. [crepusculum, Lat.] in Astronomy, the twilight.

CREPUSCULOUS, a. glimmering; in a state between light and darkness.

CRESCENT, a. [crecens, from creceo, Lat.] growing; increasing; in a state of increase.

CRESCENT, s. the moon in her state of increase. In Heraldry, it is a bearing in form of a new moon; and is used either as an honourable bearing, or as a distinction between elder and younger families, being generally assigned to the second son and his descendants.

CRESS, s. plural cresses, [perhaps from creceo, Lat.] the name given to some herbs used for salad, or eaten raw; the garden cress and the water cress are the most known.

CRESETT, s. [croisette, Fr.] a great light set on a light-house or watch-tower; a beacon.

CREST, s. [crista, Lat.] in Armoury, the top part of the armour for the head, mounting over the helmet in manner of a comb or tuft of a cock, deriving its name from crisida, a cock's comb, and was for the most part made of feathers, or the hair of horses' tails. In Heraldry, the uppermost part of an armour, or that part of the casque or helmet next to the mantle. The crest is deemed a greater mark of nobility than the armoury; being borne at tournaments, to which none were admitted till they had given good proof of their nobility. Figuratively, pride, spirit, or courage.

CRESTED, a. adorned with a plume or crest; having a tuft or comb on the head. In Botany, flowers furnished with a tuft or crest, as in the common milk-wort.

CREST-FALLEN, a. dispirited; cowed; in a state of dejection.

CRESTLESS, a. in Heraldry, not honoured with coat-armoury, or of a noble or honoured family.

CRETA/CEOUS, (cretaceous) a. [creta, Lat.] chalky; abounding with, or having the qualities of chalk. Cretaceous formation, in Geology, a name given to a group of strata, including the chalk, chalk marl, green sand, and gault, occurring at the top of the series of secondary formations.

CREVICE, s. [crever, Fr.] a narrow opening made in a thing by its cracking, generally applied to walls or wainscots.

CREUSE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Corrèze, Puy-de-Dôme, Allier, Indre, Cher, and Haute Vienne. It is about 70 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It has two ranges of high ground running through it, and its rivers are the Creuse, whence it is named, the Cher, the Ardour, &c. This department is not highly cultivated, and so does not produce much corn, &c., nor are its mineral treasures of any great worth. It has a few manufactures, yet none of much account, unless it be that in carpets. Its chief town is Guéret. Population, about 300,000.

CREW, s. [probably from crud, Sax.] formerly a company met together for any purpose. At present applied to a ship's company; or used to signify a company of contemptible persons, or such as herd together with some bad design.

CREWEL, s. [kleavel, Belg.] fine worsted or yarn twisted and made up in a knot or ball.

CREW/KERNE, Somersetshire. Here are some manufactures of dowlas, sail-cloth, and stockings. It is seated on a branch of the Parret, on the confines of Dorsetshire, 132 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 4414.

CRIB, s. [erybbe, Sax.] the rack in a stable. Figuratively, the stall of an ox; a small habitation or hut. The cards which each party lay out of their hands, and are reckoned for the benefit of the dealer at the game of cribbage.

CRIBBAGE, s. a game at cards, wherein the players endeavour to make pairs, sequents, pairs royal, and one and thirty at playing, and to hold in their hands as many fifteens, pairs, and sequents, as they can.

CRIBBLE, s. [cribrum, Lat.] a corn-sieve.

CRICHTON, THE ADMIRABLE, JAMES, a prodigy of learning and address, who astonished W. Europe in the latter part of the 16th century. Issuing from Scotland, where he studied at St. Andrews, he acquired at Paris, Rome, Venice, &c. a reputation amongst all classes, grave doctors of law and divinity, gay ladies, the poor as well as the rich, for unimagined skill in disputations on theology, philosophy, and every known science, which he conducted in any one of some dozen of languages, for equal skill in fencing, and every other accomplishment in vogue. At Mantua he staved his wanderings, becoming tutor de omnibus rebus cum quibusdam aliis to the duke's son; but he taught him not respect nor gratitude, for being outdone by the incomparable tutor in a love affair, he assassinated him, in 1584, aged 23 years.

CRICK/KEITH, Caernarvonshire. It is 236 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 811.

CRICK, s. [crjce, Sax.] a painful stiffness in the neck.

CRICKET, s. in Natural History, an insect which frequents fire-piles or ovens, and is remarkable for a continual chirping or creaking noise. A game which is played with a bat and ball.

CRICKHOWEL, Brecknockshire, a town much resorted to by invalids for the purpose of drinking goats' milk and whey. Here are the ruins of a castle, which appears to have been formerly a place of considerable strength. It is seated on the river Usk, 185 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1257.

CRICKLADE, Wilts. It is seated on the Thames, 84 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2128.

CRICKET, s. a person authorized to proclaim things that are lost, or those which are to be sold.

CRIMEA, a peninsula of Asia, bounded on the N. by part of the district of Taurida, (a division of the Russian government of Ekaterinoslav) and on the other parts by the Black Sea and the Sea of Asov. It is divided into two parts by mountains which run E. and W. The N. division is fit for pasture only; in the S. part the valleys are remarkably fertile, and the climate extremely mild. The lower hills, extending from Theodosia to the E. extremity of the country, are principally used in gardening, and produce excellent fruit. The export trade consists of the produce of these gardens and pastures. Manufactures, worth calling such, there are none. Achmetstet was made the capital in 1785. Besides the ports of Kerth and Jenikale, the road of Caffa, and the harbour of Baluclava, there is, near Sebastopol, one of the most capacious and secure harbours in the world. Population, about 300,000. This country was the ancient Taurica Chersonesus.

CRIME, s. [crimen, Lat.] a voluntary breach of any known law; an offence. SYNON. Vice is the violation of our duty to ourselves; crime is an offence against society; sin is the transgression of God's law.

CRIMINAL, a. [crimialis, from crimen, Lat.] contrary to any known law. Figuratively, faulty; worthy of blame; guilty; subject to some punishment on account of the violation of a law. In Law, that which is opposed to civil.

CRIMINAL, s. a person who is accused of a voluntary breach of a known law; a person who has knowingly and wilfully acted contrary to any law.

CRIMINALLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with innocence; in a manner which implies guilt, or the wilful breach of some law; in a manner which deserves blame or punishment.

CRIMINATION, s. [criminitio, Lat.] the act of accusing a person of the breach of some law.

CRIMINOUS, a. enormously guilty; iniquitous.

CRIMP, a. [from crinble or crumple] easily broken; crumbling with dryness; easily reduced to powder. Figuratively, not consistent; not of any force.

To CRIMPLE, v. a. [from rumple, erumple, or crimble] to draw together in wrinkles.

CRIMSON, s. [crimosino, Ital.] a deep red colour, mixed with an appearance of blue. Figuratively, in poetical language, used for a dark, or any degree of a red colour.

To CRIMSON, v. a. to dye or colour with red or crimson.

CRINGE, s. a low bow, carrying with it the idea of fawning and mean servility.

To CRINGE, v. a. [kriechen, Teut.] to form into wrinkles, or uncouth appearances.—v. n. to behave in a mean, servile, complaisant manner, in order to gain a person's favour, or avert his anger; to fawn.

CRINGEROUS, a. [crinis and gero, Lat.] hairy; overgrown with hair.

To CRINKLE, v. n. [krinkelien, Belg.] to go in and out; to wrinkle.—v. a. to draw a thing into wrinkles; to make the surface of a thing uneven.

CRINKLE, s. a wrinkle.

CRI/NOSE, a. [crinis, Lat.] hairy.

CRINOSITY, s. the quality of abounding in hair; hairiness.

CRIPPLE, s. [crypel, Sax.] a person who has not the use of his limbs, especially his legs.

To CRIPPLE, v. a. to make lame, or deprive a person of the use of his limbs.

CRISIS, s. [crisis, Gr.] in Medicine, that point in a disorder, which either determines a patient's death or recovery. Figuratively, in Politics, a period of time wherein an undertaking is arrived at its greatest height; any particular period of time.

CRISP, a. [crispus, Lat.] curled, indented, winding; dry, brittle, or easily broken.

To CRISP, v. a. [cripo, Lat.] to curl, or form a thing into a ring; to twist.—v. n. to run in and out, to make a thing easy to be broken by drying it.

CRISPING-PIN, s. a curling-iron.

CRISPNESS, s. the quality of a thing curled; easiness to be broken, owing to dryness. In Cookery, the brittleness of a thing, owing to the hard incrustation formed by a brisk fire.

CRISPY, a. curled. In Cookery, brown and brittle.

CRITERION, s. [Gr.] a standard by which the goodness or badness of a thing may be measured or judged.

CRITIC, s. [kritikos, Gr.] a person formed by nature, and qualified by art, to point out the perfection and imperfection of any of the productions in the arts or sciences; one who is employed in distinguishing the beauties or defects of an author. Figuratively, a censor, or a person apt to find fault either with the writings or actions of another.

CRITIC, a. belonging to criticism, or the art of judging of the performances of an author.

CRITIC, (by some spelt critique, and then pron. kreetick) s. [critique, Fr.] an examination or comment on the works of an author, wherein both taste and learning are used as guides; a criticism; the art of criticism.

CRITICAL, a. able to distinguish the beauties and defects of any production; nice, exact, accurate; with all the judgment and care of a critic; after the manner of a critic; according to the rules of criticism; captious; inclined to find fault; censorious. In Medicine and Politics, that in which some crisis or important change happens. Critical philosophy, is that school of Metaphysics founded by Kant, the fundamental principle of which is the determination of the bounds of human knowledge; and the method, that introduced by John Locke, the method of Psychology.

CRITICALLY, ad. in a critical manner; in such a manner as to discover beauties or defects; exactly; curiously.

CRITICALNESS, s. exactness, nicety, accuracy; the act of exercising the judgment, in order to discern the faults or perfections of any production.

To CRITICISE, (kriticeize) v. n. to write remarks, or point out the beauties and defects of any production. Figuratively, to find fault with.—v. a. to censure, blame, or find fault with.

CRITICISM, s. the art or standard of judging well of the merits or demerits of any production. Figuratively, remark or observation made by a critic.

To CROAK, (krök) v. n. [croacem, Sax.] to make a hoarse noise, applied to that made by a frog or raven. Figuratively, to caw, to cry, or make a disagreeable murmur.

CROAK, (krök) s. the noise made by a frog, raven, or crow.

CROATIA, a country of Europe, bounded on the N. by Hungary; on the E. and S.E. by Hungary and Servonia; on the S. by Dalmatia and Turkey; on the W. by Illyria. The Austrian Croatia is about 130 miles in length, and from 40 to 60 in breadth. The Turkish Croatia is about 40 miles long and 20 wide. In the middle ages they had kings of their own, but in the 11th century devolved to the king of Hungary. It is a mountainous region, being traversed by the chains of mountains which are connected with the E. Alps; some of the points are about 5000 feet high. The rivers are the Drave and Save and their tributaries, and a few of less note on the W. side of the mountains. Iron, copper, lead, silver, and gold are found; and there are mines of coal, and quarries of marble, and various kinds of building-stone; beside other minerals. The other sources of wealth are its forests and pastures; it produces also some grain, fruits, and wine. The people are much advanced in civilization. Population of Austrian Croatia, about 1,500,000. Agram is its capital. Population of Turkish Croatia, about 800,000; capital, Bihacz.

CROCEOUS, a. [crocus, Lat.] consisting of, or resembling saffron; yellow, or of a saffron colour.

CROCKETS, s. little buds upon the top of a deer's horn.

CROCK, s. [krack, Belg.] a cup or earthen vessel; a pot to boil victuals in. Figuratively, the smut occasioned by rubbing the outside of a pot against anything.

CROCKERY, s. earthenware.

CROCODILE, s. [crocodilus, Gr.] in Natural History, the general name of a class of reptiles, at present inhabitants of the tropical and warm climates alone. The common crocodile is found in most parts of Africa, and in Asia. Its body is armed with hard rough plates, which are an effectual defence against musket shot. It is of a dark greenish-brown colour, and is distinguished from the alligator, by the shape of the muzzle, the shortness and almost inflexibility of the neck, the smaller proportion of the fringe on the tail, and the web between the toes of its feet. Its eggs, for it is oviparous as most reptiles are, resemble those of geese in size, and are hatched by the heat of the sun, but not deserted by the female. Its habits of ferocity and voracity are well known. It was worshipped by some tribes of the ancient Egyptians; and the bodies of the sacred reptiles were embalmed, and many of them may be seen as mummies in our museums.

CROCODILINE, a. [crocodilinus, Lat.] resembling a crocodile.

CROCUS, s. in Botany, a plant, of which there are two kinds, the vernal and autumnal; the summits of the point of the latter species, with narrow leaves rolled back at the edges, are the saffron of the shops. In Chemistry, it denotes any metal calcined to a red or deep yellow colour.

CRÆSUS, the last king of Lydia, famous for his wealth. It was he who asked Solon the legislator of Athens, when he visited his court, if he were not happy, and received as his reply, that no one should be pronounced happy before his death. He had, as he thought, tested the credit of the celebrated oracles of the time, and decided in favour of that of Delphi. Learning on a subsequent consultation, that if he crossed the river Halys he should destroy a great kingdom, he adventured an expedition against Cyrus and destroyed the Lydian monarchy by his failure. He was condemned by the conqueror to be burnt, but being heard calling on the name of Solon, he was released, told the tale of his interview with the sage, and was pardoned. His kingdom fell in 546 B.C.

CROFT, (s. Croft, Sax.) a little close joining to a house, used either for corn or pasture.

CROFT, DR. WILLIAM, a celebrated English composer of sacred music, and organist at the chapel-royal and Westminster Abbey. His anthems and psalm tunes are as much admired in these days as they were when first published. He died in 1727, aged 50 years.

CROMACK WATER, a romantic lake of Cumberland, on the Cocker, between Buttermere and Lowes Water. It is 4 miles in length, nearly half a mile in breadth, in some places very deep, and contains three little islands, one of which is a rock.

CROMARTY. See ROSS AND CROMARTY.

CROMER, Norfolk. It is seated near the sea, and was formerly larger than it is at present; for it had two churches, one of which, with a considerable part of the town, has been at various periods swallowed by the sea. It has been of late much resorted to as a watering-place. It is 127 miles from London. Market Saturday. Pop. 1240.

CROWWELL, THOMAS, LORD, the celebrated Mauler of Monasteries, in Henry VIII's reign. He rose by his own exertions, from a comparatively humble station, to belong to the household of Cardinal Wolsey. Thence the ascent was easy to the notice of the king, who finding him sufficiently pliable for his purpose, constituted him, in addition to various other offices, vicar-general of the newly-rected Church of England, and visitor of the monasteries. His proceedings in these characters have won him his not wholly enviable notoriety. He acted most unscrupulously on John Knox's principle of pulling the trees down in order to drive the rocks away; and harried the convents so, that his name became a horror to both monks and nuns. In other respects he did good service to the Reformation, and laid a broad foundation for the Puritanism of after-days, by the removal of the specimens of mediæval art and superstition. He was not, however, altogether so supple as the king thought, and having taken some share in the marriage of the head of the Church with Anne of Cleves, he had to take some share in her unmerited disgrace. He never lacked foes, and now they spoke against him. The result of which was, that he was beheaded in 1540, aged about 50 years.

CROMWELL, OLIVER, the great leader of the English Puritan revolution of the 17th century. He was born of no mean family, who resided at Huntingdon, and in the neighbourhood of the Fen country. After the usual studies at Cambridge, and a short sojourn at London, for acquaintance with law, he married and settled on his family estate, and afterwards at St. Ives, and subsequently at Ely, as a sober-minded grazing farmer; and gained some name in those parts as a promoter of gospel preaching in opposition to the semi-Romish mummeries of the High-church party, and as a strenuous upholder of the rights of the middle classes in opposition to royal and other exactions. And thus he fared for the first forty years of his life. But the times were out of joint. The royal will was no longer the instrument of Tudor monarchs, nor was it exercised over a nation of shopkeepers. The preaching of God's truth throughout the people had given them a freedom, that could not brook impositions on their consciences and estates founded on nothing more substantial than the word of a bishop or a king. Cromwell had already been in parliament. He was a second time returned, but for Cambridge. And now came the Long Parliament, and Cambridge was once more represented by Cromwell. At first, when priestcraft and kingcraft were assailed by mere speech, he took no very prominent part. He spoke to the purpose, but that was not his province. As the parliament rose from speaking to acting, Cromwell rose in the consideration of the patriot party in the House, and of the country. The triumph gained in the impeachment and execution of Strafford, seemed but to hasten the crisis, which came in the attempt on the five members, which failed,—in the attempt on Hull, which failed,—and in the hanging forth amidst storm and rain the royal standard at Nottingham, which led to consequences. The king had declared war on the nation's parliament. The first parliamentary leader in the field was Cromwell, doing good service in his own district: the Eastern Counties' Association rose from it. As captain of a troop he had raised, he fought at Edgehill, under the Earl of Essex. The organization of the Association, and putting down of royalism and priestism by the sword, when the word would not suffice, occupied him afterwards; and in the capacity of colonel, he has been recorded as the victor at Winceby. Meanwhile negotiation with Charles having failed, another campaign ensued, and at Marston Moor General Cromwell and his redoubted Ironsides played no mean part. The nobility who had taken part hitherto in the parliament's cause, were now found a grievous hindrance. Their cause was, at bottom, the same as the king's, and they dreaded beating him too completely. The famous Self-denying Ordinance was passed, shutting members of parliament out of the practical conduct of the war; but Cromwell, so had he risen in the estimation of men, was expressly exempted from its operation. He now introduced his own plan in modelling the parliament's army, and instead of mercenaries, mere food for powder, formed regiments of men who knew what the war was for, and who, with the deadliest hatred of all oppression, temporal and spiritual, in their hearts, were resolved to conduct it to the right issue. The battle of Naseby soon showed the consequences of the change; it broke the king's cause. A few fights, and the storming of Bristol, and of Basing House, overthrew it. Negotiations were again resumed, and never came to any conclusion. Cromwell and the army now appear in a new light. Charles would never give up his claim to be the sole sovereign and church's head. The Scotch, who had taken part in the war, and not returned to Scotland, would consent to be under Charles's sceptre, but wished to keep, under the Presbyterian cloak, the prelatical crossier for their own use. The army would endure neither sceptre nor crossier. Yet Cromwell actually entertained high hopes of binding Charles to be a constitutional monarch, and leave men's consciences free. After much toil and many manoeuvres Charles was the prisoner of the army, and the Scotch royalists were marching to compel his restoration: Wales too was rising. General Cromwell silences both, the battle of Preston being enough for the Duke of Hamilton. This brought the army and its general to the height of power; and Charles was doomed and beheaded, Cromwell signing his warrant, and abiding by his deed. The next field found for Cromwell's deeds was Ireland;—that unhappy country was then, as it is now, the "chief difficulty" with English statesmen. It had never had a ruler, perhaps has never had one. Cromwell, with the rank of lord-lieutenant of the country, went, offered terms to the garrison after garrison, never failed on their refusal to put his terrible threat of extermination into effect, showed the astonished people that he could rule, but was recalled by the parliament before the work was wholly accomplished. He was recalled, for the late king's son, afterwards Charles II., had made common cause with the Scots, and a third civil war was impending. As lord-general, Cromwell was sent, and after a space lost in fruitless attempts to get a fair field, being penned up in Dunbar, against most fearful odds, victory again decided for him. Edinburgh Castle shortly after surrendered. Charles hereupon marched into England, followed by Cromwell, halted at Worcester, where, on the anniversary of Dunbar fight, befell that "crowning mercy," the utter overthrow of the Stuarts' and the Scots' hopes—for a season. For well-nigh two years now we find Cromwell busied in securing, as far as might be, the fruits of the hard-won battle, in wars with Holland, in striving especially that the men, whose stern principle had overwhelmed the common adversary, should not be tricked out of their reward by the craft of the remnant of the Long Parliament. But all efforts proving vain, the lord-general, with the plain assent of both army and nation, dissolved the parliament. He attempted to convene in its stead an assembly of godly men, to aid the council of state and himself in governing the nation. All but two came, but though men of fortune, and rank, and knowledge too were amongst them, it was a failure; the lawyers amongst them knew not the need of the times, and they gave back to Cromwell the commission they had received. The army hereupon, with the nation assenting, solemnly installed Cromwell as Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, and drew up an instrument, or charter, defining his duties and prerogatives. A parliament was summoned according to this charter, but the lawyers again frustrated the attempt; and Cromwell dismissed it as the others had been dismissed. After a vain attempt to govern by means of the officers of the army,—foreign affairs wearing all this time the most marvellously triumphant aspect, England being feared by all Europe, and royalist plots being ever and anon broken up before they ripened, the plotters knew not how,—another parliament was called. This parliament in its first session entered upon a matter of great perplexity,—the investing of Cromwell with the style and title of King; but this the Lord Protector, after many conferences, and hearing all that could be advanced in favour of it, rejected. In its second session, it got aground on the legal formalities of the Constitution, erected an Other House, as a sort of substitute for the House of Lords, which in the course of the struggle had been extinguished, and were dismissed by Cromwell, just in time to save England from another civil war. Seven months after, during which affairs had worn their usual aspects, Cromwell lay down to die. It was on the anniversary of his two great victories, September 3rd, 1658, that he ended his battles here, aged 59 years. Two years from that time the Stuart family was restored, and the bones of the Puritan hero, with those of two of his fellow soldiers and workers for what they felt was God's truth, were hung on Tyburn gallows. By degrees men have learned to estimate aright the tales told of this man by his first biographers. As for the Puritan revolution, he was the soul of it; it fell with him, and men hastily sought to efface all trace of it. It had one most marked feature, much ridiculed now, as it was by the court of Charles II.; it was begun, and carried on, and maintained in its brief season of triumph, by men who prayed to God without ceasing, and who acted as they prayed. It failed, however, perhaps from this cause, amongst others, that the movement was confined to the middle classes. The people who were patient under Charles, were unstirred under the Commonwealth, and under Charles II. manifested no sign of having passed through a political change. Nor can we wonder at this, seeing that England at this hour is hardly at the mark which she had reached then. The reign of Cromwell was illustrated not merely by the splendour of its foreign relations, but also by the then unheard-of freedom of thought in religious matters. This had been aimed at throughout by him in opposition to Prelacy on one hand, and Presbyterianism on the other; and during his life it was secure. The exception of Romanists from this freedom, like some other oft-named invasions of personal liberty then, arose from the fact of its being then actually political subjection to an extra-national potentate, and treason against the ruler of Great Britain. The lessons of political wisdom to be gathered from the history of this period, compared and contrasted with the Revolution in France in the following century, are innumerable, and call, in these days, for the special heed of all concerned to see true freedom prevailing in this and every land.

CROMWELL, RICHARD, the eldest son of Oliver Cromwell, who survived him, and who was stated, on very questionable grounds, to have been appointed by his father as his successor. Without energy, or grasp of mind, he had always with good-natured indolence disappointed his father's hopes and efforts. His protectorship was of brief duration. The army, which had been, during the latter years of Oliver Cromwell's life, the stronghold of mere fanatical or formal republicanism, and had been kept in check only by his mighty will, now openly opposed the protectorate, obtained the dismissal of a parliament, which did support Richard Cromwell's title, and so overthrew the only shadow of bulwark that remained against the return of the Stuart. Richard Cromwell abdicated in 1659; and lived partly on the continent, and partly in strict privacy at Cheshunt, afterwards, till 1712; when he died, aged 85 years.

CROMWELL, HENRY, the only other son of the Lord Protector who obtained any name, the eldest of all Oliver, having fallen in battle in the early part of the war. Henry first came into notice during the Irish campaign, and was appointed lord deputy there, by his father, when he became Protector. On the Restoration he was of course dismissed, and spent the remainder of his life at Soham. He was a brave man and true, able, if any were, to have carried on the plans of his father. He died in 1674, aged 56 years.

CRO-NORBORG, a fortress of Zealand, Denmark, situated on a point of land, on the W. coast of the Sound, a little E. of Elsinore, and opposite to Helsingborg in Sweden.

CRONE, s. [kronie, Belg.] an old ewe. Figuratively, an old woman.

CRO-NET, s. in Farriery, the hair which grows over the top of a horse's hoof.

CRO-NSTADT, a town and fortress of Russia, situated on the island of Rotusari, on the E. of the Gulf of Finland. Its harbor is the station of the Russian fleet, having great magazines of naval stores, and numerous docks and yards for building and careening ships of the line. It was founded by Peter I., improved by his daughter Elizabeth, and completed by the late empress. It is 22 miles from St. Petersburg. The population is about 40,000. Lat. 59. 59. N. Long. 29. 49. E.

CRO-NSTADT, or KRO-NSTADT, a town of Transylvania, Austria. It stands amidst the mountains that form the boundary between Hungary and Turkey. It has some fine public buildings, and is a place of considerable traffic. Its population is about 40,000. Lat. 35. 25. N. Long. 25. 36. E.

CRO-NY, s. an old and very intimate acquaintance or confidant.

CROOK, s. [croo, Fr.] anything bent; a sheephook; a meander or winding.

To CROOK, v. a. [crocher, Fr.] to bend, to turn any thing so as to resemble a hook.

CROOKBACK, s. a term of reproach for a man that is deformed, or has round shoulders.

CROOKED, a. [croché, Fr.] bent, opposed to straight; formed into an angle or hook; winding. Figuratively, perverse or bad.

CROOKEDLY, ad. not straight; in an untoward, perverse, or unbecoming manner.

CROOKEDNESS, s. the bending of a body. Figuratively, a deformity of the body, arising from any of its limbs being distorted or out of shape. Applied to the mind or temper, perversity, or a disposition which is not easily pleased.

CROOKHORN. See CREWKEENE.

CROP, s. [cropp, Sax.] the crop, or first stomach of birds, wherein their food is prepared for digestion.

CROP, s. [croppa, Sax.] the highest part, end, or top of a thing. Figuratively, corn collected in a harvest; the product of a field; any thing cut off.

To CROP, v. a. to cut off the tops or ends of any thing; to mow, reap, or lop. Figuratively, to shorten or consume in eating.—v. n. to yield a harvest.

CRO-PFUL, a. filled; satiated with food.

CROPPER, s. in Natural History, a kind of pigeon, remarkable for swelling its crop.

CROPSICK, a. sick or disordered by intemperate eating or drinking.

CROSSCOMB, Somersetshire. Some cloth is made here; but the chief manufacture is that of stockings. It is 120 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 804.

CROSSIER, (croisier) s. [croisier, Fr.] the pastoral staff of a bishop, made in the form of a shepherd's crook, but profusely ornamented.

CROSLET, s. [croisselet, Fr.] a small cross.

CROSS, s. [croix, Fr.] an instrument made of two pieces of wood, cutting or crossing each other at right angles, on which the lowest malefactors and slaves were executed among the Romans. A building, or column, having a cross on its summit, used in the middle ages as a place for preaching or praying in the open air. The sign made by the priest on the forehead of a person when baptized, by drawing two marks, which cross each other, with his fingers dipped in water; one line drawn athwart another. Figuratively, any thing which is contrary to a person's wishes, and is a trial of his patience.

CROSS, a. that falls athwart. Figuratively, opposite to a person's wishes and expectations; perverse; not complying; peevish; displeased with trifles; not easily persuaded; reciprocal on each side; interchanging.

CROSS, prep. athwart, so as to intersect from one side to another.

To CROSS, v. a. to lay one line so as to form angles with another; to sign with a cross; to mark or conceal; to go over a river. Figuratively, to oppose the designs of another, and thereby render him peevish; to contradict; to debar; to preclude.

CROSS-BAR-SHOT, s. a round shot or bullet with a bar put through it.

CROSSBILL, s. in Chancery, is an original bill, by which the defendant prays relief against the plaintiff. In Natural History, a bird of the finch tribe, the mandibles of whose bill cross each other at the end.

CROSSBITE, s. a cheat which frustrates a person's designs; a deception.

CROSSBOW, s. an engine or instrument made of a bow fixed across a piece of wood, used in shooting deer, pigeons, &c. It will carry a bullet a considerable distance, and do execution. Before the invention of gunpowder, it was used in battle.

To CROSS-EXAMINE, v. a. to try the faith of evidence by captious questions of the contrary party.

CROSSGRAINED, a. in Joinery, applied to wood, from whence a bough or branch has shot out, the grain of the branch shooting forward, and crossing that of the trunk. Figuratively, hard to please; peevish; perverse; troublesome; vexatious.

CROSSLY, ad. athwart, so as to intersect or form angles. Figuratively, opposite, contrary, untowardly.

CROSSNESS, s. transverseness; intersection; perverseness; peevishness.

CROSSROW, s. the alphabet; so named from a cross being placed at the beginning of it.

CROSS-STAFF, s. an instrument used to determine the position of lines and objects, which are at right angles with each other, or with the observer.

CROSSWIND, s. a wind blowing either from the right or left across a ship's way.

CROSSWAY, s. a small path intersecting a main road.

CROSS-WORT, s. in Botany, a plant called also mugweed, found on ditch banks, and flowers in May and June.

CROTCH, s. [croc, Fr.] a hook or fork.

CROTCHET, [crochet, Fr.] in Music, one of the notes and marks of time, so called from its resembling a hook, thus c; it is equal to half a minim or double quaver. In Printing, two opposite lines, serving to include any sentence or word which may be left out without spoiling the sense of a period, marked [thus.] In Building, a support, or piece of wood fitted into another to sustain it. Figuratively, a fancy, odd conceit, or device.

CROTON OIL, s. in Medicine, the oil obtained from the seeds of a plant growing in the E. Indies, which is a very acrid purgative.

To CROUCH, v. n. [croucher, Fr.] to stoop low, applied to the posture of beasts, when they bend their legs, and approach with their bellies towards the ground in testimony of obedience and submission. Figuratively, to bend or stoop to a person in a fawning and servile manner.

CROUP, (cripp) s. [croupe, Fr.] the rump of a fowl; the buttocks of a horse. Also, a disease of the throat, affecting children and young persons, in which a film is formed inside the windpipe, and frequently causes suffocation.

CROUPADES, s. in Farriery, higher leaps than those of corgets, that keep the fore and hind quarters of a horse in an equal height, so that he trusses his legs under his belly without jerking.

CROUTE, s. [kraut, Germ.] a preparation of cabbage much used on ship-board, and esteemed a preservative against the sea-scurvy.

CROW, (krō) s. [cræve, Sax.] in Natural History, a black bird of the carnivorous kind, or feeding on carrion. To pluck a crow, is to contend with a person. Sometimes it is used for a contention about some worthless thing, or trifling subject. In Mechanics, a strong iron bar, used as a lever to lift up the ends of great heavy timber, force open doors, &c. The noise made by a cock. Prov. The crow thinks her own young ones the fairest. Every one is partial to, and well conceited of, his own art, his own compositions, his own children, his own country, &c.

To CROW, (krō) v. n. preter. crewe or crowed, [cræwan, Sax.] to make a loud shrill noise, applied to that made by a cock. Figuratively, to boast, bully, or assume a superiority over another.

CROWBERRY, s. in Botany, a small drooping shrub with trailing stems and black berries, called also crakeberries. It is found on boggy heaths and mountains, and flowers in April and May. The berries when boiled with alum afford a dark purple dye.

CROWD, s. [cruth, Sax.] a great number of people squeezed or close together; a great number of any thing of the same sort adjacent to each other. Figuratively, the vulgar or lower sort of people.

To CROWD, v. a. to fill a place with a great and confused multitude of people; to force a great many things in a confused manner into the same place; to press close together; to encumber, or oppress by multitudes. In the Marine, to crowd sail, is to spread all the sails wide upon the yard for the sake of expedition, or quickening the motion of a ship.—v. n. to go in great multitudes; to thrush among a multitude of others.

CROWDER, s. a fiddler.

CROWFOOT, s. in Botany, the butter-cup, of which there are twelve species found native in England. In war, a caltrop, a piece of iron, with four points, two, three, or four inches long, used for incommoding the cavalry.

CROWLAND, formerly CROYLAND, Lincolnshire. A town standing in the midst of the fens, having watercourses in its streets. Its trade consists of fish and wild-fowl. It was formerly celebrated for a monastery, part of which is now used as the parish church. It is 86 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2073.

CROWN, v. [corona, Lat.] an ornament worn on the head by kings, princes, and noblemen, as a mark of their dignity. It was at first only a fillet tied round the head, but was afterwards made of leaves and flowers and rich stuffs, and sometimes ornamented with jewels of great value. The Jewish high priest wore a crown, which was girt about his mitre, on the lower part of his bonnet. The Romans had various kinds of crowns, which they bestowed as rewards of military merit: as, 1. The ovai crown, bestowed on generals who were entitled to the honours of the lesser triumph, called ovation. 2. The naval or rostral crown, composed of a circle of gold, with ornaments, representing beaks of ships, and given to the captain who first grappled, or the soldiers who first boarded, an enemy's ship. 3. The corona villaris, or castrensis, was a circle of gold raised with jewels or palisades; the reward of him who first entered the enemy's intrenchments. 4. The mural crown, a circle of gold indented and embattled; given to him who first mounted the wall of a besieged place, and there planted a standard. 5. The civic crown, made of the branch of a green oak, and given to him who had saved the life of a citizen. 6. The triumphal crown, consisting at first of the leaves of laurel, but afterwards made of gold, for those generals who had the honour of a triumph. 7. The crown called obedien- ndis, or graminea, made of grass growing on the place; the reward of a general who had delivered a Roman army from a siege. The crown of laurel, given by the Greeks to their athletes, and by the Romans to those who had negotiated or concluded a peace with an enemy. They had likewise other crowns for those who excelled as poets, orators, &c. The crowns were marks of nobility to the wearers; and, upon competitions for ranks and dignity, often determined the preference in their favour. The Roman emperors had four kinds of crowns, still seen on medals, viz. a crown of laurel, a radiating crown, a crown adorned with pearls and precious stones; and the fourth a kind of bonnet or cap, something like the mortar. The papal crown is composed of a cap or tiara, enclosed by three marquises' coronets, having two pendants, like the bishops' mitres; and on its top a mound of gold; these three crowns represent the pretended triple capacity of the pope, viz. as high priest, supreme judge, and sole legislator of the Christians. The imperial crown is a bonnet or tiara, voided at the top like a crescent, with a circle of gold adorned with precious stones and pearls, heightened with flours-de-lis, supporting a globe with a cross at the top. The English crown is adorned with four crosses, in the manner of those of Malta; between which are flours-de-lis. It is covered with four diadems, which meet at a little globe supporting a cross. The French crown is a circle, enamelled, of eight flours-de-lis, encompassed with eight arched diadems; bearing a-top a double flour-de-lis, which is the crest of France. The Spanish crown is adorned with large indented leaves, covered with diadems; bordering on a globe, surmounted with a cross. Those of Portugal, Poland, Denmark, and Sweden, are of the same form. The crowns of most other kings are circles of gold, adorned with precious stones, and heightened up with large trefoils, and closed by four, six, or eight diadems, supporting a mound, surmounted with a cross. The Great Turk bears over his arms a turban, enriched with pearls and diadems under two coronets, the first of which is made of pyramidal points, heightened up with large pearls, and the uppermost is surrounded with crescents. The crown of the Prince of Wales consists of one arch adorned with pearls; in the middle of which is a ball and cross, and bordered with ermine, as in the royal diadem. Besides this, the Prince of Wales has another distinguishing mark of honour, viz. a plume of three ostrich feathers, with an ancient coronet of a prince of Wales, with this motto, Ich dien, i. e. I serve. This device was at first taken by Edward, Prince of Wales, commonly called the Black Prince, after the battle of Cressy, where, having killed John, king of Bohemia, he took from his head such a plume, and put it on his own. That of the younger sons and brothers of the king, consists likewise of a circle of gold, bordered with ermine, and heightened with four crosses and flours-de-lis alternately, but without any arch, or being surmounted with a globe and cross on the top. That of the other princes of the blood, consists alternately of crosses and leaves, like those in the coronets of dukes, &c. Those of the princesses have the addition of strawberry-leaves. See CORONET. Figuratively, a garland of flowers, &c. worn on the head as a mark of worth or merit; a reward for some meritorious deed; royalty; a monarchy; the top of any thing, but of the head particularly; that part of a hat or cap which covers the head; a piece of money, valued at five shillings in England; honour; ornament; completion, or accomplishment. The sovereign of England wears the crown on all state occasions, such as the opening of parliament, &c.

To CROWN, v. a. to place a crown on a person's head; to surround the head as with a crown. Figuratively, to dignify or adorn; to perfect; to complete; to finish.

CROWNED, part. in Botany, applied to the seeds, that to which the cup of the flower adheres, as in teasel; a seed furnished with a feather, as in dandelion.

CROWN-GLASS, s. the finest sort of window glass.

CROWN-IMPERIAL, s. in Botany, a plant common in gardens, having a circle of large, hanging, yellow flowers; and the nectaries of which contain a drop of clear honey.

CROWN-OFFICE, s. a court or office under the Queen's Bench, so called because the crown is immediately concerned in what is transacted therein.

CROWNPOST, s. in Building, a post which in some buildings stands upright in the middle between two rafters. In Architecture, the uppermost member of the cornice, called also corona and hermion.

CROWN-THISTLE, s. in Botany, a species of thistle found on hilly pastures, with purple or white flowers.

CROWN-WHEEL, s. the wheel of a watch next to the escapement; so called, because the cogs are set upright on it, parallel to the axle.

CROWN-WORKS, s. in Fortification, an out-work running into the field, in order to gain some hill, and cover the other works of a place, &c.

CROYDON, Surrey, the manor of which has belonged, ever since the Conquest, to the archbishops of Canterbury, who had a venerable palace here, now, or lately, employed for a cotton manufactory. The new palace is at a little distance from the town. It has a very noble church. It is situated near the source of the Wandel. Its second fair is much frequented by persons from London, for walnuts. Market, Saturday. Pop. 16,712. There is another small place of this name in Cambridgeshire. Pop. 441.

CROYLSTONE, s. in Natural History, crystallized caulk, in which the crystals are small.

CRUCIAL, (crushial), a. [crux, Lat.] in form of a cross. Crucial incision, in Anatomy, an incision or cut in any fleshy part, in form of a cross.

CRUCIBLE, s. [crucibulum, low Lat.] a little vessel made either of earth, iron, or platinum, without a handle, used by refiners, chemists, and others, to melt metals, &c. in. It derives its name from its being formerly marked with a cross.

CRUCIFEROUS, a. [crux and fero, Lat.] bearing the cross.

CRUCIFIX, s. [crux and fixo, Lat.] a cross whereon the crucifixion of Christ is represented.

CRUCIFIXION, s. the act of nailing to a cross.

To CRUCIFY, v. a. to fasten a person by nailing his hands and feet on a cross.

CRUDE, a. [crudus, Lat.] raw, applied to flesh not dressed; unchanged or unaltered by any process or preparation. Figuratively, unfinished; immature; not brought to perfection; not reduced to order, or properly examined or modified by the mind; imperfect, unpolished, inadequate, and unrefined, applied to ideas.

CRUDELY, ad. without any preparation; without examination or consideration; gross, applied to ideas.

CRUDENESS, s. unripeness; imperfection; indigestion.

CRUDITY, s. rawness; indigestion; or any thing in its indigested state; the state of a disease, wherein the morbid matter is not yet come to a head, but increases the disorder.

CRUEL, a. [crudelis, Lat.] void of compassion, mercy, or pity, and delighting in the miseries and increasing the sufferings of others. Figuratively, implacable, inveterate, and causing the greatest degree of torture.

CRUELLY, ad. in an inhuman, barbarous, and savage manner, wherein the sufferings and tortures of others are beheld with delight, and increased with joy.

CRUELTLY, s. a savage disposition delighting in the misfortunes and sufferings of another, and in increasing them.

CRUENTATE, a. [cruentatus, from crux, Lat.] smeared with blood.

CRUET, s. [kruicke, Belg.] a phial for vinegar or oil.

CRUISE, s. [kruicke, Belg.] a small cup.

CRUISE, (kruze) s. [croise, Fr.] a voyage made by a ship up and down a coast, in order to guard it from any attack, or to intercept such of the enemy's ships as are near it.

To CRUISE, (kruze) v. n. to rove about at sea, in search of an enemy's vessel; to sail to and fro, without any certain course or destination.

CRUISER, (kruzer) s. a vessel that sails to and fro, in quest of an enemy's ship.

CRUMB, s. [cruma, Sax.] the soft part of bread. Figuratively, a small particle, or bit.

To CRUMBLE, v. a. [from the noun.] to break into small particles or pieces.—v. n. to fall into small pieces.

CRUMENAL, s. [crumena, Lat.] a purse.

CRUMMY, a. resembling the crumb of bread; soft. Figuratively, plump, or fleshy.

CRUMP, a. [Sax.] crooked or deformed.

To CRUMPLE, v. a. [rompelen, Belg.] to contract; to draw into wrinkles; to squeeze together in order to discover the wrinkles.

CRUMPLING, s. a small degenerate apple.

To CRUNK, CRUNKLE, v. n. to cry like a crane.

CRUPPER, s. [croscpe, Fr.] that part of a horse-furniture which reaches from the saddle to the tail.

CRURAL, a. [cruralis, from crus, Lat.] belonging to or situated in the leg.

CRUSADE, s. [from Crusade, see below.] the name given to those who went on any of those expeditions called Crusades.

CRUSADES, s. [crusade, Fr.] warlike expeditions which were undertaken in the middle ages, for the purpose of recovering the Holy Land, and Jerusalem especially, from the hands of the Mohammedans. Also, expeditions undertaken in the same spirit against the Moors of Spain, and against the Albigenses and Waldenses, who were pronounced heretics by the Church of Rome, and against any parties that were unkindly regarded by that Church. The first crusade was made in the latter part of the 11th century. Peter the Hermit preached throughout Europe against the abomination of desolation that held the holy places. Pope Urban II. attached plenary indulgence to taking the sword in this cause, and the people, gentle and simple, set out with the war-cry, God wills it! Peter led a deluded rabble as far as Nice, in Asia Minor, and there they were almost all slaughtered. The combined armies of the European princes set out under Godfrey de Bouillon, and after labours and battles, perils, quarrels, and adventures most romantic, they took the sacred city, and established the kingdom of Jerusalem, giving the crown to Godfrey. The second crusade was preached by St. Bernard of Clairvaux, when Nouredin threatened the newly-formed kingdom, about 50 years after the first. It was a most disastrous failure. The third was undertaken after the fall of Jerusalem, when Saladin had obliterated this strange Christian kingdom. Richard the Lion-hearted and Philip Augustus were the leaders of this expedition. Another part of the army, under the famous Frederic Barbarossa, had set out before, and Frederic had lost his life by imprudently bathing in the Cydnus, in Asia Minor. The main host went by sea. The quarrels of the leaders made this also a failure; but the romance of its details was never equalled. Several miserably abortive schemes followed. The two last crusades alone deserve to be mentioned. The earlier of these was conducted by Louis IX. of France, and failed, by a most unhappy defeat, which made the army prisoners of war. The last was the scheme of Edward I. of England, and likewise failed. The cost in blood and treasure in these expeditions was enormous. The benefits accruing from them were, the check given to the tide of Mohammedan conquest in the direction of Europe, and the introduction to Europe of the arts, literature, civilization, and commerce of the East.

CRUSET, s. a goldsmith's melting-pot.

To CRUSH, v. a. [craser, Fr.] to break to pieces, or to make the two opposite sides of a vessel meet by external violence; to overwhelm; to beat down; to depress, subdue, or destroy by force.

CRUSH, s. collision; destruction.

CRUST, s. [crusta, Lat.] the hard external surface or coat of a thing; a collection of matter grown hard; the case which contains the fruit or meat of a pie or pudding; the outer hard part of bread; a waste piece of bread.

To CRUST, v. a. to cover with a hard case; to foul with soil or dirt.—v. n. to have its external surface hardened.

CRUSTACEOUS, (krustishous) a. covered with shell, applied to fish.

CRUSTILY, ad. in a morose, surly, or peevish manner.

CRUSTINESS, s. the hardness of the outside of bread. Figuratively, peevishness, moroseness.

CRUSTY, a. covered with a hard surface or coat. Figuratively, not easily prevailed on; morose; peevish.

CRUTCH, s. [crucke, Teut.] a support, composed of a round piece of wood, in which a long staff is fixed, placed under the arm-pits, and used by cripples or lame persons to walk with.

To CRUTCH, v. a. to support as with crutches.

To CRY, v. n. [crier, Fr.] to speak with vehemence and loudness; to speak to with great importunity and sorrow; to proclaim; to publish; to exclaim; to speak with a mournful tone of voice, attended with tears; to make a noise or squalling like an infant; to weep or shed tears. In Hunting, to yelp, applied to the noise made by a hound in full scent. To cry out, to scream, or make a shriek when in danger; to complain loudly; to blame or censure; to be in labour.—v. a. to proclaim any thing that is lost, or to be sold. To cry down, to depreciate or under-value; to blame, or detract from; to forbid; to overbear. To cry up, to praise, or increase the value of a thing by applause.

CRY, s. [cri, Fr.] lamentation; a mournful shriek or scream; clamour or outcry; an exclamation of triumph and wonder; a proclamation; the hawkers' proclamation of wares to be sold in the streets; acclamation; popular favour; importunate call; the method of utterance made use of by different animals to express their wants, &c. In Hunting, the yelping of dogs. Figuratively, a pack of bounds; a confused inarticulate noise.

CRYAL, s. a name of the heron.

CRYER, s. in Natural History, a kind of hawk, called the falcon-gentle.

CRYPT, s. [krupto, Gr.] a vault under a church or religious edifice, used in the mediæval system for various purposes, penance, punishment, meditation, wine-storing, &c.

CRYPTIC, CRYPTICAL, a. dark; abstruse; secret; occult; hidden; not made public.

CRYPTOGRAPHY, s. [krupto and grapho, Gr.] the art of writing in secret characters.

CRYPTOLOGY, s. [krupto and logos, Gr.] enigmatical language.

CRYSTAL, s. [krystallos, Gr.] in Mineralogy and Chemistry, the geometrical figure regularly assumed by any substance. Commonly, a kind of stone, very hard, and transparent as glass.

CRYSTAL, a. consisting or made of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear, transparent.

CRYSTALLINE, a. [crystallinus, Lat.] consisting of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear, transparent. Crystalline humour, in Anatomy, the second humour of the eye, lying immediately next the aqueous, beyond the uvea.

CRYSTALLIZATION, s. in Chemistry, an operation of nature, in which various earths, salts, and metallic substances pass from a fluid to a solid state, assuming certain determinate geometrical figures.

To CRYSTALLIZE, v. a. to form into a mass resembling that of crystals.—v. n. to coagulate, or shoot into angular shapes, resembling a crystal.

CRYSTALLOGRAPHY, s. [krystallos and grapho, Gr.] the science which describes and classifies crystals; and, in connexion with mineralogy and chemistry, investigates their composition, structure, &c.

CTESIAS, a Greek writer of history, who held the office of medical adviser to Artaxerxes Mnemon. His works were numerous, but we have but a few fragments, quoted by other writers. He wrote about 400 a. c.

CUB, s. [etymology uncertain.] the young of a bear or fox; sometimes applied to that of a whale. Figuratively, the offspring of a human creature, by way of reproach.

To CUB, v. a. to bring forth, applied to a fox or bear.

CUBA, a West India island, near the entrance of the Gulf of Mexico, about 700 miles in length, and 70 in its mean breadth. The hills run through the island from E. to W., but are nearly 7000 feet high at the E., and from these many rivulets run on both sides to the sea. The land is generally level near the coast. Here are large forests abounding with game, and extensive pastures, which feed large flocks and herds of horned cattle, sheep, and hogs, originally brought from Europe, and which now run wild. The produce is sugar, ginger, long pepper, cassia, wild cinnamon, tobacco, cigars, aloes, mastic, cassia fistula, manioc, maize, cocoa, &c. &c. These, with gold, copper, &c. found in the mountains, and the cedar, mahogany, ebony, &c. &c. of its forests, are its exports. There are convenient harbours at different parts of the coast. It is yet under the dominion of Spain. Its population is about 900,000, of whom 300,000 are slaves.

CUBATION, s. [cubo, Lat.] the act of lying down.

CUBATORY, a. recumbent.

CUBATURE, s. the finding the solid contents of a body.

CUBE, s. [kubos, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid body, consisting of six equal square sides. In Arithmetic, a number arising from the multiplication of a number by itself twice.

CUBE, s. in Medicine, the small dried fruit of a species of pepper, much resembling it, but having an awn or spine.

CUBIC, CUBICAL, a. belonging to, or having the properties of, a cube.

CUBICALNESS, s. the state or quality of being cubical.

CUBIFORM, a. in the shape or form of a cube.

CUBIT, s. [cubitus, Lat.] a measure in use among the ancients, which was the distance from the elbow bending inward to the extremity of the middle finger, fixed by some to 1 foot 9 inches English measure; by others, to 1 foot 1.6 inches: the reason of this variety is, that in Scripture there were two kinds of cubits, one measuring according to the first computation, and the other according to the latter.

CUBITAL, a. containing the length or measure of a cubit.

CUCKFIELD, Sussex. It is 40 miles from London. Market, Friday, Pop. 3444.

CUCKINGSTOOL, s. a chair in which women were formerly plunged into the water, as a punishment for scolding.

CUCKOO, CUCKOW, s. [cecceus, Brit.] in Natural History, a common English summer bird, whose familiar note is one of the first indications of settled spring. It builds no nest, but deposits its eggs in the nests of other birds, chiefly the hedge-sparrow. It is seldom heard beyond June; and is one of our first migratory birds to depart.

CUCKOO-FLOWER, s. in Botany, a species of the cardamine, commonly called lady's smock.

CUCKOO-SPITTLE, s. a froth seen during the spring and early summer, at the joints and on the stems of many herbaceous plants, which is raised as a defence and congenial element by the larva of the common cicada, or tree-hopper.

CUCCULATE, CUCCULATED, a. [cucculatus, from cucculus, Lat.] hooded; covered as with a hood or cowl; having the resemblance or shape of a hood.

CUCUMBER, s. [cucumis, Lat.] in Botany, a well-known fruit, used as a salad, and for pickling.

CUCURBITACEOUS, (kukurbitashious) a. [cucurbita, Lat.] in Botany, applied to those plants which resemble a gourd; such as the pumpkin and melon.

CUCCURBITE, s. a chemical vessel or glass made in the shape of a gourd, and commonly called a body.

CUD, s. (Sax.) the inside of the throat; the food kept by a cow in the first stomach, which it chews a second time.

CUDDAPAH, a town of the Presidency of Madras, Hindustan. It stands on a river of the same name, and is not better as to its style of building than the towns of the interior usually are. It is the capital of a district, and is famous for the diamond mines in its vicinity. It is about 160 miles from Madras. Population, about 20,000. Lat. 14. 25. N. Long. 79. 0. E.

CUDGEL, s. [kudde, Belg.] a stick made use of to strike with, lighter than a club, and shorter than a pole.

To CUDGEL, v. a. to beat with a stick.

CUDEWEE, s. in Botany, a plant, called also chafeweed, found in barren pastures and road-sides, with brownish flowers.

CUDWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, called also sea cudweed; a species of athanasia.

CUDWORTH, DR. RALPH, one of the famous latitudinarians at Cambridge, in the latter part of the 17th century. He received his education during the times of the civil war, and on the restoration of the Stuart family was not removed from his living, but rose to be a dignitary of the church. He was a man of prodigious erudition, and one of the most learned expounders of the Platonic philosophy of his age. His great work, whereof but one part ever appeared, is entitled the True Intellectual System of the Universe. Several of his works are lying yet in MS. in the British Museum. He died in 1688, aged 71 years. In his writings and life we notice some of the characteristic features of the change that followed the great Puritan uprising in England. Puritanism had been so intimately associated with a special system of theology, that the necessary antiquation of that system, by the progress of men's minds, led to a habit of speculating and philosophizing, which could never be the source of such enthusiastic piety as the Puritans showed, nor of such stern resolution in the discharge of duty. It might have been only the season of transition from Puritanism to a still loftier exhibition of spiritual life. Other influences prevented its rising, and it was the first step into a cheerless denial or doubt of all spirituality, which England is but now recovering from.

CUÉ, s. [que, Fr.] the tail or end of anything; the last words of a speech, which a player looks upon as a sign for him to begin to speak; a hint; the part which a person is to play in his turn.

CUERPO, s. [Span.] without the upper coat or cloak.

CUFF, s. [zuffa, Ital.] a box given on the ear, or the head, with the fist. To strike with the talons or wings, applied to birds.

To CUFF, v. n. to fight; to scuffle.—v. a. to strike with the fist or talons.

CUFF, s. [coiffe, Fr.] that part of the sleeve which is turned back again from the wrist towards the shoulder.

CUI'NAGE, s. the making up twine in peculiar form for carriage.

CUIRA'SS, (cuirasse), s. [cuirasse, Fr.] a part of defensive armour, made of iron well hammered, covering the body from the neck to the girdle.

CUIRASSIER, (cuirassier) s. a soldier who wears a cuirass.

CUISH, s. [cuisse, Fr.] the armour which was used formerly to cover the thighs.

CULDEES, s. [culdeid, Lat.] in Church History, an order of Cœnobites, formerly inhabiting Scotland and Ireland. They differed on many important points from the Romish Church; but little is known of them beyond this. Their most famous locality, and the last which existed, was at Iona.

CULINARY, a. [culina, Lat.] belonging to the kitchen; or used in cookery.

To CULL, v. a. [cueillir, Fr.] to pick or choose from a number.

CULLEN, Banffshire, Scotland. It is seated on the sea-coast. It is about 120 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1564.

CULLEN, DR. WILLIAM, an eminent Scotch physician of the end of the last century. He rose by his own energy and application, and afterwards, by the patronage of an intelligent nobleman of Scotland, obtained a chair in Glasgow University, and thence proceeded to Edinburgh, where he occupied successively several professorships, with constantly growing celebrity. He was the author of several works on his science, some of which have enjoyed great popularity. He died in 1790, aged 78 years.

CULLER, s. one who chooses a thing from a great many others.

CUL'UMBINE, or more properly COLUMBINE, s. The flowers of this plant are beautifully variegated with blue, purple, red, and white.

To CULLY, v. a. to make a fool of a person; to deceive or impose upon.

CULMIFEROUS, a. [culmus and fero, Lat.] in Botany, applied to such plants as have a smooth jointed stalk, usually hollow; are wrapped about at each joint with single, narrow, sharp-pointed leaves, and have their seed contained in chaffy husks; such as wheat, barley, &c.

To CULMINATE, v. n. [culmen, Lat.] in Astronomy, to be at its greatest altitude; to be vertical, or in its meridian.

CULMINATION, s. in Astronomy, the transit or passage of a star over the meridian, or that point of its orbit wherein it is at its greatest altitude.

CULPABILITY, s. the quality which subjects a thing to blame, or renders it an object of blame.

CULPABLE, a. [culpabilis, from culpa, Lat.] worthy of or deserving blame, including the idea of some voluntary fault of a slight kind.

CULPABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a person an object of blame.

CULPABLY, ad. in such a manner as to deserve blame; originally.

CULPRIT, s. a malefactor, or criminal; a guilty person.

CULROSS, Perthshire, Scotland. It is seated on the river Forth. It is 33 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1099.

To CULTIVATE, v. a. [cultiver, Fr.] to heighten the fruitfulness of the earth by manuring it, or by other methods of husbandry. Figuratively, to improve the understanding by education and study.

CULTIVATION, s. the act of improving soils by husbandry. Figuratively, the improvement of the understanding by education and study; improvement in any science.

CULTIVATOR, s. one who improves, promotes, or endeavours to forward any vegetable product, or any thing else capable of improvement.

CULTURE, s. [culto, Lat.] the act of cultivating or tilling the ground. Figuratively, the improvement of the mind by education and study; improvement in any branch of learning.

To CULTURE, v. n. to cultivate; to manure, till, or improve soil by labour, and other methods of husbandry.

CULVER, s. [culfre, Sax.] a pigeon. An old word.

CULVERIN, s. [coulouvrier, Fr.] a slender piece of ordnance, or artillery, from 5 one-half to 5 inches bore, from 12 to 13 feet long, and carrying a shot from 5 one-fourth to 3 three-fourth inches diameter.

CUMÆ, a town of ancient Italy, in the district named Campania, not far from Naples, celebrated as the home of one of the sibyls, or female prophetesses, who in the legends of Rome was said to have offered the writings containing her predictions respecting the city, contained in nine volumes, to King Tarquinius Superbus, for a price, which was refused, on which she burnt three volumes, and demanded the same price for the remainder; and being again refused, burnt three more, and still demanded the same price, which so struck the king, that he purchased the three remaining volumes, and they were deposited in the Capitol, and consulted on great occasions; but neither Rome nor, most certainly, Tarquin was a whit the wiser for her vaticinations.

To CUMBER, v. a. [kombere, Belg.] to hinder a person from acting by its weight; to put a person to difficulty in managing a thing, by its weight or length. Figuratively, to load with something useless; to disturb, distress, or involve in difficulties; to distract or perplex with variety of employments.

CUMBER, s. [komber, Belg.] hinderance; unmanageableness caused by bulk.

CUMBERLAND, a maritime county of England, bounded on the W. by the Irish Sea and Solway Frith; on the N. by Scotland; on the E. by Northumberland, Durham, and Westmoreland; and on the S. W. and S. by the sea and Lancashire. It is 58 miles in length, and its greatest breadth is about 45 miles. All but the N. part of this county is very hilly, or even mountainous, Helvellyn, Skiddaw, Cross-Fell, and some other heights exceeding 3000 feet. Amidst these mountains and hills are lakes, of no great extent, but of most romantic beauty. Its streams are the Eden, the Derwent, the Esk, &c., some of which have in their course several noble waterfalls. There are mines of lead, copper, iron, and even of silver; but those of black-lead, or plumbago, are the most peculiar. Coal, slate, limestone, granite, and various building-stones, also occur in various degrees of abundance. There is good pasture even among the hills, and the arable land is fertile. It contains 1 city, 2 boroughs, 17 market towns. Carlisle is the county town. Pop. 178,038. It returns 9 representatives to parliament.

CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, Bishop of Peterborough, at the beginning of the last century. He was a learned and a good man, but is known best, perhaps, by a work on ethical science, in which he combated Hobbes' Philosophy, without, however, substituting a better in its room. He died in 1718, aged 86 years.

CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, one of the minor dramatists and poets of the 18th century, some of whose pieces occasionally find their way before the public even now. He died in 1811, aged 79 years.

CUMBERSOME, a. occasioning great trouble and vexation. Figuratively, burdensome; occasioning perplexity; unwieldy, or not easily managed, on account of its length or weight.

CUMBERSOMELY, ad. in a troublesome manner; in a manner that produces hinderance and vexation.

CUMBERSOMENESS, s. encumbrance; hinderance; obstruction.

CUMBRANCE, s. burthen; hinderance; impediment.

CUMBROUS, a. troublesome; vexatious; causing uneasiness.

CUMFREY, Co'MFREY, s. in Botany, a medicinal unbelliciferous plant.

CUMMIN, s. [cuminum, Lat.] in Botany, a common plant in W. Asia, used for the aromatic and carminative properties of its seeds.

To CUMULATE, v. a. [cumulo, Lat.] to lay one thing upon another; to heap together.

CUNCTATION, s. [cunctatio, Lat.] the act of deferring the doing of a thing to another time, which ought to be done immediately.

CUNEAL, a. [cuneus, Lat.] relating to, or having the shape of, a wedge.

CUNEATED, part. made in the form of a wedge.

CUNEIFORM, a. [cuneus and forma, Lat.] having the form of a wedge. In Anatomy, applied to the fourth, fifth, and sixth

REFERENCE
to the WARDS

- Albiondale 1
- below (down) 2
- Albiondale 3
- above (down) 4
- Leath 5

The County returns 1 number.

bones of the foot, from their wedge-like shape, being large above and narrow below.

CUNNING, a. [cunnan, Sax.] learned, knowing, or of an extensive knowledge; performed with art or skill; curious. Figuratively, sly; designing; crafty; over-reaching another by superior wit and understanding.

CUNNING, s. [cunninge, Sax.] artifice; deceit; superior talents employed in deceiving others; art; skill; knowledge.

CUNNINGHAM, ALLAN, a recent writer, whose Scotch songs have gained him a well-deserved name, but whose books, made for publishers, are not of a corresponding class. His Lives of Poets, and several other of his works, are, meanwhile, of a useful kind, and display his skill in writing, if not his real genius. He died in 1842, aged 57 years.

CUNNINGLY, ad. in a sly, crafty manner.

CUNNINGMAN, s. a man who pretends to tell fortunes, or teach how to recover stolen goods.

CUNNINGNESS, s. craftiness; slyness.

CUP, s. [cup, Sax.] a small vessel, with a foot, to drink in. Figuratively, the liquor contained in a cup. In the plural, a merry bout or entertainment of drinking. Any thing hollow like a cup, as the husk of an acorn, the bell of a flower.

To CUP, v. n. in Surgery, to bleed a person after having fixed a cupping-glass to the part.

CUPAR, the name of three towns in Scotland, one of which is in Fifehire, the other two in Perthshire. Cupar Fife, the most important, is chief town of the county, and is beautifully situated on the river Eden. Though not a large town, it is well built, and has several important institutions. It was also in olden time a place of great distinction as the seat of the court of the Thanes of Fife. It is about 30 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 6758.

CUPBEARER, s. an officer of the king's household; an attendant to give wine at a feast.

CUPBOARD, s. [cup and board, Sax.] a case or receptacle; a place fitted with shelves and a door, in which victuals or earthenware are placed, distinguished from a closet, which is considerably larger.

To CUPBOARD, v. a. to put into a cupboard. Figuratively, to board.

CUPEL, s. in Metallurgy, a vessel made of calcined bones, mixed with a small proportion of clay and water. It is used whenever gold and silver are refined by melting them with lead. The process is called cupellation.

CUPID, in Heathen Mythology, amongst the Romans, the god who presided over love, and was represented as the son of Venus and Mercury. He was painted as a winged boy, bearing a bow and arrows, and sometimes blindfolded. Amongst the Greeks he was called Eros.

CUPIDITY, s. [cupiditas, from cupio, Lat.] concupiscence; unlawful or unreasonable longing.

CUPOLA, s. [Ital.] In Architecture, a spherical vault, or the round of the top of the dome of a church, which resembles a cup inverted; called by some a lantern.

CUPPER, s. one who applies a cupping-glass, and scarifies a person.

CUPPING, s. in Surgery, the applying a cupping-glass for the discharge of blood, and other humours, by the skin.

CUPPING-GLASS, s. a glass vessel, which having its air rarefied, gives room for that contained in the part to which it is applied to expand itself, and bring with it such humours as it is involved in, which are afterwards discharged by a scarifier, or instrument fitted with the points of several lancets, which by means of a spring enter the skin at the same time.

CUPREGUS, s. [cupressus, Lat.] coppery, or consisting of copper.

CUR, s. [korre, Belg.] a degenerate, worthless dog. Figuratively, used as a term of reproach for a man.

CURABLE, a. [curo, Lat.] that may be healed.

CURABLENESS, s. the possibility of being healed.

CURACOA, (Curacao), a West India island, subject to the Dutch, 35 miles long and 8 broad. The island is barren, and dependent on the rains for water; and it has some hills of considerable height. St. Barbara has a harbour which, though not naturally good, has been artificially made very secure. Curacoa, the capital, has a very good harbour. There are also some others. Its value is not very great except as an emporium for the W. India trade of Holland. Its population is inconsiderable. Lat. 12. 6. N. Long. 69. 2. W.

CURACY, s. in the Church of England, the employment of a clergyman, who does the duty of the person who has the benefice, for a certain salary.

CURATE, s. in the Church of England, a clergyman who performs the duties of another; a parish priest.

CURATIVE, a. relating to the cure of a disease; recovering, or able to recover, from a disorder.

CURATOR, s. [Lat.] one who has the cure and superintendence of a thing, place, or person.

CURB, s. [curber, Fr.] in Farriery, an iron chain fastened to the upper part of the branches of a bridle, in a hole called the eye, and running over the head of a horse, used to manage a hard-mouthed horse. Figuratively, a restraint put on the inclinations of a person. It is also a large swelling that runs along the inside of a horse's hoof, in the great sinews behind, above the top of the horn, which makes him go lame after he has been heated.

To CURB, v. a. to manage or guide a horse by means of a curb. Figuratively, to check or restrain the passions or inclinations.

CURD, s. [krayden, Belg.] the thickening or clotting of any liquor, generally applied to that of milk, which is occasioned by mixing runnet with it.

To CURDLE, v. n. to grow into clots; to grow thick, like milk mixed with runnet.—v. a. to make a thing grow thick, clot, or coagulate, by mixing some acid with it.

CURDY, a. coagulated; clotted.

CURE, s. [cura, Lat.] a remedy; the healing of a wound, or recovering from a disease; the benefice or employment of a clergyman or curate in the Church of England. SYNON. Cure seems to have no other object than stubborn disorders, and those which proceed from constitution; whereas remedy has a view to slight complaints, and such as are of short duration.

To CURE, v. a. [curo, Lat.] to heal a wound; to restore to health; to recover from a disease. In Cookery, to preserve from stinking, or corrupting; to salt.

CURLESS, a. without cure or remedy; not to be cured.

CURLESS, s. a healer or physician.

CURFEW, s. [couvre feu, Fr.] an evening bell, on the sound of which every man was obliged to put out his fire, and extinguish his candle, in the time of William the Conqueror. Figuratively, any bell which tolls regularly about night time; a cover for a fire or a fire-place.

CURIALITY, s. [curialis, Lat.] the privileges, prerogatives, or retinue of a court.

CURIOSITY, s. a propensity or disposition of the soul, which inclines it to inquire after new objects, and to delight in viewing them; a nice experiment; an object of curiosity, or a rarity.

CURIIOUS, a. [curiosus, Lat.] inquisitive, or disposed to inquire into novelties, whether they respect truths or objects of sight; attentive to, or diligent; accurate, or careful to avoid an impropriety or mistake; exact; nice; artful; elegant; neat; rigid; severe.

CURIIOUSLY, ad. in an inquisitive, exact, accurate, elegant, laboured, or high-finished manner; captiously.

CURL, s. a single lock of hair. Figuratively, a wave; undulation; or waving line.

To CURL, v. a. [curran, Sax.] to make the hair twist in circles or ringlets; to write or twist round; to dress with curls; to raise in waves, or in a spiral form.—v. n. to form itself into ringlets; to form circular lines; to twist itself.

CURLEW, s. [curlicu, Fr.] in Natural History, a genus of long-billed birds allied to the woodcock and snipe, which frequents marshy places, and wades in the shallow water at dusk, feeding on what it can gather from the ooze of the bogs. The stone curlew is a name given to another bird of the same class, called the thick-knee. The corn curlew is sometimes called a curlew.

CURMUDGEON, s. [a corrupt pronunciation and spelling of cour merchant, Fr.] one who is void of generosity; a niggardly or avaricious person; a miser.

CURRAGE, an extensive common, of fine land, in Kildare, Leinster, about 30 miles from Dublin, celebrated for horse-races.

CURRANT, s. in Botany, the tree so called, and the berry of it; likewise a small dried grape; properly written corinth.

CURRENCY, s. [curro, Lat.] circulation; passing from hand to hand, and acknowledged as local, applied to money, whether in metal or paper. General reception; fluency; readiness of utterance; constant flow; uninterrupted course; general esteem and repute.

CURRENT, a. passing from hand to hand; established or legal, applied to money. Generally received; not contradicted, applied to opinions. Popular, or established by a majority; fashionable; passable, or to be admitted; what is now passing. In Commerce, account current, is that which is opened by two persons that have dealings with each other, wherein the different credits and debts of each are registered on opposite sides, in order to form a balance between them.

CURRENT, s. in Hydrography, a running stream. In Navigation, a progressive motion of the water of the sea, by which a ship may be retarded in her course, or carried more swiftly, when moving in the same direction as the current. The great gulf stream, which flows from the Gulf of Mexico, and is felt in the most northerly latitudes, is a good example of an ocean current. SYNON. A stream issues from a head, and moves forward with a continuity of parts. A current is a certain progressive motion of some fluid body. These words in the literal sense are applied to water. Thus we say, the stream of a river, the current of the sea.

CURRENTLY, ad. in a constant motion; without opposition; without ceasing.

CURRENTNESS, s. circulation; general reception; easiness of pronunciation.

CURRIER, s. [curian, Lat.] one who dresses leather.

CURRISS, a. like a cur; snappish; quarrelsome.

TO CURRY, v. a. [curium, Lat.] to dress leather with oil, tallow, &c. To rub a horse with a sharp-pointed instrument or comb, in order to smooth his hide, promote circulation, and increase his flesh. Figuratively, to tickle; to flatter. To curry favour with, is to endeavour to gain the esteem or friendship of another by trivial offices and small compliances.

CURRYCOMB, s. an iron instrument set with iron teeth or wires, used to dress a horse.

TO CURSE, v. a. [curian, Sax.] to wish a person ill; to devote to destruction. Figuratively, to afflict or torment.

CURSE, s. the action of wishing any tremendous evil to another; the act of devoting to temporal or eternal torments; affliction; torment or misery.

CURSED, part. under a curse. Figuratively, hateful; unholily; vexatious.

CURSEDLY, ad. miserably; shamefully: a low cant word.

CURSEDNESS, s. the state of being under a curse.

CURSIOR, s. [Lat.] an officer, or clerk, belonging to chancery, who makes out original writs. There are 24, having each particular shires allotted them, for which they make such original writs as are required, and are called clerks of course in the oath of the clerks of chancery.

CURSORILY, ad. in a hasty manner; without care or attention.

CURSORINESS, s. haste; slowness of attention.

CURSORY, a. [curorius, from curro, Lat.] hasty; quick; careless; transient.

CURST, a. [corcel, Belg.] froward; snarling; peevish; delighting in mischief.

CURSTNESS, s. peevishness; frowardness; malignity.

CURT, a. [curtus, Lat.] short.

TO CURTAIL, v. a. [curtus, Lat.] to cut off; to shorten by cutting. Figuratively, to retrench, applied to expenses.

CURTAL DOG, s. a dog whose tail is cut off, and is thence rendered unfit for coursing; perhaps the original from whence cur is formed by contraction.

CURTAL-DOUBLE, s. a musical wind instrument like the bassoon, which plays the bass to the hautboy.

CURTAIN, s. [curtina, Lat.] a cloth hung before a window, and running on a string or iron rod, by which means it is spread or contracted, made use of to exclude the light, air, or to hide any thing. In Fortification, that part of a wall or rampart which lies between two bastions.

TO CURTAIN, v. a. to furnish or hang with curtains.

CURTANA, s. a sword which has no point, and which is carried before the sovereigns of England at their coronation, and is supposed to typify the quality of mercy, which must be admitted to modify the sternness of rigid justice in a sovereign's dealings with a people.

CURTATE DISTANCE, s. in Astronomy, the distance of the sun's place, and that of the moon or a planet, reduced to the ecliptic.

CURTATION, s. [curto, Lat.] in Astronomy, a little part cut off from the line of a planet's interval or distance from the sun.

CURTELASSE, s. [curtelax, s. See CUTLASS.

CURTSY, s. See CURTESY.

CURVATED, a. [curvatus, Lat.] bent.

CURVATION, s. [curvo, Lat.] the act of bending or crooking.

CURVATURE, s. crookedness; inflection; manner of bending.

CURVE, a. [curvus, Lat.] crooked, bent, formed or forced from a perpendicular or straight surface to an angular one.

CURVE, s. any thing bent; a bending. In Geometry, a line whose points are placed and extended different ways, running on continually in all directions, and may be cut by a right line in more points than one.

TO CURVE, v. a. [curvo, Lat.] to bend; to crook; to bend back, or fold.

TO CURVET, v. a. [corvettare, Ital.] to bound or leap; to frisk; to grow wanton, or licentious.

CURVET, s. in the menage, a leap or bound. Figuratively, a frolic or prank.

CURVILINEAR, a. [curvus and linea, Lat.] consisting of, or composed of, one or more crooked lines.

CURVITY, s. [curvitas, Lat.] crookedness.

CUSCO, a large city of Peru, S. America, formerly the residence of the Incas. It is built in a square form, and in its centre is the best market in all Spanish America. Four large streets, perfectly straight, meet in the square, and streams of water run through the town. Several branches of manufacturing industry are carried on here. It is 290 miles from Lima. Population, about 50,000. Lat. 13. 9. S. Long. 71. 0. W.

CUSHION, s. [hussen, Belg.] a case of silk, velvet, or worsted, stuffed with wool, feathers, or horse-hair, placed on the seat of a chair, to render the sitting easy.

CUSHIONED, a. supported by cushions; seated on a cushion.

CUSP, s. [cuspis, Lat.] in Astronomy, the horns of the moon or any other planet. Generally, any acute point formed by curved lines.

CUSPATED, s. [cuspidatus, Lat.] in Botany, applied to the leaves or petals of a flower, which end in a point, called spear-shaped by Miller.

CUSTARD, s. [custard, Brit.] a kind of pastry made with milk, eggs, and sugar, which are thickened into a mass, either by baking in an oven, or boiling under a fire.

CUSTODY, s. [custodia, from custos, Lat.] confinement in prison; restraint of liberty. Figuratively, the charge or keeping of a person; defence; preservation; security.

CUSTOM, s. [coutume, Fr.] repeated and habitual practice of any action; fashion, or method adopted by the majority; an established manner; a good rule of trade; a tribute or tax paid to the government on goods imported or exported. Custom-house is the place where those taxes are paid. Among lawyers, it is a law or right not written, established by long usage and the consent of our ancestors, has been, and daily is practised. SYNON. Fashion introduces itself, and extends daily. Custom establishes itself, and gains authority. The first forms a mode; the second a usage. Each is a kind of law independent of reason, with respect to that which relates to our outward actions. Customs relate to the general practice of a people; manners, to their way of life; and fashions, to their dress.

CUSTOMABLE, a. that is frequently or commonly practised.

CUSTOMABLENESS, s. frequency, habit; conformity to custom.

CUSTOMABLY, ad. according to custom.

CUSTOMARILY, ad. commonly; generally.

CUSTOMARINESS, s. frequency of repetition, or practice.

CUSTOMARY, a. habitual; usual.

CUSTOMED, a. usual; common; generally practised.

CUSTOMER, s. one who purchases any thing of a tradesman.

CUSTOS, s. [Lat.] a keeper, or person who has the charge of any thing. Custos Breveium is a clerk belonging to the Common Pleas, who has the charge of writs and records of Nisi Prius: there is also one in the court of Queen's Bench, who files such writs as are to be filed, and all warrants of attorney, and transcribes or makes out records of Nisi Prius. Custos Rotulorum, one who has the custody of rolls or records of the sessions of peace;

he is also a justice of the peace, and of the quorum in the county where he has his office. Custos Spiritualium, one who acts as an ecclesiastical judge during the vacancy of a see. Custos Temporalium, one appointed by the king to take care of the rents and profits of a vacant see.

CUTSTREL, s. a buckler-bearer; a vessel for holding wine. To CUT, v. a. preter, and past part. cut; [couteau, Fr.] to penetrate, or divide with a sharp-edged instrument; to hew; to carve; to wound or pierce with any uneasy or poignant sensation; to intersect; to cross. In Gaming, to separate a pack of cards, by taking off some of them from the others. Figuratively, to excel, or surpass. To cut off, to destroy; to rescind; to intercept; to obviate; to withhold; to preclude; to interrupt; to abbreviate. To cut out, to shape; to form; to contrive; to fit; to debar; to excel. To cut up, to carve, or divide a joint or fowl properly.

CUT, part. prepared, or fit for use, alluding to hewn timber. CUT, s. the action or effect of a sharp or edged instrument; a channel made by art; a small piece, or shred, separated by an edge-tool from a larger substance; a lot; a short way, by which some winding is avoided; a picture taken from a block of engraved wood. Also fashion; form; shape.

CUTANEOUS, a. [cutis, Lat.] relating to the skin.

CUTCH, a district of Hindustan, lying on the Indian Ocean, between Sindh and Guzerat, and stretching back to the desert in the interior. It is not a very promising region, the soil being sandy and the hills barren, and much of its area being occupied with a salt marsh. It has coal and iron, but not many mines. Its pastures feed horses, sheep, &c. Cotton is its principal growth, and with the produce of its pastures, and some native fruits, form its chief export. Two large rivers water it, as well as one branch of the delta of the Indus. Boogebogee is its capital. Its population may be about 500,000. Both Mohammedanism and Hinduism prevail amongst the inhabitants, but both systems are mixed with other foreign superstitions.

CUTICLE, [s. cuticula, Lat.] in Human Physiology, the first and outermost covering of the body, commonly called the scarf-skin. This is the soft skin which rises in a blister upon any burning, or the application of a blistering-plaster. It adheres to the true skin, to which it is also attached by the microscopic vessels which nourish it. When examined with a microscope, it appears to be made up of several layers of exceedingly small scales. In Vegetable Physiology, it is the outer and delicate skin of plants. Figuratively, a thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor.

CUTICULAR, a. belonging to the cuticle, or skin.

CUTLASS, s. [cutelae, Fr.] a broad cutting sword, slightly curved, used in the navy.

CUTLER, s. [coutelier, Fr.] one who makes and sells knives, &c.

CUT-PURSE, s. one who robs a person of his money by cutting his purse; a common practice before the invention of breeches, when men wore their purses at their girdles; a thief; a robber.

CUTTACK, or CATTACK, a district of Hindustan, lying on the Bay of Bengal, between Bengal and the Circars, forming the maritime part of Orissa (which see). Cuttack, or Cattack, is its principal place, and stands at the head of the delta of the Mahanudi river. It is not badly built in comparison with the towns of Hindustan generally, and has some trade. It is about 250 miles from Calcutta. Its population is about 50,000. Lat. 20. 30. N. Long. 86. 15. E.

CUTTER, s. a person or instrument which cuts out any thing; a small nimble-sailing vessel; one of the fore-teeth.

CUT-THROAT, s. a murderer.—a. cruel; inhuman; barbarous.

CUTTING, s. a shred, or piece separated by means of a knife or sharp instrument. In the Menage, it is when the feet of a horse interfere, or when with the shoe of one foot he beats off the skin from the pastern joint of another hoof. In Painting, it is the laying one strong lively colour over another, without any shade or softening. In Horticulture, it is a slip cut from a plant, for the purpose of planting. In Engineering, it is a wide trench cut through a hill for a rail-road to run in, that the level may be preserved.

CUTTLE-FISH, [cuttlevisch, Belg.] in Natural History, a marine animal, allied to the family of the nautilus, but having a sort of internal shell, or bone, instead of an external unattached one. It has many arms with which it takes its prey, and a bony mouth. It is furnished with a bag containing a thick black fluid, which it emits when alarmed, and darkens the water. Fossil cuttle-fishes have been found, with the ink-bag entire. The belemnite or thunder-bolt of the chalk and oolitic beds, is the bone of a species of cuttle-fish. The pounce used in lawyers' offices for smoothing parchment after an erasure, is the softer part of the bone of the cuttle-fish, powdered.

CUVIER, BARON G., the distinguished French comparative anatomist and naturalist, of the beginning of this century. He early rose into notice through his diligence and acute observations made in some departments of natural history, and received an appointment at Paris from the Directory. By Napoleon he was much employed, both as a professed teacher at Paris, and in the organization of colleges in various parts of Europe which had been conquered by France; he even called him to his state council. Similar honours and duties were heaped on him by the restored Bourbons. His great systematic work on natural history is entitled The Animal Kingdom, and is an entirely new classification of every department of the subject; in some branches of which he was aided by his scientific friends and coadjutors. He constructed a geological theory, but, as so few facts in comparison with the magnitude of the subject had been discovered, it is not surprising that it should not be accepted. His most Herculean labours lay amidst fossil remains, amongst which, aided by a scientific insight almost miraculous, he discovered and reconstructed very many entirely new genera and species of quadrupeds, &c. His restoration of the Iguanodon (which see) from a fragment of bone found in a quarry in Sussex, is one of the most remarkable triumphs of inductive science; it having been completely verified by subsequent discoveries. He wrote many other works, and many addresses on the death of scientific men before the National Institute of France are published. After the Revolution of 1830, he was ennobled. But he never recovered from the shock which he received on the death of his solitary living child, the most amiable, accomplished, and pious girl, who died in 1827, and he died in 1859, aged 63 years.

CUXHAVEN, a sea-port and harbour of Hamburg, situated on the German Ocean, between the mouths of the Elbe and the Weser, in the province of Bremen. Its population is under 1000. Lat. 53. 50. N. Long. 8. 45. E.

CUYP, ALBERT, a Dutch painter of the 17th century, much admired in England for his quiet landscapes with animals, which are distinguished for their colouring. Dort was the scene of his labours, and furnished the material for his sketches. No particulars of his personal history are known.

CYANOGEN, s. [kuanos and gignomi, Gr.] in Chemistry, a gas composed of 2 parts of carbon and 1 of nitrogen, capable of uniting with oxygen, hydrogen, and most other non-metallic elements, and also with the metals. Combined with hydrogen, it forms one of the most deadly poisons, Prussic acid. It is also an ingredient in that well-known and useful colour, Prussian blue.

CYBELE, in Ancient Mythology, a goddess represented as crowned with towers, and drawn in a car by lions. She belonged to the pre-Jovian race of gods, but was worshipped by those who worshipped Jupiter.

CYCLADES, in Ancient Geography, the name of a small group of islands in the Ægean Archipelago.

CYCLE, s. [kuklos, Gr.] in Chronology, it is a certain period or series of years, during which a series of events takes place, which at the end of the cycle begin again, and go through the same order of succession; and so on perpetually. The cycle of the sun consists of 28 years; the metonic, or that of the moon, is a period of 19 years. The cycle of the Roman indiction, is completed in 15 years.

CYCLOID, s. [kuklos and eidos, Gr.] a geometrical curve, formed by the line which a nail, in the circumference of a wheel, makes in the air, while the wheel rolls on in a right line.

CYCLOIDAL, a. relating to a cycloid. The cycloidal space, is that contained between a cycloid and its substance.

CYCLOPEEDIA, s. [kuklos and paideia, Gr.] a circle of knowledge; a course of sciences. Applied most frequently to books which embrace, either methodically or alphabetically, every department of human knowledge.

CYCLOPS, [kuklos and ops, Gr.] in Ancient Mythology, the name given to the workmen of Vulcan who helped him to forge the thunderbolts for Jupiter; they were represented as one-eyed. It was also given to a race of giants who were said to inhabit Sicily, and to occupy themselves in pastoral work; but who were cannibals. Polyphemus, one of these giants, was outwitted, blinded, and in the end killed, by Ulysses. See POLYPHEMUS, ULYSSES.

CYCLOPEAN, a. in Architecture, the name given to certain ruins occurring in Italy and Greece, in which huge masses of stone, oftentimes not even squared, were piled into walls, towers, &c. without any mortar, being held together by their own weight. They are attributed to the Pelasgi, which see.

CYDER, s. See CIDER.

CYGNET, s. [cygnus, Lat.] a young swan.

CYGNUS, the Swan, in Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

CYLINDER, s. [kulindros, from kulio, Gr.] in Geometry, a round solid, having its base circular, equal and parallel, in the form of a hand-roller.

CYLINDRIC, CYLINDRICAL, a. partaking of the nature or in the form of a cylinder.

CYMA'RI, s. [properly written sinar,] a slight loose covering or scarf.

CYMATIUM, s. [cyumation, from kumo, Gr.] in Architecture, a member or moulding of the cornice, the profile of which is waved, or concave at top and convex at bottom.

CYMBAL, s. [cymbalum, Lat.] a musical instrument made of brass, consisting of two thin brass plates, tuned to accord, hollowed in the middle, and held in the two hands. When used they are struck together, and produce a clanging sound, fitting for a military band.

CYNA'NTHROPY, s. [kun and anthropos, Gr.] a species of madness, in which persons resemble a dog; the species of madness contracted by the bite of a mad dog.

CYNARCTO'MACHY, s. [kun, arktos, and mache, Gr.] a word coined by Butler, to denote bear-baiting with a dog. "In bloody cynarctomachy." Hudibras.

CYNEGETICS, s. [kunegethikos, from kun and ago, Gr.] the art of hunting; the art of training dogs for hunting.

CYNIC, CYNICAL, a. [kunikos, from kun, Gr.] snarling; brutal, or partaking of the qualities of a cynic philosopher, who was remarkable for his contempt of riches, and rigorous reprehension of vice.

CYNICS, s. a sect of so-called philosophers in Greece, founded by Antisthenes, who was a pupil of Socrates. But he took away from the school of the sage only the rudest and barest form of truth. Despising the conventionalisms which imposed on most, and confounded right and wrong amongst men, they denuded human nature till nought was left but a snarling, savage, self-satisfied, all-defying animal. It afforded one of the first and most singular illustrations of the folly of attempting to abdicate one's humanity, and of the fact that in striving to be by mere dogged will more than man, it is impossible to escape becoming less than man. The spirit of Cynicism may be discovered in the ascetics of the middle ages, and in some of the most fanatical of the sects which sprang up during the 17th century, and have subsisted to this day. See DIOGENES.

CYNOSURE, s. [kun and oura, Gr.] in Astronomy, the name given by the Greeks to Ursa Minor, or the Little Bear; the polar star, by which sailors steer. Figuratively, an object of universal attention, such as one possessed of great beauty is.

CYPHEL, s. in Botany, a provincial term for the common houseleek.

CYPRESS TREE, s. [cyprissus, Lat.] in Botany, a tree of the pine kind; its leaves are small and dark, it is an evergreen, and was used to plant about tombs. The wood of it never rots, or is worm-eaten.

CYPRIAN, ST. a Latin father of the African Church, of the 3rd century. He was converted by one Cæcilius, and he named himself after him. He rose to be bishop of Carthage, was banished under the emperor Valerian, recalled, and beheaded in 258, aged about 58 years. He was an orator, and a man of business, and attended much more to the practical and ecclesiastical aspects of Christianity, than to the doctrinal. Tertullian's writings were the source of most of his notions not springing from the rigid character of his own mind. He helped largely to exalt episcopal power. His writings are numerous, and are ardent and animated in style, but the Latinity is not very pure. Episcopals both of Rome and England are much taken with his character and works.

CYPRUS, s. [so called from the place where it was made,] a thin transparent stuff, used for sieves, &c.

CYPRUS, an island in the Mediterranean, between the coast of Syria and that of Asia Minor, subject to the Turks. It is about 150 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. A range of mountains runs through it, some heights of which are said to exceed 6000 feet. The soil is fertile, but subject to long droughts, and there are numerous springs, but no rivers. It abounds with game; and great numbers of ortolans, boiled and pickled in vinegar, are annually exported. The chief produce is cotton, silk, and wines. The other exports are wool, nutmegs, turpentine, madder, kernels, opium, coloquintida, salt, amber, green earth, and a small quantity of cochineal. Nicotia is the metropolis of the island. Population, about 15,000.

CYRENA'ICS, a sect of Greek philosophers, which originated with Aristippus, a pupil of Socrates. The chief feature of their doctrine was, that pleasure and pain are the criteria of the character of actions; but they also taught that it was not immediate pain or immediate gratification that were to be regarded in forming the estimate. See ARISTIPPUS.

CYRIL, ST., (of Jerusalem,) a Greek father who was bishop of that city in the 4th century. He shared in the vicissitudes which the Arian controversy gave rise to, and was thrice deposed or expelled from his see; but he was ultimately restored, and died in 386, aged about 70 years. His writings are valuable as containing an accurate and clear account of the doctrines and rites of his times, and are chiefly plain didactic lectures intended for catechumens. In them the sophistication of the simple, practical principles of the New Testament seems nearly completed.

CYRIL, ST., (of Alexandria,) a testy, headstrong father of the Greek branch of the church, who occupied the see of Alexandria, and quarrelled with almost every body, about every thing, except the bishop of Rome and church doctrines. Arianism and Nestorianism were his mortal aversion. He was once deposed, but soon restored. He died in 444. Most of his writings are expository; but the rest are polemical. The worship of the Virgin as the mother of God, was his great subject for discursing and persecuting also. He has incurred everlasting shame respecting the cruel murder of a Grecian lady who taught Platonism at Alexandria; and whose death was owing to his tirades against her, and effected by his followers.

CYRUS THE GREAT, the overthrower of the Assyrian and founder of the Medo-Persian empire. He took Babylon by laying the river-dry. The Jews, whom he had taken captives there, he sent back to Judea, and protected them whilst they re-established their kingdom with diminished splendour at Jerusalem. By some writers he is said to have fallen on an expedition against a Scythian tribe, in 531 B. C. The whole of the Assyrian empire, from the Indus to the Mediterranean and the Ægean, owned his power.

CYRUS, son of Darius and Parysatis, formed a plot against his brother Artaxerxes, who had succeeded Darius, and fell in battle, it is presumed by his brother's hand, in 401 B. C. This event led to the wonderful expedition called in history, the Retreat of the 10,000 Greeks; which is recorded by Xenophon, who conducted it. See XENOPHON.

CYST, CYSTIS, s. [kustis, Gr.] in Surgery, a bag containing some morbid matter.

CYSTIC, a. in Surgery, contained in a bag.

CYSTOTOMY, s. [kustis and temno, Gr.] the act of opening encysted tumors, or cutting the bag in which any morbid matter is contained.

CZAR, (zar) s. [Slav.] written more properly tsar, the title of the emperor of Russia.

CZARINA, (zareena) s. the title of the empress of Russia. CZARSLAU, a town and circle of Bohemia, Austria. In the church of the former is the tomb of Ziska, the celebrated general of the Hussites. It is 42 miles E. S. E. of Prague. Population, about 4000.

CZER'NICK, or CZI'RNITZ, a town of Carinthia, Austria. Here is a remarkable tract of land, 15 miles in length & 5 in breadth, which in summer produces excellent grass and corn, but in winter is overflowed, yields fish, and is called the Czernitzer Sea. It is 28 miles S. E. of Laybach. Population, about 1500.

D, THE fourth letter of the alphabet, is a consonant, differing in sound from T by the addition of the effect produced by the compression of the larynx in uttering it. The sound of D in the English is uniform, and is never mute, except in the words Wednesday and handkerchief. The form of the letter is derived from the Greek letter delta, in the cursive character, through the Romans. D, as a numeral, denotes 500; and with a dash over it, thus, 5, 5000. In abbreviations, it has various significations; thus D. stands for doctor, as M. D. for doctor of medicine; D. D. doctor of divinity; L. L. D. doctor of laws; Mus. D. doctor of music.

To DAB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to touch gently with something soft or moist.

DAB, s. a small lump generally, applied to something moist; a blow with something moist or soft. In low language, a person expert in any thing. In Natural History, a small flat fish.

To DABBLE, v. a. [dabbelen, Belg.] to smear, moisten, or daub with something wet; to play in the water; to do any thing in a slight or superficial manner.

DABBLER, s. one that plays in water. Figuratively, one who performs a thing superficially; one who never makes himself a complete master of any subject, or branch of science.

DAB-CHICK, s. in Natural History, the common water-hen, called likewise dobchick, didapper, and depickch.

DA CAPO, s. an Italian term in music, meaning that the first part of the tune should be repeated at the conclusion.

DA'CCA, a city of Bengal, once the capital, situated in a district of the same name, of which it is the capital, on a branch of the Ganges, which has a ready communication with all the other channels of that river and the Burrampooter. It is the third city of Bengal in extent and population. It has large manufactories of the finest muslins and silks, and cotton is produced within the province. The country round Dacca lying low, is covered with perpetual verdure during the dry months, and is not subject to violent heats, as Moorsheadabad, Patna, and other places. It is 120 miles from Calcutta. Its population is about 250,000. Lat. 23. 43. N. Long. 90. 17. E.

DACE, s. [derecau, Fr.] in Natural History, a small river-fish resembling a roach, but something less.

DACIA, in Ancient Geography, the name of a country lying on the Black Sea, and occupying the tract at present known as Banat, Transylvania, in Hungary, Moldavia, Wallakia, in Turkey, and Bessarabia, in Russia. The gladiators and slaves of Rome in the period of the empire were brought from this country, as well as from Scythia.

DACIER, MADAME ANNA, an eminent translator and editor of Greek and Latin classics, in the beginning of the last century. Her editions are still much esteemed. Her private character was as much respected for its worth as her public character was for its learning. Her husband shared her literary labours and renown. She died in 1720, aged 69 years.

DACTYL, DACTYLE, s. [daktylos, Gr.] a foot, in Latin or Greek poetry, consisting of one long and two short syllables.

DAD, DADDY, s. [dad, Brit.] a child's way of expressing father.

D/DAL, s. [dardalus, Lat.] various; variegated; skilful.

D/EMON, s. See DEMON.

DAFFODIL, DAFFODILLY, or DAFFOD/WNDILY, in Botany, the common garden narcissus, or pseudo-narcissus.

To DAFI, v. a. to toss aside; to throw away slightly.

DAG, s. [dague, Fr.] a dagger; a hand-gun.

To DAG, v. a. [Sax.] to dirt or bemoir the lower parts of a garment.

DAGGER, s. [dague, Fr.] a short sword. In fencing schools, a blunt blade of iron with a basket hilt, used for defence. In Printing, the obelisk, used as a mark of reference, and of this form (†).

DAGGER'S-DRAWING, s. the act of drawing a dagger. Figuratively, quarrelsomeness, or readiness to fight.

To D/AGGLE, v. a. See DRAGGLE.

DAGUERREOTYPE, See PHOTOGRAPHY.

D/ALIA, s. in Botany, a common autumn-flowering garden plant, of great variety and beauty. It is a Mexican plant, and was introduced into England in the latter part of the last century.

DA/HOMY, a country of Guinea, Africa, E. of the Slave Coast, and about 70 miles from the sea, called also FOURN, and supposed to reach from the sea-coast 150 or 200 miles inland. The government is perfect despotism; yet, in the country, strangers are the least exposed to insults, and reside there in security and tranquillity. The king of Dahomy maintains a considerable standing army, among whom are several hundreds of women, immured within his palace, that are trained to the use of arms, under a female general. It is a flat country, presenting no exception as to climate, productions, wild beasts, &c. to the general character of tropical Africa. Its population is estimated at about 1,300,000. The capital is Abomey, in Lat. 9. 50. N. and Long. 3. 30. E.

DA'ILY, s. [daglic, Sax.] happening, done, or repeated every day. Figuratively, constantly or frequently; used adverbially, every day, frequently.

DA'INTILY, ad. in a curious, elegant, or delicate manner; deliciously; pleasantly.

DA'INTINESS, s. delicacy; softness; elegance; nicety; squeamishness, or the not being easily pleased, either with food, or the productions of art.

DA'INTY, s. pleasing to the taste, and purchased with great cost. Figuratively, of delicate or exquisite sensibility; squeamish; not easily pleased with food; scrupulous; elegant; well or nicely formed; nice, or affected.

DA'INTY, s. some rare food of exquisite taste. A word of fondness.

DA'IRY, s. [perhaps from dey, an old word for milk,] the place where milk is kept, and butter or cheese made.

DA'IRY-FARM, s. a farm almost wholly laid down in grass, for the purpose of keeping cows, and making cheese and butter.

DA'IRY-MAID, s. a woman-servant who has the care of the dairy, and makes butter or cheese.

DA'IRY-WORK, DA'IRYING, s. the employment on a dairy-farm, or in a dairy.

DAIS, s. [Fr.] the raised part at the upper end of great dining-halls, along which the table was placed at which the principal parties sat.

DA'ISY, (daisy) s. [abbreviated from day's-eye, according to some,] in Botany, a common and pretty English flower, most plentiful in spring.

D/LAI-LAMA, [Tatar,] the name given to the supreme priest amongst the Buddhists, who is sovereign of good part of Tibet. It is pretended that he is a sort of incarnation of Boeth, the divinity; and that on the death of any one, the indwelling god removes to another priest, whom they take great pains to discover. In this respect, as well as in others before mentioned, Buddhism most resembles Romanism.

DALE, s. a low or hollow place between hills; a vale or valley.

D/ALCA/LIA, a province of Sweden, near Norway, and surrounded by Helsingland, Gestricia, Westmanland, and Wermland. It is mountainous, and intersected with numerous rivers and lakes, yet has fertile pastures, and abounds in mines of copper, iron, and silver, some of which are of a prodigious depth. The principal productions are corn, wood, and hemp. The inhabitants are a plain, hardy, warlike race. Its population is about 150,000. Fahlun is its capital.

D/LKEITH, Edinburgh, Scotland, seated on the Esk, 6 miles from Edinburgh. Dalketh House is the principal seat of the Duke of Buccleugh. The present magnificent palace was built about the beginning of the 18th century, on the spot formerly occupied by Dalketh Castle, built on a perpendicular rock of great height, and inaccessible on all sides except the E., where it was defended by a fosse. Pop. 5830.

DA'LLIANCE, s. acts of fondness between lovers. Figuratively, delay, or deferring a thing.

DA'LLIER, s. a trifle; a person who practises acts of fondness.

To D/LALLY, v. n. [dollen, Belg.] to trifle; to play the fool; to amuse oneself, and lose time in idle play; to exchange caresses of fondness; to sport; to frolic; to dally.

D/ALMATIA, a province of Austria, lying on the Gulf of Venice, and bounded by Turkey and part of Hungary. It is about 280 miles in length, and about 20 in breadth. But it is very irregular and disjoined, some considerable part of it being the islands, which are numerous on the E. shore of the gulf. It is very mountainous, being bordered by the chain called the Dinaric Alps, some heights of which exceed 6000 feet. Its streams are almost all mere mountain-torrents. Coal and building-stone abound. It produces good timber also. But its agricultural produce is small, and its pasturage not very extensive. It does not export much, nor are there any manufactures worthy of mention amongst the inhabitants. Its population is about 400,000. Ragusa and Zara are its chief places. It is styled a kingdom, under the emperor of Austria.

DALRYMPLE, JAMES, VISCOUNT STAIR, an eminent Scottish jurist of the 17th century. He was brought into public notice by General Monk, whom Cromwell had left in charge of Scotland; and on the Restoration was favoured by many marks of Charles II.'s good will, being ultimately ennobled by him. His great work on Scottish law continues to be highly esteemed to this day. He was the author of some other pieces. He died in 1695, aged 74 years.

DALRYMPLE, DAVID, LORD HAILES, the distinguished Scottish judge, and man of letters, in the last century. History, both civil and ecclesiastical, law, classics, expository and practical divinity, all received some contributions from his pen. He died in 1792, aged 65 years.

DALTON, Lancashire. It is seated on the spring-head of a river, in a champaign country, not far from the sea; and the ancient castle is made use of to keep the records and prisoners for debt in the liberty of Furness. It is 273 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3231.

DALTON, DR. JOHN, the chemist to whose origination of the Atomic theory modern chemistry owes the sure basis of its astonishing progress. He was introduced to the sphere of labour at Manchester, by the philosophic friend who had first initiated him into the love and study of physical science. It was in the college at Manchester that he was enabled to elaborate his famous discovery. He published it at first in lectures at various places; and afterwards more fully in his work of chemical philosophy. He was the author of other productions relating to different branches of science. He received during his life many honourable proofs of the value set on his theory by scientific men of various countries. And he died in 1844, aged 78 years.

DAM, s. [dame], which, according to Chaucer, formerly signified a mother, the mother, applied most commonly to beasts; but figuratively, and by way of reproach, applied to persons.

DAM, s. [dam, Belg.] a mole, bank, or any other obstruction to confine water.

To DAM, v. a. [denman, Sax.] to confine water by moles or other obstructions. Figuratively, to damp; to extinguish, obstruct, or intercept.

DAMAGE, s. [domage, Fr.] mischief; hurt; detriment; loss. In Common Law, it is what the jurors, upon a trial, allow the party who appears to have suffered wrong.

To DAMAGE, v. a. to spoil, hurt, or impair any thing; to affect a person with loss, or hinder him in the prosecution of his business, — v. n. to impair; to lose of its worth by time.

DAMAGEABLE, a. that may be impaired or spoiled by time; mischievous or hurtful.

DAMASCENE, DAMSON, s. [damascenus, Lat.] in Gardening, a small round black plum, of a rough and astrigent taste.

DAMASCENUS, JOHN, a church writer of the 8th century, who acquired no small renown for his eloquence, philosophy, and orthodoxy. He was in the service of the Saracen khalif, and being falsely accused to him, had his right hand cut off, which by the Virgin Mary's intercession was restored. He was a stout opponent of the Iconoclasts, and perhaps aided much in establishing the image-worship of Rome. He wrote a treatise on the Faith, which was long an authority. He died about 750.

DAMASCUS, now called SHAM, a very ancient city of Syria, and the capital of a pachalic, is built in the form of an oblong square. Streams of clear water run across the plain of Damascus, which fertilize the gardens, supply the public fountains, and run into every house. The caravansaries have long galleries, supported by marble pillars, surrounding a large court. The private houses, which are built of wood, have their fronts inwards, enclosing a court, and presenting a dead wall to the streets, although often richly adorned within. The castle is like a little town, having its own streets and houses. The musques are superabundant and numerous. The straight street, which runs across the city and suburbs in a direct line, has shops on each side, where all sorts of merchandise are sold. The gardens and orchards extend several miles round, and are embellished with summer-houses, turrets, fountains, cascades, and streams of water. A manufactory of cutlery is carried on here. Damascus stands on the river Barida, in a very fertile plain, not far from the mountain range of Antilibanus. Its population is about 200,000, of whom 20,000 are Christians. It is 136 miles from Jerusalem. Lat. 38. 30. N. Long. 36. 30. E.

DAMASK, s. [from Damascus, the place where it was invented,] a manufacture of linen or silk woven with raised flowers; likewise a very fine steel, at Damascus in Syria, used for swords and cut-throat blades, and of a very fine temper. Figuratively, a red colour, alluding to that of the damask rose.

To DAMASK, v. a. to weave linen or silk in raised figures; to variegate, diversify, or embellish; to adorn steel work with figures.

DAMASK-ROSE, s. in Floriculture, a rose of a very rich crimson colour, brought originally from Damascus.

DAMASKENING, s. the art of adorning iron and steel, by cutting and carving holes in them, and filling them up with gold or silver wire; used in enriching the blades of swords and locks of pistols.

DAMASUS, the title borne by two popes of Rome, the first of whom, in the 4th century, has ever borne a high character for learning. St. Jerome was one of his correspondents and friends. He died in 384, after having been supreme pontiff for 18 years.

DAMBEA, an extensive lake of Abyssinia, containing many fertile islands, and abounding in fish. Hippopotami are also very numerous. It is not far from the city of Gondar.

DAME, s. [dame, Fr.] originally applied to a person who was mistress of a family, and of noble birth, as it is at present used in law; but now commonly used for a farmer's wife, or one of the lower sort. Figuratively, women in general.

DAMIETTA, a sea-port town of Egypt, situated on the eastern branch of the Nile, about 7½ miles from its mouth, in the most fruitful part of Egypt. There are manufactures here of fine linen of all colours, napkins fringed with silk, &c. &c. Multitudes of boats and small vessels fill the port or road, which, however, is very defective and disadvantageous to trade, being every where totally exposed. It is a place of great trade, and is 84 miles from Cairo. Its population is about 15,000. Lat. 31. 30. N. Long. 31. 40. E.

To DAMN, (dam) v. a. [damno, Lat.] to doom, devote, or curse to eternal torments; to condemn; to render any performance unprofitable, by hissing or criticising.

DAMNABLE, a. deserving, or justly condemned to, eternal punishment.

DAMNABLY, ad. in such a manner as to incur eternal punishment.

DAMNATION, s. exclusion from Divine mercy; the state of a person who is sentenced to eternal punishment.

DAMNATORY, a. containing the sentence to eternal punishment.

DAMNED, part. hateful; detestable; abominable; doomed to everlasting punishment.

DAMNIFIC, a. procuring loss; mischievous.

To DAMNIFY, v. a. [damnum and facio, Lat.] to cause loss; to spoil, hurt, or impair.

DAMNINGNESS, s. tendency to procure damnation.

DAMP, a. [dampe, Belg.] moist; inclining to wet; moistened by the air or vapours. Figuratively, dejected, full of sorrow, on account of some sudden disappointment or unexpected calamity.

DAMP, s. in the language of miners, applied to two species of gases which occur in mines, and are often fatal to life. The choke-damp is carbonic acid gas, which, being heavier than atmospheric air, lies at the bottom of old mines, and wells, and cannot be inhaled with safety. The fire-damp is carburetted hydrogen gas, which, being lighter than the atmosphere, rises to the higher parts of the mines. But as it often happens that the roof is low, and that blasts of this gas proceed from the rifts in the coal, a safety lamp is used; for a lighted candle would ignite the gas, and cause a most tremendous explosion. Carelessness is continually occasioning such explosions. See SAFETY LAMP. Figuratively, dejection or sorrow, arising from some sudden calamity.

To DAMP, v. a. to wet or moisten; to chill, or diminish heat by water. Figuratively, to lessen any quality; to smother, check, or depress any ardour or passion; to weaken; to abandon.

DAMPIER, CAPTAIN WILLIAM, an English circumnavigator of the 17th century. He was one of the buccaniers, and afterwards, attracting attention by the intelligent and scientific account he gave of his voyage, was employed in some exploring expedition by the British government. He died about 1710, aged about 60 years.

DAMPISHNESS, s. tendency to wetness, or moisture, arising from fogs, vapours, &c.

DAMPNESS, s. cold, moisture, or foginess.

DAMPY, a. moist or wet.

DAMSEL, s. [demoiselle, Fr.] originally used for a young gentlewoman or lady of distinction, an attendant of the higher rank, but at present for a young country lass.

DAMSON, s. See DAMASCENE.

DAN, s. [dominus, Lat.] a title of dignity or honour, formerly used for master.

DANBURY, Essex, on a hill, 5 miles E. of Chelmsford; its spire serves as a sea mark.

DANCE, GEORGE, the architect who built Newgate, St. Luke's, the Compter in Giltspur Street, and some other public buildings in London. He died in 1825.

To DANCE, v. n. [danser, Fr.] to move in a graceful attitude, with measured steps, and in particular figures, according to an air sung or played.—v. a. to make a person dance or skip. To dance attendance, is to wait in a humble and suppliant manner on a person.

DANCE, s. [danse, Fr.] an agreeable motion of the body and feet, adjusted by art to the measure or tune of a musical instrument or the voice.

DANCER, s. one who practises dancing.

DANCING-MASTER, s. one who teaches the art of dancing.

DANCING-SCHOOL, s. the school where the art of dancing is taught.

DANDELION, s. [dent de lion, Fr. lion's tooth.] in Botany, a common English plant, the roots of which are often boiled for use in cases of sore throat.

DANDIPRAT, s. [dandin, Fr.] a little fellow, used sometimes as a word of fondness, and sometimes as a word of reproach.

To DANDLE, v. a. [dandelen, Belg.] to keep a child in motion, either on the knee or otherwise, to quiet it. Figuratively, to treat with too much fondness; to use like a child.

DANDLER, s. a person that fondles a child.

DANDELO, HENRY, the brave old Doge of Venice, who was engaged in the capture of Constantinople from the brother of the emperor (who had dethroned him) during the 4th crusade. This happened when he was 89 years old, and could barely see, yet he led the storming party, and planted the lion of Venice on the walls with his own hand. He died two years afterwards, in 1205.

DANDRUFF, s. the scurf of the head.

DANEGETT, s. a tax, or tribute on every hide of land, imposed in the time of the Saxons, to procure the withdrawal of the Danes on any invasion. After their expulsion it was imposed by Ethelred as a standing yearly tax, to be employed for the fitting out such a fleet as should be sufficient to protect the country from the Danes. It was continued for other purposes under the Norman kings, and appears to have been last levied by King Henry II.

DANEWORT, s. in Botany, a species of elder, likewise called the dwarf-elder, or wall-wort.

DANGER, s. [danger, Fr.] hazard; risk; or a condition which is liable to mischief or calamity.

To DANGER, v. a. to expose to loss, calamity, or misery.

DANGERLESS, a. out of a possibility of meeting with any calamity or accident.

DANGEROUS, a. exposed to accidents, loss, harm, or mischief.

DANGEROUSLY, ad. hazardingly; perilously; full of danger.

DANGEROUSNESS, s. a condition which exposes to accidents, calamity, or death.

To DANGLE, v. n. to hang loose, so as to be put in motion by the wind, breath, or a shake. Figuratively, to hang as a dependant upon a person.

DANGLER, s. a person who frequents the company of women merely to pass or kill time.

DANIEL, a Jewish prophet during the captivity, who has ever held a high place amongst the Jews, because of the learning and shrewdness with which he is represented as endowed, and because of the devoted piety which he manifested. He interpreted the dreams of the kings in whose court he was detained, and read the hand-writing on the wall which announced the destruction of the Assyrian monarchy. He was thrown into a den of lions for persisting in the Jewish custom of prayer, and was miraculously preserved from injury. His writings have been the occasion of a great discussion amongst both Jewish and Christian commentators; the great distinctness with which the coming events are described, giving them more the aspect of fantastically written history than of prophecy. They are, however, generally received as containing inspired prophecy. The most striking part refers to the kingdom of Christ, which is represented in great contrast with the four great world-empires, the Assyrian, the Persian, the Macedonian, and the Roman. And one part, in which a number of days is stated as marking the term of the present order of things, has been the favourite theme for the expatiation of such as have aspired to be prophets themselves, rather than to use the Scriptures for instruction in righteousness.

DANIEL, SAMUEL, a poet of some worth in the 16th century, whose verse for depth of philosophy, and practical bearing on human affairs, knows few rivals. He died in 1619, aged 57 years.

DANIELL, DR. JOHN F., a distinguished chemist of the present age, who held for some years the chemical chair in King's College, London. He was a most diligent experimental chemist and observer of facts in meteorology; and several valuable instruments were the result of his studies. He died in 1845, aged 55 years.

DANK, a. [truncken, Teut.] moist; wetish.

DANKISH, a. somewhat moist or wet.

DANNECKER, JOHANN H., a distinguished German sculptor, some of whose works are characterized by high artistic power. He died in 1841, aged 83 years.

DANTE, ALIGHIERI, the great poet of the middle ages. He was a native of Florence, and nobly connected, and received such education as could be given there. He rose in time to fill the post of one of the chief magistrates of Florence, but during some one of the many disturbances which occurred in that republic, Dante and his party were worsted and banished. He wandered from place to place and court to court afterwards, wrote his poem, and died in 1321, aged 51 years. Of the Divina Commedia, not much can be said, beyond that it purports to be a relation of a visit to the world of souls paid by the poet, and is divided into three books, describing respectively, Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise. The general conception is grand and terrific, but the individual pictures add unspeakable terror or unspeakable beauty to the whole. The poem, too, abounds with lines containing worlds of truth, a life-long experience condensed into a few syllables. The most charming feature of the whole is, perhaps, the introduction of Beatrice, the object of love which ended for him so unhappily, for the world so well, seeing that we have this great work as one of the fruits of his sorrow.

DANTON, GEORGE JAMES, a name tolerably known in the French Revolution. He was an advocate by profession, and was the first to adopt the extreme political opinions which afterwards made the name of Jacobin so terrible. In the course of those eventful years he appeared as the mover of some of the most daring and most questionable affairs. He petitioned for the decree of forfeiture against Louis after the flight to Varennes; he was the soul of the insurrection of Aug. 10; he was more than suspected of being connected with the Septemberers; he was the proposer of the Committee of Public Safety; he was in the van in the struggle against the Girondins. His private character was none of the best, and yet his name stands out as one of the two or three truly great ones of the Revolution. Robespierre sacrificed him to his jealousy of the power he had, and the character he bore. He was guillotined in 1794, aged 35 years. He has been called the Mirabeau of the people.

DANTZICK, capital of a circle of the same name in Prussia, one of the largest, richest, and strongest towns of Europe, with a famous harbour, a bishop's see, and a university. It is encompassed with a wall and fortifications of great extent. The houses are well built of stone or brick, six or seven stories high; and the granaries, containing vast quantities of grain and naval stores, are still higher, to which the ships lie close when they take in their lading. The arsenal is well provided, and the exchange is a handsome structure. It carries on a great trade, particularly in corn, timber, and naval stores, which are chiefly purchased by the Dutch. It was once a free Hanseatic town, under the protection of Poland; but was seized by Prussia, at the second partition of Poland, and was for a time the capital. It is seated on the western banks of the river Weissel, or Vistula, near the Gulf of Angli, in the Baltic Sea; 140 miles from Berlin. Its population is about 80,000. Lat. 54. 22. N. Long. 19. 5. E.

D'ANUBE, the first river of Europe, called by the ancients Ister. It rises in Suabia, by the Black Forest, runs through Bavaria, Austria, Hungary, Turkey, and, after a course of near 2000 miles, enters the Black Sea, in the Russian province of Bessarabia. It reckons amongst its tributaries the Isar, the Inn, the Morava, the Drave, and the Theiss. Seated on it are Ulm, Ratisbon, Linz, Vienna, Presburg, Buda, Belgrade, Widin, Ismael, and Galacz. The navigation is interrupted by many falls and rapids, yet between the falls steam vessels now regularly ply, and there is a considerable trade carried on between the different great towans on its banks.

To DAP, v. a. [from dip.] in angling, to let fall, or put gently into the water.

DAPPER, s. the dignity or office of grand master of a prince's household. In Germany, the elector of Bavaria assumed the title of Archdapper of the empire, whose office was, at the coronation of the emperor, to carry the first dish of meat to table on horseback.

DAPPER, a. [dapper, Belg.] small of stature, and full of spirit and vivacity. It is usually spoken in contempt.

DAPPERLING, s. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, a. marked, variegated, or clouded with different colours.

To DAPPLE, v. a. to streak or diversify with a different colour.

DAR, DART, s. in Natural History, a fish found in the Severn. DARABGERD, a town of Farsistan, Persia, with a considerable manufacture of glass. Near it is found sand of various colours, red, white, black, and green. It is 116 miles from Schiras. Its population is about 20,000. Lat. 25. 46. N. Long. 55. 6. E.

D'ARBLAY, MADAME FRANCES, a daughter of Dr. Burney, who early attracted the attention of the literary world of the latter part of the last century, by a gossip tale called Evelina, unreadable now. She afterwards received some appointment about the person of the queen; and was married to a French emigrant. After residing some time in France, she returned to England, where she died in 1840, aged 88 years. Her other writings, which are voluminous, are less endurable than Evelina. But her Diary and Correspondence give the most faithful picture of the highest ranks of society in England before the war, and afford a means of estimating the progress of civilization and common sense amongst them.

DARDANELLES, two castles, built by Mahomet IV. (in 1658,) one on each side of the Strait of Gallipoli, anciently the Hellespont, between the Archipelago and the Sea of Marmora. The strait is 33 miles long; in the broadest part it is a mile and a half across, and in the narrowest half a mile. At the entrance, where guarded by the castles, it is about two miles over.

To DARE, v. n. preter. durst, past part. dared. [dearran, Sax.] to undertake a thing without being discouraged by the dangers which attend it.—v. a. to challenge, or provoke a person to fight. To dare larks, is to catch them by means of a looking-glass, or by keeping a bird of prey hovering aloft, which keeps them in amaze till caught.

DARE, s. a provocation, or calling on a person to fight; a challenge; defiance.

DAREFUL, a. full of defiance; without fear.

DARFUR, a country in tropical Africa, having the Mountains of the Moon on the S., and bounded by Bournou, Dongola, Senaar, and Abyssinia. It lies in the midst of the Desert, and is subject to all the peculiarities of climate which such a situation usually is exposed to. It differs not from the general character of this continent in respect of native productions and wild beasts. It carries on a trade with Arabia and Egypt. Agriculture can be practised only on the most limited scale, yet enough grain is grown for the subsistence of the people. The population is about 200,000. Cobbe is the chief place.

DARGLE, a romantic vale or glen, in the county of Wicklow, about 10 miles from Dublin. The lofty mountains on each side are clothed with trees down to the edge of the river, which falls from rock to rock in the bottom, forming many cascades. The views from the eminences are grand and beautiful.

DARIEN, an isthmus, or narrow country, which joins N. and S. America, having the Atlantic on the N. E. and the Pacific on the S. W. It extends about 300 miles in length, and from 48 to 135 in breadth. See PANAMA.

DARIEN, GULF OF, part of the Caribbean Sea, washing the N. E. shore of the isthmus. It has some good and spacious harbours in it.

DARING, a. bold; adventurous; courageously undertaking an affair without the dangers attending it.

DARINGLY, ad. in a bold, courageous, outrageous, or impudent manner.

DARINGNESS, s. boldness.

DARIUS, the name borne by three kings of Persia. The first planned the attempt on the liberty of Greece, which Athens almost single-handed defeated at Marathon. He was more successful in other military expeditions, and died in 485 B. C. The third was king when Alexander the Great set out on his great expedition; he lost three great battles, that on the Granicus, and those of Issus and Arbela; and with the last, kingdom, treasures, and life too, being assassinated by one of his own officers, in 330 B. C.

DARK, a. [deorc, Sax.] without light; not bright; dull, applied to colours. Opaque, not to be seen through; not having light in itself. Figuratively, not easy to be understood; obscure; ignorant; not enlightened with knowledge or revelation. Gloomy; not cheerful, applied to the temper.

DARK, s. want of light, by which all objects become visible. Figuratively, obscurity; the condition of a person not known or famous; want of knowledge; ignorance.

To DARKEN, v. a. [deorcan, Sax.] to deprive of or shut out the light; to cloud, perplex; to render the mind unable to distinguish the qualities of objects.—v. n. to grow towards night; to grow dark or gloomy.

DARKLING, part. hid in the dark; concealed from sight.

DARKLY, ad. in a situation void of light; obscurely.

DARKNESS, s. a state wherein light is absent, and objects which are discovered by sight become invisible; opaqueness. Obscurity, or difficulty to be understood, applied to books.

DARKSOME, a. gloomy; obscure.

DARLING, s. [deorling, Sax.] a person more beloved than any other; a favourite.

DARLINGTON, Durham. It is noted for its manufacture of buckabacks, diapers, stuffs, &c.; some fine linens are also made here. It has a spacious market-place, and handsome church. Darlington is seated on the river Skerne, which falls into the Tees, 3 or 4 miles below the town. It is 236 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 11,877.

DARMSSTADT, the capital of the grand duchy of Hesse Darmstadt. It has a consistory, a criminal court, a college with a good library, and other institutions befitting the dual residence. It is seated on a river of the same name. Its population is about 30,000. Lat. 49. 50. N. Long. 8. 36. E.

To DARN, v. a. to mend holes by stitches, in imitation of the fabric of the stuff.

DARNEL, s. in Botany, a grass too common in corn-fields, of which there are two kinds, the red and the white; called also rye grass, or rye grass.

To DARRAIN, v. a. to prepare for battle; to range troops for battle.

DART, s. [dart, Fr.] a small lance or weapon thrown by the hand.

To DART, v. a. to cast or throw a dart; to wound at a distance; to emit, or cast.—v. n. to fly as a dart.

DARTFORD, Kent, a town seated on the river Darent, near its influx into the Thames, which is a harbour for barges. It is 15 miles from London. Market, chiefly for corn, Saturday. Pop. 5019.

DARTMOUTH, Devonshire. It is seated at the mouth of the Dart, which river rises at the foot of Dartmoor Hills, (an extensive moorish tract, feeding great numbers of black cattle.)

and after passing Totness, where it is navigable for small vessels, is joined by the Hareborn, 7 miles above its fall into Dartmouth haven, which is spacious and secure. The town, which is about a mile long, stands on the side of a craggy hill, with streets very irregular, sometimes two or three one above another; yet the houses are generally very high. The harbour is defended by three castles, besides forts and blockhouses; and here is a large quay with a spacious street before it, inhabited by some considerable merchants. Dartmouth has a considerable trade to Italy, Spain, Portugal, &c., and to Newfoundland, as well as a share in the coasting traffic. Its pilchard and foreign fisheries employ nearly 3000 men. It is 204 miles from London. Markets, Friday for corn and provisions, and almost every day for fish. Pop. 4595.

DAURWIN, DR. ERASMUS, chiefly known now by his poetry, but esteemed during the last century as a naturalist and physician. His Botanic Garden is full of quirks and conceits, as insufferable as those of Fletcher's Purple Island. In some other verses he spoils all the effect, by describing with all the minuteness of an anatomical demonstrator what should be left to the imagination of the reader. In science he was not particularly original, his fancy led him astray. He died in 1802, aged 71 years.

TO DASH, v. a. [onomatopoeic,] to throw one thing with violence and suddenness against another; to break by throwing with violence; to besprinkle; to wet by beating the water with a stick, or by flinging a stone or other thing into it; to mingle or mix with another liquor; to obliterate or cancel a writing, by drawing a careless stroke over it with a pen; to make a person ashamed; to confound.—v. n. to fly in waves or sparkles over the surface or brim of a vessel or bank; to fly in sparkles or sheets, attended with a loud noise, applied to water.

DASH, s. the stroke occasioned by flinging one body forcibly against another; a stroke made with a pen; a blow; a mixture of another liquor.

DASH, ad. an expression of the sound of water dashed.

DASSEN EXLAND, or DEER ISLAND, one of the three small islands lying between the Cape of Good Hope and Saldanha Bay. Lat. 33.25. S. Long. 17.56. E.

DA'STARD, s. [adastiga, Sax.] a coward; a person infamously fearful.

TO DA'STARD, v. a. to terrify; to affect with fear.

TO DA'STARDIZE, v. a. to intimidate; to render cowardly with fear.

DA'STARDLY, a. cowardly; mean; timorous.

DA'STARDY, s. cowardliness; timorousness.

DATARY, s. [datarius, from do, Lat.] an officer of the chancery of Rome, through whose hands benefices pass.

DATE, s. [datum, Lat.] the time or day in which a writing is signed or written, or an event happens; the time appointed for a thing to be done; continuance. Also, [from dactylus, Lat.] the fruit of a kind of palm-tree.

TO DATE, v. a. to set down the time in which a thing is done or a writing performed.

DATING, s. without any fixed term or period.

DATIVE, a. that form of a substantive which signifies the person to whom any thing is given or done. Also, the form signifying in some languages the means or instrument employed, or the place where a thing is done. As we have no inflexions in English, this relation is generally expressed by prefixing to, &c. before the noun, but after verbs of giving the particle is omitted. In Law, such executors as are appointed by a judge's decree.

TO DAUB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to smear with something sticking; to soil, or make dirty. Figuratively, to paint coarsely; to cover with something that disguises; to cover with something gaudy; to flatter grossly.

DAUBENTON, LOUIS, a distinguished French naturalist of the last century. He was the coadjutor of Buffon in his labours and writings, and afterwards occupied one of the professional chairs at the Natural History Museum, Paris. He was an accurate and careful observer, and a man of singular modesty. He received many proofs of esteem from the government of the day, and died with the century, aged 83 years.

DAUBER, s. one who soils or smears a thing; a coarse, low painter.

DAUBY, a. viscous; adhesive; glutinous.

DA'VENANT, SIR WILLIAM, one of the verse-makers and play-wrights, who in former days almost monopolized the office of poet-laureate. His name is yet remembered, more from his connexion with the royalists of the 17th century, than for his writings, which are happily almost unknown. He died in 1668, aged 63 years. His son, Charles Davenant, has left a multitude of books of various branches of political science, of no great worth in any point of view.

DAVENTRY, Northamptonshire. It is seated on the side of a hill, and is a pretty handsome town, on the great road to Chester and Carlisle; and the market is well supplied with horses, cattle, sheep, corn, and provisions. Its principal trade is making whips. It is 72 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4565.

DAVID, ST., anciently called MENEV, or MENEVIA, Pembrokehire, Wales, formerly the see of an archbishop, and metropolis of the British church. It is an episcopal town, and the cathedral is a pretty good structure. It is seated on a barren soil, on the river Ilen, 225 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 2445.

DAVID, the second king of Israel. He was the son of Jesse, a man living at Bethlehem, and being the youngest of a large family of sons, was employed as a shepherd, when the others followed King Saul to war. He signalized himself early by slaying, in single combat, a Philistine of gigantic stature, who had not met with one who had dared to meet him before; and this made him an object of jealousy to the king. Other circumstances inflamed this jealousy, and we find David driven at last to live as an outlaw, in the retired part of the country, along with a band of men in bad circumstances, with whom he made his name a terror to the land. He had already been designated by the prophet Samuel as the successor to Saul, and had in his marriage with one of Saul's daughters, and his friendship with Jonathan, one of his sons, a prominent place in the nation. On Saul's death he ascended the throne, and reigned long and, on the whole, usefully to his country. His reign was however a conquered one; his son Absalom rebelled against him, and was near dethroning him; he brought evil on his people by the entertainment of some ambitious object, perhaps foreign conquest; he found himself little able to cope with the family of his general, Joab, who, though he at times offered most sound counsel, had too much of the soldier to be always helpful; and by his complicated and aggravated treachery against Uriah, he brought a stain on his name which no penitence has served to efface from his history. A large proportion of the Psalms are understood to have been written by him, and we shall be little able to estimate his character until we have pondered deeply, and learned to love as deeply, these most exquisite and spiritual poems. The finish of these hymns has made them the admiration of critics; the sincerity of their expressions of penitence, the bursts of triumph, the professions of gratitude, the strong confidence they show in God, the frequency with which they quote God's very promises, have made them the vehicle for uttering the deepest emotions the heart of man is capable of. They are in truth a compendium of genuine religious experience; and spring from such depths of human nature, that in every clime and every age they will find a response in living and true hearts. David died about 1010 B. C., aged 70 years, and having reigned 40.

DAVID, JAMES LOUIS, the painter of the French Revolution, known best by the great models for statuary which he contributed to illustrate and adorn the semi-pagan festivals of Reason, and Robespierre's patent theistic fides. He also after Robespierre's fall helped in the extravagances of the would-be Athenian and Roman dames, teaching them, as well as he could, the genuine classic dress, &c. His style in painting is perfectly unideal; the spiritual element of art never seems to have inspired him. He was banished at the restoration of the Bourbons, and died in 1825, aged 75 years.

DAVID, the name of two Scottish kings, the first of whom was a model of kingly valour and virtue, and is mixed with English history by the part he took in the struggles of Matilda against Stephen. The second was son of Robert Bruce, and was taken prisoner by Queen Philippa, at the battle of Neville's Cross, in 1346.

DAUGHTER, (daughter) s. [dochter, Sax. and Teut.] female offspring; a daughter-in-law; a woman.

DAVILA, HENRICO C., an Italian historic writer of the 16th and 17th centuries. He was engaged in military service to France, and thus had the opportunity of observing what he has described in his Civil Wars of France. He was killed in 1631, aged 60 years.

DAVIS'S STRAITS, an arm of the sea, separating Greenland from Labrador and other parts of North America, and furnishing access to Baffin's Bay. It was discovered by Captain John Davis, one of our famous old voyagers, in 1585.

TO DAUNT, v. a. [domito, Lat.] to discourage; to damp a person's courage.

DAUNTLESS, a. without fear or discouragement.

DAUNTLESSNESS, s. a condition void of fear.

DAUPHIN, s. a title formerly given to the eldest son of the king of France, on account of the province of Dauphiny, which, in 1343, was given to Philip of Valois, on this condition, by Hubert, dauphin of Viennois.

DAUPHINY, a. ci-devant province of France, now forming the departments of Drome, Isere, and Hautes Alpes.

DAVY, SIR HUMPHREY, the famous English chemist of the beginning of the present century. He was brought into public notice by Dr. Beddoes of Bristol, and was afterwards appointed chemist to the Royal Institution in London. He was for some time president of the Royal Society, one of the highest honours for a scientific man. His discoveries included in their range the whole circle of chemical science. He attempted the dangerous experiment of breathing some gases, never before so tried, and though he nearly lost his life, he was rewarded by some most singular discoveries, amongst which was that of the laughing gas. By exposing some hitherto undecomposed substances to the action of the galvanic battery, he discovered several new metals. He first applied chemical science, methodically, to agriculture. And first amongst practical inventions must be ranked the safety lamp, for the use of mines subject to the fire-damp. He was much akin to Kepler in the daring of his experiments. Induction was to him rather an instinct than a power acquired by study. He died in 1829, aged 51 years.

DAW, s. in Natural History, a bird.

TO DAWN, v. n. [dagian, Sax.] to grow light; to advance towards day. Figuratively, to glimmer, or afford an obscure light to the understanding; to give some indication of greater and approaching splendour.

DAWN, s. the first appearance of day or light. Figuratively, a beginning.

DAY, [deg, Sax.] that space of time wherein it is light; but a natural or civil day is that space of time wherein the earth performs one rotation on its axis, so as its different parts shall successively enjoy the light of the sun; this consists of a period of 24 hours at a mean rate. Figuratively, light; sunshine. Any time specified and distinguished from other time; an age; the time; also, life: in these senses it is commonly plural; as, "He never in his days broke his word." To day, on this day. Days of grace, in Commerce, are certain days allowed by custom for the payment of a bill of exchange, &c. after it is become due. Three days of grace are allowed in England; ten in France and Dantzic; eight at Naples; six at Venice, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Antwerp; four at Frankfort; five at Leipzig; twelve at Hamburg; six in Portugal; fourteen in Spain; thirty in Genoa, &c.

DAY, THOMAS, the writer of Sandford and Merton, and Little Jack, two lasting favourites amongst young folks. He was a great oddity, and his notions of female education were exemplified by him in a most ridiculous way. He died in 1789, aged 41 years.

DAYBOOK, s. a book wherein tradesmen enter all the occurrences of the day in the order they happen.

DAYBREAK, s. the dawn; the first appearance of light.

DAYLABOUR, s. a portion of labour exacted of a person every day, and implies the idea of hardship and fatigue.

DAYLABOURER, s. a person who is hired to work by the day; a hard-working and slavish person.

DAYLIGHT, s. the light of the day, as opposed to that of the moon or a candle.

DAYLILY, s. in Botany, a plant, called also asphodel, which flowers in August.

DAYSMAN, s. a person chosen to determine or decide a dispute between others; an intercessor.

DAYSPRING, s. the first appearance of light in the morning; the dawn; the daybreak.

DAYSTAR, s. the morning star. Figuratively, the light shed by the daystar; the light of the gospel which is spread by Christ, the daystar of righteousness.

DAYTIME, s. in the day, opposed to night.

DAYWORK, s. work imposed by the day; daylabour.

TO DAZE, v. a. [dwes, Sax.] to overpower with light.

DAZIED, a. adorned or overgrown with daisies.

TO DAZZLE, v. a. [see DAZE,] to overpower the eyes, and injure the sight, with too great a degree of light or splendour. — v. n. to be overpowered, or lose the use of sight for a time, by too much light, or too great an application to reading.

DEACON, (dekon) s. [diakonos, Gr.] in the Churches of Rome and Acon, a lower degree of clergy, rather a novice, or state of probation for one year, after which a person is admitted into full orders, or ordained a priest. In Scotland, an overseer of the poor. In the New Testament, and Dissenting congregations, an officer chosen to superintend their temporal concerns.

DEACONESS, (dekoness) s. in the Ancient Church, a female who administered such offices to those of her own sex which it was not decent for the men to do, such as the baptism of adult women, &c.

DEACONRY, DEACONSHIP, s. the office or dignity of a deacon.

DEAD, (ded) a. [dead, Belg.] without or deprived of life. Figuratively, without signs of life; without sense or motion; hence a deep sleep, which imitates the want of sense and motion in a dead body, is called a dead sleep; useless; unaffected; void of ardour or warmth; gloomy; still; obscure; obtuse. Inactive, dull, applied to colours. Tasteless or rapid, applied to liquors. Prov. He that waits for dead men's shoes may go long enough barefoot.

DEAD, (ded) s. time in which there is a remarkable stillness or gloom; as midnight.

TO DEAD, DEADEN, (ded, deden) v. a. to deprive a thing of any quality or sensation. Figuratively, to make liquors rapid, tasteless, or spiritless.

DEAD-LIFT, (ded-lift) s. an effort made under a pressing necessity or exigence; a last resort.

DEAD-LIGHTS, s. wooden ports, which are made to fasten into the cabin windows, to prevent the waves from gushing into the ship during a storm; the glass lights are then taken out.

DEADLY, (adelly) a. that kills; murderous; mortal; inveterate.

DEADLY, (adelly) ad. in a manner resembling the dead. "Looked deadly pale," Shak. Implacably; irreconcilably. Sometimes used in familiar discourse, only to enforce the signification of a word, implying very much; prodigiously; exceedingly. "Though deadly weary," Orerry.

DEADNESS, (dedness) s. want of warmth and ardour. Figuratively, languor or faintness. Vapidity; loss of spirit, applied to liquors.

DEADNETTLE, or ARCHANGEL, s. in Botany, a plant, of which there are three kinds, the red, the white, and the henbit; they flower in May and June. The young leaves of the two first species may be eaten with other pot herbs.

DEAD-RECKONING, s. [a sea term,] that estimation or conjecture which the seamen make of the place where a ship is, by keeping an account of her way by the log, by knowing the course they have steered by the compass, and by rectifying all with allowance for drift or lee-way; so that this reckoning is without any observation of the sun, moon, and stars, and is said to be rectified as often as any good observation can be had.

DEAD SEA, or LAKE ASPHATHITES, in Palestine, about 60 miles long and 20 broad, abounding in bitumen: it contains no verdure on the banks, nor fish in its waters. The cause which deprives it of vegetable and animal life, is the extreme saltness and the asphaltic impregnation of its waters. Fragments of sulphur and bitumen, and mines of fossil salt, are found in the mountains, which extend along the shore. The Jordan runs into it, but it has no visible discharge for its waters.

DEADTONGUE, s. in Botany, a species of the dropwort or oenanthe, having leaves with numerous blunt and nearly equal clefts, a yellowish red stem, angular scored fruitstalks, and white blossoms, found on banks of rivers, and flowering in June. The whole of this plant is poisonous.

DEAF, (def) a. [deaf, Sax.] wanting the sense of hearing, or having it greatly impaired. Figuratively, regardless, inattentive.

TO DEAF, DEAFEN, (def, defen) v. a. to deprive of hearing.

DE/FLY, (defly) ad. [deflic, Sax.] without any sense of sounds, imperfectly heard.

DEAFNESS, (defness) s. the state of a person who has entirely lost the sense of hearing, or has it greatly impaired. Figuratively, inattention, or entire disregard.

DEAL, Kent. It is seated near the sea, and is a member of Sandwich, governed by a mayor and jurats. It has a church and chapel, and three long but narrow streets. No manufacture is carried on here; the tradespeople chiefly depend on the seafaring men who resort hither. This place is defended by a castle built by Henry VIII., and near it are two others. Between this and Goodwin Sands are the Downs, where ships usually ride at going out or coming home. It is 72 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 6688.

DEAL, (deal) s. [deet, Belg.] a part or portion. It is a general word for expressing much, joined with great. The office or practice of distributing cards to those who are engaged in any game. Also, (from deyl, Belg.) fir or pine wood.

To DEAL, (deal) v. a. [deelen, Belg.] to distribute or dispose of to different persons; to scatter promiscuously; to give to several persons in order, one after another.—v. n. to transact business; to trade; to act; to sell; to be conversant in; to practise; to behave towards; to treat; sometimes to contend with or approve.

DEALBATION, s. [dealbatio, from albus, Lat.] the act of bleaching or whitening.

DE/ALER, (dealer) s. one who trades in any particular commodity; one who has to do with or practises anything; one who distributes cards.

DE/ALING, (dealing) s. practice; action; behaviour; treatment; business; or trade.

DEAMBULATION, s. [deambulatio, from ambulo, Lat.] the act of walking abroad.

DEAN, Gloucestershire. It stands in the Forest of Dean, which comprehends that part of the county which lies between the Severn and the shires of Monmouth and Hereford. It contains 4 market towns and 23 parishes, is fertile in pasture and tillage, produces fine oaks, abounds in orchards, and has rich mines of iron and coal. It is 112 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. of Forest Dean, 10,692; of Little Dean, 828; of Michel Dean, 665.

DEAN, (deen) s. [deka, Gr. or decem, Lat.] a person in collegiate churches or chapels, who is president of the chapter. This title is also given to an officer, spiritual or secular, who has the presidency over a body resembling a chapter; thus we have the Dean of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and the Dean of the Faculty, at colleges. Rural deans were clerical officers in the Church of England, placed under archdeacons, to help them in carrying out their duties.

DE/ANERY, (deanery) s. the government, authority, revenue, or residence of a dean.

DE/ANSHIP, s. the office of a dean.

DEAR, (deer) a. [deor, Sax.] applied to an object of great love and of warm affection; beloved. Figuratively, valuable; of high price; costly; scarce; not plentiful.

DEAR, (deer) s. a word of endearment; darling.

DEAR-BOUGHT, a. purchased at a high rate; bought at too high a price.

DE/ARLING, DE/RLING, s. [deorling, Sax.] a person caressed with great affection.

DE/ARLY, (dearly) ad. with great affection. Used with pay or buy, at a high price; at too great a price.

DE/ARNESS, (deariness) s. fondness; a warm or great degree of affection; scarcity; costliness; a high, or too high a price.

DEARTH, (derth) s. [from dear,] scarcity; want; need; famine; barrenness.

To DEARTICULATE, v. a. [de and articulus, Lat.] to disjoin; to dismember.

DEATH, (deht) s. [death, Sax.] the departure of the soul from the body; loss of sensibility, motion, and all the functions of animal life. Figuratively, mortality; destruction; the manner of dying; the image of mortality represented by a skeleton; the state of the dead; murder, or depriving a person of life by violence and unlawful means; the cause of death. In Law, there is a natural and civil death; natural, where nature itself expires; civil, where a person is not naturally dead, but adjudged so by law. Thus, if a person for whose life an estate is granted remains beyond sea, or is otherwise absent, for seven years, and no proof made of his being living, he shall be accounted naturally dead. SYNON. Departure, is still more defined, and carries with it an idea of the passage from one life to another. Death, more common, and signifies precisely extinction of life. Decease, more studied, is a term somewhat bordering upon the law, and implies the refuge of mortality. The second of these words is made use of with respect to all sorts of animals; the other two to man only.

DEATHBED, (dethbed) s. the bed on which a person dies.

DEATH-DOING, DEATHFUL, (dethful) a. pregnant with death; mortal; fatal; destructive.

DEATHLESS, (dethless) a. not subject to death; immortal; everlasting.

DEATHLIKE, (dethlike) a. [deathlic, Sax.] resembling death, either in its horrors, or in its insensibility or motionless state.

DEATH-MAN, (deth-man) s. an executioner.

DEATH-WATCH, (deth-watch) s. the sound produced by some small species of insects, which live in old wood, when they strike their horny heads against the wood, by way of calling their companions.

To DEAU/RATE, v. a. [deauo, from aurum, Lat.] to gild, or cover with gold.

DEAURATION, s. the gilding or covering any thing with gold or silver.

DEBACCHATION, s. [debacchatio, Lat. from Bacchus,] a raging; a madness.

To DEBAR, v. a. to hinder or restrain a person from the enjoyment of a thing.

To DEBARB, v. a. [de and barba, Lat.] to deprive of the beard.

To DEBARK, v. a. [debarquer, Fr.] to come out of a ship upon shore.

To DEBASE, v. a. to reduce from a higher to a lower value; to adulterate metal or liquor by the addition of something less valuable; to spoil or render less perfect by mean and unworthy additions.

DEBA/SEMENT, s. the act of debasing or degrading a thing by the mixture of something mean or worthless.

DEBA/SE, s. the person who lessens the value of a thing by some mixture; one who adulterates metals or liquors.

DEBATABLE, a. that may be disputed, or give occasion for controversy.

DEBATE, s. [debat, Fr.] a dispute concerning the meaning of the truth of any proposition; a quarrel or contest.

To DEBATE, v. a. [debatre, Fr.] to controvert or dispute; to produce the arguments which may be brought to support any side of a question.—v. n. to deliberate.

DEBATEFUL, a. fond of dispute or contradiction. Quarrelsome or contentious, when applied to persons. Contested, or occasioning disputes, when applied to things.

DEBATEMENT, s. controversy; deliberation.

DEBATER, s. a disputant, or one fond of dispute.

To DEBAUCH, v. a. [debaucher, Fr.] to seduce a person, or prevail on him to do something amiss; to corrupt a person's morals; to corrupt by intemperance in meat or drink, but especially the latter.

DEBAUCH, s. a fit of intemperance; luxury; excess; lewdness.

DEBAUCHEE, s. [debauché, Fr.] a person given to intemperance in drink, or lewdness.

DEBAUCHER, s. one who seduces others to intemperance; a corrupter.

DEBAUCHERY, s. the practice of excess; intemperance; lewdness.

DEBAUCHMENT, s. the act of corrupting the morals of a person, whether it respects temperance or chastity.

To DEBEL, DEBEL/ATE, v. a. [debello, from bellum, Lat.] to conquer, or overcome, in war.

DE/BENHAM, Suffolk, seated near the head of the river Deben, on the side of a hill. It is 84 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1367.

DEBENTURE, s. [debeo, Lat.] is a term used in the custom-house, for a kind of certificate which is signed by the officers of the customs, and entitles a merchant exporting goods to the receipt of a bounty or drawback; which debentures for foreign goods are to be paid within one month after demand.

DE/BILE, a. [debilis, Lat.] weak; feeble; languid; faint; impotent.

To DEBILITATE, v. a. to deprive of strength; to weaken, or render weak.

DEBILITATION, s. the act of depriving a person of strength, or rendering him weak.

DEBILITY, s. loss of strength; weakness; want of strength to bear any weight, or to accomplish an undertaking.

DEBONAIRE, a. [debonnaire, Fr.] lively; affable; genteel; civil; well bred; elegant.

DEBONAIRLY, ad. with an elegant or genteel air; civilly; sprightly.

DEBT, (diēt) s. [debitum, from debeo, Lat.] that which one person owes to another. That which any man is obliged to do or suffer. National debt, is the enormous sum of money, about £800,000,000, borrowed of the nation by the government at various times, for the purpose of carrying on wars, &c. &c., for which purposes they could not tax the people; but the whole of which, with the interest upon it, remains as a burden to after generations. It is a tax levied on posterity, which governments dared not levy on their contemporaries. The yearly interest is nearly £30,000,000.

DEBTOR, (dēttor) s. [debitor, Lat.] he that owes another money; one who has taken goods of another on trust; that side of an account which contains the articles which a person has had on trust.

DEBULLITION, s. [debullitio, from ebullio, Lat.] the bubbling of water over the side of the vessel which contains it.

DECAUMINATED, a. [decaeminatus, from caemen, Lat.] having the top or point cut off.

DECADE, s. [deka, Gr.] a number amounting to or consisting of ten.

DECADENCY, s. [decadence, Fr.] decay.

DECAGON, s. [deka and gonia, Gr.] in Geometry, a figure having ten equal sides and angles.

DECATOLOGUE, (dekátōlog) s. [deka and logos, Gr.] the ten commandments given by God to Moses.

DECAMERON, s. [deka and meros, Gr.] a book, discourse, or other matter, divided into ten distinct parts.

TO DECAAMP, v. a. [decamper, Fr.] to shift a camp; to remove from a place.

DECAEMENT, s. the act of moving from a place.

DECAENDOLE, AUGUSTIN P., an eminent French botanist of the present century. He held a professorship at Geneva during the latter part of his life. He carried out to their highest development the principles of the natural systems of plants, bringing in to his aid all the most recent discoveries respecting vegetable physiology. He published many works respecting his favourite study, but he accomplished only an outline of the great work on all known plants, which he had projected. He died in 1841, aged 63 years.

TO DECANTE, v. a. [decanter, Fr.] to pour liquor off gently.

DECANTATION, s. [decanation, Fr.] the act of pouring liquor off the lees.

DECANTER, s. a bottle of white glass, used to contain liquors.

TO DECAPITATE, v. a. [decapito, from caput, Lat.] to behead.

TO DECA'Y, v. n. [de and cadere, Lat.] to lose of its value, substance, strength, or perfection; to be gradually impaired. — v. a. to impair, to consume gradually, or waste the substance of a thing.

DECA'Y, s. a gradual loss of substance, qualities, value, or perfection; the effects or marks of consumption or decline.

DECAYER, s. that which causes decay.

DECCAN, THE, an extensive tract of country in Hindustan, including Candeish, Dowlatabad, Orissa, Derar, Golconda, and the Circars. It is under the sway of the British. Its population is above 2,500,000. See the respective provinces composing it.

DECEASE, (dēcēse) s. [decessus, from decedo, Lat.] death; departure from life.

TO DECEASE, v. n. to die.

DECETIT (dēcēt) s. [deceptio, Lat.] a means by which a thing is passed upon a person for what it is not, as when falsehood is made to pass for truth; a fraud; cheat; artifice.

DECETITFUL, (dēcētful) a. full of fraud or artifice; meaning different from what a person expresses; not to be confided in.

DECETITFULLY, (dēcētfully) ad. in a fraudulent, insincere manner.

DECEITFULNESS, (dēcētfulness) s. the quality of imposing on a person to his hurt.

DECEIVABLE, (dēcēvable) a. subject or exposed to fraud or imposture; subject to, or capable of, leading a person into an error.

DECEIVABLENESS, s. the possibility of being imposed upon by false pretences.

TO DECEIVE, (dēcēve) v. a. [decepio, Lat.] to make a person believe something false, or intended to his damage or hurt; to impose on a person's credulity by false appearances; to lead into an error or mistake. Figuratively, to disappoint.

DECEIVER, (dēcēver) s. one who leads another into a mistake; one who imposes on the credulity of another.

DECEMBER, s. [Lat.] because the tenth month in ancient reckoning, the year then beginning in March; the last or twelfth month of the year, according to the modern computation of time.

DECEMPEDAL, a. [decem and pes, Lat.] measuring ten feet.

DECEMVIRATE, s. [decem and vir, Lat.] the dignity and office of the ten governors of Rome, who were appointed to rule the commonwealth of consuls; their authority subsisted only two years. Any body of ten men.

DECEUCE, DECEUCEY, s. [decentia, Lat.] a method of address or action proper and becoming a person's sex, character, or rank. Figuratively, modesty.

DECENNIAL, a. [decem and annus, Lat.] containing the space of ten years.

DECENNIOVAL, DECENNIOVARY, a. [decem and novem, Lat.] relating to the number nineteen.

DECENT, a. [decens, Lat.] becoming; fit or suitable; neat; grave; not gaudy; not immodest.

DECENTLY, ad. in a proper manner; consistent with character, rank, or the rules of good breeding. Figuratively, modestly.

DECEPTIBILITY, s. [deceptio, Lat.] liahleness to be led into an error or mistake; liahleness to be imposed on.

DECEPTIBLE, a. liable to be deceived, imposed on, or led into an error.

DECEPTION, s. [deceptio, Lat.] the act or means of imposing on a person, or leading him into an error; the state of a person imposed on, or in a mistake; a cheat, fraud, or fallacy, by which a person takes a thing to be what it is not.

DECEPTIOUS, a. apt to impose upon, or lead a person into an error.

DECEPTIVE, a. having the power of deceiving.

DECEPTORY, a. containing the means of imposing on the credulity of a person, or of leading him into a mistake.

DECEPT, a. [decepto, Lat.] cropped; taken off.

DECEPTIBLE, a. that may be taken off.

DECEPTIION, s. the act of lessening, taking off, parting, or dividing any thing.

DECERTATION, s. [decertatio, Lat.] contention, strife, or dispute.

DECESSION, s. [decessio, from decedo, Lat.] a departure; a going away.

TO DECHARM, v. a. [decharmer, Fr.] to counteract a charm.

TO DECIDE, v. a. [decido, Lat.] to put an end to or determine a dispute or event.

DECIDER, s. one who determines a quarrel or cause.

DECIDUOUS, a. [deciduous, Lat.] falling off. In Botany, applied to the leaves, those which fall off at the approach of winter; to the cup or impalement, falling off before the blossom, as in the cabbage, and cuckoo flower; and to the seed-vessel, falling off before it opens, as in the sea-rocket and wood.

DECIDUOUSNESS, s. aptness to fall. In Botany, the quality of falling or withering every year.

DECIMAL, a. [decem, Lat.] numbered, multiplied, or increasing by tens. Decimal arithmetic is that which computes by decimal numbers. A decimal fraction is that whose denominator is always one, with one or more ciphers; thus a unit may be imagined to be equally divided into ten parts, and each of these into ten more; so that by a continual decimal subdivision, the unit may be supposed to be divided into 10, 100, 1000, &c. equal parts. But denominators of this sort of fractions are always known; they are seldom expressed in writing; but the fraction is distinguished by a point placed before it thus, .3, .46, .869, for 6-10ths, 46-100ths, 869-1000ths. The same is observed in mixed numbers, as 678·9 for 678 and 9-10ths, 67·89 for 67 and 89-100ths, 6·789 for 6 and 789-1000ths, &c. And as ciphers placed before integers increase their value decimally, so being placed before a decimal they decrease their value decimally; but being placed before integers and after fractions, neither of them is increased or diminished. Decimal notation, is the system of notation practised by ourselves and most nations, supposed to have originated in the habit of calculating by means of the figures, in which but 10 symbols are used, and a higher denomination is entered on at every tenth figure.

TO DECIMATE, v. a. [decimo, Lat.] to tithe; to take the tenth.

DECIMATION, s. [decimatio, Lat.] the act of tithing, or taking the tenth, whether by lot or otherwise; a selection of every tenth soldier by lot, for punishment in a general mutiny.

TO DECIPHER, (desfer) v. a. [decipherer, Fr.] to explain any thing written in ciphers. Figuratively, to describe, or give a characteristic representation of a thing; to unfold; to unravel.

DECIPHERER, (desiferer) s. one who explains any thing written in ciphers.

DECISION, s. [decisio, Lat.] the determination of a dispute or difference; the result of an event. In Scotland, it is used for a narrative, or report, of the proceedings of the court of session there.

DECISIVE, a. having the power of determining a difference, or settling the result of an event, that is uncertain.

DECISIVELY, ad. in a conclusive manner, so as to put an end to a dispute, or to determine the fate of an undertaking.

DECISIVENESS, s. the power of determining any difference, or settling any event.

DECISORY, a. liable to determine or put beyond dispute.

TO DECK, v. a. [decken, Belg.] to cover by way of ornament. To adorn with dress; to embellish.

DECK, s. [decken, Belg.] is the planked floor of a ship from stem to stern, whereon the guns are laid, and the men walk to and fro. Great ships have three decks, 1st, 2d, and 3d, counting from the lowermost. Half-deck reaches from the main-mast to the stern of a ship. Quarter-deck is that aloft thick stowage reaching to the round-house. Flank-deck is that which lies even in a right line fore and aft, from stem to stern. A rupe-deck is that made of cordage interwoven and stretched over a vessel, through which they may annoy an enemy that boards them. It is only used in small vessels that have no deck.

DECKER, s. a dresser; one who adorns; one who covers a table or lays a cloth. In ships, it is used with a number to express the size of the vessel, as, a three-decker, means a ship with three decks.

TO DECLAM, v. a. [declamo, Lat.] to speak in a florid manner, like an orator or rhetorician; to speak much against a thing; to run a thing down, used with against.

DECLAMER, s. one who makes a florid speech in order to fire the imagination or move the passions; an orator.

DECLAMATION, s. a florid or rhetorical discourse addressed to the passions. Figuratively, an ostentatious display of rhetoric or oratory.

DECLAMATOR, s. [Lat.] one who speaks against a thing, person, or opinion; an orator; a rhetorician. Seldom used.

DECLAMATORY, a. relating to the practice of declaiming; treated in the manner of a rhetorician; appealing to the passions; merely rhetorical flourish.

DECLARABLE, a. that may be declared; capable of proof.

DECLARATION, s. [Fr.] the discovery of a thing by words; explanation; affirmation. In law, the showing forth or laying out an action personal in any suit; sometimes used both for personal and real actions. The declaration of fidelity is used for a profession which is made by the people called Quakers, in lieu of the oath of allegiance.

DECLARATIVE, a. explaining; making proclamation; explanatory.

DECLARATORILY, ad. in the form of a declaration; not in a decratory form.

DECLARATORY, a. expressive; affirmative.

TO DECLARE, v. a. [declaro, Lat.] to explain, or free from obscurity; to make known; to manifest; to publish or proclaim.

DECLARMENT, s. discovery; declaration; testimony.

DECLARER, s. one who makes any thing known.

DECLENSION, s. [declino, Lat.] a gradual decay, or decrease from a greater degree of strength or power to a less; descent; declination or declivity. In Grammar, the series of terminations, which, affixed to the root of a substantive, express the various relations in which the notion represented by it may stand to the other notions in a sentence.

DECLINABLE, a. having a variety of endings, according to the different relations it stands for.

DECLINATION, s. [declinatio, Lat.] descent; a change from a more to a less perfect state; decay; the act of bending down. A variation from a perpendicular or right line; an oblique direction; variation from a fixed point, such as that of the needle from the north. In Astronomy, the distance of the sun, moon, planet, or star, from the equator, either north or south. Declination of a plane, in Dialing, is an arch of the horizon, comprehended either between the plane and the prime vertical circle, if counted from east to west, or between the meridian and plane, if reckoned from north to south.

DECLINATOR, DECLINATORY, s. an instrument used in dialing, to determine the declination, reclamation, and inclination of planes.

TO DECLINE, v. n. [declino, Lat.] to bend or lean downwards. Figuratively, to go astray; to shun, or avoid to do a thing; to sink; to be impaired; to decay. In Grammar, to affix to the root of a substantive, in order, the various endings appropriated to it, which express the various modifications of its radical meaning, as to number and case.—v. a. to bend downwards; to shun; to elude the force of an argument; to mention all the different terminations of a declinable word.

DECLINE, s. decay, owing either to age, time, disease, or other causes.

DECLINING, part. bending or leaning downwards. In Botany, bent like a bow with the arch downwards, as the seed-vessel of the water-cress.

DECLIVITY, s. [declivitas, Lat.] gradual descent of a hill or other eminence.

DECLIVOUS, a. [declivis, Lat.] gradually descending.

TO DECOCT, v. a. [decoctum, Lat.] to prepare for use by boiling. In Pharmacy, to boil in water, so as to draw out the strength or virtue of a thing; to boil till it grows thick.

DECOCTIBLE, a. that may be boiled, or may be prepared by boiling.

DECOCTION, s. [decoctio, Lat.] the act of boiling any thing to extract its virtues. Figuratively, the strained liquor of a plant, or other ingredient boiled in water.

DECOCTURE, s. a preparation or substance formed from boiling ingredients in water.

DECOLLATION, s. [decollatio, Lat.] the act of beheading.

DECOMBUSTION, s. in Chemistry, the depriving a body of oxygen so as to render it incapable of burning.

DECOMPOSITE, a. [decompositus, low Lat.] separated into parts after being previously compounded.

DECOMPOSITION, s. the separating the particles of a compound body.

TO DECOMPOUND, v. a. [decompono, low Lat.] to separate the particles of a compound body.

DECOMPOUND, a. separated into parts after being previously compounded.

DECORAMENT, s. ornament; embellishment.

TO DECORATE, v. a. [decoro, Lat.] to set off or adorn with ornaments.

DECORATION, s. an ornament, or thing which, by being added, gives both grace and beauty to another.

DECORATOR, s. one who adorns or embellishes.

DECOROUS, a. [decorus, Lat.] suitable or agreeable to the character, dignity, or perfections of a person or thing; becoming.

TO DECORTICATE, v. a. [decortico, Lat.] to strip off the bark or husk; to peel.

DECORTICATION, s. the act of stripping a thing of its bark or husk.

DECORUM, s. [Lat.] a behaviour proper or suitable to the character and abilities of a person, consisting likewise of a due observance of the established rules of politeness.

TO DECOY, v. a. [doey, Belg.] to lure or entice into a cage; to draw into a snare. Figuratively, to seduce a person by allurements.

DECOY, s. a place adapted for drawing wild fowl into snares. The decoy consists of several pipes, as they are called, which lead up a narrow ditch that closes at last with a funnel net. Into this the wild ducks are enticed by means of hemp seed, which is thrown into the water, and by the example of the decoy-ducks, which are trained for the purpose of leading their companions into the snare.

To DECREE/ASE, (dekreefese) v. n. [de and cresco, Lat.] to become less either in length, weight, force, or bulk; to diminish.—v. a. to make less.

DECREE/ASE, (dekreefese) s. the state of growing less; decay. In Astronomy, the wane; the change made in the face of the moon from its full till it returns to full again.

To DECREE/E, v. n. [decretum, Lat.] to establish by law; to resolve.—v. a. to assign, or dispose of a thing by law.

DECREE/E, s. [decretum, Lat.] a law, an established rule; the determination of a suit. In Canon Law, an ordinance which is enacted by the pope himself, by and with the advice of his cardinals in council assembled, without being consulted with any one thereon.

DECREMENT, s. [de and cresco, Lat.] the state of becoming less; the quantity lost by decay. In the higher Mathematics, the amount by which the terms of series regularly diminish.

DECREPIT, a. [decreplus, Lat.] wasted, worn out, and enfeebled by age.

To DECREPITATE, v. a. [de and crepo, Lat.] to calcine salts on the fire till they cease to crackle, or make a noise.

DECREPITATION, s. the crackling noise made by salt when put over the fire in a crucible, or cast into a clear fire.

DECREE/PITNESS, DECREE/PITUDE, s. the weakness attending old age; the last stage of decay.

DECRESCENT, part. [de and cresco, Lat.] becoming less; in a state of decay.

DECRETAL, a. [decretum, Lat.] appertaining, belonging, or relating to a decree. A decretal epistle, is that which the pope decrees, either by himself or by the advice of cardinals, on his being consulted thereon by some particular person.

DECRETAL, s. a letter or rescript of the pope, by which some point in the ecclesiastical law is solved or determined; a book of decrees or laws.

DECRETIST, s. one who studies or professes the knowledge of decretals.

DECRETORY, a. judicial; final; decisive; critical; in which there is some definitive event.

DECRIAL, s. the endeavouring to lessen any thing in the esteem of the public; censure; condemnation.

To DECRY, v. a. [decrier, Fr.] to censure, blame, or inveigh against a thing; to endeavour to lessen the esteem the public has for a thing.

DECUMBENCE, DECU'MBENCY, s. [decumbo, Lat.] the act or posture of lying down.

DECU MATURE, s. the time at which a person takes his bed in a disease. In Astrology, a scheme of the heavens erected for that time, by which the prognostics of recovery or death are discovered.

DECUPLE, a. [decuplus, Lat.] tenfold; the same number repeated ten times.

DECURION, s. [decurio, Lat.] an officer who had the command of ten persons.

DECURSION, s. [de and curro, Lat.] the act of running or flowing down.

DECURTATION, s. [decurtatio, Lat.] the act of cutting short, or shortening.

To DECUSSATE, v. a. [decusso, from decussis, a Roman coin marked with an X, Lat.] to intersect, or cross at right angles.

DECUSSATE, s. the act of crossing, or the state of being crossed at right angles; the point at which two lines cross each other.

DE/DDINGTON, Oxfordshire. It is seated on a rising ground, in a fertile soil, 69 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2025.

To DEDECORATE, v. a. [dedecus, Lat.] to disgrace; to bring a reproach upon.

DEDECORATION, s. the act of disgracing; disgrace.

DEDECOROUS, a. disgraced; reproachful.

DEDENTITION, s. [de and dens, Lat.] loss or shedding of the teeth.

DE/DHAM, Essex. It has one old large church, which has a remarkably fine steeple, of the Gothic order, and a great deal of carved work about it, much injured by time. The streets, though not paved, are very clean, occasioned by their lying pretty high. It is situated on the river Stour, which separates it from Suffolk, 58 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1787.

To DEDICATE, v. a. [dedico, Lat.] to devote, appropriate, or set aside a thing for Divine uses. Figuratively, to appropriate peculiarly to a design or purpose; to inscribe to a patron.

DEDICATED, part. or a. [dedicatus, Lat.] appropriated, or devoted to a particular use.

DEDICATION, s. [dedicatio, Lat.] the act of consecrating or appropriating some place or thing solely to Divine uses; the address of an author to his patron.

DEDICATOR, s. one who ascribes a work to a patron.

DEDICATORY, a. composing, belonging to, or in the style of a dedication.

DEDITION, s. [dedo, Lat.] the act of surrendering to an enemy.

To DEDUCE, v. a. [deduco, Lat.] to describe in a continual series, so that one thing shall introduce another; to infer by reason from certain propositions which are premised.

DEDUCEMENT, s. that which is collected or inferred from any premises.

DEDUCIBLE, a. to be inferred or discovered from principles laid down.

DEDUCIVE, a. performing the act of deduction; inferring or collecting from principles or propositions already laid down.

To DEDUCT, v. a. [deduco, Lat.] to subtract, or take away.

DEDUCTION, s. [deductio, Lat.] a consequence or inference drawn by reason from some principle laid down; that which is subtracted or taken away from any sum, number, &c.

DEDUCTIVE, a. that may be deduced or inferred from any proposition laid down or premised.

DEDUCTIVELY, ad. by way of inference, or collecting one truth from another.

DEE, a river of N. Wales and Cheshire, which rises near Plumbe Meer, in Merionethshire, crosses the county of Denbigh, separating it from Cheshire, and runs into the Irish Channel, about 15 miles N. W. of Chester, and to which city it is navigable from near Ellesmere in Shropshire. At Chester the continuity of the navigation is broken by a ledge of rocks, which run across the bed of the river, and cause a kind of cascade; from hence it flows to the sea, a broad sandy estuary, dividing Cheshire from Flintshire. By embankments, however, much land has been gained from the tide, and a narrower, but deeper channel, fitted for navigation, has been formed from Chester, half way to the sea.

DEE, JOHN, an English mathematician and professor of judicial astrology, in the 16th century. He was a man of considerable attainments in genuine science, having studied both here and on the continent in some of the best schools. He was the first translator of Euclid into English, and accomplished the task well. It was a fault of his times, added, perhaps, to some disposition to play the quack, that he pretended to have intercourse with spirits of not particularly good characters, and was consulted by great and royal personages on the strength of his pretensions. These unworthy pursuits seem to have drawn him aside from the path he was so well fitted to pursue with profit and renown. He died in 1608, aged 81 years.

DEED, s. [deed, Sax.] an action, or thing done; an exploit; written evidence of any legal act; fact; reality.

DEE/DLESS, a. inactive; without doing any thing.

To DEEM, v. n. part. deemed, formerly deemt; [deinan, Sax.] to judge; to think; to determine on due consideration.

DEEMSTER, s. [from deem,] a judge; a word still used in Guernsey and Jersey.

DEEP, a. [deep, Sax.] that has length measured downward from its surface. Applied to situation, low; below the surface, or measured from the surface downwards. Figuratively, piercing far; far from the entrance. "Deep unbrush'd in her silent den," Dryden. Not to be discovered at first sight; not obvious. "The sense lies deep," Locke. Sagacious, penetrating, profound, learned. "He meditating with two deep divines," Shaks. Artful, grave. Dark, applied to colours.

DEEP, s. [diepte, Belg.] the sea. Joined to night, the most advanced and stillest part thereof; midnight.

To DEE/TEN, v. a. to sink far below the surface. Applied to colours, to darken; to cloud; to make a shade darker; to increase the dolefulness of a sound.

DEEP/PING, Lincolnshire. It is seated on the river Weland, in a fenny ground, 90 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1219.

DEEPLY, ad. to a great distance below the surface; with great study, application, and penetration, opposed to superficially. Sorrowfully; profoundly; with a great degree of sorrow, melancholy, or sadness, when used with words expressing grief. In a high degree; excessively; vastly.

DEEP-MOUTHEd, a. having a hoarse, loud voice, or uttering a hollow, loud sound.

DEEP-MUSING, a. contemplative; lost in thought.

DEEPNESS, s. distance or space measured from the surface downwards.

DEER, s. [deer, Sax.] in Natural History, a class of animals, the males of which have their heads adorned with branching horns, which they shed every year. Some of them are kept in parks for hunting, and others rove at large in the wild regions of North Britain. Their flesh is called venison, and reckoned very delicious. The species of the deer are very various, and will be found noticed under their several names.

To DEFACE, v. a. [defaire, Fr.] to destroy; to ruin; to disfigure.

DEFA/CEMENT, s. the act of disfiguring.

DEFA/CER, s. one who destroys or disfigures any thing.

DE FACTO, s. something actual and in fact, or really existing, in contradistinction to de jure, where a thing is only so in justice, but not in fact.

DEFA/LANCE, s. [defaillance, Fr.] failure; miscarriage; disappointment.

To DEFA/LCATE, v. a. [defalquer, Fr.] to cut or lop off; to take away or abridge part of a person's pension or salary. Most commonly applied to money affairs.

DEFA/LICATION, s. diminution; abridgment of any customary allowance.

To DEFA/LK, v. a. to lop or cut off; to abridge.

DEFA/MATION, s. [de and fama, Lat.] the speaking slanderous words of another, for which the slander is punishable according to the nature of the offence, either by action at common law, or in the ecclesiastical court.

DEFA/MATORY, a. tending to lessen the character, or ruin the reputation, of another.

To DEFA/ME, v. a. to utter words against a person or thing, with an intent to lessen his reputation, or render it infamous.

DEFA/MER, s. one who asserts things injurious to the reputation of another, with an intention to render him infamous.

To DEFA/TIGATE, v. a. [defatigo, Lat.] to weary; to tire.

DEFA/TIGATION, s. [defatigatio, Lat.] weariness; fatigue.

DEFA/ULT, s. [defaut, Fr.] omission of what ought to be done; neglect; fault. In Law, it is a non-appearance in a court at a day assigned. If a plaintiff fails to appear at his trial he is non-suited; if a defendant makes default, judgment will go against him by default. Jurors making default in their appearance, are to lose and forfeit issue.

To DEFA/ULT, v. a. to fail; or not to perform something promised or contracted.

DEFA/ULTER, s. one that makes a default.

DEFE/ASANCE, (defeasance) s. [defaistance, Fr.] the act of annulling, or rendering a contract void.

DEFE/ASIBLE, (defeasible) a. [defaire, Fr.] that may be annulled, abrogated, set aside, or made void.

DEFE/AT, (defeat) s. [defaire, Fr.] the overthrow of an army; an act of destruction; deprivation.

To DEFE/AT, (defeat) v. a. to beat or overthrow an army. Figuratively, to frustrate; to disappoint.

To DEFE/CATE, v. a. [defeco, from faces, Lat.] to purge or clear liquors from dregs or sourness. Figuratively, to clear truth from any thing which renders it obscure; to purify from any gross mixture; to brighten.

DEFE/CATE, a. cleared or purified from lees or foulnesses.

DEFE/CATION, s. [defecatio, Lat.] the act of clearing or purifying from foulness.

DEFE/CT, (defect) s. [deficio, Lat.] the absence of something which a thing ought to have; failing; want; a mistake or error, applied to the constitution. A fault, applied to moral conduct. In Astronomy, applied to the eclipsed part of the sun or moon.

SYNON. Fault includes relation to the maker; so that while it implies some real want in the finishing of the work, it denotes also that it is owing to the workman. Defect expresses something imperfect in the thing without any relation to the maker of it.

To DEFE/CT, v. n. [defectum, Lat.] to be deficient.

DEFE/CIBILITY, s. a state of failing; deficiency; imperfection.

DEFE/CIBLE, a. imperfect; deficient; wanting in something which a thing ought to have.

DEFE/CTION, s. failure; apostasy; rebellion.

DEFE/CTIVE, a. not having all the qualities or powers which are requisite; faulty; blamable. Defective nouns, or verbs, in Grammar, are such as are known never to have had some cases, numbers, persons, tenses, or moods, in use.

DEFE/CTIVENESS, s. wanting something which a person or thing ought to have; a state of imperfection.

DEFE/NCE, s. [defensio, Lat.] the method used to secure a person against the attack of an enemy; guard; protection; security; vindication; justification; or the reply made by a person in order to clear himself from a crime laid to his charge.

DEFE/NCELESS, a. destitute of the means of repulsing; unable to resist.

To DEFE/ND, v. a. [defendo, Lat.] to protect; to support; to secure; to forbid; to vindicate or justify; to maintain a place or cause against those that attack it.

DEFE/NDABLE, a. that may be maintained or secured against the attacks of an enemy; that may be vindicated or justified.

DEFE/NDANT, s. he that endeavours to beat off an enemy, or to hinder a place from falling into his hands. In Law, the person who is prosecuted or sued.

DEFE/NDER, s. one who protects a place or person against an enemy; one who endeavours to answer the objections raised against any truth or doctrine. Defender of the Faith, a title still retained by the sovereign of Great Britain, though given by Pope Leo X. to Henry VIII. for writing against Luther.

DEFE/NSABLE, s. that which is made use of to secure a person or place against the attack of an enemy; defence; guard. In Surgery, a bandage, plaister, or the like, used to secure a wound from outward violence.

DEFE/NSIBLE, a. capable of resisting an enemy; vindicating from any crime or aspersion.

DEFE/NSIVE, a. [defensiv, Fr.] only proper for defence.

DEFE/NSIVE, s. safeguard; state of defence.

DEFE/NSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to guard against the designs or attacks of an enemy.

To DEFE/R, v. n. [differo, Lat.] to put off to another time; to delay.—[defero, Lat.] to refer to another's judgment.

DEFE/RENCE, s. [deferens, Fr.] regard or respect paid to rank, age, or superior talents; complaisance; submission.

DEFE/RENT, a. [deferens, Lat.] that carries or conveys. In Anatomy, the term is applied to certain vessels in the body, that serve for the conveyance of humours from one part to another.

DEFE/RENT, s. that which carries; that which conveys. In Astronomy, according to the old Ptolemaic system, the great circles which were supposed to carry in their revolution epicycles, round which each of the planets, and the sun and moon, respectively, passed. This scheme was invented because the hypothesis of a circular orbit, revolving centrally, or excentrically, did not explain the facts.

DEFE/ANCE, s. [defi, Fr.] a challenge or call upon a person to make good an accusation; a contemptuous disregard.

DEFE/CIENCE, DEF/ICIENCY, (defisience, deficiency) s. [deficio, Lat.] the want of something which a person or thing should have; an imperfection, or defect.

DEFE/CIENT, (deficient) a. imperfect. Deficient Numbers, in Arithmetic, are those numbers, whose parts, added together, make less than the integer whose parts they are.

DEFE/TER, s. a challenger; a contester; one who dares a person to make good a charge.

To DEFE/LE, v. a. [afilan, Sax.] to render a thing foul, unclean, or impure; to pollute.

To DEFE/LE, v. n. [defiler, Fr.] to march or separate in files, applied to an army.

DE/FILE, s. [defile, Fr.] a narrow pass, where few men can march abreast.

DEFFLEMENT, s. that which renders a thing foul or nasty; that which pollutes or corrupts the virtue of a person.

DEFFLER, s. one who pollutes the chastity of a person.

DEFINABLE, a. that may be defined; that may be ascertained.

To DEFINE, v. a. [definio, from finis, Lat.] to explain a thing or word by the enumeration of its properties or qualities, so as to distinguish it from every thing of the same kind.

DEFINER, s. a person who explains the nature of a thing or word by enumerating all its properties.

DEFINITE, a. exact, certain, limited, bounded. In Grammar, it is an article that has a precise determined signification; such as the article the in the English, le and la in French, &c., which fix and ascertain the noun they belong to, to some particular, as the king, le roi; whereas in quality, of king, de roi, the articles of and de mark nothing precise, and are therefore indefinite.

DEFINITION, s. [definitio, Lat.] in Logic and Rhetoric, an enumeration of all that enters into the meaning of a word; a description of what a word is used to signify; the process of fixing the meaning in which any word is to be used.

DEFINITIVE, a. [definitivus, Lat.] express; positive; decisive; free from ambiguity, doubt, or uncertainty.

DEFINITIVELY, ad. in a positive, express, or decisive manner.

DEFINITIVENESS, s. decisiveness; or a state free from ambiguity or doubt.

DEFLAGRABILITY, s. [deflagro, Lat.] the quality of taking fire and burning entirely away.

DEFLAGRABLE, a. having the quality of wasting away wholly in fire.

DEFLAGRATION, s. in Chemistry, the act of setting fire to a thing which will burn till it is entirely consumed.

To DEFLLECT, v. n. [de and flecto, Lat.] to turn aside from its due direction; to bend.

DEFLJECTION, s. the act of deviating or turning aside from its proper course, point, or direction.

DEFLUXURE, s. a bending downwards; the act or state of a thing turned aside.

DEFLORATION, s. [defloratus, Lat.] the act of violating the chastity of a virgin.

To DEFLORATE, v. a. [deflorator, Fr.] to violate a virgin. Figuratively, to take away the beauty or grace of a thing.

DEFLORER, s. a ravisher.

DEFLUOUS, a. [defluo, Lat.] that flows down; that falls off.

DEFLUX, DEFLUXION, s. the act of flowing down.

DEFOE, DANIEL, one of the most popular of English writers of works of fiction; and a man who, in the 17th century and beginning of the 18th, passed through a life chequered with the strangest vicissitudes, chiefly because of his maintaining principles which it was the fashion to disavow and to persecute. He was favoured more than once with the notice of royalty; and he was once, by the resolute effort of his numerous enemies, pilloried and imprisoned. His writings, which are very numerous, embrace a great variety of subjects. His political and polemical works are undeservedly unknown. Every one has read his Robinson Crusoe. His History of the Plague, and narratives of the adventures of characters of no great beauty or morality, are also well known, and are wonderful for the verisimilitude which every where characterizes them. He died in 1731, aged 70 years.

DEFOEDATION, s. [defoedus, low Lat.] the act of rendering foul and filthy.

DEFORCEMENT, s. in Law, the act of withholding land or tenements from the right owner.

To DEFORM, v. a. [de and forma, Lat.] to disfigure, or spoil the beauty or shape of any thing; to make disagreeable to the sight.

DEFORMATION, s. [deformatio, Lat.] the act of spoiling the shape or beauty of a thing, or making it disagreeable to the sight.

DEFORMED, a. void of symmetry of parts, straightness of shape, or pleasantness of appearance; disfigured; crooked.

DEFORMEDLY, ad. in an ugly manner.

DEFORMITY, s. [deformatas, Lat.] the appearance of any thing which has lost its beauty, gracefulness, or regularity; ridiculousness. Figuratively, deviation from the standard of moral perfection and obedience.

DEFORESOR, s. [forceur, Fr.] in Law, one that overcomes and casts out by force.

To DEFAUD, v. a. [defraudo, from fraus, Lat.] to deprive a person of his property by some false appearance, fraud, or trick.

DEFAUDATION, s. privation by fraud.

DEFAUDER, s. a person who deprives another of what belongs to him, by some trick, or false appearance.

To DEFRAUD, v. a. [defrajer, Fr.] to pay or discharge expenses.

DEFRAUDER, s. one that discharges expenses.

DEFRAIMENT, s. the payment of expenses.

DEFT, a. [defit, Sax.] neat; handsome; spruce; proper; dexterous; sprightly; nimble; active.

DEFTLY, ad. in a skilful manner. Obsolete.

DEFUNCT, a. [defuncto, Lat.] dead; expired.

DEFUNCT, s. one who is dead.

To DEFEY, v. a. [defier, Fr.] to challenge to fight; to treat with contempt.

DEFEYER, s. a challenger; one who invites to fight; more properly defier.

DEGENERACY, s. [de and genus, Lat.] the acting unworthily of one's ancestors. Figuratively, the leaving of a moral conduct for an immoral one; meanness.

To DEGENERATE, v. n. to fall from the reputation or virtues of one's ancestors; to sink from a noble to a base state. To grow wild or base, applied to vegetables.

DEGENERATE, a. unlike one's ancestors in virtues; unworthy; corrupted; having lost its value.

DEGENERATENESS, s. corruption; depravity.

DEGENERATION, s. a deviation from the virtues of one's ancestors; a sinking from a state of excellence to one of less worth.

DEGENEROUSLY, ad. basely; meanly.

To DEGLUTINATE, v. a. [degluer, Fr.] to unglue or soften.

DEGLUTINATION, s. the act of ungluing or softening.

DEGLUTITION, s. [deglutio, Lat.] the act or power of swallowing.

DEGRADATION, s. [Fr.] the act of depriving a man of any office, employ, or dignity. Figuratively, deprivation, or a change from a more perfect and honourable to a low and mean state. In Painting, the lessening and confusing the figures in a picture or landscape, as they would appear to the eye at a supposed distance.

To DEGRADE, v. a. [degrader, Fr.] to deprive a person of any office or dignity; to lessen the value of a thing.

DEGRAVATION, s. [degravatus, Lat.] the act of making heavy.

DEGRE'E, s. [degré, Fr.] quality, rank, condition, or dignity; state or condition of a thing, which may be either heightened or lowered, increased or diminished; measure; proportion; or quantity. In Arithmetic, a degree consists of three places of figures, comprehending units, tens, and hundreds; so 365 is a degree. In Geometry, the 360th part of the circumference of a circle. In Chemistry, a greater or less intenseness of heat. In Canon Law, an interval of kinship, from whence nearness or remoteness of blood are computed. In Music, the little intervals which compose the concords. In the university, a dignity or title conferred on persons who are of a certain standing, and have performed the exercises required by the statutes, which entitles them to certain privileges, precedence, &c.

BY DEGREES, ad. gradually; by little and little.

DEGUSTATION, s. [degustatio, Lat.] a tasting.

To DEHORT, v. a. [de and horto, Lat.] to dissuade; to advise to the contrary.

DEHORTATION, s. a dissuasion; arguments used to keep a person from assenting to any doctrine, or committing any action.

DEHORTER, s. a dissuader.

DEICIDE, s. [deus and caedo, Lat.] the crime of murdering a deity or god, applied only to the death of our blessed Saviour.

To DEJECT, v. a. [dejecto, Lat.] to cast down, or render sorrowful or melancholy.

DEJECTED, part. or a. cast down; afflicted with some disappointment; mournful; melancholy.

DEJECTEDLY, ad. in a dull, sorrowful, or mournful manner.

DEJECTEDNESS, s. the state of a person who is grieved and cast down on account of some great loss or disappointment.

DEJECTION, s. a lowness of spirits; affliction; loss, or an impaired state. Synon. Dejection is commonly caused by great affliction, and is too often a state of despair. Melancholy is generally the effect of constitution, its cloudy ideas overpower and banish all that are cheerful. Low-spiritedness is involuntary, and often proceeds from a weakness of nerves; excess of joy, fatigue, bad digestion, will occasion it. Dulness, on the contrary, is voluntary, it arises frequently from discontent, disappointment, and from any other circumstance that may displease the mind.

DEIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of ascribing divine honours to a person, and worshipping him as a god.

DEIFORM, a. [deus and forma, Lat.] of a godlike form.

TO DEIFY, v. a. [deifier, Fr.] to make a god; to adore as a god; to rank among the deities. Figuratively, to praise too much; to extol a person unbecomingly mortal.

TO DEIGN, (dein) v. n. [daigner, Fr.] to condescend; to vouchsafe;—v. a. to grant a favour; to permit.

DEIGNING, (deining) s. a condescension; permission; granting a favour.

TO DEINTEGRATE, v. a. [de and integer, Lat.] to take from the whole; to spoil; to diminish.

DEISM, s. [deisme, Fr.] the doctrine or opinion of those who profess to believe the existence of a God, but deny his having ever given, or the probability of his ever giving, a revelation.

DEIST, s. [deiste, Fr.] a person who believes the existence of a God, but denies all revelation in general.

DEISTICAL, a. belonging to the opinions of deists.

DEITY, s. [deitas, Lat.] Divinity; the nature and essence of God; an idol or supposed divinity; a heathen god.

DELACERATION, s. [delacero, Lat.] a tearing in pieces.

DELACHRYMATION, s. [delachrymatio, Lat.] a falling down of the humours; the wateriness of the eye; or a weeping much.

DELACTATION, s. [de and lac, Lat.] a weaning from the breast.

DELA'MBRE, JEAN BAPTISTE JOSEPH, an eminent French astronomer and mathematician, of the last and present centuries. Although living during the most disastrous and troubled period of the history of his country, he pursued without interruption his scientific labours. He measured the arc from Dunkirk to Barcelona, for the purpose of obtaining a standard measure of length; made tables of the superior planets, which were used in correcting the Nautical Almanack; and contributed many other papers and works to the science of Astronomy, particularly a History of Astronomy, which is very highly esteemed. He died in 1822, aged 73 years.

DELA'PSED, part. [delabor, Lat.] in Physic, bearing or falling down.

DELATION, s. the act of carrying or conveying. An accusation, charge, impeachment, or information.

DELATOR, s. [Lat.] an accuser or informer.

DELAWARE, the name of a river and of a bay in the United States, N. America. The river rises in the Catskill Mountains, in the State of New York, serves for some miles as the boundary between that State and Pennsylvania, and afterwards between the States of New Jersey and Delaware, flowing after a course of above 300 miles into Delaware Bay. It is navigable, but not for large vessels through the whole distance, to Trenton Falls, about 70 miles from its mouth. The bay is 65 miles long, 18 miles broad at its mouth, and 30 miles in the middle. For 70 miles it has no safe natural harbour, and therefore a magnificent work, called the Delaware Breakwater, has been erected by the government of the States.

DELAWARE, one of the United States, N. America, named after the river, on the W. bank of which it lies, is bounded by Pennsylvania on the N. and by Maryland on the S. and W.; whilst the river and bay of the same name divide it from New Jersey. It is 92 miles long, and 23 broad, and is divided into 3 counties. In the N. part it is moderately hilly. It is watered by very small streams, of which Brandy-wine Creek is the most considerable. Wheat and other grain is grown plentifully for export trade. Its pastures also are good, and it exports various fruits, silk, timber, &c. Wilmington is its largest place of trade. It has one college only, and four banks. Dover is the seat of government. Its population is 78,085, of which 2905 are slaves.

TO DELAY, v. a. [delayar, Fr.] to defer or put off the doing of a thing till another time; to hinder; to frustrate.—r. n. to stop; to cease from action.

DELA'Y, s. the act of deferring or putting off the performance of an act to some other time. Figuratively, a stay; a stop.

DELA'YER, s. one who defers the doing a thing; a putter off.

DELE'CTABLE, a. [delecto, Lat.] affording pleasure or delight to the senses.

DELE'CTABLENESS, s. pleasantness.

DELE'CTABLY, ad. in such a manner as to afford pleasure; delightfully.

DELECTION, s. pleasure; delight.

TO DELEGATE, v. a. [de and lego, Lat.] to send away; to intrust; to communicate authority. In Law, to appoint judges to determine a particular cause.

DELEGATE, s. any person authorized to act for another. In Law, applied to persons appointed by the king's commission to sit on an appeal to him in the court of Chancery.

DELEGATE, a. deputed or authorized to judge or transact business for another.

DELEGATION, s. the act of appointing; the assignment of a debt to another. In Law, a commission to a judge to determine some cause, which would not otherwise be brought before him.

DELENFICIAL, a. [delemnificus, Lat.] having virtue to assuage or ease pain.

TO DELETE, v. a. [deleo, Lat.] to blot out.

DELETE'RIOUS, a. [deleterius, Lat.] noxious; deadly; fatal; applied, by naturalists, to such things as are of a pernicious nature.

DELETERY, a. destructive; deadly; poisonous.

DELETION, s. the act of rasing or blotting out; a destruction.

DELF, DELFE, s. [delvean, Sax.] a mine; a quarry; or large cavity formed by digging. Glazed earthenware, so called from the place where it is made.

DELFT, a town of Holland, seated on a canal called the Schie. It was formerly celebrated for the manufacture of a fine kind of earthenware, called from it, Delft-ware. It has still some woolen and other manufactures. It is 30 miles from Amsterdam. Its population is about 20,000. Lat. 52. 0. N. Long. 4. 22. E.

DELHI, a province in the north of Hindustan, lying immediately against the Himalah Mountains, and bounded by the Punjab, Lahore, Ajmere, Agra, and Oude. It is about 165 miles in length, and 140 in breadth. There are other hills within its boundaries, beside those of the Himalah chain. The Ganges, the Jumna, and other rivers of note flow through it. The valleys and lowlands are fertile, and produce all manner of grain, with sugar. The climate of this province is very mild and agreeable; but the devastating wars to which it has so long been subject, have effectually prevented the advantages which nature had offered. Delhi, its capital, was formerly the chief city of the Mogul empire, and is seated on the Jumna. It was once exceedingly rich, extensive, and populous, but has lost most of its splendour. The former residence of the Moguls yet remains, a sumptuous building; other relics of its former glory abound. The city has yet some trade, being situated so as to be the emporium for the traffic between the northerly provinces and the south. It is about 1000 miles from Calcutta. Its population is about a quarter of a million yet. Lat. 28. 43. N. Long. 77. 49. E. The population of the province is estimated at about 3,000,000.

DELIBATION, s. [delibatio, from libo, Lat.] an essay; a taste.

TO DELI'BERATE, v. n. [delibero, Lat.] to weigh in the mind; to ponder upon. Figuratively, to hesitate.

DELI'BERATE, a. circumspect; discreet; wary; considering the nature of a thing before the making a choice. Figuratively, slow; tedious.

DELI'BERATELY, ad. in a circumspect, wary, or discreet manner.

DELI'BERATENESS, s. circumspection; coolness; caution.

DELIBERATION, s. the act of considering things before an undertaking or making choice.

DELI'BERATIVE, a. relating to consideration, or premeditation; with thought or caution.

DELI'CACY, s. [delicacies, Fr.] daintiness, or taste shown in eating; any thing which affects the senses with great pleasure; elegant softness of form; nicety, or minute accuracy; genteel neatness in dress; politeness of behaviour; indulgence, which produces weakness; tenderness; weakness of constitution; a disposition which is shocked with any excess.

DELICATE, a. [delicatus, Fr.] fine, or consisting of minute parts; beautiful, or pleasing to the eye; nice, or pleasing to the taste; dainty, or nice in the choice of food; choice; select; polite, or rigorously observant of the maxims of good breeding; soft, effeminate, or unable to bear hardships; pure; free from foulness; clear.

DELICATELY, ad. in a beautiful manner; finely, opposed to coarsely; daintily; luxuriously; choicely; politely; effeminately.

DELICATENESS, s. softness; effeminacy; too great an affectation of elegance.

DELICATES, s. niceties, rarities, applied to food.

DELICIOUS, (delishious) a. [delicieux, Fr.] giving exquisite pleasure to the senses, or to the mind.

DELICIOUSLY, (delishiously) ad. in an elegant or luxurious manner, applied to food or dress: in such a manner as to convey a rapturous pleasure.

DELICIOUSNESS, (delishiousness) s. the quality of affording exquisite pleasure to the senses or to the mind.

DELIGATION, s. [deligatio, Lat.] the confining the parts of a thing together by binding.

DELIGHT, (delit) v. [delecto, Lat.] that which affords an agreeable pleasure or satisfaction to the mind or the senses.

To DELIGHT, (delit) v. a. [delecto, Lat.] to take pleasure in the frequent repetition or enjoyment of a thing; to satisfy.—v. n. to be pleased, satisfied, or contented.

DELIGHTFUL, (delitful) a. that affords great pleasure to the mind.

DELIGHTFULLY, (delitfully) ad. in such a manner as to charm, to afford pleasure, satisfaction, and content.

DELIGHTFULNESS, (delitfulness) s. pleasure, satisfaction, gratification, arising from the frequent repetition, sight, or enjoyment of a thing.

DELIGHTSOME, (delitsome) a. affording great pleasure.

DELIGHTSOMELY, ad. pleasantly.

DELIGHTSOMENESS, (delitsomeness) s. the quality of affecting with great pleasure.

To DELINEATE, v. a. [delineo, Lat.] to draw the first sketch; to design; to paint a resemblance. Figuratively, to describe in a lively and accurate manner.

DELINEATION, s. [delineatio, Lat.] the first draught of a thing. Figuratively, a description.

DELINEMENT, s. [delirio, Lat.] a mitigating or assuaging.

DELINQUENCY, s. [delinquo, Lat.] a failure, or the omission of a duty; a thing done wilfully against any known law.

DELINQUENT, s. one who has committed some crime or fault, an offender.

To DELINQUATE, v. n. [delinquo, Lat.] to melt; to be dissolved. DELINQUATION, s. [delinquo, Lat.] the act of melting or dissolving; a solution, or the state of a thing melted.

DELIQUESCENCE, s. in Chemistry, is a term used to signify the melting of salts by means of the water which they absorb from the atmosphere.

DELQUUM, s. [Lat.] in Chemistry, the state of any salt when it has become liquid by absorbing moisture from the atmosphere.

DELIRAMENT, s. [delirio, Lat.] a dotting or foolish fancy.

DELIRATION, s. a dotage; folly; madness.

DELIRIOUS, a. lightheaded; raving from the violence of some disorder. Figuratively, dotting.

DELIRIUM, s. [Lat.] in Physic, a kind of madness occurring generally in fevers. Delirium tremens, is a kind of delirium accompanied by a sort of universal palsy, usually brought on by excessive drinking, and often fatal.

DELITIGATION, s. [delitigo, Lat.] a striving; a contending; a chiding.

To DELIVER, v. n. [delivro, Fr.] to give a person a thing which was given for that purpose by another. Joined with into, to surrender or give up. Joined to from, to free from any danger or calamity. To pronounce, to relate, applied to discourse or reading. To bring into the world, used with of.—v. a. to surrender, to put into a person's hands, or leave to his discretion. To deliver down, or over, to transmit or convey any transaction by means of writing. To deliver up, to surrender; to give up, or expose.

DELIVERANCE, s. [delivrance, Fr.] the act of giving or surrendering a thing to another; the act of freeing a person from captivity, imprisonment, danger, or distress; the act or manner of pronouncing or speaking; the act of bringing children into the world.

DELIVERER, s. one who gives a thing into the hands of another, or conveys it to the place ordered; one who frees another from danger, distress, captivity, or imprisonment; one who pronounces a set speech.

DELIVERY, s. the act of giving or surrendering a thing to another; a release from danger, bondage, imprisonment, or distress; the bringing forth a child; pronunciation, or manner of speaking.

DELI, s. [del, Belg.] a valley.

DELOS, the ancient name of an island in the Ægean Sea, consecrated to Apollo, who was said to have been born there. The temple on it was used as the treasury of the Grecian confederation against the Persians.

DELPHI, in ancient Greece, a town within the borders of Phocis, but having peculiar privileges of its own, as being sacred to Apollo. Here was the oracle that enjoyed such celebrity amongst all the Grecian states and their neighbours.

DELPHINUS, the Dolphin, in Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

DELTA, in Physical Geography, the name given to the tract of alluvium occurring at the mouths of large rivers, which is usually of a triangular form, like the Greek letter  $\Delta$ . In Ancient Geography it is the name of this tract at the mouth of the Nile in Egypt.

DELTOIDE, a. [delta and eidos, Gr.] in Anatomy, applied to a particular bone, and a muscle, which are of a triangular form.

DELUO, JOHN ANDREW, a French geologist of the last century. He was a man of great information, and of a philosophic spirit, but there were but few facts of geology accurately known when he speculated and wrote, and the idea of the science had not been even approximately stated. He wrote on many other subjects besides geology, and died in 1817, aged 90 years.

DELU/DABLE, a. liable to be deceived, imposed on, or drawn aside.

To DELU/DE, v. a. [deludo, Lat.] to beguile; to deceive or seduce by false pretences. Figuratively, to disappoint.

DELU/DER, s. one who deceives, imposes on, beguiles, or seduces another by false appearances or pretences.

To DELVE, v. a. [delvan, Sax.] to dig, or open the ground with a spade. Figuratively, to sound one's opinion; to fathom; to get to the bottom of an affair.

DELVE, s. a ditch; a pit; a pitfall; a den; a cave. "Shady delve," Spencer.

DELYER, s. a digger, or one who opens the ground with a spade, or pick-axe, &c.

DELUGE, s. [deluge, Fr.] a flood or inundation of water. Particularly applied to that inundation described in the Book of Genesis, as happening in the early age of the world, and which overwhelmed the world that then was; from which Noah and his family alone, by attending to the directions of God, were preserved. It was formerly believed that this flood extended over the whole surface of the earth; but this is not only a physical impossibility, but is not stated in the sacred narrative. This flood used, also, to be referred to by all geological speculators, as the cause of all the phenomena which are disclosed in the various strata composing the crust of the earth: advancing science has demonstrated, that even if this inundation could have been universal, it could not have been the cause of these varied and wonderful phenomena. Figuratively, any sudden and irresistible calamity; any corruption, or deprivation, which spreads far and quickly.

To DELUGE, v. a. to drown or lay entirely under water; to overflow with water. Figuratively, to overwhelm with any great and increasing calamity.

DELUSION, s. [deludio, Lat.] the act of imposing on a person by some false appearance. Figuratively, a false appearance or illusion, which leads a person into an error or mistake.

DELUSIVE, a. capable of deceiving or imposing upon.

DELUSORY, a. apt to deceive.

DEMAGOGUE, (denagogy) s. [demas and ago, Gr.] the ring-leader or head of a faction, or tumult of the common people.

DEMAND, s. [demande, Fr.] the asking of a thing with authority; claim; inquiry after, in order to buy. In Law, the asking of what is due. Demand and supply, the title given by political economists to that law which obtains in all trading and commercial affairs, regulating the direction taken by labour, the particular employment of capital, and the particular things brought into the market. Yet this law, that the demand creates the supply, is not absolute, the very reverse happening in many well-known instances; as for example, the reduction of the postage, and of travelling fares, which have multiplied incredibly the numbers of letters and of travellers.

To DEMAND, v. a. [demande, Fr.] to claim; to ask for with authority; to ask or question. In Law, to prosecute in a real action.

DEMANDABLE, a. that may be claimed as a due, or asked for with authority.

DEMANDANT, s. in Law, the plaintiff in a real action.

DEMANDER, s. one who claims a thing; one who asks with authority; one who asks for a thing in order to purchase it; one who asks for a debt.

To DEMEAN, (démén) v. a. [démener, Fr.] to behave. Figuratively, to lessen, debase, or undervalue; to do any thing below one's character or rank.

DEMEANOUR, (déménour) s. [démener, Fr.] behaviour; carriage; the manner of acting.

DEMENTATION, s. [déméntation, Fr.] madness, or losing one's reason.

DEMERARA, one of the divisions of the colony of British Guiana in S. America (which see). It is united in government with Essequibo. Sugar, rum, cotton, and coffee are its chief products. Population, about 100,000.

DEMERIT, s. [démérite, Fr.] the want of merit; behaviour deserving blame or punishment. Anciently the same as merit.

To DEMERIT, v. a. [démériter, Fr.] to act contrary to one's duty, and thereby deserve both blame and disgrace.

DEMERSED, (démersé) Lat. plunged; drowned. DEMERSION, s. the act of plunging under the water, or drowning. In Chemistry, the putting any thing into a dissolving water or menstruum.

DEMESNE, s. land adjoining to a mansion, kept in the lord's own hand; an estate in land.

DEMETE, in Grecian Mythology, the goddess usually known by the name of Ceres.

DEMETRIUS, the name of several parties who are prominent in Grecian history after the conquests of Alexander of Macedon. The most eminent, named Polioretos, seized on the throne of Macedon, expelling the family of Cassander. He was engaged in a continual series of battles, in some of which, as that at Ipsus, he was on the defeated side. He died in 283 B. C. A grandson of Polioretos, simply named Demetrius II., ruled over Macedon afterwards, and died in 232 B. C. Two of the successors of Seleucus, the Macedonian monarch of Syria, bore in addition to this name, the epithets Soter and Nicator, respectively. The former died in 150 B. C., the latter in 127 B. C. During the march of Polioretos from conquest to conquest, another Demetrius, surnamed Phalareus, held the supreme power in Athens, as the representative of Cassander, the Macedonian king. He was driven from his post by the conqueror, and Athens was for a short time again an independent state. He died in the same year as the victor did, 283 B. C.

DEMI, [Fr.] an inseparable particle; half; one part of a thing which is divided equally in two.

DEMI-BASTION, s. in Fortification, that which has only one face and one flank.

DEMI-CANNON, s. in Gunnery, a cannon which carries a ball of thirty pounds weight; the diameter of its bore is 6 inches 2-8ths.

DEMI-CULVERIN, s. in Gunnery, is a lesser sort of culverin than the common, of which there are three kinds; that of the lowest size is a gun 41 inches diameter, in the bore, and 10 feet long, carrying a ball 4 inches diameter and 9 pounds weight; the ordinary one is a gun 4½ inches diameter in the bore, and 10 feet long, carrying a ball 4½ inches diameter, and 10 pounds 11 ounces weight; and that of the elder sort, 4½ inches diameter in the bore, and 40½ feet in length, carrying a ball 4½ inches diameter, and 12 pounds 11 ounces in weight.

DEMI-GOD, s. among the ancient pagans, was one who was not a god by birth, but who, by his heroic exploits, was raised to that dignity.

DEMISE, (démise) s. [Fr.] death; decease.

To DEMISE, (démise) v. a. [démétre, Fr.] to leave, bequeath, or dispose of by will.

DEMISSION, s. [demitto, Lat.] degradation; diminution of dignity; lessening the value of a thing by some mean action.

To DEMIT, v. a. [demitto, Lat.] to depress; to let fall.

DEMI-WOLF, s. a mongrel dog between a dog and a wolf.

DEMOCRACY, s. [demos and kratos, Gr.] a form of government wherein the supreme power is lodged in the people. A pure democracy has hardly yet been seen in the world. In most of the states so called, there have been large classes of men either actually slaves, or else not politically free.

DEMOCRATICAL, a. belonging to that sort of government wherein the supreme power is lodged in the people.

DEMOCRITUS, a philosopher of ancient Greece, commonly known as the laughing philosopher; but this satirical reputation rests solely on tradition. Abdera in Thrace was his birthplace, and he travelled far, and studied men and things in various lands. On his return he unfolded his views by teaching and by writing. He was a thorough materialist and necessitarian, and in consequence, in philosophy at least, an atheist. His theory of the atomic construction of all things, is a most wonderful instance of a merely metaphysical theory approximating to an established physical theory introduced above 2000 years after it. His astronomical speculations respecting the shadows on the moon's disc, the milky way, and the force of gravity, were most wonderfully correct. He died in about 360 B. C., aged about 100 years.

DEMOIVRE, ABRAHAM, a mathematician of the earlier half of the last century, who though by birth a Frenchman, resided in this country. The calculation of probabilities was the branch of mathematical science he especially cultivated, and that particularly in its practical bearing on annuities. He died in 1754, aged 87 years.

To DEMOLISH, v. a. [démolir, Lat.] to pull down, raze, or destroy.

DEMOLISHER, s. one who destroys or pulls down.

DEMOLITION, s. the act of pulling down or destroying; destruction.

DEMON, s. [dæmon, Lat. daimon, Gr.] a name the ancients gave to certain spirits, who, they imagined, had the power of doing good or evil to mankind; they likewise called them Gēnii (which see).

DEMONIAC, DEMONICAL, a. belonging to, or possessed by, a demon.

DEMONIAC, s. according to a Jewish belief, acquired during the captivity at Babylon, which continued, in form, for many ages in the Christian church, a person possessed by a demon. Demoniacs were either lunatics, or persons subject to epilepsy, or, generally, persons suffering either in body or mind from causes not understood at the time. Latterly, they were almost all impostors, who were kept to play the part of demoniacs, in order to give the ecclesiastics the opportunity of securing influence amongst the people, by pretending to work miracles.

DEMONIAN, a. thoroughly evil; of the nature of demons.

DEMONO CRACY, s. [daimon and kratos, Gr.] the power of demons.

DEMONOLATRY, s. [daimon and latreia, Gr.] the worship of demons.

DEMONOLOGY, s. [daimon and logos, Gr.] a discourse on the nature and practices of evil spirits.

DEMONSTRABLE, a. [demonstro, Lat.] that may admit of demonstration, or be proved beyond a contradiction.

DEMONSTRABLY, ad. evidently; beyond possibility of contradiction.

To DEMONSTRATE, v. a. to prove so as to convince the most prejudiced, and render in the highest manner certain.

DEMONSTRATION, s. the proof of the truth of a proposition, founded on self-evident principles. In Politics, the display of the numerical strength of a party, for the purpose of availing an opposing party, or securing the adoption of certain measures.

DEMONSTRATIVE, a. convincing; undeniable; self-evident.

DEMONSTRATIVELY, ad. in such a clear and evident manner as to demand assent.

DEMONSTRATOR, s. one who proves a thing by demonstration; one who explains, teaches, or renders a thing plain to the meanest capacity; a lecturer.

DEMONSTRATORY, a. having the power of demonstration.

DEMOSTHENES, the orator of Athens. He lived at that age of his country's history, when he was able but to delay her fall. He had early devoted himself to the study of rhetoric and elocution. Against physical impediments he laboured triumphantly. He wielded at will the most critical auditory ever addressed, and roused them to action for their country's salvation. His life is comprised in his speeches. The public situations he filled, were given him because of his resistless eloquence. One slur on his character is recorded, his flight from the defeat of Chæroneæ without his shield. His first greatest effort of oratory was the Speech on the Crown, in which he utterly defeated his great rival Æschines. Subsequently, a higher mark was set before him, and he delivered speech after speech against Philip of Macedon, unmasking his designs and calling on his countrymen to rise and save Greece. Once and again, after that Philip was assassinated, and when Alexander was dead, he sought to organize a force that should restore Freedom to her native land, and to infuse energy and fire into the band he had collected by his mighty words. All was vain, and fleeing his own city, he took refuge in a temple on the island of Calauria, where he poisoned himself, in 322 B. C. Many of his orations are preserved—all his greatest;—a study for such as would guide men;—elaborate, clear, manful, utterly devoid of all tinsel ornament, and all empty declamation. They are not only an ever-enduring monument of the greatness, almost superhuman, of the orator, but also of the habits and tastes of that strange people he so deeply understood, and so powerfully affected.

DEMU'LCENT, a. [demulceo, Lat.] in Physic, softening, mollifying.

To DEMU'R, v. n. [demoer, Lat.] to delay a process in law by doubts and objections; to pause through uncertainty; to hesitate; to doubt; to deliberate; to suspend one's assent, choice, or judgment.—v. a. to doubt, or question the truth of a proposition or assertion.

DEMU'R, s. doubt, arising from uncertainty, or want of sufficient proof; hesitation; suspense of judgment, choice, or opinion.

DEMU'RE, a. [de mæurs, Fr.] behaving in a precise, grave, or affected manner.

To DEMU'RE, v. n. to look precisely; to behave with affected modesty.

DEMU'RE, ad. in an affected, grave, and modest manner; solemnly. "Hark, how the drums demurely wake the sleepers," Shak.

DEMU'RENESS, s. affected modesty or gravity; preciseness.

DEMU'RRAGE, s. [demeurer, Fr.] in Commerce, an allowance made to masters of ships, for their stay in a port beyond the time appointed.

DEMU'RRER, s. in Law, a kind of pause made in an action, for a court to take time to consider of some point of difficulty.

DEMY', s. [demi, Fr.] the title of a person on the foundation of Magdalen College, Oxford, who does not enjoy either the privileges or the salary of a fellow, and is of the same import as a scholar at colleges. Applied likewise to signify a large-sized paper.

DEN, s. [Sax.] a cavern, or hollow place under ground; the cave of a wild beast.

DENA'RUS, [Lat.] a silver coin of Rome, commonly called a penny, which varied in its value from six-pence to eight-pence halfpenny. In the time of the New Testament, it was worth about seven-pence halfpenny.

DENAY', s. denial; refusal.

DENBIGH, (Denby) Denbighshire. It is well built and populous, situated on the summit of a rock, sloping on every side but one, on a branch of the river Clwydd. It has a considerable manufacture of gloves and shoes, which are sent to London for exportation. It is 218 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 3405.

DENBIGHSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, lying on the Irish Sea, and bounded by Flintshire, Cheshire, Shropshire, Merionethshire, Montgomeryshire, and Caernarvonshire. It is 39 miles in length, and about 20 miles in breadth, and is divided into 12 hundreds. In some parts it is very hilly, some elevations exceeding 1000 feet, and a few even 1500. Its rivers are the Clwydd, Elway, Dee, and Conway. Its chief mineral wealth consists of its coal beds, which are abundant and productive. Lead is found in some parts. Limestone, millstone-grit, and slate also occur, and are quarried. The soil is various, and the Vale of Clwydd is remarkably pleasant and fertile. It produces corn, cheese, and cattle. There are many relics of antiquity, both British and Saxon, as well as Roman. Denbigh is its chief town. Pop. 88,806. It returns three members to parliament.

DENDERA, a town of Egypt, where were discovered many interesting antiquities, and in particular some paintings, which the French savans pronounced to be astronomical paintings, and to indicate actual observations of the heavens many thousands of years anterior to the period usually referred to as that of the introduction of the human race to this world. The discovery of the alphabet of the hieroglyphics dissipated all those agreeable triumphs of infidelity. The date of these zodiacs is known, and it is known that they are mere astrological schemes, and not astronomical records at all.

DENDROLOGY, s. [dendron and logos, Gr.] a discourse, or natural history of trees.

DENDROMETER, s. [dendron and metreo, Gr.] the name of an instrument for measuring trees.

DENHAM, DIXON, best known as Major Denham, the companion of Captain Clapperton in the exploring expedition to the interior of Africa. He visited Bournou, and the country round Lake Tchad, alone, and brought home some interesting and novel facts respecting those barbarous nations. He was promoted for his services, and received an appointment at Sierra Leone, where he died in 1825, aged 42 years.

DENI'ABLE, a. that may be refused to be granted when asked, or to be believed when proposed.

DENI'AL, s. the refusing to give or believe; the persisting in one's innocence, opposed to the confession of guilt; abjuration, or renouncing.

DENI'ER, s. one who refuses to grant a thing requested, or to assent to a truth proposed for his assent; one who will not acknowledge or own.

DENIE'R, (deneër) s. a French coin, the twelfth part of a sou.

To DENIGRATE, v. a. [denigro, Lat.] to make black, or to blacken.

DENIGRATION, s. the act of making a thing black.

DENIS, ST., a town of the department of Seine, France. It is named after a famous saint and martyr of the early French Christians, and is famous as the burial-place of many monarchs and great men of France. The Abbey church is a fine building, though much less splendid than it was before the Revolution. The town has now the more valuable name of a good manufacturing and trading place. It is 5 miles from Paris. Population, above 10,000.

DENIZATION, s. the act of enfranchising a foreigner, by which means he enjoys many of the privileges of a natural subject.

DENIZEN, DENISON, s. [denasaddyn, Brit.] in Law, an alien enfranchised by the king's letters patent; which enables him in several respects to act as a subject, viz. to purchase and possess lands, and enjoy any office or dignity; yet not so fully as by naturalization, which enables a man to inherit by descent, which a denizen cannot do. If a denizen purchase lands, his issue born afterwards may inherit them, but those he had before shall not. Also, the son of a free citizen of any of the parliamentary towns, before the passing of the Reform Bill.

To DEN'IZEN, v. a. to enfranchise; to make free. Figuratively, to protect, or encourage.

DENMARK, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the W. by the ocean, on the N. and E. by the Baltic Sea, and on the S. by Germany and the Baltic. Denmark, properly so called, consists of Jutland and the island of Zealand and Funen, with the little isles about them; but the king of Denmark's dominions contain the kingdom of Norway, and the duchies of Holstein, Lauenburg, and Sleswick in Germany, besides Iceland, and the other Danish settlements abroad. The country is generally flat, but there is a range of high land running along the peninsula, in which coals and some kinds of building-stone are found. There is no large river in Denmark, but numerous lakes and channels of the sea, by which it is intersected. In the summer the heat is great, and the days are long; but the winter continues seven or eight months. The commodities are corn, pulse, horses, and large beeves, together with the produce of their manufactures and fisheries. The religion of the state is Lutheran, but others are tolerated. Its government is absolute monarchy. Its population is under 3,000,000. Copenhagen is the capital.

DENNIS, JOHN, an English dramatic writer of what is called the Augustan age of the literature of this country. He very appropriately for his disposition wrote critical essays also, and contrived by various means to quarrel with every one. In literary history he has ever ranked as one of the chief wranglers. He died in very needy circumstances, in 1734, aged 77 years.

DENOMINABLE, a. [denomino, Lat.] that may be named or denoted.

To DENOMINATE, v. a. to name; to give a name to.

DENOMINATION, s. a name given to a thing, pointing out some peculiar qualities belonging to it.

DENOMINATIVE, a. that gives a name; that confers a distinct appellation.

DENOMINATOR, s. the person or thing which affixes a particular appellation to a thing. In Fractions, the number usually written below the line, showing the number of parts which any integer is supposed to be divided into; thus, in  $\frac{5}{8}$ , the denominator, shows, that the integer is divided into 8 parts; and 6, the numerator, that you take 6 of those eight parts.

DENON, DOMINIQUE V., a French savant who accompanied the French army to Egypt, and has become identified with that wonderful branch of antiquarian study, which the researchers into the temples and tombs of that country have established. He had held office in the old regime, but he was much honoured by Napoleon, whose cause he thoroughly espoused. He died in 1825, aged 78 years.

DENOTATION, s. [denotatio, Lat.] the act of ascertaining that a particular thing is to be signified or understood by a certain sign, or that a thing belongs to a particular person.

To DENOTE, v. a. [denoto, Lat.] to mark; to be a sign of; to imply, signify, or betoken; to show by signs; as a quick pulse denotes fever.

To DENOUNCE, v. a. [denoncor, Fr.] to threaten by proclamation, or some external sign. Figuratively, in Law, to inform, to give information against.

DENOUNCEMENT, s. the act of proclaiming any threat, or future and impending evil.

DENOUNCER, s. one who declares some menace, or impending calamity or punishment.

DENSE, a. [densus, Lat.] close; compact; thick; having few or very small pores between its particles.

DENSITY, s. [densitas, Lat.] thickness; solidity; compactness; the closeness, near approach, or adhesion of the parts of a body.

DENT, s. [dent, Fr.] a mark made in the surface of a thing by thrusting the parts inwards.

DENTAL, a. [dens, Lat.] belonging or relating to the teeth. In Grammar, applied to those letters which are pronounced principally by means of the teeth. In Natural History, a small shell-fish.

DENTELLATED, a. in Botany, notched, jagged, formed like the teeth of a saw on the edges.

DENTE/LLI, s. [Ital.] in Architecture, the same as modillions.

DENTICULATED, part. [dens, Lat.] set with small teeth.

DENTICULATION, s. in Natural History, being set with small teeth; notched or jagged.

DENTIFRICE, s. [dens and frico, Lat.] in Medicine, a powder to cleanse or fasten the teeth.

DENTION, s. in Physiology, the process of the development of the teeth.

To DENU/DATE, DENU/DE, v. a. [denudo, Lat.] to strip or make naked. Figuratively, to divest.

DENU/DA/TION, s. the act of stripping or making naked.

DENUNCIATION, s. [denunciatio, Lat.] the act of publishing any menace, or threatening any calamity or punishment.

DENUNCIATOR, s. [denunciator, Lat.] the person who proclaims any threat. In Law, one who lodges an information against another.

To DENEY, v. a. [denier, Fr.] to contradict an accusation; to refuse to grant a thing requested; to disown; to renounce.

To DEOBSTRU/CT, v. a. [de and obstru, Lat.] to clear from impediments; to free a passage from such things as stop it up.

DEOBSTRUENT, s. in Pharmacy, a medicine which, by its dissolving viscidities, opens the pores or passages of the human body.

DEODAND, s. [Deo and dandum, Lat.] a thing given or forfeited to God, in case any man comes to a violent death without the fault of a reasonable creature; as if a horse should strike his keeper, and so kill him, the horse is to be sold, and the price distributed to the poor. The deodand is now set by the jury at the coroner's inquest, and the sum goes to the sovereign.

To DEOPPLATE, v. a. [de and appto, Lat.] to clear a passage from any obstructions.

DEOPPLATION, s. the act of opening the passages, or clearing them from obstructions.

DEOPPLATIVE, a. having the power to clear the passages from obstructions.

DEOSCU/LATION, s. [deosculatio, Lat.] the act of kissing.

DEOXIDIZATION, s. in Chemistry, the operation by which one substance deprives another substance of its oxygen. It is called unbecoming a body, by the French chemists.

To DEOXIDIZE, v. a. in Chemistry, to deprive a body of oxygen, so as to render it incapable of burning.

To DEPAINT, v. a. [depindre, Fr.] to form the resemblance of a thing by colours or painting; to describe.

To DEPART, v. n. [departir, Fr.] to go away from a place; to revolt; to quit; to leave, or apostatize; to die.

DEPART, s. [depart, Fr.] the act of going away, by quitting a place or person. Figuratively, death. Among refiners, a method of separating metals blended together in one mass.

DEPARTER, s. a refiner; one who purifies metals.

DEPARTMENT, s. [departement, Fr.] a peculiar province or employment allotted to a particular person. The name given to the parts into which France was divided in the early part of the Revolution, and which has remained in force through all subsequent changes.

DEPARTURE, s. the act of going away from a person or place. In Navigation, the number of miles by which a ship is E. or W. of the point whence she set out at the end of one of her traverses. Figuratively, death; the act of forsaking, or quitting, used with from.

DEPA/SCENT, a. [depasceus, Lat.] feeding.

To DEPA/STURE, v. a. [depasceor, Lat.] to graze; to eat up and consume by feeding.

To DEPAUPERATE, v. a. [depaupero, Lat.] to make poor; to render ground barren.

DEFE/CTIBLE, a. [depecto, Lat.] tough; clammy; viscid; thick, or tenacious.

To DEPEND, v. n. [dependeo, Lat.] to proceed from; to be in a state of subjection; to be supported or maintained by another; to be yet undetermined; to confide in or rely on.

DEPEN/DECE, s. [dependance, Fr.] the state of a thing hanging from a supporter; connexion; the state of being subject to, or at the disposal of, another. Figuratively, reliance; trust; confidence; accident.

DEPENDENT, a. [dependant, Fr.] subject to, or in the power and disposal of, another.

DEPENDENT, s. one who is subject to, at the disposal of, or maintained by, another.

DEPEN/DER, s. one who confides in another.

DEPER/DITO, s. [deperdo, Lat.] loss; entire destruction.

To DEPHLE/GM, DEPHLE/GMATE, (deplem, deplegmate) v. a. [dephlegmo, low Lat.] to clear a fluid from its phlegm or water.

DEPHLEGMATION, (deplegmashon) s. in Chemistry, the act of separating the waters from chemical liquors.

To DEPICT, v. a. [depingo, Lat.] to paint, or represent the likeness of a thing in colours; to describe in words.

DEPLATORY, s. [de and pilus, Lat.] in Medicine, a plaster, or other application made use of to take away hair.

DEPHLOUS, a. without hair.

DEPLANTATION, s. [de and planta, Lat.] the act of taking plants up from the bed.

DEPLE/TION, s. [depleo, Lat.] in Physic, the act of emptying.

DEPLORABLE, a. [deploro, Lat.] lamentable; dismal; calamitous; hopeless; contemptible.

DEPLORABLENESS, s. the state of being an object of grief; misery, wretchedness.

DEPLORABLY, ad. lamentably; miserably; in such a manner as to occasion or demand sorrow.

DEPLORATION, s. the act of lamenting.

TO DEPLORE, v. a. [deploro, Lat.] to lament, mourn, or express sorrow for any calamity, loss, or misfortune.

DEPLOREK, s. one who laments or grieves for a loss or calamity.

DEPLUMATION, s. [de and pluma, Lat.] the act of plucking off feathers. In Surgery, the swelling of the eyelids, attended with a falling off of the hairs from the eyebrows.

TO DEPLUME, v. a. to strip of its feathers.

DEPONENT, s. [deponens, Lat.] in Law, one who gives his testimony in a court of justice; an evidence or witness. In Latin and Greek Grammar, such verbs as have an active signification, but have no forms save those of the passive and reflexive voices.

TO DEPOPULATE, v. a. [depopulo, Lat.] to unpeople; to lay waste a country.

DEPOPULATION, s. the act of unpeopling, or rendering a country waste by destroying the inhabitants.

DEPOPULATOR, s. one who kills or destroys the inhabitants of a country.

TO DEPORT, v. a. [deporter, Fr.] to carry away; to behave or demean oneself.

DEPORT, s. demeanour; behaviour; carriage.

DEPORTATION, s. [deporto, Lat.] transportation, whereby a person has some remote place assigned for his residence, with a prohibition of stirring from it on pain of death.

DEPORTMENT, s. [deportement, Fr.] conduct; demeanour.

TO DEPOSE, (depoze) v. a. [depono, Lat.] to lay down; to deprive a person of a post or dignity, — v. n. to give testimony in a court of justice.

TO DEPOSIT, (depozit) v. a. [deponitum, Lat.] to lay up or lodge in any place; to give as a pledge or security; to place at interest.

DEPOSITARY, (depozitury) s. [depono, Lat.] one who is intrusted with the charge or keeping of a thing.

DEPOSITE, (depozit) s. any thing committed to the care, charge, or trust of another; a pledge; a pawn, or security given for the performance of any contract.

DEPOSITION, (depozishon) s. the act of giving testimony on oath; the act of dethroning a prince. In Canon Law, the solemn depriving a clergyman of his orders for some crime.

DEPOSITORY, (depozitory) s. the place where any thing is lodged. Depostary is properly used of persons, and depository of things.

DEPOT, s. a temporary magazine.

DEPRAVATION, s. [depravo, Lat.] the act of spoiling, corrupting, or rendering a thing less perfect or valuable.

TO DEPRAVE, v. a. [depravo, Lat.] to corrupt; to spoil; to rob a thing of its perfections; to seduce from goodness.

DEPRAVEDNESS, s. loss of purity, goodness, or perfection.

DEPRAVEMENT, s. a vitiated state; corruption.

DEPRAVER, s. a corrupter, or one who makes either a person or thing bad.

DEPRAVITY, s. corruption; a change from perfection to imperfection, or from virtue to vice.

TO DEPRECATE, v. n. [deprecor, Lat.] to pray earnestly for the averting some imminent punishment; to ask pardon for a crime; to request or petition with importunity and humility.

DEPRECATION, s. [deprecatio, Lat.] the act of petitioning; a begging pardon; prayer; prayer against any evil, or for averting any punishment.

DEPRECATIVE, DEPRECATORY, a. that is used as an apology or excuse.

DEPRECATOR, s. [Lat.] one who sues for another; an intercessor; one who apologizes for the faults of another, in order to free him from the punishment due to him.

TO DEPRECATE, (deprekshate) v. a. [depreto, Lat.] to speak meanly of a thing, in order to lessen its esteem or value.

TO DEPRADATE, v. a. [depradator, Lat.] to rob, plunder, or pillage; to seize as prey or booty; to consume, devour, or destroy.

DEPRADATION, s. [depradatio, Lat.] the act of spoiling, robbing, or seizing on as prey or plunder; waste; consumption.

DEPRADATOR, s. [Lat.] a robber; a spoiler. Figuratively, a devourer; a consumer.

TO DEPREHEND, v. a. [deprehendo, Lat.] to detect; to catch unawares; to take in the fact. Figuratively to discover or find out something difficult, or not obvious.

DEPREHENSIBLE, a. that may be detected; that may be discovered, perceived, or understood.

DEPREHENSIBLENESS, s. possibility of being detected, discovered, or understood.

DEPREHENSION, s. detection; the act of taking in the fact, or taking unawares; a discovery.

TO DEPRESS, v. a. [de and primo, Lat.] to press down; to let downwards. Figuratively, to humble, to deject, applied to the mind.

DEPRESSION, s. the act of pressing down; the sinking or falling in of a furnace. Figuratively, degrading; abasement; or humbling. Depression, in Algebra, applied to equations, is the bringing them to the lower and more simple terms by division. In Astronomy, the distance of a star from the horizon downward; which is measured by the arch of the vertical circle or azimuth, passing through the star, intercepted between the star and the horizon.

DEPRESSOR, s. one that keeps or presses down; an oppressor. In Anatomy, applied to such muscles as bring or press down those parts which they are fastened to.

DEPRIMENT, a. an epithet applied to one of the straight muscles that move the globe or ball of the eye, its use being to pull it downwards.

DEPRIVATION, s. [de and privo, Lat.] the act of taking away the quality or existence of a thing.

TO DEPRIVE, v. a. to take away that which is enjoyed by another; to release; to free from. In Law, to turn a clergyman out of a benefice for some crime.

DEPTFORD, Kent. A town anciently called WEST GREENWICH, divided into Upper and Lower Deptford. It is chiefly remarkable for its noble dock-yard, which includes a wet dock of two acres, and another of an acre and a half, with extensive store-houses, and immense stores for the use of the navy. It is seated on the Thames, 4 miles from London. Pop. 23,165.

DEPTH, s. [diep, Belg.] the space measured from the surface of a thing downwards; quantity of water, opposed to a shoal; the sea; the abyss. Depth of a squadron or battalion, the number of men in the file. Figuratively, the height or middle of a season, or night. Profoundness, difficulty, obscurity, applied to learning.

DEPULSION, s. [de and pello, Lat.] the act of beating or driving away.

DEPUTSORY, a. thrusting away.

TO DEPURATE, v. a. [depuror, Fr.] to purify; to cleanse from any impurities.

DEPURATE, a. cleansed or freed from dregs or foulness. Figuratively, pure, not tainted or corrupted.

DEPURATION, s. [depuratio, Lat.] the act of separating the impure parts of any thing from the pure ones. In Surgery, the cleansing a wound from its foulness.

TO DEPURE, v. a. [depuror, Fr.] to cleanse from dregs or foulness; to purge a thing from any noxious qualities.

DEPUTATION, s. [deputatio, Fr.] the sending some select persons out of a body to a prince or solemn assembly, to treat of matters in their behalf or name; the commission of treating in behalf of others.

TO DEPUTE, v. a. [deputer, Fr.] to send with a special commission; to appoint persons to negotiate a public or private affair with a prince, state, or person.

DEPUTY, s. [deputé, Fr.] one that is commissioned to transact an affair for, or discharge the duties of, another; a lieutenant; a viceroy. In Law, a person who exercises an office in the right of another, who is accountable for his mistakes or behaviour.

TO DEQUANTITATE, v. a. [de and quantitas, Lat.] to lessen the quantity of a thing.

DER, a term used in the beginning of the names of places. It is generally to be derived from the Saxon word deor, a wild beast, unless the place stands upon a river, when it may be rather fetched from the British der, water.

TO DERACINATE, v. a. [deraciner, Fr.] to pluck or tear up by the roots.

TO DERAIGN, DERAIN, (derain) v. a. [deranger, Fr.] in Law, to prove. In its primary signification, to disorder, or confuse.

DERAIGNMENT, DERAINMENT, s. the act of deraigning or proving; a disordering or turning out of course; a discharge of profession; a departure out of religion.

DERBYSHIRE.

ALL SAINTS, DERBY.

1875

DERAY, s. [desrayer, Fr.] tumult; confusion. Merriment; jollity.

DERBENT, a city of Georgia, Russia in Asia. It is situated on the Caspian Sea, and has a poor harbour. It is strongly fortified, and has some trade. Its population is about 8000. Lat. 42. S. N. Long. 43. 25. E.

DERBY, Derbyshire. It is a large and well-built town, with a spacious market-place and handsome town-house. Here are manufactories of silk, cotton, and worsted stockings, and of elegant porcelain, which last is in high estimation. Derbyshire and foreign marbles are wrought here in vases, urns, columns, and other ornamental articles, and the lapidary and jewellery branches are executed with great neatness. Malting and earthenware-making are also carried on here. It is seated on the river Derwent, which is navigable to the Trent. It is 120 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Friday. Pop. 32,741.

DERBYSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Cheshire, Staffordshire, Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire, and Warwickshire. It extends nearly 56 miles in length from N. to S., and 34 from E. to W. where broadest; but in the S. part it is not above six. It is divided into six hundreds. The N. and W. parts are mountainous, some heights being nearly 2000 feet above the sea. The S. and E. parts are fertile, producing most kinds of grain, particularly barley. The mountains abound in the best lead, with marble, alabaster, mill-stones, iron, coal, and a coarse sort of crystal. There is good pasture in the valleys. Some important manufactures are carried on in this county. The principal rivers are the Derwent, Dove, Erwash, and Trent. It returns six members to parliament. Pop. 272,217.

DERHAM, EAST, or MARKET, Norfolk. It is a neatly-built town, with a fine church, near which is a spring celebrated in old legends as St. Withburga's well. The poet Cowper is buried here. It is 16 miles from Norwich. Market, Friday. Pop. 3834.

DERELICTION, s. [derelinquo, Lat.] the utter forsaking or abandoning a person.

DERELICTS, s. in Law, such goods as are wilfully thrown away, and disowned by a person.

DERHAM, DR. WILLIAM, a learned natural philosopher and divine of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. He is most familiarly known by his Physico-Theology, a work to which Paley was not a little indebted in the construction of his more popular and widely-known Natural Theology. He published many other treatises on philosophical and other subjects. He was a chaplain to George I. and canon of Windsor, and died in 1735, aged 78 years.

TO DERIDE, v. a. [derideo, Lat.] to laugh at, mock, or turn to scorn with great contempt.

DERIDER, s. a person who mocks or ridicules a thing with great contempt.

DERISION, s. the act of ridiculing, mocking, or laughing at with great contempt.

DERISIVE, a. ridiculing; mocking.

DERISORY, a. mocking; ridiculing.

DERIVABLE, a. that may be obtained by descent, or communicated from one to another.

DERIVATION, s. [derivo, Lat.] the draining water from its course or channel. In Grammar, the origin of any word.

DERIVATIVE, a. derived or taken from another.

DERIVATIVE, s. the thing or word which is derived from another.

DERIVATIVELY, ad. after a derivative manner; not originally.

TO DERIVE, v. a. [de and rivus, Lat.] to drain; to let out water, or turn its course. Figuratively, to deduce, or trace from its original or source; to communicate as the source of a river to one of its branches, or a cause to its effect; to descend to a person, or to communicate by a descent of blood. In Grammar, to trace a word from its origin.—v. n. to proceed, come, or descend from.

DERIVER, s. one who partakes by descent, pedigree, or communication.

DERNIER, (dernier) a. [Fr.] last: used with resort.

TO DEROGATE, v. a. [derogo, Lat.] to lessen the value of a family or profession; to degenerate; to undervalue the esteem or worth of a thing.

DEROGATION, s. an act done contrary to, or inconsistent with, any law, by which means its force and value are lessened; the act of disparaging or lessening the value of a thing.

DEROGATIVE, a. lessening the value of a thing, or the esteem and reputation of a person.

DEROGATORILY, ad. in such a manner as to lessen the value of a thing, or the esteem and reputation of a person.

DEROGATORINESS, s. the quality of lessening the value of a thing.

DEROGATORY, a. that lessens or takes away from the value of a person or thing.

DERRY. See LONDONDERRY.

DERRY, an Irish see, now held in conjunction with that of Raphoe.

DERVIS, DE'RUISE, s. [dervis, Fr.] the name of certain religionists among the Turks, who profess extreme poverty, and lead a very austere life.

DERWENT, a river of Derbyshire, which rises in the High Peak, and passing through the county, falls into the Trent, 8 miles from Derby. Also, a river of Yorkshire, which rises in the North Riding, and running S. falls into the Ouse, 5 miles S. E. of Selby. Also, a river of Durham, flowing through a romantic tract of country, and falling into the Tyne, a little above Newcastle, near which, on its banks, are some capital iron works. Also, a river of Cumberland, which rises in Borrowdale, and flowing through Derwent-Water and Bassingthwaite-Water, passes by Cockermouth, and falls into the Irish Sea at Workington.

DERWENT-WATER, the name of one of the most beautiful lakes of Cumberland, 3 miles in length, and about a mile and a half in breadth. In this lake is seen the floating island, of which so many different accounts have been given by natural philosophers. It abounds with fish, and there are fine salmon in the season.

DESAGULIERS, DR. JOHN T., a distinguished natural philosopher of the early part of the last century. He was the author of some popular works on his favourite studies; and at Oxford and London he delivered public lectures on them. He died in 1749, aged 66 years.

DESART, s. See DESERT.

DESCANT, s. [disconto, Ital.] a comment on any subject; disputation; a disquisition branched out into several heads.

TO DESCANT, v. n. to sing in parts. Figuratively, to discourse at large; or to criticise minutely on the actions of another; to point out faults with great minuteness; to censure.

DESCARTES, RENÉ, the famous philosopher of the 17th century, who was the founder of a method of philosophy usually represented as the opposite of the Baconian or inductive method, and therefore condemned; but which is the complement of this method, as it is now developed from the unfinished writings of its great author, by minds deeply imbued with his spirit. Descartes was trained by the Jesuits in the scholasticism of his age and nation; but he counteracted the influence of such unwholesome mental nurture by the vigorous independence with which he chose his own path, and in camps and travels, amongst men and in deep retirement, struck out for men a road over which he travelled himself, not wholly fruitlessly. His philosophical questions stirred up the thinkers of Europe, and alarmed the church. He was offered an asylum by Christina of Sweden, but he lived only a year at her court, dying in 1650, aged 64 years. In mathematics he excelled, advancing this key to the physical sciences over some of the greatest difficulties, and preparing it for Newton and Leibnitz. In physics, although where mathematics could aid he did good service, too rigid an adherence to the form of his own method led him astray, as was the case of his great competitor, Bacon. As a philosopher, properly so called, the vast impetus he gave to all branches of science would be enough to entitle him to rank high; but his greatest honours are delayed until the vulgar and low view of the inductive philosophy is supplanted by the true one, and that is shown to be in complete harmony with his now ridiculed deductive method.

TO DESCEND, v. n. [descendo, Lat.] to come or go from a higher to a lower place; to go gradually downwards, or below the surface of a thing; to sink; to invade an enemy's country; to proceed as from a successor, or as a cause does from an effect.—v. a. to walk or roll downwards from a higher place or situation.

DESCENDANT, DESCENDENT, s. [descendo, Lat.] one who belongs to another as a relation; the offspring or posterity of a person.

DESCENDENT, a. [descendo, Lat.] coming or moving from a higher to a lower situation; sinking; proceeding from another as an ancestor or original.

DESCENDIBLE, a. such as may be descended; transmissible by inheritance.

DESCENSION, s. [descendo, Lat.] a sinking from a higher to a lower situation.

DESCENSIONAL, a. relating to descent. In Astronomy, descentional difference is the difference between the oblique and right descension of a star.

DESCENT, s. the act of passing from a higher to a lower place, or towards the centre of the earth; a slope, or sloping situation; invasion, or attack on an enemy's country or coasts; birth; extraction. Lineal descent, is that which is conveyed down in a right line, from the grandfather to the father, from the father to the son, &c. Collateral descent, is that which springs out of the side of the line of blood, as from a man to his brother, nephew, &c. Figuratively, one step or generation in the line of a family.

TO DESCRIBE, v. a. [describo, Lat.] to mark out anything by the mention of its properties. In Painting, to form the resemblance of a thing. In Logic, to convey the notion of a thing in a loose manner, without enumerating all its properties. In Geometry, to draw or make a figure. Figuratively, to convey some notion of a thing by words.

DESCRIBER, s. one who relates a matter of fact; the manner of performing an action, a battle, &c.

DESCRIVER, s. one who discovers or describes a thing at a distance.

DESCRIPTION, s. [describo, Lat.] the act of conveying the idea of a person or thing by mentioning some of their properties. In Logic, a collection of the most remarkable properties of a thing, without including the essential difference, and the general nature or genius; the sentence or passage in which a thing is described; the qualities expressed in representing a thing.

TO DESCRIFY, v. a. [descrier, Fr.] to reconnoitre; to examine or view at a distance; to discover or discern by the sight a thing hidden or concealed.

DESCRY, v. discovery, or the thing discovered.

DESEADA, or CAPE DESIRE, on the S. W. coast of Patagonia, at the entrance of the Straits of Magellan from the Pacific Ocean. Lat. 52. 52. S. Long. 76. 45. W.

DESEADA, or DESIDERA'DA, one of the Caribbee Islands, about 10 miles long and 4 broad, about 20 miles from Guadalupe. It is subject to the French. Lat. 16. 38. N. Long. 61. 15. W.

TO DESECRATE, v. a. [de and sacer, Lat.] to convert a thing to a use different from that to which it was originally consecrated.

DESECRATION, s. the converting of a thing consecrated to some common use.

DESERT, (dézert) s. [desero, Lat.] a place not inhabited or built; a waste place; a solitude. In Physical Geography, applied to those tracts of various extent in Asia and Africa, which are almost wholly covered with sand, with most scanty vegetation, and rare springs of water.

DESERT, (dézert) a. wild; waste; uncultivated; uninhabited.

TO DESERT, (dézert) v. a. [desero, Lat.] to quit; to forsake; to abandon a person who has a reliance on one, used as a word of reproach; to leave a station or place; to run away from an army or company, applied to soldiers.

DESERT. See DESSERT.

DESERT, (dézert) s. the behaviour, conduct, or actions of a person, considered with respect to rewards or punishments; a claim to praise or rewards. Figuratively, excellence, or virtue; degree of merit.

DESETER, (dézert) s. one who leaves or abandons a person who can claim his assistance; one who abandons, quits, or leaves his post, or the army to which he belongs.

DESETERION, (dézertion) s. the act of abandoning or forsaking a person, cause, post, or place in an army.

DESETERLESS, (dézertless) a. without merit.

TO DESERVE, (dézerve) v. n. [deservir, Fr.] to be an object of approbation or disapprobation, reward or punishment, on account of one's actions or behaviour; to be worthy, or a proper object of reward.

DESERVEDLY, (dézervédy) ad. not without reason or foundation; according to a person's behaviour, whether good or ill.

DESERVER, (dézervér) s. a man who is a proper object of approbation and reward.

DESICCANT, (desikant) part. [desiccans, Lat.] in Medicine, a drying nature or quality. Used substantively, for those applications which dry up the flow of sores.

TO DESICCATE, (desikato) v. a. to dry up moisture.

DESICCATION, (desikashon) s. the act of drying up moisture.

DESICCATIVE, (desikative) a. that has the power of drying, or TO DESICERATE, v. n. [desidero, Lat.] to want; to miss. A word scarcely used.

DESIDERATUM, s. [Lat.] somewhat which inquiry has not yet settled or discovered.

DESIDIOSE, a. [desidiosis, Lat.] idle; lazy; heavy.

TO DESIGN, (dézín) v. a. [designo, Lat.] to purpose or intend; to form or order for a particular purpose; to plan, project, contrive, or form an idea in the mind.

DESIGN, (dézín) s. an intention or purpose; a plan of action; a scheme or contrivance; the plan or representation of the order, general distribution, and construction of a painting, poem, books, building, &c. Schools of design, are institutions where instructions are given in the art of design to such as can avail themselves of such cultivation in their various crafts.

DESIGNABLE, (desinable) a. that can be ascertained, described, or expressed.

DESIGNATION, s. the describing a person or thing by some remote sign; appointment or direction; import or signification; intention.

DESIGNEDLY, (desinedly) ad. purposely; in a manner agreeable to the intention or previous purpose of a person, opposed to accidentally.

DESIGNER, (déziner) s. a person who premeditates, or contrives something ill; a person who invents a draught, or original, for some artist to copy by.

DESIGNING, (dézining) part. contriving, meditating, or intending something amiss, or prejudicial to the interests of another.

DESIGNLESS, (desinless) a. without design; without any bad intention.

DESIGNLESSLY, ad. without intention; ignorantly; inadvertently.

DESIGNMENT, (desinment) s. an intended expedition against an enemy; a plot; the idea or sketch of a work.

DESIRABLE, (desirable) a. worthy of desire or longing.

DESIRE, s. [desir, Fr.] wish; eagerness to obtain or enjoy.

TO DESIRE, (dézire) v. a. [desirer, Fr.] to wish, or covet some absent good; to appear to long for a thing; to ask; to entreat.

DESIRER, (dézirer) s. one who covets an absent good.

DESIROUS, (dézirous) a. full of longing; earnestly wishing.

TO DESIST, v. n. [desisto, Lat.] to cease from doing a thing which is begun; to stop.

DESISTANCE, s. the act of stopping or ceasing from some action begun.

DESITIVE, a. [desino, Lat.] ending; concluding. A desitive proposition is that which implies the ending or conclusion of something.

DESK, s. [disch, Belg.] an inclining or sloping board or table.

DESMOULINS, CAMILLE, one of the most prominent characters in the French Revolution; a man of clear head, and no mean parts as a writer. He was the first who called the people of Paris to arms, which led to the taking of the Bastille. Throughout the subsequent progress of events he was the coadjutor of Danton, in the Ultra-jacobin party, supporting by his pen the measures and the deeds of his practical ally. He endeavored vainly with him to check the ferocity of the leaders of the Convention, and satirized unsparingly both them and their sanguinary edicts. He was sacrificed with his friend by Robespierre, who found them likely to throw him into the shade, and was guillotined in 1794, aged 33 years. Few things were ever published more exquisite, or more affecting, than his letters to his wife when he was in prison. He was one of the few, during that period, that had a heart.

DESOLATE, a. [desolatus, Lat.] without inhabitants; laid waste; solitary, or unfrequented.

To DE SOLATE, v. a. to deprive of inhabitants; to lay waste. DE SOLATELY, ad. in an unfrequented manner; in a desolate manner.

DESOLATION, s. the act of destroying or removing the inhabitants from a place; the act of laying a place waste; a place wasted and forsaken; gloominess; sadness.

DESPAIR, s. [désespoir, Fr.] an utter abandoning of the hopes of any future good; loss of hope; that which deprives a person of hope; a passion excited by imagining that the object or subject of desire is not to be attained, or that a thing to be undertaken is beyond our abilities to perform.

To DESPAIR, v. n. [déspero, Lat.] to abandon, relinquish, or give a thing over as unattainable; to cease to hope.

DESPAIRER, s. one who looks on a thing as unattainable; one who is without hope.

DESPAIRINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to discover no hope.

To DESPATCH, v. a. See To DISPATCH.

DESPERATE, a. without hope, or looking on a thing as impossible or unattainable; without any regard to safety, arising from despair. Figuratively, not to be retrieved or surmounted, applied to things; mad, furious with despair, applied to persons. Violent, applied to things.

DESPERATELY, ad. in the manner of a person growing furious by despair.

DESPERATENESS, s. madness; fury; acting without any regard to safety or security.

DESPERATION, s. a state void of all hope.

DESPICABLE, a. [despicabilis, Lat.] deserving contempt on account of something sordid, mean, base, and vile.

DESPICABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a person or thing the object of contempt.

DESPICABLY, ad. in a mean, sordid, vile, or contemptible manner.

DESPISABLE, a. contemptible; despicable; a low word.

To DESPISE, (despice) v. a. [de and specio, Lat.] to scorn or contemn with pride and disdain; to slight; to disregard.

DESPISER, (despizer) s. one who looks on a person or thing with scorn or contempt.

DESPITE, s. [dépit, Fr.] malice; anger on account of some real or supposed injury; hatred; defiance. An act of malice or resentment; something done in order to counteract the designs of another, through malice, revenge, or resentment.

To DESPITE, v. a. to counteract the designs of another through a principle of malice and resentment.

DESPITEFUL, a. full of malice or spleen; acting contrary to the designs of another, purely to make him uneasy or unhappy.

DESPITEFULLY, ad. maliciously; malignantly.

DESPITEFULNESS, s. malice, or an endeavour to render a person extremely miserable through malice and resentment.

To DESPOL, v. a. [despolio, Lat.] to rob; to deprive a person of what he is possessed of by some act of violence. Figuratively, to deprive a person of some post of honour.

DESPOLIATION, s. the act of depriving a person of something in his possession.

To DESPOND, v. n. [de and spondeo, Lat.] to become melancholy, through a persuasion that something desired is unattainable, or that something to be done is impossible.

DESPONDENCY, s. the state of a person who imagines a thing desired cannot be obtained, or a thing to be done is impossible.

DESPONDENT, a. without any hope of succeeding in what one undertakes, or of attaining what is ardently desired.

To DESPONSATE, v. a. [desponso, Lat.] to betroth; to unite by reciprocal promises of marriage.

DESPONSATION, s. the act of betrothing persons to each other.

DESPOT, s. [Fr.] an uncontrollable prince.

DESPOTIC, DESPOTICAL, a. [despotique, Fr.] absolute; arbitrary; supreme; of unlimited or absolute power.

DESPOTICALNESS, s. absolute authority.

DESPOTISM, s. [despotisme, Fr.] absolute power, applied to such governments wherein the power of the prince is arbitrary, all law depending on his will alone.

To DESPUMATE, v. a. [despumare, Lat.] to skim the froth off.

DESPUMATION, s. in Pharmacy, the act of clearing any liquor by skimming off the froth or foam.

DESSQUAMATION, s. [de and squama, Lat.] in Surgery, the act of scaling carious bones.

DESSAULT, LOUIS CHARLES A. DE VOIGOUX, one of Napoleon's generals, who was trained under General Custine. In most of Napoleon's campaigns he played a distinguished part, and fell at Marengo, after his skill and bravery had helped to gain the victory, in 1800, aged 32 years.

DESSALLINES, JEAN JACQUES, the lieutenant of the famous and hard-fated Toussaint L'Ouverture, during the liberation of St. Domingo, after whose capture he rose on the French, defeated them, and spared none. He was then chosen first emperor of the island, but after two years he provoked a conspiracy against him, and was slain in 1806.

DESSAU, or ANHALT-DESSAU, a duchy of Germany, bounded by Prussia, Anhalt-Cöthen, and Anhalt-Bernburg. It is made up of several distinct tracts, lying on the Elbe and three of its tributaries. It is quite agricultural and pastoral, the soil being admirably adapted to these purposes, and the cattle which are grazed being the staple of their trade with other states. The population is about 65,000. Dessau, its capital, lies on the Muldan, near its union with the Elbe, is fortified and well-built. Its population is about 15,000. Lat. 51. 47. N. Long. 12. 18. E.

DESSERT, s. [dessert, Fr.] the last course at an entertainment; the fruit or sweets set on the table after the meat. This is the proper spelling, and not desert.

DESSAULT-HOLSTEIN MADAME, the celebrated French authoress, daughter of Necker, the popular minister of Louis XVI. at the outbreak of the Revolution. She was resident at Paris during some of the most remarkable scenes of that eventful period, and has described them in her work relating to it with great graphic skill. Her writings obtained her early notoriety, in addition to such as could not be escaped on account of her father's fame; and the character of the age she lived in, and her being married to an ambassador, favoured her taking a prominent part in public events. She was pre-eminently a celebrated woman, and in that lay all that was good and all that was displeasing in her character. She lived unmolested in Paris during most of the reign of Terror, but she was exiled by Buonaparte, nor did she establish herself in France again till his final overthrow. She died in 1817, aged 51 years. Her writings comprise essays on literary subjects, dramas, tales, of which Corinne is well known of all, and narratives of her life and the events of her times.

To DESTINATE, v. a. [destino, Lat.] to design or form for any particular purpose or end.

DESTINATION, s. the purpose or ultimate end for which any thing is designed.

To DESTINE, v. a. [destino, Lat.] to doom; to appoint to any state or condition without alteration, or by an absolute necessity; to order to any end or purpose; to devote to punishment or misery; to fix an event unalterably.

DESTINY, s. [destinée, Fr.] in Mythology, the power who determines the lot of mortals; fate fixed by some unalterable decree; doom; fortune.

DÉSTITUTION, a. [destitutus, Lat.] deprived of; in want of; abandoned by.

DÉSTITUTION, s. want; defect; or a state wherein something is deficient or wanting.

To DESTROY, v. a. [destruo, Lat.] to demolish, or reduce to ruin; to kill; to lay waste, or make desolate; to deprive a thing of its present qualities or properties.

DESTROYER, s. one who lays a town waste; one who deprives animals of life; one who defaces a thing by some act of violence.

DESTRUCTIBLE, a. [destruo, Lat.] liable to be destroyed, defaced, or demolished.

DESTRUCTIBILITY, s. possibility or liability to be destroyed.

DESTRUCTION, s. the act of ruining, destroying, demolishing, or laying waste; murder; the state of a thing ruined, demolished, or destroyed; the cause of destruction. In Theology, eternal death.

DESTRUCTIVE, a. that demolishes, or reduces to ruin.

DESTRUCTIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to destroy, demolish, or ruin.

DESTRUCTIVENESS, s. the quality which destroys, ruins, or lays waste.

DÉSTRUCTOR, s. a destroyer, a consumer.

DESUDATION, s. [desudatio, Lat.] a profuse or inordinate sweating.

DESECTUDE, s. [desuetudo, Lat.] cessation from being accustomed; discontinuance of practice or habit.

DESLUTORY, DESLUTORIOUS, a. [deslutorius, Lat.] unfixed; unsettled; removed from one thing or idea to another.

TO DESUME, v. a. [desumo, Lat.] to take from any thing; to borrow.

TO DETACH, v. a. [détacher, Fr.] to separate or part something which was joined before; to send out or draw off a part of a greater body or forces.

DETACHED, part. drawn off; separated from; disengaged.

DETACHMENT, s. a body of troops separated and sent from the main army.

TO DETAIL, v. a. [détailer, Fr.] to relate a fact with its minute and particular circumstances.

DETAIL, s. [détail, Fr.] an account containing all the minute circumstances of an action or subject.

TO DETAIN, v. a. [déteneo, Lat.] to keep that which is due to another; to keep a person, or hinder him from departing or going farther; to keep a person in custody.

DETAINER, s. in Law, a writ for holding or keeping a person in custody.

DETAINER, s. he that does not pay a thing due, or withholds another person's right; he that hinders the departure or progress of a person or thing.

TO DETECT, v. a. [detectum, Lat.] to discover, or find out any secret crime or artifice; to find out or surprise a person in the commission, or after the commission, of a crime; to lay open the artifices of a person, or sophistry of an argument.

DETECTOR, s. a discoverer of some criminal; one who lays open the sophistry or subtleties of an author.

DETECTION, s. the discovery of a criminal, crime, or fault.

DETENTION, s. the keeping or withholding what is due, or belonging to another. Figuratively, confinement, or restraint.

TO DETER, v. a. [deterreo, Lat.] to discourage, or keep a person from doing a thing, either by frightening him by menaces, or by laying its consequences before him.

TO DETERGE, v. a. [detergo, Lat.] to cleanse a sore from its pus, matter, or foulness; to cleanse the body by purges.

DETERGENT, a. [detergens, Lat.] in Medicine, having the power of cleansing.

DETERIORATION, s. [deterior, Lat.] the impairing or rendering any thing worse.

DETERIMENT, s. that which discourages a person from doing or undertaking a thing; the cause or obstacle which hinders a person from undertaking a thing.

DETERMINABLE, a. that may be ascertained or decided.

TO DETERMINATE, v. a. [determino, Lat.] to limit; to settle; to fix; to determine.

DETERMINATE, a. limited; fixed; settled; decisive; resolved.

DETERMINATELY, ad. resolutely fixed; firmly resolved.

DETERMINATION, s. absolute direction to a certain end. Figuratively, a resolution formed after mature deliberation; the decision of some contested point or dispute.

DETERMINATIVE, a. having the power to direct to a certain end; that restrains the signification of a word.

DETERMINATOR, s. one who determines, ascertains, or decides a controversy.

TO DETERMINE, v. a. to fix or settle a thing, or point, in debate or dispute; to conclude; to bound; to confine; to decide; to confine or restrain within limits; to ascertain the sense of an expression; to influence the choice; to resolve; to put an end to; to destroy.—v. n. to conclude; to end; to come to a decision; to resolve or come to a resolution.

DETERSION, s. [detergo, Lat.] in Surgery, the act of cleansing a wound.

DETERSIVE, a. [detersif, Fr.] having the power to cleanse. DETERSIVE, a. in Medicine, that which cleanses a wound, or frees the body from humours by purging.

TO DETEST, v. a. [detestor, Lat.] to hate a thing with some vehemence, on account of its evil and pernicious qualities.

DETESTABLE, a. that is hated with great vehemence, on account of its villainess or perniciousness.

DETESTABLY, ad. in such a manner as shows or deserves the greatest loathing, abhorrence, aversion, or hatred.

DETESTATION, s. [detestation, Fr.] the act of abhorring, disliking, or hating a thing, on account of its evil.

DETESTER, s. one who has a very great hatred, aversion, or loathing.

TO DETHRONE, v. a. [de and thronus, Lat.] to depose a king; to deprive him of royalty.

DETINUE, s. [détinue, Fr.] a writ laying against a person, who refuses to deliver up a thing which was given him to keep for another.

DETONATION, s. [detonatio, Lat.] in Chemistry, the loud noise made by some bodies when exposed to heat.

TO DETONIZE, v. a. in Chemistry, to calcine with detonation.

TO DETORT, v. a. [detortum, Lat.] to wrest a word or expression from its original meaning or design.

TO DETRACT, v. a. [de and traho, Lat.] to lessen the reputation of another by calumny, or speaking ill of him.

DETRACTER, s. one who lessens the reputation of another.

DETRACTION, s. [detractio, Lat.] the impairing or lessening the reputation or esteem of another, by speaking ill of him.

DETRACTORY, a. lessening the value of a thing, or reputation of a person.

DETRACTRESS, s. a woman who lessens the reputation of others.

DETRIMENT, s. [detrimentum, Lat.] that which affects a thing or person with loss or damage.

DETRIMENTAL, a. causing harm, mischief, loss, or damage.

DETRITION, s. [detero, Lat.] the act of wearing away.

DETROIT, capital of Michigan, United States. It stands on a river or strait of the same name, and occupies a fine situation, on which it is very regularly built. The state house and the city hall are fine buildings, as are some of the churches, the bank, &c. It is admirably situated for trade, having the navigation of Lake Erie, &c. open to it, and a railroad communication with the interior. It is 524 miles from Washington. Pop. 9102.

TO DETRUDE, v. a. [detrudo, Lat.] to thrust down; to force into a lower place.

TO DETRUNCATE, v. a. [detruncio, Lat.] to lop; to shorten by deprivation of parts.

DETRUNCATION, s. the act of lopping or cutting.

DETRUSION, s. [detrusio, Lat.] the act of forcing a thing downwards.

DEVASTATION, s. [devasto, Lat.] the act of laying waste; demolishing buildings; or unpeopling towns.

DEUCALION, a mythical person in early Greek history. He is represented as saved with his wife, Pyrrha, on Parnassus from a flood which overwhelmed the rest of the country, and as re-peopling it, by casting behind them the stones they picked up, under the direction of the Delphic oracle. The date assigned to this flood is about 1550 B.C.

DEUCE, s. [denz, Fr.] in Gaming, a card with two marks, or a die with two spots.

TO DEVELOPE, v. a. [developer, Fr.] to take off any covering which conceals a thing; to lay open any stratagem or artifice.

DEVELOPMENT, s. the act or result of developing.

DEVEX, a. [devexus, Lat.] bending down; declivity; incurvated downwards.

DEVEXITY, s. incurvation downwards; declivity.

TO DEVIATE, v. n. [de and via, Lat.] to leave the right or common way. Figuratively, to err; to go astray.

DEVIATION, s. the act of quitting the right way. Figuratively, the acting contrary to some established rule; sin; offence; a wandering.

DEVISE, s. [devise, Fr.] a contrivance or stratagem; a project; a scheme or plan; invention; genius. In Heraldry, an emblem which has some resemblance to a person's name; the representation of some natural body, with a motto or sentence.

DEVIL, s. [diabol, Sax.] in its primary signification, a calumniator, or false accuser; but peculiarly applied to the personified or impersonate spirit of evil. Figuratively, a wicked person. In Scripture, an idol; an emissary; or one of the wicked spirits subject to Satan. Prov. He that hath shipped the devil must make the best of him.—What is gotten over the devil's back is spent under his belly; i. e. what is got by oppression or extortion, is many times spent in riot and luxury.

DEVONSHIRE

GUILDHALL, EXETER.

REFERENCE to the HUNDREDS

- 1. BARNSTAPLE
- 2. BARNSTAPLE
- 3. BARNSTAPLE
- 4. BARNSTAPLE
- 5. BARNSTAPLE
- 6. BARNSTAPLE
- 7. BARNSTAPLE
- 8. BARNSTAPLE
- 9. BARNSTAPLE
- 10. BARNSTAPLE
- 11. BARNSTAPLE
- 12. BARNSTAPLE
- 13. BARNSTAPLE
- 14. BARNSTAPLE
- 15. BARNSTAPLE
- 16. BARNSTAPLE
- 17. BARNSTAPLE
- 18. BARNSTAPLE
- 19. BARNSTAPLE
- 20. BARNSTAPLE
- 21. BARNSTAPLE
- 22. BARNSTAPLE
- 23. BARNSTAPLE
- 24. BARNSTAPLE
- 25. BARNSTAPLE
- 26. BARNSTAPLE
- 27. BARNSTAPLE
- 28. BARNSTAPLE
- 29. BARNSTAPLE
- 30. BARNSTAPLE
- 31. BARNSTAPLE
- 32. BARNSTAPLE
- 33. BARNSTAPLE

County revenue & expenditure

Scale of Miles

Railway Stations shown

DEVIL, SEA, s. in Natural History, an odd-shaped fish of the ray kind.

DEVILISH, a. partaking of the malicious, mischievous, or other wicked qualities of the devil.

DEVILISHLY, ad. in an entirely wicked or mischievous manner; in a manner suitable to the wickedness of the devil; diabolically.

DEVILKIN, s. a little devil.

DEVIL'S-BIT, s. in Botany, a name given to a species of scabious, growing in marshes, because of the peculiar form of the root.

DEVIOUS, a. [de and via, Lat.] out of the common track; wandering; rambling; roving; erring.

TO DEVISE, (devise) v. a. [deviser, Fr.] to invent or contrive, implying a great deal of art.—v. n. to plan, contrive, or form schemes. In Law, to bequeath, or leave by will.

DEVISE, (devise) v. [devise, Fr.] in Law, the act of giving or bequeathing by will; contrivance.

DEVISEE, s. he to whom something is bequeathed by will.

DEVISER, (devizer) s. one who projects, or contrives; one who leaves or bequeaths by will.

DEVIZES, Wiltshire. It is a large town, with very considerable manufactures, particularly of serges, kerseymores, druggets, and broad cloth; the malting and brewing business is carried on extensively; and the market is abundantly supplied with corn, wool, horses, and all sorts of cattle. It is seated on a rivulet, which rises near the castle, (once one of the strongest in England), and runs into the Avon near Bromham. It is 89 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Thursday. Pop. 4631.

DEVOID, a. [roide, Fr.] empty; vacant. Figuratively, destitute, or free from any quality either good or bad.

DEVOUR, s. [Fr.] in its primary sense, a duty, or act of service, but now obsolete.

TO DEVOLVE, v. a. [de and volvo, Lat.] to roll from a high to a lower place; to remove from one person to another.—v. n. to fall or descend to, in order of succession.

DEVOLUTION, s. the rolling of a thing from a higher to a lower place; removal, or succession, from one person or order to another.

DEVONPORT, Devonshire. It stands at the mouth of the Tamar, and is well fortified. Here is a noble dockyard, and arsenal for the navy. It is a handsome town, and one of growing consequence. Its old name was Plymouth Dock. It is 210 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 33,820.

DEVONSHIRE, a county of England, reaching from the Bristol to the English Channel, and bounded by Cornwall, and Somersetshire, and Dorsetshire. It is 69 miles in length, and 60 in breadth, and is divided into 31 hundreds. It is very hilly, and abounds in huge granite rocks, some of whose peaks are above 1500 feet in height. The highland is covered with wide moors, of which Dartmoor is the most extensive. But in the valleys and lower ground the soil is fertile. Its rivers are the Exe, the Culm, the Dart, the Tamar, the Otter, &c. Some parts of its coasts are composed of lofty cliffs, but at others there is a beautiful sandy shore. The air and climate are so mild and salubrious that invalids often retire to its sea-ports for the winter. Limestone, granite, some building-stone, and a species of wood-coal are found here, as well as some kinds of variegated marble. It produces corn, &c. and fruit trees, especially apples, whence much cider is made. Its fisheries also are of value. Exeter is its chief city. Pop. 533,400. It sends 22 members to parliament.

DEVORATION, s. [decoratio, Lat.] the act of devouring.

TO DEVOTE, v. a. [devotum, Lat.] to dedicate or set apart to a religious or any other particular purpose; to abandon to evils; to doom to destruction.

DEVOTEDNESS, s. the state of a thing devoted, dedicated, set apart, or destined to a particular end or purpose.

DEVOTEE, s. [devot, Fr.] one extravagantly or erroneously religious; a bigot.

DEVOTION, s. [devoctio, Lat.] the state of a thing consecrated or dedicated; a religious and fervent exercise of some public act of religion; or a temper or disposition of the mind rightly affected with such exercises. Figuratively, prayer; a strong and fervent affection for a person; an act of reverence, respect, or ceremony; disposal; power; state of dependence on any one.

DEVOTIONAL, a. relating to religious worship; pious; zealous.

DEVOTIONALIST, s. a person who is superstitiously religious.

TO DEVOUR, v. a. [devo, Lat.] to eat up ravenously. Figuratively, to destroy with rapidity or quickness; to swallow up, or reduce to nothing.

DEVOURET, s. one who consumes or eats up ravenously.

DEVOUT, a. [devoctio, Lat.] pious; religious; fervent in performing acts of worship; filled with pious thoughts; full of zeal, or expressive of ardent piety.

DEVOUTLY, ad. in a pious manner; with fervent zeal and piety.

DEUSE, s. [derived by Junius from Dusius, the name of a species of evil spirits,] the devil, used in ludicrous language.

DEUTEROGAMY, s. [deuteros and gamos, Gr.] a second marriage.

DEUTERONOMY, [deuteros and nomos, Gr.] the last book of the Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses, comprising the Law, in the Old Testament. It consists of a rapid review of the history of the Israelites and their wanderings in the desert, with a clear statement of the moral purpose of the various proceedings of God towards them, and a recapitulation of the injunctions and precepts of the Law, with many expansions and additions, particularly respecting the sanctions of the dispensation under which the nation had been placed by God's favour. It purports to be uttered by Moses when the end of his mission approached, and to contain thus his last bequest to the people whom he had freed, and so signally served; and it concludes with a noble hymn of praise by the great leader and lawgiver, worthy of being the death-song of such a man. The chapter which records his death, is necessarily a later addition, and is by some critics assigned to the Book of Joshua.

DEUX PONTS, or ZWEIFBRUCKEN, called also BIPONTIUM, a town and district of Bavaria, Germany. The district lies between France and Prussia, and the rest of the Bavarian province on the Rhine; and produces corn and other agricultural wealth, timber, iron, and building-stone. It is watered by some of the tributaries of the Rhine, on one of which, the Erlbach, the town stands. It is quite agricultural, and most pleasantly situated. It is 46 miles from Mannheim. Its population is about 10,000; that of the district being about 150,000. Lat. 49. 25. N. Long. 7. 15. E.

DEW, s. [deav, Sax.] in Meteorology, moisture condensed on the surface of the ground, trees, &c. &c., whenever they fall in temperature so as to take away heat suddenly from the surrounding atmosphere. It happens most frequently between sun-set and sun-rise. The laws of the deposition of dew, though but imperfectly verified, are exceedingly curious, and the investigations of Dr. Wells respecting them are highly interesting. The common phenomena, and the frozen dew, or rime (hoar-frost), are too familiar to need description.

TO DEW, v. a. to wet or moisten with dew.

DEWBERRY, s. in Botany, a species of bramble, common in England, flowering in June and July. It is a smaller plant than the common bramble, and the fruit, which is larger and more agreeable in flavour, has a beautiful bloom on it.

DEWBRENT, part. sprinkled with dew.

DEWDROP, s. a drop of dew that sparkles in the sun.

DE WITT, JOHN, the grand pensionary of Holland in the 17th century, who maintained nobly his country's freedom and fame. He was the staunch opponent of the power and claims of the house of Orange, deeming them inimical to the interests of the republic. He formed the alliance with Cromwell, and afterwards allied the Provinces to France, in order to frustrate the schemes of William III. But the insatiable thirst for conquest on the part of Louis XIV. of France, made it impossible for him to avoid the dangers he foresaw. Holland was invaded; his opponent was appointed to the command of both army and navy; and De Witt with his brother were assassinated by the mob. He fell in 1672, aged 47 years.

DEWLAP, s. [so called from its lapping or brushing off the dew,] the flesh which hangs down from the throat of cows, bulls, or oxen.

DEWSBURY, Yorkshire, W. R. It stands on the Calder, and has extensive manufactories of woollen goods. It is well built, and bids fair to outshine, with its recently-acquired importance, the fame which it has borne from the early days of Saxon history, as the seat of the labours of the first Christian missionary to the kingdom of Northumbria; and afterwards, as the last resting-place of the famed outlaw named Robin Hood. It is 190 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Population, 23,806.

DEW-WORM, s. in Natural History, a small worm usually found in the early morning, much in request with anglers.

DEWY, a. resembling or partaking of the nature of dew; moist with dew.

Dexter, a. [Lat.] in Heraldry, the right side.

DEXTERTY, s. [dexteritas, Lat.] readiness; activity; quickness of contrivance.

DEXTEROUS, a. [dexter, Lat.] expert; active; or quick; subtle; full of expedients; skillful in management; fertile in invention.

DEXTEROUSLY, ad. expertly; readily; quickly; skillfully.

DEXTRAL, a. [dexter, Lat.] on the right side.

DEXTRALITY, s. the state of being on the right side.

DEY, s. spelt also Bey; the name of the chiefs of the various states of northern Africa, who hold their station under the Turkish emperor.

DIABETES, s. [Gr.] in Physic, a disease in which the urine is changed both in its quantity and quality. It is attended with incessant thirst, and the frame gradually wastes, and loses its powers. But little that is satisfactory is known respecting either the causes or the treatment of this disease.

DIABOLIC, DIABOLICAL, a. [diabolus, Lat.] partaking of the qualities of the devil; extremely impious and wicked.

DIACODIUM, s. [dia and kodia, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a syrup prepared from the heads of white poppies dried without their seeds.

DIACOUSTICS, s. [dia and akouo, Gr.] in Philosophy, the consideration or doctrine of refracted sounds as they pass through the different mediums, i. e. either through a dense into a rare, or through a rare into a dense one.

DIADÈM, s. [diadema, Gr.] formerly a bandage of silk encompassing the heads of kings, and tied behind. It was sometimes enriched with pearls, and sometimes with the leaves of some evergreens. In Heraldry, certain circles or rims, binding or enclosing the crowns of princes, and to bear the globes, crosses, or flowers-de-luces for their crests.

DIADÈMED, part. adorned with a diadem; wearing a crown, crowned.

DIADROM, s. [diadromeo, Gr.] the time in which any motion is performed; the time in which a pendulum forms a single vibration.

DIARESIS, s. [Gr.] in Grammar, the division of a diphthong, or one syllable into two; as aër.

DIAGNOSTIC, s. [dia and gnosko, Gr.] in Medicine, a sign by which a disease may be discovered, or distinguished from another.

DIAGONAL, a. [dia and gomia, Gr.] drawn across a figure, from one corner or angle to another.

DIAGONAL, s. a right line drawn across a parallelogram, or other figure, from one angle or corner to another, so as to divide it into equal parts.

DIAGONALLY, ad. in a cross direction, and reaching from one corner to another.

DIAGRAM, s. [diagramo, Gr.] in Geometry, a scheme drawn explaining any figure or its properties. Also, a drawing to illustrate a subject that is under discussion.

DIAGRYDIATES, s. [diagrydium, Lat.] strong purgatives made with diagrydium.

DIAL, s. [dies, Lat.] a plate marked with two sets of figures, beginning at one, and ending with twelve; used to show the time of the day by clocks, or by the shadow of the sun.

DIALECT, s. [dialektos, Gr.] the subdivision of a language; the style or manner of expression used in a province, as it differs from that of the whole kingdom. Figuratively, style; manner of expression; language or speech.

DIALECTIC, s. [dialektikos, Gr.] the art of reasoning, or logic.

DIALECTICAL, a. belonging to logic.

DIALING, s. the art or science of drawing and constructing all manner of sun-dials.

DIALIST, s. one who constructs or makes dials.

DIALOGIST, s. one who composes, or one who is introduced as a speaker in a dialogue.

DIALOGUE, (dialog) s. [dialogos, Gr.] a conference or debate on any subject whether real or feigned.

To DIALOGUE, (dialog) v. a. to hold conversation or converse with; to discourse.

DIALYSIS, s. [dialysis, Gr.] in Grammar, the parting or separating two vowels, which would otherwise make a diphthong.

DIAMETER, s. [dia and metron, Gr.] the line which passes through the centre of a circle or other figure, and divides it into two equal parts.

DIAMETRAL, a. describing, or relating to, a diameter.

DIAMETRICALLY, ad. according to the direction of a diameter.

DIAMETRICAL, a. DIAMETRICALLY, ad. now used instead of DIAMETRAL, DIAMETRICALLY, which see.

D'AMOND, (generally pron. diamond), s. [diamant, Fr.] in Mineralogy, a species of gem or precious stone, which is very brilliant and clear, and is the hardest of all this class of substances. Hindustan is the country whence most are brought; but some are found in the E. part of S. America also. It is wrought artificially into the variety of forms in which it is most usually seen; being ground down by the use of diamond dust, no other substance being able to touch it. It was asserted by Sir Isaac Newton, that it was of an inflammable nature, from some curious and delicate investigation of its refractive power; and it has since been proved, by chemical analysis, to be highly purified and concentrated carbon, or charcoal. Cornish diamonds are clear, brilliant crystals found in Cornwall.

D'AMOND, s. a pencil pointed with a diamond, so fixed as to present the proper angle for cutting, used by glaziers and others in dividing glass.

DIANA, in the Heathen Mythology, was the goddess of hunting, daughter of Jupiter and Latona, and sister to Phoebus or the sun; in hell she was called Hecate; on earth, Diana; and Phebe, or the moon, in heaven.

DIAPASE, DIAPASON, s. [dia and pas, Gr.] in Music, an interval including an octave. Among musical instrument makers, it signifies a rule or scale, whereby they adjust their pipes of the organs, and cut the holes of their flutes, &c. One stop in organs is so named.

DIAPER, s. [diapre, Fr.] a kind of linen cloth, woven in figures; a napkin; a towel.

To DIAPER, v. a. to variegate, diversify, or flower; to draw flowers on cloths.

DIAPHANEITY, (diaphanèty) s. [dia and phaino, Gr.] transparency, or the quality of transmitting light.

DIAPHANOUS, (diaphanous) a. transparent; giving passage to the rays of light; that may be seen through.

DIAPHORESIS, (diaphoresis) s. [diaphoro, Gr.] in Medicine, a discharge made through the skin, whether sensible or insensible.

DIAPHORETIC, (diaphoretik) a. [diaphoretikos, Gr.] in Medicine, that causes a discharge through the skin, or a sweat.

DIAPHRAGM, (diagram) s. [diaphragma, Gr.] in Anatomy, a nervous muscle, vulgarly called the midriff, and by anatomists, septum transversale, or cross wall, from its dividing the breast or thorax from the abdomen.

DIARBEKIR, a large town on the W. bank of the Tigris, in Algeiras. Here is a considerable manufacture of red Turkey leather, and of linen and red cotton cloths. It is 150 miles N.E. of Aleppo. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 37. 55. N. Long. 39. 52. E.

DIARRHOEA, (diarrea) s. [dia and rheo, Gr.] in Medicine, a profuse evacuation of liquid excrements by stool.

DIARRHOETIC, (diarretik) a. in Medicine, promoting purging.

DIARY, s. [diarium, Lat.] an account of the transactions of a person every day; a journal.

DIASTOLE, s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, the motion of the heart, or arteries, whereby those parts dilate or distend themselves. In Grammar, diastole signifies the lengthening a syllable which is naturally short.

DIASTYLE, s. [dia and stylos, Gr.] in ancient Architecture, an edifice whose columns stand at such a distance from each other, that four diameters are allowed for the intercolumniation.

DIATÈSSERON, s. [dia and tessara, Gr.] in Music, an interval composed of one greater tone, one lesser tone, and one greater semi-tone, called by moderns a perfect fourth. Also, a name given to a Harmony of the Four Gospels, in Greek.

DIATONIC, s. [dia and tonos, Gr.] the ordinary species of music, which proceeds by different tones, either in ascending or descending, and contains only the greater and less tones, together with the greater semi-tone.

D'AZ, BARTHOLOMEW, a Portuguese navigator, who, near the end of the 15th century, discovered the Cape of Good Hope, and by it opened the way to India for commerce. It was one of the moments that produced the rapid progress of intelligence, &c. in Europe, distinguishing modern society from that of the middle ages. He was lost in a storm at the Cape in 1500.

DIBBLE, s. an instrument like a pointed stake, used by gardeners and farmers for making holes in the ground in planting.

DIBDIN, CHARLES, one of our most successful writers and composers of songs. He produced a few dramas also, and other works, but his name is associated with his songs, his sea-songs especially, some of which are unequalled in that class of compositions. He was well known in his day by a kind of mono-drama, or farce, with which, at various places in London, he entertained crowded audiences. He died in 1813, aged 48 years. The spirit of his songs is most excellent; it can but be regretted that their influence on our seamen should have been so slight.

DICACITY, s. [dicacitas, Lat.] pertness, sauciness, loquacity.

DICE, s. the plural of DIE; which see.

TO DICE, v. a. to game with dice.

DICE-BOX, s. the box from which the dice are thrown.

DICER, s. one who plays at dice.

DICHOTOMY, (dikótomý) s. [dis and temno, Gr.] in Logic, the distribution or division of ideas into pairs. In Vegetable Physiology, a particular mode of growth in certain plants, by dividing into two stems repeatedly.

TO DICTATE, v. a. [dicto, Lat.] to deliver a command to another; to speak with authority; to deliver a speech in words which is to be taken down in writing.

DICTATE, s. [dicto, Lat.] a rule or mandate delivered by some person of authority.

DICTATION, s. the act or practice of prescribing, giving orders, or laying down rules of conduct.

DICTATOR, s. [Lat.] a Roman magistrate, invested with supreme authority, having the power of life and death, to proclaim war, raise or discharge forces without consent of the senate. This office was at first used as a last resort in cases of extreme danger; and was to be held but for six months. In the fall of the commonwealth, it was made perpetual. Figuratively, one who by his credit and authority directs and regulates the conduct of others.

DICTATORIAL, a. after the manner of a dictator; imperious.

DICTATORSHIP, s. the office of a dictator. Figuratively, imperiousness, or authority carried too high.

DICTION, s. (dictio, Lat.) the peculiar manner which an author has of expressing himself, whether it respect the arrangement of his words, or the use of rhetorical figures.

DICTIONARY, (dikshonary) s. [dictionarium, Lat.] a book containing the words of any language in their alphabetical order, with explanations of their meaning, or definition; a lexicon; a vocabulary.

DID, [Sax.] the preterite of do: the sign of the preter-imperfect or perfect tense.

DIDACTIC, DIDACTICAL, a. [didaktikos, Gr.] containing precepts or rules.

DIDAPPER, s. [duyck-dapper, Belg.] in Natural History, a name of the common water-hen.

DIDASCALIC, a. [didaskalos, Gr.] preceptive; didactic; giving precepts to some art.

DIDEROT, DENIS, one of the leaders of the philosophers of France in the last century. He began his career by mere literary drudgery; was introduced to the world of letters by his Philosophic Thoughts; soon numbered amongst his friends all who were carried away by the sensualized representation of Locke's Philosophy, then expounded by Condillac; unfolded and taught these opinions in his Encyclopædia, which gave the name of Encyclopædists to this school; taught atheism to such as ranked themselves under him as disciples; and at last sunk under the weight of the imperial favour of Katharine of Russia, dying in 1784, aged 71 years. He wrote many books, and was a great authority for a while. But such shallow sophisms could never have passed current amongst men had not the whole framework of society been overgrown with rankest corruptions, and every thing portended a revolution.

DIDIUS, JULIANUS, one of the later emperors of Rome. He bought the purple when it was put up to auction by the prætorian cohorts on the assassination of Pertinax. He was assassinated in his turn, other parts of the army refusing to ratify the purchase. He reigned for a few days over two months, and was killed in 193, aged about 60 years.

DIDO, the founder of Carthage, was the daughter of a Phœnician king. Most of the tales respecting her, and Virgil's in particular, are purely fabulous. She flourished about 900 B.C.

DIDUC'TION, s. [diductio, Lat.] separation by withdrawing one part from the other.

TO DIE, v. n. [deadian, Sax.] to lose life; to expire; to lose all the animal functions, and have the soul separated from the body. It has by before an instrumental death; of before a disease; for commonly before a privative, and of before a positive cause. Figuratively, to be lost, perish, or be entirely laid aside. To sink, faint, or lose its vital functions; to languish, or be overcome with pleasure and tenderness; to vanish or disappear. To wither, applied to vegetables. To grow spiritless, tasteless, or rapid, applied to liquors.

DIE, s. plural diees; [dis, Brit.] a small cube marked on each of its sides with specks or dots, from one to six, which is used by gamblers to play with. Figuratively, hazard, or chance; any cubic body.

DIE, s. plural diees; the stamp used in coining, or the mould in which medals are cast.

DIEPPE, a town of the department of Bas Seine, France. It stands on the English Channel, and has a tolerable harbour, formed by the mouth of the river Bethune. It is built and adorned in the style common to watering-places. The principal trade consists in fish, ivory, toys, &c. It is 132 miles from Paris. Population, about 20,000. Lat. 49. 55. N. Long. 1. 9. E.

DIE'T, s. [diaita, Gr.] food; provision for satisfying hunger; a regular course of food ordered and directed in order to cure some chronic disorder.

TO DIET, v. a. to feed or eat according to the rules and prescriptions of medical writers.

DIET, s. [Teut.] the name of the assembly of the states of the late German empire, meeting to deliberate on some public affair.

DIETARY, a. belonging to the rules of medical diet.

DIET-DRINK, s. a drink brewed with medicinal ingredients.

DIETER, s. one who prescribes rules for eating.

DIETETIC, DIETETICAL, a. [diaita, Gr.] belonging to food; or relating to medical cautions about the use of food.

DIEU ET MON DROIT, (Fr.) i. e. God and my right, the motto of the royal arms of England, first assumed by Richard I., to insinuate that he did not hold his empire in vassalage of any mortal.

TO DIFFER, v. n. [differo, Lat.] to have properties or qualities which are not the same as those of another person or thing; to oppose a person in opinion; to be of another opinion; to contend.

DIFFERENCE, s. the state of being distinct from some other thing; a dispute; debate; controversy, or opposition of sentiments; the property which distinguishes one thing from another. In Arithmetic, the remainder after one quantity is taken from another. In Heraldry, something added to or altered in a coat, whereby the younger families are distinguished from the elder, or to show how far they are removed from the principal house.

TO DIFFERENCE, v. a. to make one thing not the same as another; to distinguish one thing from another.

DIFFERENT, a. distinct; of contrary qualities; unlike.

DIFFERENTIAL, (differeñshial) a. in Geometry, applied to an infinitely small quantity, so small as to be less than any assignable one. Differential calculus, in Mathematics, is a method of investigation, or of solving problems, in which though some quantities retain the same value throughout the whole process, others vary, increasing or diminishing continually by quantities which can be taken as less than any quantity that can be expressed.

DIFFERENTLY, ad. in a different manner.

DIFFERENTLY, ad. in a different manner.

DIFFICULT, a. [difficilis, Lat.] hard to be done, understood, or pleased.

DIFFICULTY, ad. hardly; not easily.

DIFFICULTY, s. [difficultas, Lat.] that which requires pains, care, and attention. Figuratively, distress; opposition; perplexity; or uneasiness with respect to circumstances. Objections or points not easily answered or understood.

TO DIFFIDE, v. a. [dis and fides, Lat.] to distrust, or repose no confidence in.

DIFFIDENCE, s. want of trust, confidence, or courage.

DIFFIDENT, part. or a. [diffidens, Lat.] wanting in confidence; suspicious; timorous.

DIFFISION, s. [diffisio, Lat.] the act of cleaving or splitting.

DIFFUSION, s. [diffusio, Lat.] the act of scattering with a blast of wind.

DIFFUENCE, DIFFUENCY, s. [diffusio, Lat.] the quality of falling away on all sides, opposed to consistency or solidity.

DIFFULENT, a. flowing away.

DIFFORM, a. [dis and forma, Lat.] contrary to uniform; irregular.

DIFFORMITY, s. diversity of form; irregularity.

DIFFRACTION, s. [dis and frango, Lat.] in Optics, the term applied to the change from the straight direction, which rays of light undergo in passing the edge of any screen or similar body, giving rise to stripes of light and shade, and to coloured fringes, appearing added to such an edge, as most persons have witnessed.

See OPTICS.

DIFFRANCHISEMENT, s. [franchise, Fr.] the act of taking away the privileges or charter of a city.

TO DIFFUSE, (diffuze) v. a. [diffundo, Lat.] to pour a liquid on a plain surface, so as it may spread itself every way. Figuratively, to spread; scatter; disperse.

DIFFUSE, a. [diffusus, Lat.] scattered or spread widely. Applied to style, or the manner of a composition, copious, opposed to concise.

DIFFUSEDLY, ad. in a copious, liberal, and extensive manner; spread every way.

DIFFUSEDNESS, s. the state of being spread abroad; copiousness of style.

DIFFUSELY, ad. widely, extensively. Applied to style, copiously.

DIFFUSION, s. the state of being spread abroad. Copiousness or exuberance, applied to style.

DIFFUSIVE, a. having the quality of spreading abroad; scattered or spread abroad.

DIFFUSIVELY, ad. widely, extensively.

DIFFUSIVENESS, s. extension; dispersion; the power or quality of being spread abroad. Applied to style, want of conciseness.

TO DIG, v. a. pret. and part. pass. dug or digged. [die, Sax.] to open, or make a hole in the earth with a spade. Figuratively, to pierce with a pointed instrument, &c. To dig up, to throw up or uncover that which is buried under the earth.

DIGAMY, s. [dis and gamos, Gr.] marriage to a second wife after the death of the first.

DIGBY, SIR KENELM, a writer of some power and great singularities, during the first half of the 17th century. He was son to one of the mistaken conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot, and embraced his father's faith when he had arrived almost at middle age. He was imprisoned, and afterwards banished, by the Long Parliament; but by Cromwell was treated with great courtesy. He died in 1665, aged 62 years. His works were on such different subjects as Natural Philosophy and Neo-Platonism. He also replied to Sir Thomas Browne's Religio Medici.

DIGERENT, a. [digerens, Lat.] that has the power of digesting, or causing digestion.

DIGEST, s. [digesta, Lat.] a collection of the civil law, ranged under proper titles, by the order of the emperor Justinian.

TO DIGEST, v. n. [digestum, Lat.] to distribute or range methodically into different classes; to concoct or dissolve food in the stomach; to reduce to any plan or scheme; to receive a thing favourably, without loathing or reluctance; to receive and enjoy. In Chemistry, to soften by heat, boiling, or by putting a thing into a dunghill. In Surgery, to ripen a humour.

DIGESTER, DIGESTOR, s. one whose food easily turns into chyle. Papine digester, is an apparatus, consisting of a very strongly made boiler with lid to screw exactly on, for redrawing animal or vegetable substances to a pulp or jelly expeditiously.

DIGESTIBLE, a. capable of being digested or concocted.

DIGESTION, s. in Medicine, that change which the food undergoes in the stomach, in order to render it fit to supply the continual loss sustained by perspiration, the animal functions, or exercise. In Chemistry, the effect produced by the continued soaking of a solid substance in a liquid, with the application of heat.

DIGESTIVE, a. having the power to dissolve, alter, change, or turn the food into chyle; capable of dissolving by its heat.

DIGESTIVE, s. in Surgery, an application which ripens and prepares the matter of wounds for suppuration.

DIGGER, s. one who opens the ground with a spade.

TO DIGHT, v. a. [dihlan, Sax.] to dress, embellish, or adorn.

DIGIT, s. [digitus, Lat.] three-fourths of an inch in long measure. In Astronomy, the twelfth part of the diameter of the sun or moon. In Arithmetic, any of the numbers expressed by single figures.

DIGITATED, a. [digitatus, Lat.] branched out into divisions resembling fingers. In Botany, a digitated leaf, is one which consists of several simple leaves growing on one footstalk, as the cinquefoil; or that which has many deep gashes, cuts, or segments, as the hony.

DIGLADIATION, s. [digladiatio, Lat.] a combat with swords; any quarrel or contest.

DIGNIFICATION, s. the act of conferring honour; the preferring to some honourable rank.

DIGNIFIED, a. enjoying some honourable post, rank, or preferment, applied peculiarly to the clergy.

TO DIGNIFY, v. a. [dignus and facio, Lat.] to advance, prefer, or exalt to some place which demands honour and reverence; to honour; to adorn; to render respectable.

DIGNITARY, s. in the Canon Law, is a clergyman advanced to some rank above a parochial priest or canon; such is a bishop, dean, archdeacon, &c.

DIGNITY, s. [dignitas, Lat.] rank, preferment, or post; grandeur, or a majestic appearance. Among the clergy, a promotion or preferment to which any jurisdiction is annexed.

DIGNOTION, s. [dignoscio, Lat.] distinction; distinguishing mark.

TO DIGRESS, v. n. [digressus, Lat.] to depart from the main scope of a discourse, or intention of an argument; to wander; to go out of the right way or common track; to err.

DIGRESSION, s. [digredior, Lat.] a passage which has no connexion with the main scope of a discourse; deviation; or quitting the true path.

DIJON, a large city in the department of Côte d'Or, France. The streets are broad, well-paved, and straight, and the squares and public structures elegant. It is seated in a delightful plain, which produces excellent wine, and has a good trade, and some important manufactures. It is 138 miles from Paris. Population, about 30,000. Lat. 47. 20. N. Long. 5. 0. E.

DIJUDICATION, s. [dijudico, Lat.] judicial distinction.

DIKE, s. [die, Sax.] a channel made to receive water; a mound to hinder inundations, or to keep water from overflowing.

TO DILACERATE, v. a. [dilacerare, Lat.] to tear; to force in twain; to rend.

DILACERATION, s. [dilaceratio, Lat.] the act of forcing, tearing, or rending.

TO DILANIATE, v. a. [dilanio, Lat.] to tear; to rend in pieces in a butcherly and savage manner.

TO DILAPIDATE, v. n. [dilapido, Lat.] to go to ruin; to fall by decay.

DILAPIDATION, s. [dilapidatio, Lat.] in Law, is where an incumbent on a church benefice suffers the parsonage-house, or the out-house, to fall down, or be in decay, for want of necessary repair; for which the bishop may sequester the profits of such benefice for that purpose.

DILATABILITY, s. the quality of admitting or suffering extension.

DILATABLE, a. that may be stretched or extended.

DILATATION, s. [dilatatio, Lat.] the act of extending or stretching into a greater space.

TO DILATE, v. a. [dilato, Lat.] to extend, spread out, enlarge, or stretch. Figuratively, to relate a thing with all its minute circumstances.—v. n. to grow wider; to widen.

DILATOR, c. that which widens or extends any passage.

DILATORINESS, s. the quality of deferring a thing from one time to another through sloth.

DILATORY, a. [dilatorius, Lat.] putting off the doing of a thing from time to time through sloth.

DILECTION, s. [dilectio, Lat.] the act of loving; kindness.

DILEMMA, s. [dis and lemma, Gr.] in Logic, an argument consisting of two or more propositions, so disposed, that grant which you will, you will be pressed by the conclusion. Figuratively, a difficult choice, or troublesome alternative.

DILIGENCE, s. [diligentia, Lat.] constant endeavour; unremitting labour or practice.

DILIGENT, a. [diligens, Lat.] assiduous; persevering; constant.

DILIGENTLY, ad. with constant labour, caution, and care.

DILL, s. in Botany, a species of anethum, not growing in this country, but much used for its aromatic and carminative properties.

DILLENUS, JOHN JAMES, a distinguished German botanist, a friend of Dr. Sherard, by whom he was brought to England, and introduced to the botanical chair at Oxford. He wrote and edited several works on the study of plants; and died in 1747, aged 60 years.

DILUCID, a. [dilucidus, Lat.] clear, plain, pure, and transparent; obvious.

To DILUCIDATE, v. n. [dilucidare, Lat.] to make a proposition clear and easy to be understood; to explain; to free from obscurity.

DILUCIDATION, s. [dilucidatio, Lat.] the making a sentence clear and easy to be understood; an explanation.

DILUENT, a. [diluens, Lat.] having the power to make thin, or attenuate.

DILUENT, s. that which makes thin or fluid.

To DILUTE, v. a. [diluo, Lat.] to make a liquor thin by the mixture of some other.

DILUTE, a. thin; attenuated. "If the red and blue colours were more dilute and weak." Newton.

DILUTER, s. that which renders a body liquid; or, if it were so before, that which renders it thinner, or more liquid.

DILUTION, s. the act of rendering a liquid more thin or weak by the addition of some other.

DILUVIAN, a. [diluvium, Lat.] relating to or resembling the deluge.

DIM, a. [dimme, Sax.] having something which obstructs the sight, and hinders it from seeing clearly. Figuratively, deprived of its splendour or brightness; grown dark.

To DIM, v. a. to darken, or obstruct the sight, so as to hinder it from seeing objects in their full splendour. Figuratively, to make less bright; to render darkish.

DIMENSION, s. [dimensio, Lat.] the extension of a body considered as measured; size; space contained in any body. The three dimensions are length, breadth, and thickness or depth. In Algebra, the powers of the roots, or the values of the unknown quantities of equations.

DIMENSIONLESS, a. without any dimensions; of no certain bulk.

DIMENSIVE, a. [dimetior, Lat.] that marks the boundaries or outlines; that describes the measure or space occupied by a body.

To DIMINISH, v. a. [diminuo, Lat.] to make a thing less by cutting off or destroying some of its parts. Figuratively, to impair; lessen; to degrade, or render less honourable.—v. n. to grow less, or be impaired.

DIMINISHINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to detract from or lessen the character and reputation of another.

DIMINUTION, s. the act of rendering a thing less by cutting off or destroying some of its parts; the state of growing less either in bulk or weight. Figuratively, loss, or causing loss of reputation or dignity to another; discredit. In Architecture, the contraction of a column, as it ascends, whereby its upper part is made smaller than the lower.

DIMINUTIVE, a. small of size, bulk, or dimensions.

DIMINUTIVE, s. in Grammar, a word used to express smallness, or littleness; as, lapillus, in Latin, a little stone; maisonette, in French, a little house; paidion, in Greek, a little child; riculet, in English, a little river.

DIMINUTIVELY, ad. in a diminutive or small manner.

DIMINUTIVENESS, s. smallness, applied to size.

DIMISSORY, a. [dimissorius, low Lat.] that by which a person is dismissed to the jurisdiction of another.

DIMITY, DIMITY, s. [dimetis, Fr.] a sort of cotton stuff very like fustian. They came originally from Smyrna.

DIMLY, ad. [dimle, Sax.] in a dull, obscure, dark manner; without a clear perception, applied to the sight or understanding; deprived of its light, brightness, or splendour.

DIMNESS, s. [dimnes, Sax.] dullness of sight. Want of apprehension, applied to the mind.

DIMPLE, s. [Sax.] a small hollow, or sinking of the surface of the cheek or chin. In Botany, a little hollow dot, as in the seed of the barberry.

To DIMPLE, v. n. to appear with little hollows or inequalities of surface.

DIMPLED, part. or a. having dimples in the cheek or chin.

DIMPLY, a. full of dimples, little dents, or inequalities of surface.

DIN, s. [dyn, Sax.] a large noise; a violent and continued sound: an uproar, or shout.

To DIN, v. a. [dynan, Sax.] to stun, or deafen with frequent noise and clamour.

To DINE, v. n. [diner, Fr.] to eat one's chief or second meal, about the middle of the day.—v. a. to give a dinner to.

DINETICAL, a. [dineo, Gr.] whirling round; vertiginous.

To DING, v. a. preter, ding; [Sax.] to dash with force or violence.—v. n. to bluster, bounce, buff, or become insolent and impetuous. Colloquial and provincial.

DING-DONG, s. a word by which the sound of bells is mimicked.

DINGLE, s. [a diminutive from den, or din, Sax.] a hollow; a hollow between hills; a dale or vale.

DINGLE, Kerry, in Munster, Ireland. Several of the houses are built in the Spanish fashion, with ranges of stone balcony windows, this place having been formerly frequented by merchants of that nation, who came to fish on the coast, and traded with the inhabitants. It is situated on a bay of the same name, in which it has a tolerable harbour. It is 166 miles from Dublin. Pop. 3386.

DINGWALL, Ross-shire, Scotland. It is seated on the Frith of Cromarty, and some linen is manufactured here. It is 120 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2100.

DININGROOM, s. the principal apartment of a house, wherein entertainments are made.

DINNER, s. [diner, Fr.] the chief meal, or that which is eaten about the middle of the day.

DINT, s. [Sax.] a blow or stroke; the mark made by a blow; the cavity remaining after a violent pressure; violence; force; power.

DINUMERATION, s. [dinumero, Lat.] the act of numbering out singly.

DIOCESAN, s. a bishop considered in the relation he stands in to his inferior clergy.—a. pertaining to a diocese.

DIOCESE, DIOCESS, s. [diocesis, Gr.] in Ecclesiastical matters, the circuit of every bishop's jurisdiction. England is divided into two provinces, viz. Canterbury and York; and each province into subordinate dioceses, of which there are now 31 in England and Wales, including Sodor and Man.

DIOCLETIAN, C. VALERIUS, one of the Roman emperors, whose name is associated with the persecution of the Christians. He rose through the favour of the army from being in the ranks to be general, and finally emperor, on the assassination of Numerianus. He chose to share his dignity Maximianus, and by his wise regulations greatly tranquilized and strengthened the empire. After reigning for 20 years he abdicated the throne, and lived in retirement in Dalmatia. He died in 313, aged about 65 years.

DIODATI, JOHN, a learned divine of Geneva in the commencement of the 17th century. He was Hebrew professor at that seat of learning, and was much esteemed amongst all the communions where the Reformed religion, and not Lutheranism or Anglicanism, obtained. The best version of the Bible into Italian, is by him; he is the author of a volume of Annotations on the Bible, known in this country. He died in 1649, aged 73 years.

DIODORUS SICULUS, a Greek writer of universal history, of whose great work we have fifteen books, and fragments from above twenty others, remaining. They are of considerable value, as often furnishing a clue to the correction of the errors of other historians. He lived and wrote immediately before the Christian era.

DIOGENES, the famous cynic, one of the most earnest and consistent of Antisthenes' disciples. He carried out to the utmost extent the views of his master respecting the practice of virtue, and cast off every thing that could by any perversion of mind be regarded as superfluous both in food, dress, lodging, and manners. Very many anecdotes are preserved of this strange and repulsive student of virtue; his conflicts with Plato, his interview with Alexander the Great, his kenneling in a tub at Corinth, are well known. If the title of this sect be derived from the Greek word for dog, one can but think that in Diogenes the dogs have been grossly insulted. He died in 323, aged about 90 years. See CYNICS. Another Greek philosopher bore the name of Diogenes, but he was of Apollonia, and belonged to the school which speculated on the origin of things, being a follower of Anaximenes. The great step that he made was in the introduction of intelligence as a necessary quality of his source of all. He was a contemporary of Anaxagoras, and so flourished during the 5th century B. C. Another Diogenes, surnamed Laërtius, was a biographical writer, and author of a work on the Lives of the early Grecian Philosophers. He lived about 200 A. D.

DIGN ATTIUS, a Roman historian, and a man of consular dignity at Rome. His work is in Greek, and, though we have only portions of it, contains valuable information concerning some perplexed parts of the story of Rome. He wrote about 200 A. D.

DIONYSIUS, the name of two of the monarchs of Syracuse in Sicily, called, according to the practice of those times, as persons who had obtained supreme power unconstitutionally, tyrants. The Elder was a successful general, a somewhat bitter humorist both against gods and men, an admirer and patron of literature, and not an unjust ruler; he died in 367 B. C., aged about 60 years. The Younger, son of the former, was a man of no power of mind or character, and must be presumed mad. He was driven from his throne by Dion, and after 10 years' exile regained it, but he had grown more incapable during this time. His savage debauchery provoked another attempt, and by the Corinthians he was again dethroned, and spent the rest of his life in mere vulgar brutality at Corinth. He died about 320 B. C., having helped to give the modern signification to the title, tyrant. Another Dionysius, designated of Halicarnassus, was a Greek writer of history, and critical essayist. His work on Rome is of no great value, but his other works are highly esteemed. He wrote just before the Christian era. Another Dionysius, surnamed the Areopagite, was a convert of the apostle Paul at Athens; some writings exist respecting Christianity, or matters associated with it, but they are palpable forgeries.

DIPPTIC, DIPPTICAL, a. [diptomai, Gr.] affording a medium for the sight, or assisting the sight in the view of distant objects.

DIPPTRICS, s. the science of refractive vision, or that part of optics which considers the different refractions of light in its passage through different mediums, as air, water, glass, &c.

DIORAMA, s. [diora and orama, Gr.] a name given to a particular method of painting, and exhibiting views of landscapes and interiors of great buildings, by which an extraordinary effect is secured. The picture is so placed that the sides are not visible, and all the light admitted falls directly on it. By other contrivances, such as shadows, transparencies, &c., the illusion is made almost complete.

DIORTHOSIS, s. [diortho, Gr.] a surgical operation, by which crooked or disturbed members are made straight, or reduced to their proper shape.

DIOSCORIDES, a Greek physician and botanist of Asia Minor, who wrote a work on Materia Medica, which was regarded for a long time as a supreme authority respecting vegetable medicine. He was a learned man and a traveller, one who had carefully observed and correctly described, but without a particle of method. He lived about 50 A. D.

To DIP, v. a. participle. dipped or dipt : [dippan, Sax.] to put into any liquor so as to cover it therewith; to moisten, or wet; to mortgage, or engage as a pledge or security.—v. n. to sink; to immerge, or plunge into any liquor; to take a cursory or slight view; to read a page or two in a book.

DIPETALOUS, a. [dis and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, applied to such flowers as have two leaves.

DIPHTHONG, (diphthong, or diphthong) s. [dis and phthong, Gr.] two vowels joined so as to form one sound; as, vain, Cesar.

DIPLOE, s. in Anatomy, the inner plate or lamina of the skull.

DIPLOMA, s. [Lat.] a letter or writing conferring some privilege or title.

DIPLOMACY, s. [diploma, Lat.] the knowledge of international relations and law, and the practice of carrying on negotiations by which such relations are affected. Generally, the art of conducting oneself so as to secure the confidence of persons nearly related, but differing from each other, and to effect harmony.

DIPLOMATY, a. applied to ambassadors, envoys, &c., who have to conduct diplomacy, and to their knowledge of public documents, such as treaties, &c.

DIPPER, s. one who dips in the water. Figuratively, one who takes a slight or superficial view of an author.

DIPPING-NEEDLE, s. a magnetic needle so hung as to show by the amount of its depression below the horizontal line the force of terrestrial magnetism at any particular place.

DIPSAUS, s. [Lat.] a serpent, whose bite produces the sensation of unquenchable thirst.

DIPTOLE, s. [dis and pipto, Gr.] in Grammar, applied to such nouns as have only two cases.

DIPTYCH, (diptyk) s. [dipticha, Lat.] a register of bishops and martyrs.

DIRE, a. [dirus, Lat.] dreadful, or affecting a beholder with horror.

DIRECT, a. [directus, Lat.] straight. In Astronomy, appearing to the eye to move progressively through the zodiac, opposed to retrograde. In Genealogy, from grandfather to grandson, &c., opposed to collateral.

To DIRECT, v. a. [directum, Lat.] to go in a straight line; to aim or point against as a mark; to regulate, or adjust; to prescribe measures or a certain course; to order.

DIRECTION, s. [directio, Lat.] tendency or aim at a certain point; motion expressed by a certain impulse; orders; command; the superscription of a letter or parcel.

DIRECTIVE, a. having the power of directing, informing, or showing the way.

DIRECTLY, ad. in a straight line; without going about; immediately; presently; soon. Without delay, applied to time. Without circumlocution or evasion, applied to language or argument.

DIRECTNESS, s. the quality of proceeding in, or not deviating from, a straight line; the nearest way.

DIRECTOR, s. [Lat.] one who presides in an assembly or public company; one who is intrusted with the guidance, superintendence, or management of any design or work. Figuratively, a person who regulates the conduct of another; an instructor, one who is consulted in cases of conscience. In Surgery, an instrument used to guide the hand in some operation.

DIRECTORY, s. that which directs; a book published by the nonconformists, in the 17th century, to regulate the conduct of public worship; also the name given to the executive government in France, which consisted of five directors, as established in the year 1766.

DIREFUL, a. full of terror; very terrible; dismal.

DIREFULNESS, s. the quality which affects the mind with dread on the sight of some ghastly or terrible object.

DIRGE, s. [dyrke, Teut.] a mournful song sung at the funerals of persons.

DIRIGENT, a. [dirigo, Lat.] The dirigent line, in Geometry, is that along which the line descript is carried, in the generation of any figure.

DIRK, s. [Erse,] a kind of dagger used in the Highlands of Scotland.

DIRT, s. [dyrt, Belg.] mud; or the filth which is found in streets or highways; any thing which soils. Figuratively, meanness.

DIRTYLY, ad. in such a manner as to daub or soil. Figuratively, dishonestly; meanly; shamefully.

DIRTINESS, s. filthiness; foulness. Figuratively, dishonesty; meanness; baseness.

DIRTY, a. foul; daubed; or made nasty with dirt. Figuratively, dishonest; mean.

To DIRTY, v. a. to soil; to smear or daub with dirt. Figuratively, to scandalize, or disgrace.

DIRUPTION, s. [diruptio, Lat.] the act of bursting or breaking asunder.

DIS, an inseparable particle, used in composition, and implying a negation or privation, as dis-oblige, dis-obey, &c.; or to signify a separation, detachment, &c., as dis-uniting, dis-arm, dis-tributing, &c.

DISABILITY, v. a. the want of sufficient power to accomplish any design; or want of sufficient abilities to understand any proposition or doctrine; want of proper qualifications; weakness; impotence.

To DISABLE, v. a. to deprive of natural force or power; to weaken. Figuratively, to impair or diminish; to render inactive or unfit for action; to rob of power, influence, efficacy, usefulness, or pleasure.

To DISABUSE, (disabuse) v. a. to free a person from some mistake or error.

DISACCOMMODATION, s. the act of being unfit or unprepared.

To DISACCORD, v. a. to disagree.

To DISACCUSTOM, v. a. to destroy the force of habit by disuse or contrary practice.

To DISACKNOWLEDGE, v. a. not to acknowledge.

DISACQUAINTANCE, s. disuse of familiarity.

DISADVANTAGE, s. the want of fame, credit, honour, or any thing necessary to give a person pre-eminence; loss, injury; a state unprepared for defence.

DISADVANTAGEOUS, a. contrary to interest or profit; contrary to convenience.

DISADVANTAGEOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with interest or profit; in a manner not favourable or suitable to any useful end.

DISADVANTAGEOUSNESS, s. opposition or contrariety to profit, convenience, or interest.

To DISAFFECT, v. a. to alienate, turn aside, or weaken the affections of a person.

DISAFFECTED, part. or a. alienated; having lost all affection or zeal for a person or interest. Generally applied to those who are enemies to an establishment or government.

DISAFFECTEDLY, ad. in a disloyal manner.

DISAFFECTION, s. the quality of being no friend or well-wisher to an establishment or government.

DISAFFECTION, s. want of zeal for the government, or ardour for a reigning prince.

DISAFFIRMANCE, s. a confutation, or the denial of something affirmed.

To DISAFFOREST, v. a. to throw open to common use; to reduce from the privileges of a forest to that of common ground.

To DISAGREE, v. n. to differ with respect to qualities; to differ with respect to opinion; to be in a state of opposition.

DISAGREEABLE, a. contrary to, or inconsistent with; unpleasant to the taste, sight, or other senses.

DISAGREEABLENESS, s. unsuitableness; unpleasantness; offensiveness.

DISAGREEMENT, s. difference of qualities; contrariety of sentiment; contention or strife.

To DISALLOW, (the ov is pron. as in how), v. a. to deny the authority of a person or thing; to consider as unlawful; to refuse countenancing an action.—v. n. to refuse permission; to deny; not to grant.

DISALLOWABLE, a. that is not suffered, permitted, owned, or countenanced.

DISALLOWANCE, s. the refusal of permission or countenance; the looking on a thing as unlawful.

To DISANCHOR, (disanchor) v. a. to drive a ship from its anchor.

To DISANIMATE, v. a. to kill or deprive of life. Figuratively, to discourage; to dishearten.

DISANIMATION, s. the loss of life; death.

To DISANNUL, v. a. to deprive of authority; to abolish; to disallow.

To DISAPPEAR, (disapppear) v. n. to be lost to view, or to vanish out of sight.

To DISAPPOINT, v. a. to hinder a person from enjoying or receiving what he expected; to frustrate an expectation.

DISAPPOINTMENT, s. the not receiving a thing expected.

DISAPPROBATION, s. an act of dislike, arising from something disagreeable to a person's taste, or not consistent with his choice or judgment.

To DISAPPROVE, v. a. [disapprouver, Fr.] to dislike; to show that a thing wants merit to engage our love, or secure esteem.

To DISARM, v. a. [désarmer, Fr.] to take away arms from a person.

To DISARRAY, v. a. to undress; or pull off a person's clothes.

DISARRAY, s. disorder; confusion; loss of order in battle; undress.

DISASTER, s. [désastre, Fr.] misfortune; an incident occasioning grief, by its being unexpected and undeserved.

DISASTROUS, a. unlucky; unfortunate; calamitous; or afflicted by the happening of some sudden and unexpected misfortune.

DISASTROUSLY, ad. in an unlucky, unfortunate, or afflicting manner.

DISASTROUSNESS, s. unluckiness; unfortunateness.

To DISAVOUCH, v. n. to refuse; to deny, or disown.

To DISAVOW, (the ov is pron. as in now), v. a. to disown; to deny the knowledge of a person or thing; to refuse concurring in a design or undertaking; to lay aside; decline.

DISAVOWAL, s. denial; disowning; abhorrence.

DISAVOWMENT, s. denial.

To DISAUTHORIZE, v. a. to lessen the credit of a thing, or render it suspicious.

To DISBAND, v. a. to dismiss from an army; to disband soldiers. Figuratively, to discharge from service, or annihilate.—v. n. to quit the service of the army; to break up or separate.

To DISBAR, v. a. [désbarquer, Fr.] to bring to land from a ship; to put on shore from some vessel.

DISBELIEF, (disbelief) s. refusal of giving assent to a thing which is proposed to be believed.

To DISBELIEVE, (disbelieve) v. a. to withhold or refuse assent to a thing proposed as true; to deny the truth of a doctrine or proposition.

DISBELIEVER, (disbeliever) s. one who refuses to assent to a thing proposed to him as true; one who refuses to believe a truth or doctrine; an infidel.

To DISBRANCH, v. a. to separate or cut off a branch from a tree. Figuratively, to disjoin, or separate.

To DISBURD, v. a. in Gardening, to take away such branches or twigs as are newly put forth and ill-placed.

To DISBURDEN, v. a. to free from any pressing and troublesome weight or load; to clear from any impediment; to communicate one's afflictions to another, and thereby lessen their pressure.—v. n. to ease the mind of some pressing affliction.

To DISBURSE, v. a. [débourse, Fr.] to spend or lay out money.

DISBURSEMENT, s. [déboursement, Fr.] the spending or laying out money.

DISBURSER, s. one that lays out money, or defrays the expenses of an undertaking.

DISC, s. [discus, Lat.] in Astronomy, the apparent surface of the sun, moon, or other heavenly body. Also, a circular piece of thin metal, paper, &c.

DISCALCEATED, a. [dis and calceus, Lat.] without shoes; with naked feet.

DISCALCEATION, s. the act of pulling off the shoes.

To DISCANDY, v. n. to dissolve or melt.

To DISCARD, v. a. to discharge from any service or employment.

DISCARNATE, a. stripped of flesh.

To DISCASE, v. a. to pull off one's clothes; to strip.

To DISCERN, v. a. [discerno, Lat.] to descry, discover, or perceive by the sight; to distinguish; to make a difference between.

DISCERNER, s. a discoverer, or one who descries; a judge; one capable of distinguishing the difference of things.

DISCERNIBLE, a. that may be seen or discovered by the eye or judgment; distinguishable; apparent.

DISCERNIBLENESS, s. the possibility of being discovered by the sight, or perceived by the mind.

DISCERNIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be distinguished or perceived.

DISCERNING, part. or a. having the power of making a distinction between things, or perceiving those qualities or properties in which they differ; judicious.

DISCERNINGLY, ad. with discretion or prudence, arising from a knowledge of the qualities in which things or persons differ from each other.

DISCERNMENT, s. judgment; or the power of distinguishing the qualities in which things or persons differ from each other.

To DISCERP, v. a. [dis and carpo, Lat.] to tear in pieces.
DISCERPTIBILITY, s. liability to be destroyed by disunion of parts.

DISCERPTIBLE, a. frangible; separable; liable to be destroyed by the disunion of its parts.

DISCERPTION, s. the act of pulling to pieces.

To DISCHARGE, v. a. [décharger, Fr.] to free from any load or employment; to turn away from a service, or out of a post. Figuratively, to fire a gun; to clear, or pay a debt; to free from an obligation; to clear from an accusation; to perform or execute an office; to disband an army, or dismiss from attendance; to oblige, or destroy.

DISCHARGE, s. vent; explosion; the matter vented; the disappearance, vanishing, or destroying of a colour; dismissal from an office or employment; the payment of a debt; performance of a duty; exemption, or acquittance.

DISCHARGER, s. one who performs a duty; makes a payment; dismisses a servant; frees from attendance or captivity.
To DISCIND, v. a. [dis and scindo, Lat.] to divide; to cut in pieces. "We could easily discind them," Boyle.

DISCIPLE, s. [discipulus, Lat.] a scholar, or one who attends the lectures, and professes the tenets, of another. In the New Testament, the followers of Jesus Christ, in general, were called Disciples; but in a more restrained sense, the Disciples were those alone who were his immediate followers, and attendants on his person.

DISCIPLESHIP, s. the state or condition of a scholar, or one who follows the precepts of any particular teacher.

DISCIPLINABLE, a. [disciplinabilis, Lat.] capable of instruction or improvement; fit to be punished for not attending to the instructions of a master.

DISCIPLINARIAN, a. belonging to discipline.

DISCIPLINARIAN, s. [disciplina, Lat.] one who rules or teaches with great strictness or rigour; one who will not permit a person to deviate from his doctrine.

DISCIPLINARY, a. belonging to discipline, or a regular course of instruction or education.

DISCIPLINE, s. instruction, education, or the method taken to adorn the mind, and infuse virtuous habits. Figuratively, rule, or government; military order, government, maxims, or regulations; a state of subjection or obedience; any thing taught; a doctrine, art, or science; punishment, correction, or chastisement for transgressing the rules of conduct, or neglecting to make a proper use of instruction.

To DISCIPLINE, v. a. to communicate the rudiments of learning; to instruct or educate; to regulate or keep in order; to punish, correct, or chastise for breach of command or neglect of instruction; to reform.

To DISCLAIM, v. a. to disown; to deny having any knowledge of, or acquaintance with; to withdraw a claim.

DISCLAIMER, s. one who disowns or renounces. In Law, a plea containing an express denial or refusal.

To DISCLOSE, (discluse) v. a. [disculdo, Lat.] to uncover, or discover a thing which has been hid; to reveal what should be or is hid or secret.

DISCLOSER, (discluser) s. one who discovers something hidden, or reveals some secret.

DISCLOSEURE, (discluseure) s. the making a thing seen which was hidden from sight; the revealing a secret.

DISCLOSURE, (disclosure) s. emission.

DISCOLORATION, (discoloration) s. a stain, or change of colour for the worse.

To DISCOLOUR, (discolor) v. a. [discoloro, Lat.] to spoil the colour of a thing; to stain, or daub.

To DISCOMFIT, v. a. [déconfer, Fr.] to overcome, beat, or rout an enemy in battle.

DISCOMFIT, s. a defeat; a rout, or overthrow of an enemy.

DISCOMFORTURE, s. overthrow; defeat; rout; ruin.

DISCOMFORT, s. a great degree of uneasiness; melancholy; despair.

To DISCOMFORT, v. a. to make a person uneasy; to grieve, afflict, sadden, or deprive of comfort.

DISCOMFORTABLE, a. refusing comfort, or rejecting consolation; occasioning sadness or melancholy.

To DISCOMME'ND, v. a. to blame; to disapprove, or censure.

DISCOMME'NDABLE, a. deserving blame or censure.

DISCOMME'NDATION, s. blame; censure; reproach.

DISCOMME'NDER, s. one who blames, or censures.

To DISCOMME'ND, v. a. to put to an inconvenience; to rumple or disorder dress.

DISCOMME'DIOUS, a. inconvenient; attended with trouble; displeasing.

DISCOMME'DITY, s. inconvenience; disadvantage; hurt, or mischief.

To DISCOMPOSE, (discomposé) v. a. [dis and compono, Lat.] to put into confusion or disorder; to ruffle, applied to the temper or mind; to rumple clothes; to vex.

DISCOMPOSEURE, (discomposéure) s. disorder; perturbation; or disquiet of mind, arising from some disagreeable circumstance.

To DISCONCERT, v. a. to unsettle, disorder, or discompose the mind; to frustrate, or defeat an undertaking or design.

DISCONCERTMENT, s. want of agreement; inconsistency; or opposition of sentiments.

DISCONGRUITY, s. disagreement; difference; inconsistency.

DISCONSULATE, a. without comfort; without hope; melancholy, or grieved on account of some affliction; refusing comfort.

DISCONSULATELY, ad. in a comfortless manner.

DISCONSULATENESS, s. the state of a person under affliction refusing comfort.

DISCONTENT, s. want of content; being unsatisfied with one's present condition.

DISCONTENTED, a. uneasy; unsatisfied with one's present condition; malevolent.

DISCONTENTEDNESS, s. uneasiness; the not being pleased or satisfied with one's present condition; the not receiving a full satisfaction at the sight of an object.

DISCONTENTMENT, s. the state of being dissatisfied or uneasy.

DISCONTINUANCE, s. want of union or adhesion; the separation of the parts of any body. Cessation; intermission; or stop, applied to action. In Law, an interruption, or breaking off, as discontinuance of possession, or discontinuance of process. The effect of discontinuance of possession is, that a man may not enter upon his own land or tenement alienated, whatsoever his right be unto it, or by his own authority; but must seek to recover possession by law. The effect of discontinuance of plea is, that the instance may not be taken up again, but by a new writ to begin the suit afresh.

DISCONTINUATION, s. the breaking the continuity; breach of union, or separation of the parts of a thing.

To DISCONTINUE, v. n. [discontinuer, Fr.] to break off; to separate; to lose an established privilege or custom.—v. a. to leave off; to cease from any action which is begun.

DISCONTINUITY, s. want of cohesion; breaking off union.

DISCONVENIENCE, s. incongruity; disagreement; opposition of nature.

DISCORD, s. [discordia, Lat.] a state wherein persons mutually endeavour to hurt each other, and are lost to all the tender sentiments of humanity and benevolence; disagreement. Figuratively, difference, contrariety, or opposition of qualities. In Music, sounds not of themselves pleasing, yet able to please when judiciously introduced into a composition.

To DISCORD, v. n. to disagree; to produce a disagreeable and unpleasant sound when joined together.

DISCORDANCE, DISCORDANCY, s. disagreement; opposition; inconsistency.

DISCORDANT, a. inconsistent; disagreeing, or at variance with itself; opposite, or contrary.

DISCORDANTLY, ad. in such a manner as to be at variance, or inconsistent with itself. Not harmonizing or agreeing with each other, applied to sounds. Peevishly; in a contradictory manner.

To DISCOVER, v. a. [découvrir, Fr.] to make a thing seen by removing the covering which concealed it from sight; to make known; to find out something unknown; to disclose, or bring to light something which is secret, and endeavoured to be kept so.

DISCOVERABLE, a. that may be found out either by application of the mind, or some of the external senses; apparent; obvious.

DISCOVERER, s. one who finds out a thing, place, or position not known before.

DISCOVERY, s. the act of finding out any thing hidden; showing any thing concealed or covered.

To DISCOUNSEL, v. a. to dissuade; to turn aside from any vice, undertaking, or persuasion.

DISCOUNT, s. a sum allowed a person for payment before the bill or debt becomes due, which is generally as much as the interest would amount to for the space the bill has to run from the time of payment, or of making that allowance. Also, an abatement from the stated price of any article made in consideration of cash payment, &c.

To DISCOUNT, v. a. to give a person ready money for a bill before due, allowing interest for the time which it has to run; to allow or abate a person a certain sum for prompt payment, on the purchase of any commodity.

To DISCOURTENANCE, v. a. to discourage by cold treatment or indifference; to show one's disapprobation of any measure, by coldness of behaviour, or by taking such methods as may defeat it. Figuratively, to abash, or put to shame.

DISCOURTENANCE, s. coldness, or indifference of treatment and behaviour; unfriendly aspect or regard.

DISCOURTENANCER, s. one who discourages by cold treatment, by an unfavourable aspect, or by want of warm and cordial affection.

To DISCOURAGE, (diskourage) v. a. to dishearten; to deprive of courage or vigour; to deter from any attempt; used with from, and improperly with to.

DISCOURAGER, (diskourage) s. one who damps or checks the courage or vigour of a person; one who deters, or frightens a person from an attempt.

DISCOURAGEMENT, (diskouragement) s. the act of frightening or deterring a person from any attempt, by representing the dangers attending it, or by involving him in difficulties; any impediment or difficulty which renders a person unwilling to undertake a design.

DISCOURSE, (diskourse) s. [discours, Fr.] in Logic, an act or operation of the mind, whereby it proceeds from a thing known to one unknown, or from premises to consequences. Conversation or talk, wherein persons mutually convey their ideas and sentiments to each other; speech; a treatise or dissertation written or uttered.

To DISCOURSE, (diskourse) v. a. to converse, or talk with another; to treat a subject in a solemn or set manner; to reason, or proceed from propositions to their consequences.

DISCOURSE, (diskourse) s. a speaker or writer on any subject.

DISCOURSIVE, (diskoursive) a. passing or advancing from a known thing to an unknown, or from premises to consequences; partaking of the nature of dialogue or conversation.

DISCOURTEOUS, (diskorteous, or diskirtuous) a. void of civility or complaisance.

DISCOURTESY, (diskortesy, or diskirtesy) s. an act of rudeness, disrespect, or incivility.

DISCOURTEOUSLY, (diskortiously, or diskirtiously) ad. in an uncivil, rude manner.

DISCOURS, a. in Botany, applied to such flowers as consist of many flowers, forming a broad, plain, or flat surface, such as the sunflower.

DISCREDIT, s. [dis et crédit, Fr.] disgrace; ignominy; infamy, or that which involves a person in shame or infamy; the imputation of a fault, which lessens the fame of a person, and deprives him of the esteem he enjoyed before.

To DISCREDIT, v. a. [discrediter, Fr.] to destroy the reputation of a person or thing; to render a thing suspicious which is believed to be true; to hinder a rumour from spreading, by showing it to be false.

DISCREET, a. [discret, Fr.] able to distinguish, and taking time to distinguish between things and their consequences; acting with prudence and caution; modest, not forward.

DISCREETLY, ad. prudently; cautiously; in such a manner as shows deliberation and regard for the differences of things and their consequences.

DISCREETNESS, s. the quality of acting agreeably to the differences or nature of things; a conduct guided by deliberation and prudence.

DISCRETE, a. [discretus, from discerno, Lat.] applied to quantity, that which is not continued or joined together; separate; distinct. Applied to propositions, such as contain truths or sentiments set in contrast to each other, and joined by a disjunctive conjunction: as, "I resign my life, but not my honour," is a discrete proposition. Discrete proportion, is when the ratio between two pairs of numbers or quantities is the same, but the proportion between all the four numbers is not the same. Thus 6 : 8 :: 3 : 4, the ratio between 6 and 8 is the same as that between 3 and 4, but 6 is not to 8 as 3 is to 4, and therefore the proportion is not continued between all the four numbers as the continued proportionals, 3 : 6 :: 12 : 24.

DISCRETION, s. [discretio, Lat.] prudent behaviour, arising from a knowledge of, and acting agreeably to, the difference of things. Figuratively, an uncontrolled power, or one which is to be limited to no conditions.

DISCRETIONARY, (diskretshonary) a. left to act without any other restraint or guide than a person's own prudence and discretion.

DISCREETIVE PROPOSITIONS, s. in Logic, are those where various judgments are denoted by the particles but, notwithstanding, &c., either expressed or understood: as, travellers may change their climate, but not their temper. In Grammar, discrete conjunctions are such as imply opposition; as, not a man, but a beast.

DISCRIMINABLE, a. distinguishable by some outward marks.

To DISCRIMINATE, v. a. [discrimino, Lat.] to distinguish, or mark with some thing, which shows a difference; to separate, or select.

DISCRIMINATENESS, s. distinction; or obvious difference, which renders a separation and distinction easy.

DISCRIMINATION, s. [discriminatio, Lat.] the state of a thing separated from others, and distinguished for peculiar uses; distinction, or the method of testifying the consciousness a person has of the difference between certain things.

DISCRIMINATIVE, a. that constitutes, or has regard to, the difference between things.

DISCRIMINOUS, a. [discrimen, Lat.] full of danger; hazardous.

DISCUBITORY, a. [discubitorius, Lat.] fitted to the posture of leaning.

DISCUMBENCY, s. [discumbo, Lat.] the posture of reclining at meals, after the Roman manner.

To DISCUMBER, v. a. to disengage, or free from any thing which is a load, or hinders a person from a free use of his limbs.

DISCURSIVE, a. [discursif, Fr.] in perpetual motion or agitation. In Logic, proceeding from things known to things unknown, or from generals to particulars, and vice versa.

DISCURSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to deduce one thing from another, or of a thing unknown from one that is known.

DISCURSORY, a. [discurreo, Lat.] deducing things unknown from those which are known; argumentative.

DISCUS, s. [Lat.] in Antiquity, a round shield consecrated to the memory of some hero, and hung up in temples in commemoration of some great exploit. Likewise a kind of quoit used by the Romans in their games.

To DISCUSS, v. a. [discuto, Lat.] to examine; to get over; to explain a difficulty by meditation or debate. In Surgery, to disperse any swelling.

DISCUSSE, s. one who determines a point, or explains a difficulty.

DISCUSSION, s. the explaining a difficulty; the examining into some knotty point or sentiment. In Surgery, the removing or dispersion of any swelling, by insensible perspiration.

DISCUNNIVE, a. having the power to discuss any humour.

DISCUTIENT, (diskishtient) s. in Physic, a medicine which opens the pores, attenuates the fluids, and disperses humours by insensible perspiration, or otherwise.

To DISDAIN, v. a. [disdigner, Fr.] to reject with scorn; to refuse, or decline with abhorrence, as unworthy one's character.

DISDAIN, a. [disdegno, Ital.] contempt, as unworthy of one's choice; abhorrence; or contemptuous anger and indignation.

DISDAINFUL, a. abounding with indignation; haughty; scornful.

DISDAINFULLY, ad. in a contemptuous manner; with proud or haughty scorn.

DISDAINFULNESS, s. contempt proceeding from a mean opinion of a person or thing, including haughtiness and pride.

DISEASE, (disēse) s. the state of a living body, wherein it is prevented from the exercise of any of its functions, whether vital, natural, or animal, attended with a sensation of uneasiness.

ness. In Botany, the state of a plant, wherein it is rendered incapable of answering the several purposes for which it was formed.

To DISFA/SE, (disfaze) v. a. to affect the body so as to render the exercise of any of its functions uneasy, or impracticable.

DISFA/SEDNES, (disfazedness) s. a state wherein an animal is rendered incapable of performing such functions as are necessary to health and life, and for which their frame seems to have been intended.

To DISEMBARK, v. a. to carry from a ship or other vessel to land.—v. n. to go on shore from a ship.

DISEMBOWIED, a. stripped or divested of body.

To DISEMBOWGUE, (disembóg) v. a. to discharge at its mouth into the sea, applied to rivers.—v. n. to flow.

DISEMBOWELLED, part. taken from the bowels.

To DISEMBROIL, v. n. (débrouiller, Fr.) to free from confusion, disorder, perplexity, or from quarrels which occasion public commotions.

To DISENABLE, v. a. to deprive of power; to weaken, or render a person unable to perform an undertaking. See DISABLE.

To DISENCHANT, v. a. to free from the power of any spell, charm, or enchantment.

To DISENCUMBER, v. a. to free from any thing which hinders a person from exercising the powers of his understanding or body, and oppresses him with a sensation of burthenedness or uneasiness; to free from any hindrance or obstruction.

DISENCUMBRANCE, s. freedom from hinderance, perplexity, or uneasiness, owing to any thing which prevents a person from exercising his strength, or the faculty of his mind, freely.

To DISENGAGE, v. a. to separate from any thing which is joined to a thing; to separate from any thing which is an encumbrance; to clear from impediments or obstructions; to withdraw, to divert the mind from any thing which powerfully attracts its attention or affection.—v. n. to set ourselves free from.

DISENGAGED, a. at leisure; not fixed to any particular object, or obliged to attend any particular person.

DISENGAGEDNESS, s. the quality of being disengaged; freedom from any pressing business.

DISENGAGEMENT, s. release or freedom from any obligation, attendance, or affection, which influences the mind.

To DISENTANGLE, v. a. to set free from an obstacle or impediment which hinders the mind or body from a proper use of their respective powers and abilities. Figuratively, to free from perplexity.

To DISENTERRE, v. a. [dis and enterre, Fr.] to unbury; to take out of the grave.

To DISENTHRALE, v. a. to set free; to rescue from slavery.

To DISENTHRONE, v. a. to depose, or drive from the throne.

To DISENTRANCE, v. a. to free from a trance; to raise from a swoon.

To DISESPOUSE, (disespóize) v. a. to break a marriage contract.

DISESTEEM, s. want of esteem; a slight; loss of credit or esteem; something less than contempt.

To DISESTEEM, v. a. to regard slightly; to consider in a light which lessens esteem or approbation, but does not rise to contempt.

DISFA/VOUR, s. a circumstance which impedes or hinders an undertaking; want of countenance, or such a concurrence as may render a design successful; a state wherein a person meets with no encouragement or assistance from another.

To DISFA/VOUR, v. a. to discountenance, or hinder a design from taking effect for want of assistance or encouragement.

DISFIGURATION, s. the act of spoiling the form of a thing or person, or rendering them ugly or disagreeable; the state of a thing whose natural form and beauty is spoiled. Figuratively, deformity.

To DISFIGURE, v. a. to change any thing to a worse form; to render a thing less beautiful, or less agreeable.

DISFIGUREMENT, s. change from beauty to ugliness, or from a pleasing form to one which is less so.

To DISFRANCHISE, v. a. to deprive a place of its charter, privileges, or immunities; or a person of his freedom as a citizen.

DISFRANCHISEMENT, s. the act of depriving a person or place of privileges or immunities.

To DISFURNISH, v. a. to deprive; to unfurnish; to strip. "If you should here disfurnish me," Shak.

To DISGLORIFY, v. a. to deprive of glory; to treat with indignity. "And God—compared with idols disglorified, blasphemed," Milt.

To DISGORGE, v. a. [dégorgé, Fr.] to vomit, or discharge by the mouth. Figuratively, to discharge or pour out with violence.

DISGRACE, (disgrâce, Fr.) shame; infamy; a state wherein a person or thing has lost its honour, esteem, and those qualities which rendered it worthy of respect; the state of a person who is out of favour.

To DISGRACE, v. a. to deprive of honour, esteem, or high employment.

DISGRACEFUL, a. full of dishonour, or those circumstances and qualities which make a person an object of reproach.

DISGRACEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as must subject a person to dishonour, shame, or reproach.

DISGRACEFULNESS, s. shamefulness.

DISGRACER, s. one who deprives another of some honourable employment; one who exposes another to shame and dishonour.

DISGRACIOUS, a. unkind; unfavourable; displeasing.

To DISGUISE, (disguise) v. a. [déguiser, Fr.] to conceal a person by means of some strange dress. Figuratively, to dissemble, or conceal by a false appearance; to disfigure or change the form of a thing; to intoxicate and render unseemly by drinking.

DISGUISE, (disguise) s. a dress made use of to elude the notice of those we are acquainted with, or to conceal a person; a false appearance made use of to cover or conceal some design. SYNON. In order to mask it is necessary to cover the face with a false visage; but to disguise, it is sufficient to change the common appearance.

DISGUISEMENT, s. dress of concealment. "Under this disguisement," Syd.

DISGUISER, (disguizer) s. one who alters the natural appearance of a person; one who masks or conceals his real designs under some false and specious appearance.

DISGUST, s. [dégoût, Fr.] an aversion arising from the disagreeableness of a thing to the palate; distaste; displeasure, arising from some disagreeable action or behaviour.

To DISGUST, v. a. [dégoûter, Fr.] to raise an aversion or nausea in the stomach by a disagreeable taste; to raise an aversion or dislike by some disagreeable or offensive action.

DISGUSTFUL, a. abounding with such qualities as produce aversion or dislike.

DISH, s. [disc, Sax.] a broad shallow vessel with a rim, either of silver, pewter, gold, china, or earthenware, used for holding and carrying joints or other victuals to table, and differing from a plate in size.

To DISH, v. a. to serve meat up elegantly, or place it in a dish. DISHABILLE, s. [déshabillé, Fr.] an undress; a loose and negligent dress.

DISHABILLE, a. loosely and negligently dressed.

To DISHABIT, v. a. to throw out of place.

DISHARMONY, s. contrariety of harmony.

DISH-CLOUT, s. the cloth with which the maids rub their dishes.

To DISHEARTEN, (dishärten) v. a. to deprive a person of courage and alacrity; to terrify; to make a person imagine a thing to be impracticable, or that some approaching evil is unavoidable.

DISHERRISON, s. the act of debarring a person from an inheritance.

To DISHERRIT, v. a. to deprive a person from succeeding to an inheritance; to cut off from an inheritance.

To DISHLEVEL, v. a. [décheveler, Fr.] to spread hair in a loose, negligent, and disorderly manner.

DISHING, a. conceals; a technical term among artificers.

DISHONEST, a. void of honesty; fraudulent; or inconsistent with justice. Figuratively, reproachful, or shameful.

DISHONESTLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with honour and honesty.

DISHONESTY, s. want of probity; the act of doing any thing to cheat or defraud another of his property; unchasteness.

DISHONOUR, s. that which affects a person with disgrace. Figuratively, reproach, which deprives a person of reputation.

To DISHONOUR, v. a. to bring to shame; to disgrace; to blast the character of a person; to treat with indignity.

DISHONOURABLE, a. void of respect, reverence, or esteem; shameful; reproachful.

DISHONOURER, s. one who treats a person with indignity.

TO DISHORN, v. a. to strip of horns. "We'll dishorn the spirit," Shak.

DISHWASHER, s. in Natural History, the name of a bird commonly called the wagtail.

DISIMPROVEMENT, s. reduction from a better to a worse state; the contrary to melioration or improvement.

DISINCLINATION, s. want of affection; want of propensity.

TO DISINCLINE, v. a. to lessen one's affections for a thing or person.

DISINGENUITY, s. unfairness; low and mean artifice.

DISINGENUOUS, a. not of an open or frank disposition; mean; sly; cunning or subtle.

DISINGENUOUSLY, ad. in an unfair, sly, or crafty manner.

DISINGENUOUSNESS, s. a behaviour wherein a person endeavours to secure his ends by concealing his designs, and using low craft and mean subterfuges in order to accomplish them.

DISINHERRISON, s. See DISHERISON.

TO DISINHERIT, v. a. to cut off from a right to, or deprive of, an inheritance.

TO DISINTER, v. a. to take a body out of a grave.

DISINTEREST, s. that which is contrary to a person's success or prosperity; a disadvantage or loss; indifference to, or disregard of, profit or private advantage.

DISINTERESTED, a. not influenced by any views of private lure or advantage; superior to any selfish motives.

DISINTERESTEDLY, ad. in a disinterested manner.

DISINTERESTEDNESS, s. contempt of private interest; neglect of personal profit.

TO DISJOIN, v. a. [déjoindre, Fr.] to separate or divide things united; to part.

TO DISJOINT, v. a. to put out of joint; to separate things at the place where they are cemented or joined together; to carve or cut in pieces, by separating the joints from each other; to make incoherent; to destroy the connexion of words or sentences.

—v. n. to fall asunder, or in pieces.

DISJUDICATION, s. [judicio, Lat.] judgment; determination; more properly disjunction.

DISJUNCT, a. [disjuncto, Lat.] disjoined; separate.

DISJUNCTION, s. separation; or the act of dividing things or persons.

DISJUNCTIVE, a. disuniting; not proper for union. In Grammar, applied to such particles as denote a separation or contrast; "I love him, or I fear him;" the word or is a disjunctive conjunction.

In Logic, applied to such propositions whose parts are opposed to each other by disjunctive particles, thus: "Quantity is either length, breadth, or depth."

DISJUNCTIVELY, ad. distinctly; separately.

DISK, s. [discus, Lat.] in Optics, the magnitude of the glass of a telescope, or the width of its aperture. In Botany, the central or middle part of composite flowers, as in the daisy; also, that portion of the flower between the calyx and the pistil, either within or without the corolla, when it assumes a glandular, swollen, or fleshy appearance, which proceeds from the abortion of some of the petals or stamens.

DISKINDNESS, s. a want of kindness, affection, or benevolence, an act whereby a thing or person receives damage or detriment, and is supposed to be derived from ill-will, or alienated affection.

DISLIKE, s. want of approbation or esteem, showed by a person's behaviour and actions.

TO DISLIKE, v. a. to disapprove; to look on as improper or faulty; to show disgust or disesteem; to change the appearance of a thing, or make it look different from what it was before.

DISLIKENESS, s. the quality which makes a thing appear different to what it was before; the quality which makes a difference between things.

DISLICKER, s. one who disapproves a person or thing.

TO DISLIMN, v. a. to unpaint; to strike out of a picture.

TO DISLOCATE, v. a. [disloco, Lat.] to put out of its proper place; to disjoin.

DISLOCATION, s. the act of putting things out of their proper places. In Surgery, a joint put out, or the forcing a bone from the socket; a luxation.

TO DISLODGE, v. a. to remove from a place or settlement by force; to drive an enemy from a post; to remove an army to other quarters.—v. n. to decamp, or go away to another place.

DISLOYAL, a. [déloyal, Fr.] false or disobedient to a sovereign.

DISLOYALLY, ad. in a faithless, disobedient, or rebellious manner.

DISLOYALTY, s. want of fidelity to the sovereign.

DISMAL, (dizmal) a. [dies malus, Lat.] that affects the mind with horror; melancholy; gloomy; sorrowful.

DISMAL SWAMP, a marshy tract in Virginia and N. Carolina, United States, 30 miles long and 10 broad. It is mostly covered with trees, and the underwood is so thick as to be impervious. Lake Drummond lies in the centre.

DISMALLY, (dizmally) ad. in such a manner as to excite horror, sorrow, or melancholy.

DISMALNESS, (dizmalness) s. the quality which excites horror, melancholy, or sorrow.

TO DISMANTLE, v. a. to strip a person of any dress which served him as an ornament or defence; to smooth; to unfold; to destroy; to destroy the outworks or defences of a place; to break down or destroy any thing external.

TO DISMASK, v. a. to pull off a mask; to uncover.

TO DISMAY, v. a. [desmayer, Span.] to discourage or dishearten with fear.

DISMAY, s. loss of courage, occasioned by some frightful object of apprehension.

DISMAYEDNESS, s. the state of mind arising from the sight of some frightful object, or the apprehension of some danger.

DISME, s. [Fr.] a tenth; the tenth part; the tithe.

TO DISMEMBER, v. a. to divide one member from another; to cut or tear to pieces.

TO DISMISS, v. a. [dis and mitto, Lat.] to send away; to discharge from attendance; to give leave to depart; to discharge from service, or from an employment.

DISMISSION, s. the act of sending away; an honourable discharge from an office; deprivation; or the being turned out of any post or office.

TO DISMORTGAGE, v. a. to redeem from or clear a mortgage by paying the money lent on any lands or estate.

TO DISMOUNT, v. a. [dismontar, Fr.] to unhorse; to lose any preferment, or post of honour; to dislodge or force cannon from their carriage.—v. n. to alight from a horse; to descend from an eminence or high place.

TO DISNATURALIZE, v. a. to alienate; to deprive of the privilege of birth.

DISOBEDIENCE, s. a wilful acting contrary to the commands or prohibitions of a superior.

DISOBEDIENT, part. or a. guilty of acting contrary to the laws, or the commands of a superior.

TO DISOBEY, v. a. to act contrary to the will or commands of a superior; to break the laws, by doing something which is forbidden, or refusing to do something that is commanded.

DISOBIGATION, s. an act which alienates the affections of a person, or changes a friend into an enemy; an act which occasions disgust or dislike.

TO DISOBLIGE, (pron. disobléeje) v. a. to do something which offends another; to displease.

DISOBLIGING, part. or a. displeasing; void of those qualities which attract friendship; offensive.

DISOBLIGINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to displease.

DISOBLIGINGNESS, s. readiness to displease.

DISORBED, part. cast from its proper orbit or path, within which it performs its revolutions. "Or like a star disorb'd," Shak.

DISORDER, s. [désordre, Fr.] want of method, or regular distribution; tumult, or confusion; breach or violation of laws; disease, generally used for some slight disease.

TO DISORDER, v. a. to throw into confusion; to destroy the regular distribution of a thing; to ruffle or confuse; to make sick, or affect with some slight disease; to discompose.

DISORDERED, part. not complying with law or order, applied to morals. Indisposed, or affected with a slight disease, applied to the body. Confused, tumultuous, or rebellious, applied to states. Rampled, applied to dress.

DISORDEREDNESS, s. irregularity; want of order; confusion.

DISORDERLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with law or virtue, applied to morals. In an irregular or tumultuous manner, applied to the motion of the animal spirits or fluids. In a manner wanting method, applied to the placing of things, to the distribution of ideas, or to the arrangement of arguments in learned productions.

DISORDERLY, a. acting inconsistent with law or virtue; confused, or not regularly placed; tumultuous.

DISORDINATE, a. not living by the rules of virtue.

DISORDINATELY, ad. in such a manner as to exceed the bounds of temperance, or to transgress the rules of morality.

To DISOWN, v. a. to renounce; to deny.

To DISPAND, v. a. [dispendo, Lat.] to display; to spread abroad.

DISPANSION, s. the act of displaying; the act of spreading; diffusion; dilatation.

To DISPARAGE, v. a. [dispar, Lat.] to match with a person or thing which is not equal; to disgrace by joining a thing of superior excellence with one below it; to disgrace or injure by comparison with something of less value; to treat with contempt and dishonour; to expose; to blame, censure, or reproach.

DISPARAGEMENT, s. disgrace or dishonour done to a person or thing by comparing them with something of inferior excellence and dignity; disgrace, or reproach.

DISPARAGER, s. one who treats a person or thing with indignity, and endeavours to lessen their value by comparing or uniting them with something of less value, or below them.

DISPARATES, s. [dispar, Lat.] in Logic, things so unlike, that they cannot be compared together.

DISPARITY, s. opposition or difference of qualities; difference in degree, whether it respects rank or excellence; unlikeness; dissimilitude.

To DISPARK, v. a. to throw open a park. "Dispark'd my parks." Shak. To set at large; to release from enclosure. "And did at once dispark them all," Waller.

To DISPART, v. a. [disparto, Lat.] to divide in two; to separate; to break.

DISPASSION, s. freedom from the passions or affections of the mind.

DISPASSIONATE, a. free from the turbulence of anger, or other passions; calm, cool, and temperate.

To DISPATCH, v. a. [dispêcher, Fr.] to send a person or thing away hastily. Figuratively, to send out of the world by a violent death; to murder; to perform business quickly or expeditiously.

DISPATCH, s. quickness or expedition in performing. Figuratively, conduct; management; an express.

DISPATCHFUL, a. full of haste, expedition, or quickness in the performance of business.

To DISPEL, v. a. [dispello, Lat.] to disperse, to clear away any obstruction by scattering or dissipating it.

DISPENSARY, s. the place where medicines are sold, and physicians' bills are made up at a low price for the benefit of the poor; a book containing forms or receipts for making medicines.

DISPENSATION, s. [dispensatio, Lat.] the act of distributing to several things or parts; a permission to do something contrary to the laws; or a relaxation and suspension of their force for a certain time, or on a peculiar occasion. In Theology, the name given to the variously developed revelations made by God to man, of his character and of his will respecting them.

DISPENSATOR, s. [Lat.] one employed in distributing.

DISPENSATORY, s. See DISPENSARY.

To DISPENSE, v. a. [dispensere, Fr.] to distribute, or give among several persons; to excuse from a duty.

DISPENSER, s. one who dispenses or distributes.

To DISPEOPLE, (dispeuple) v. a. to deprive a country of its inhabitants.

DISPEOPLE, (dispepler) s. one who deprives a country of its inhabitants.

To DISPERGE, v. a. [dispergo, Lat.] to sprinkle; to scatter.

To DISPERSE, v. a. [dispergo, Lat.] to scatter; to drive to different parts; to separate a body of men or multitude. Synon. To disperse is always voluntary; to scatter is usually involuntary.

DISPERSEDLY, ad. in a separate manner; separately.

DISPERSEDNES, s. the state of things or persons which are divided or separated.

DISPERSENESS, s. thinness; scatteredness.

DISPERSER, s. one who spreads abroad or makes public, by communicating to many.

DISPERSION, s. the act of scattering or spreading. In Surgery, it is the removing an inflammation, and not allowing it to advance to an abscess.

To DISPRIT, v. a. to strike with fear, or to repress the courage of a person by some menace or ill treatment; to exhaust the spirits, or deprive a person of his natural alacrity and vigour.

DISPRITEDNESS, s. want of alacrity, vigour, or vivacity.

To DISPLACE, v. a. to put out of a place; to remove from one place to another; to supersede.

DISPLACENCY, s. [displacito, Lat.] actions or behaviour which occasion displeasure; disgust; anything displeasing.

To DISPLANT, v. a. to remove a plant to some other place. Figuratively, to drive a people away from a settlement.

DISPLANTATION, s. [dis and planto, Lat.] the removal of a plant; the ejection of a people.

To DISPLAY, v. a. [displayer, Fr.] to spread abroad or wide; to show to the sight, or to the understanding; to explain a thing minutely; to set ostentatiously in view.

DISPLAY, s. the act of exhibiting a thing to view, in order to discover its beauties and excellences.

DISPLAYED, part. in Heraldry, applied to a bird in an erect posture, with its wings expanded or stretched out.

DISPLEASANT, (displéasant) a. disagreeable or offensive to the senses.

To DISPLEASE, (displéaze) v. a. to offend, or make angry; to do a thing which will raise the ill-will of a person, or forfeit his esteem. To disgust, or raise an aversion, applied to the senses.

DISPLEASINGNESS, (displéazingness) s. the quality of creating dislike, or being disagreeable either to the sense or judgment.

DISPLEASURE, (displéasure) s. a disagreeable sensation; that which will offend a person; anger proceeding from some offence given, or from something which was disagreeable; a state of disgrace, wherein a person has lost the favour of another.

To DISPLODE, v. a. [displodo, Lat.] to vent or discharge with a loud noise.

DISPLOSION, s. [displodo, Lat.] the act of dislodging; a sudden burst or dispersion with noise and violence.

DISPORT, s. play; sport; pastime; diversion.

To DISPORT, v. a. to divert.—v. n. to play; to toy; to wanton.

DISPOSAL, (dispozal) s. the act of regulating any thing; distribution; dispensation; the right of bestowing.

To DISPOSE, (dispoze) v. a. [disposer, Fr.] to employ, or apply to any use; to bestow or give; to spend or lay out money; to turn to any particular end; to adopt, fit, or form for any purpose; to influence the mind; to regulate or adjust; to place in any condition; to sell; to get rid of.

DISPOSER (dispozér) s. a person who has the management of any affair of money; he that gives, bestows, or regulates; a director; one who distributes without control, and in an arbitrary manner.

DISPOSITION, (disposishon) s. [dispositio, Lat.] a regular arrangement, distribution, or order of the parts of a thing, or system, which discovers art, method, and prudence; natural fitness or tendency; propensity, bent, or temper of the mind; affections of kindness or ill-will. Applied to the mind, when the power and ability of any thing is forward and ready on every occasion to break into action.

To DISPOSSESS, (dispozesse) v. a. to turn a person out of a place of which he is master.

DISPRAISE, (dispráize) s. blame, or the act of finding fault; censure; reproach.

To DISPRAISE, (dispráize) v. a. to blame; to find fault with; to censure.

DISPRAISER, (dispráiser) s. one who blames, or finds fault.

DISPRAISINGLY, (dispráizingly) ad. with blame or censure.

To DISPREAD, (dispred) v. a. to spread abroad; to spread different ways.

DISPROFIT, s. loss; damage; that by which a thing is rendered less valuable, or a person receives loss.

DISPROOF, s. confutation, or proving a thing to be false.

DISPROPORTION, s. the disagreement between the quality or quantity of different things, or the parts of the same thing.
TO DISPROPORTION, v. a. to join things which do not suit, or disagree with each other in quantity or quality.

DISPROPORTIONABLE, a. disagreeing in quantity; not well suited or proportioned to something else.

DISPROPORTIONABLENESS, s. the want of agreement, with respect to quantity, size, or symmetry.

DISPROPORTIONABLY, ad. unsuitably, not symmetrically.

DISPROPORTIONAL, a. unsuitable, or disagreeing in quantity, quality, or value, with something else.

DISPROPORTIONALLY, ad. unsuitably with respect to quantity or value.

DISPROPORTIONATE, a. disagreeing in quality or value with something else; wanting symmetry.

DISPROPORTIONATELY, ad. wanting symmetry.

DISPROPORTIONATENESS, s. unsuitableness in bulk, form, or value.

TO DISPROVE, (disprove) v. a. to confute an assertion; to show a thing or practice to be inconsistent with truth, law, or morality.

DISPROVER, (disprover) s. one who confutes or proves a thing or argument to be false or erroneous.

DISPUNISHABLE, a. in Law, without some penal clause or article subjecting a person to make good any loss or damage.

DISPUTABLE, a. that may admit of arguments both for and against it; liable to dispute; controvertible; lawful to be contested.

DISPUTANT, s. [disputo, Lat.] one who argues against or opposes the opinions of another.

DISPUTANT, a. disputing; engaged in controversy. Obsolete. "Disputant on points and questions." Milt.

DISPUTATION, s. [disputatio, Lat.] the art of opposing the sentiments of others; controversy or arguments produced either in favour of one's own sentiments or in opposition to those of another.

DISPUTATIOUS, (disputatious) a. fond of opposing the opinions of others; given to debate, or cavilling.

DISPUTATIVE, a. disposed to oppose the opinions of others; fond of controversy.

TO DISPUTE, v. n. [disputo, Lat.] to oppose the sentiments or opinions of another; to deny and argue against any received opinion.—v. a. to contend for a thing either by words or actions; to oppose or question; to discuss a question; to think on.

DISPUTE, s. the act of opposing, or bringing arguments against the opinion of another; controversy.

DISPUTER, s. one engaged in, or fond of, controversy.

DISQUALIFICATION, s. that which renders a person unfit for employ.

TO DISQUALIFY, v. a. to make unfit; to disable by some natural or legal impediment; to exempt or disable from any right, claim, or practice, by law.

TO DISQUALITY, v. a. to lessen; to diminish. Not used. "To disqualify your train." Shak.

DISQUIET, s. uneasiness; restlessness; want of ease of mind; anxiety.

DISQUIET, a. uneasy or disturbed in mind.

TO DISQUIET, v. a. to disturb the mind of a person by some disagreeable and calamitous object; to vex; to make uneasy.

DISQUIETER, s. a disturber; or one who renders another uneasy in mind.

DISQUIETEDLY, ad. anxiously; in such a manner as to disturb or make uneasy.

DISQUIETNESS, s. the state of a person who is displeased with his present condition, involved in troubles and dangers, or afflicted by some impending evil.

DISQUIETUDE, s. uneasiness, or disturbance of mind; anxiety; want of tranquillity.

DISQUISITION, (disquisition) s. [disquisitio, Lat.] an act of the mind, whereby it examines into a subject in order to understand its importance, to foresee its consequences, and to find out what may be urged either for or against it; a strict examination of a thing or matter.

DISREGARD, s. a slight notice; contempt; neglect; disesteem.

TO DISREGARD, v. a. to take notice; to slight; to neglect; to contemn.

DISREGARDFUL, a. negligent; contemptuous; or making a small account of either persons or things.

DISREGARDFULLY, ad. in a negligent, contemptuous, or slighting manner.

DISRELIISH, s. a bad taste; disgust, or dislike, applied to the taste.

TO DISRELIISH, v. a. to make a thing nauseous; to affect the taste with a disagreeable sensation. Figuratively, to dislike; to want a taste for.

DISREPUTATION, s. disgrace; or that which will lessen a person's character or fame.

DISREPUTE, s. an ill character; loss of reputation or esteem; reproach.

DISRESPECT, s. incivility; want of esteem; a behaviour which approaches to rudeness.

DISRESPECTFUL, a. uncivil; without esteem; unmannerly.

DISRESPECTFULLY, ad. in an uncivil, irreverent, or unmannerly manner.

TO DISROBE, v. a. to undress or strip a person of clothes. Figuratively, to lay aside; to divest, applied to the mind.

DISRUPTION, s. [disruptio, Lat.] the act of breaking or bursting asunder; a breach or rent.

DISS, Norfolk. It is a neat, flourishing town, and at the west end of it is a large mere, or lake. Here are manufactories of yarn, sail-cloth, and linen cloth, and a brewery. It stands on the river Waveney. It is 92 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 3205.

DISSATISFACTION, s. the state of a person who is not contented with his present condition, but wants something to complete his wish or happiness; discontent.

DISSATISFACTUOUSNESS, s. inability or want of power to give content.

DISSATISFACTORY, a. that is not able to produce content.

TO DISSATISFY, v. a. to discontent; to displease; to want some quality requisite to please or content.

TO DISSECT, v. a. [dis and seco, Lat.] in Anatomy, to divide the parts of an animal body with a knife, in order to consider each of them apart. Figuratively, to divide and examine a subject minutely.

DISSECTION, s. in Anatomy, the act of cutting or dividing the several parts of an animal body asunder, in order to examine into their nature and several uses; to divide the several parts of a plant, leaf, or any piece of work, in order to examine into the mutual connexion of their several parts, compositions, and workmanship.

DISSEISIN, (disseizin) s. in Law, is an unlawful dispossessing a person of his lands, tenement, or other immovable or incorporeal right.

TO DISSEIZE, (disseize) v. a. to eject, dispossess, or unjustly deprive a man of his estate.

DISSEIZOR, (disseizor) s. one who deprives or dispossesses another of his right.

TO DISSEMBLE, v. a. [disimulo, Lat.] to hide or conceal under a false appearance; to pretend that to be which is not.—v. n. to play the hypocrite.

DISSEMBLER, s. one who conceals his real designs, temper, and disposition, under a false and specious appearance; a hypocrite.

DISSEMBLINGLY, ad. in a hypocritical manner; in such a manner as to conceal one's real sentiments under a false and specious appearance.

TO DISSEMINATE, v. a. [dis and semen, Lat.] to scatter seed; to sow. Figuratively, to spread abroad, or propagate a report.

DISSEMINATION, s. the act of sowing; the act of spreading abroad, or propagating a report.

DISSEMINATOR, s. [Lat.] he that sows. Figuratively, one who propagates a doctrine.

DISSENSION, s. [disSENSIO, Lat.] difference, or disagreement in opinion or politics; contention, or warm opposition.

DISSENSIOUS, (disSENSIOUS) a. disposed to strife; quarrelsome; factious.

TO DISSENT, v. n. [dis and sentio, Lat.] to disagree in opinion; to think differently; to be of a contrary nature; to differ.

DISSENT, s. disagreement; difference of opinion; avowal or declaration of difference of opinion.

DISSENTA/NEOUS, a. disagreeable; inconsistent.

DISSENTER, s. the name given generally to any one who from any reason refuses to comply with the forms, &c. of the Church of England, except Romanists and Jews. Properly, it signifies one who refuses to acknowledge any authority of man or society over his faith, and over his conduct as springing from it. The opposition to the interference of the state in this matter is in this country the most conspicuous expression of dissent, and therefore has been mistaken for the only one.

DISSERTATION, s. [dissertatio, Lat.] a set discourse or treatise on any particular subject.

To DISSEVER, v. a. to do injury to; to damage; to hurt; to harm.

DISSERVICE, s. harm; hurt; a prejudice or ill turn done to a person or thing.

DISSERVICEABLE, a. that will hinder the advantage of a person or thing; injurious; hurtful.

DISSERVICEABLENESS, s. that which hinders the accomplishing some end; hurt; mischief; damage; injury; harm.

To DISSEVER, v. a. (the particle dis added to sever, an improperly observed in some other words of our language, viz. dissuade, &c.) to break or part in two; to separate; to divide.

DISSIDENTS, s. a denomination applied in Poland to persons of the Lutheran, Calvinistic, or Greek profession. They have been generally tolerated.

DISSILUTION, s. [dissilio, Lat.] the act of bursting in two; the act of starting different ways.

DISSIMILAR, a. [dissimilis, Lat.] differing in quality or shape from the thing which it is compared with; unlike; of a different kind or nature.

DISSIMILARITY, s. unlikeness in quality, temper, or disposition.

DISSIMILITUDE, s. difference of form or quality; want of resemblance with a thing compared.

DISSIMULATION, s. [dissimulatio, Lat.] the act of concealing one's intention or disposition. Synon. Dissimulation is the pretending not to be what we are, nor to purpose what we are actually intending. Simulation is the pretending to be what we are not, or to purpose what we do not.

DISSIPABLE, a. easily separated and scattered.

To DISSIPATE, v. a. [dissipo, Lat.] to separate any collection, and disperse the parts at a distance; to divide the attention between a diversity of objects, and therefore render it impossible to fix to any with intenseness; to squander wealth; to spend a fortune.

DISSIPATION, s. the act of separating the parts which form any collection, mass, or body; the state of the parts of a body separated, and at a distance from each other. Figuratively, intemperance.

To DISSOCIATE, (dissociate) v. a. [dis and socio, Lat.] to separate things or persons which are united.

DISSOLVABLE, (dissoluble) a. [dissolveo, Lat.] that is capable of having its parts separated by moisture or the action of some fluid. Dissoluble is more generally used.

DISSOLUBLE, a. capable of having its parts separated.

DISSOLUBILITY, s. the possibility of having its parts separated or liquefied by moisture or heat.

To DISSOLVE, (dissolve) v. a. [dis and solveo, Lat.] to destroy the form of a thing by separating its parts with moisture or heat; to melt, or liquefy; to destroy; to separate; to break the ties of any thing; to part persons who are united by any bonds; to clear up a doubt or difficulty; to break up or discharge an assembly.—v. n. to be melted; to fall to nothing; to melt away in pleasures.

DISSOLVENT, (dissolvent) a. having the power of separating, or breaking the union of the particles of a body.

DISSOLVENT, (dissolvent) s. that which separates the parts of any thing.

DISSOLVER, (dissolver) s. that which has the power of melting, liquefying, or breaking the union of the particles of any thing.

DISSOLVIBLE, a. (commonly, but less properly, written dissoluble.) liable to perish by dissolution.

DISSOLUTE, a. [dissolutus, Lat.] dissolved in, or abandoned to, pleasure; loose; wanton; or unrestrained by the rules of morality, the orders of government, or the laws of religion.

DISSOLUTELY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with virtue, government, or religion.

DISSOLUTENESS, s. looseness of manners; a conduct subjected to no restraint; wantonness; wickedness.

DISSOLUTION, s. [dissolutio, Lat.] the act of separating the particles of a body, or liquefying and melting by heat and moisture; the destruction of any thing by the separation of its parts; the substance or body formed by melting a thing; death, or the separation of the body and soul; the act of breaking up, dissolving, or putting an end to an assembly.

DISSONANCE, s. [disonans, Lat.] a mixture of harsh and unharmonious sounds; discord.

DISSONANT, a. sounding harsh and disagreeable to the ear. Figuratively, inconsistent, disagreeing; used with from, but most properly with to.

To DISSUADE, (dissuadeo) v. a. [dis and suadeo, Lat.] to make use of arguments to hinder a person from doing something which he intends; to represent a thing as improper or disadvantageous.

DISSUADER, (dissuador) s. one who endeavours by argument to divert a person from a design or undertaking.

DISSUASION, (dissuasionem) s. an argument or motive made use of to divert or hinder a person from closing with any design, or engaging in any undertaking.

DISSUASIVE, (dissuasive) a. tending to divert from any purpose or design.

DISSUASIVE, (dissuasive) s. a motive or argument made use of to prevail on a person to decline a design or pursuit.

DISSYLLABLE, s. [dis and syllabos, Gr.] in Grammar, a word of two syllables.

DISTAFF, (distaf, Sax.) the staff, or stick, on the extremity of which the tow or hemp is fastened for spinning.

DISTAFF-THISTLE, s. in Botany, a species of thistle.

To DISTAIN, v. a. to mark a thing with a different colour; to spoil the colour of a thing. Figuratively, to blot; to mark with infamy; to pollute or defile.

DISTANCE, (dis and sto, Lat.) the space or length of ground between any two objects, applied to place or situation; a space marked in a course wherein race-horses run. The space between a thing present and one past or future, applied to time. Distinction, applied to ideas. Figuratively, a modest and respectful behaviour, opposed to familiarity; a withdrawing of affection; reserve; coldness.

To DISTANCE, v. a. to remove from the view; to place farther from a person; to leave behind at a race the length of a distance post. Figuratively, to surpass a person in the abilities of the mind.

DISTANT, a. far from, applied to place. Apart, separate, asunder, applied to situation, or the space between two or more bodies. Removed from the present instant, applied to time past or future.

To DISTASTE, v. a. to occasion a disagreeable or nauseous taste; to affect the taste with a disagreeable sensation; to dislike.

DISTASTE, s. aversion of the palate; dislike; anger; alienation of affection.

DISTASTEFUL, a. affecting the palate, or organ of taste, with a nauseous or disagreeable sensation; that gives offence, or is unpleasant; showing ill-will or disgust.

DISTEMPER, s. a disproportionate mixture of ingredients. In Painting, a term used for the working up of colours with size, or any such proper glutinous kind of matter, and whitening, or water, and not with oil. It is employed only in the coarsest kind of painting, and in colouring walls, &c. In Medicine, some disorder of the bodily frame; a disorder of the mind, arising from the predominance of any passion or appetite; want of due balance between contraries; ill humour. Tumultuous disorder or confusion, applied to states.

To DISTEMPER, v. a. to weaken health; to affect with some disease; to disorder; to fill the mind with perturbation or confusion. To render rebellious, or disaffected, applied to states.

DISTEMPERATE, a. immoderate.

DISTEMPERATURE, s. excess of heat, cold, or other qualities. Violent commotions, applied to government. Figuratively, perturbation of mind; confusion; mixture of contrary qualities or extremes.

To DISTEND, v. a. [dis and tendo, Lat.] to stretch by filling; to stretch out in breadth.

DISTENT, s. the space through which any thing is spread or stretched; breadth.

DISTENTION, s. the act of stretching; breadth, or the space which is occupied by a thing distended; the act of separating one thing from another.

DISTICH, (distik) s. [distichon, Gr.] in Poetry, a couplet; a couple of lines; a poem consisting only of two verses; a theme or subject treated of and comprised in two lines.

TO DISTILL, v. n. [distillo, Lat.] to drop, or fall by drops. To drop or fall gently, applied to fluids; to extract the virtues of ingredients by means of a still.

DISTILLATION, s. [distillo, Lat.] the act of falling in drops; also, the process of obtaining the spirituous and other vaporizable ingredients in any fluid or substance, by exposing it to heat in a closed vessel in such a way, that the vapour arising is condensed and falls drop by drop as a liquid. Ardent spirits are obtained by this process.

DISTILLATORY, a. belonging to or used in distilling.

DISTILLER, s. one who makes and sells distilled liquors.

DISTILLERY, s. the business, trade, or employment of a distiller.

DISTINCT, a. [distinctus, Lat.] different both in number and kind; separate; set apart; asunder; cleared and unconfused; marked out, so as to be distinguished from any other.

DISTINCTION, s. [distinctio, Lat.] a note which shows the difference between two or more objects; a mark of superiority; that by which one thing or person differs from another; differences made between persons of various ages, sexes, or ranks; division into different parts; discernment; judgment; high rank, or set above others by honour or title.

DISTINCTIVE, a. that manifests or marks the difference between persons or things; having the power to distinguish or perceive the difference between things; judicious.

DISTINCTIVELY, ad. in right order; without confusion.

DISTINCTLY, ad. without confusing one part with another; plainly; clearly.

DISTINCTNESS, s. a nice or accurate observation of the difference between things; a separation of things either externally or in the mind, which renders their difference from each other easily perceived.

TO DISTINGUISH, (the ui in the last syllable of this word and its derivatives has the sound of ui,—distinguish;) v. a. [distinguo, Lat.] to note the difference between things; to separate from others by some mark of honour; to divide by notes, showing the difference between things in other respects like each other; to perceive; to discern critically; to constitute a difference; to specify.

DISTINGUISHABLE, a. that may be separated or easily known, on account of its difference from another; worthy of note or regard.

DISTINGUISHED, a. eminent or extraordinary; easily to be seen from others on account of some remarkable difference or excellence.

DISTINGUISHER, s. one who sees and notes the difference of things with accuracy; a judicious observer.

DISTINGUISHINGLY, ad. with some mark which renders a difference remarkable.

DISTINGUISHMENT, s. the observation of the difference between things.

TO DISTORT, v. a. [distorqueo, Lat.] to twist; to deform by uncouth or irregular motions; to put out of its natural state and condition. To wrest an expression from its true meaning.

DISTORTION, s. in Medicine, a contraction of one side of the person, or face, arising from the paralysis of the counteracting muscles of the other side; an irregular motion, by which any of the parts of animal bodies are rendered deformed.

TO DISTRACT, v. a. part. pass. formerly distract; [dis and trah, Lat.] to pull a thing different ways at the same time; to separate; to part. Figuratively, to draw or turn to different points; to fill and attract the mind with different views or considerations; to make a person mad.

DISTRACTEDLY, ad. after the manner of a madman.

DISTRACTEDNESS, s. the state of a person who is mad from too great a variety of pursuits.

DISTRACTION, s. separation; division. Confusion, applied to politics. That state of mind in which the attention is called to different, and sometimes contrary, objects; perturbation of mind; madness.

DISTRACTIVE, a. causing perplexity.

TO DISTRAIN, v. a. [dis and stringo, Lat.] in Law, to seize the property of another for debt.—v. n. to make a seizure.

DISTRAINER, s. he that seizes for debt.

DISTRAINT, s. in Law, the act of seizing or that which is seized for debt.

DISTRESS, s. [détresse, Fr.] in Law, any thing seized or distrained for rent unpaid, or duty unperformed; the act of making a seizure. Figuratively, any calamity or loss which reduces a person to great inconvenience or misery; the state or condition of a person who has not the necessities to supply the calls of nature.

TO DISTRESS, v. a. in Law, to seize for rent unpaid; to harass; to make miserable; to crush with calamity.

DISTRESSFUL, a. miserable; wretched; involved in calamities which deprive a person of the comforts and conveniences of life.

TO DISTRIBUTE, v. a. [dis and tribuo, Lat.] to divide amongst different or several persons; to dispose or act in order.

DISTRIBUTER, s. one who bestows or distributes.

DISTRIBUTION, s. the sharing or dividing amongst many; the act of giving charity; the thing given in alms. In Logic, the distinction of a universal whole into several kinds or species.

DISTRIBUTIVE, a. that is employed in assigning portions to others; that distinguishes a general term into its various species.

DISTRIBUTIVELY, ad. singly; particularly. In Logic, in a manner which expresses singly all the particulars included in a general term.

DISTRICT, s. [districtus, law Lat.] in Law, circuit, or territory, in which a person may be compelled to appearance; the circuit or territory within which a person's jurisdiction or authority is confined; a region or country.

TO DISTRUST, v. a. to suspect; to look on a person as one who ought not to be confided in; to be diffident.

DISTRUST, s. loss of credit; want of confidence in another; suspicion of a person's fidelity or ability; diffidence.

DISTRUSTFUL, a. suspicious; diffident of the fidelity or ability of another.

DISTRUSTFULLY, ad. in a manner which shows suspicion or diffidence.

DISTRUSTFULNESS, s. the state of being suspicious of the fidelity or ability of another; want of confidence.

TO DISTURB, v. a. [dis and turbo, Lat.] to perplex, disquiet, make uneasy, or deprive of tranquillity; to confound; to interrupt or hinder the continuation of any action.

DISTURBANCE, s. interruption, or that which causes any stop, or hinders the continuation of an action; confusion or disorder of mind. Tumult, uproar, or violation of the peace, applied to government.

DISTURBER, s. one who breaks the peace, causes tumults or public disorders, or affects the mind of another with confusion, trouble, anxiety, and uneasiness.

DISVALUATION, s. disgrace; diminution of reputation.

TO DISVALUE, v. a. to undervalue; to set a low price upon.

TO DISVEAL, v. a. [dévoiler, Fr.] to uncover.

DISUNION, s. separation or disjunction. Figuratively, breach of concord, or disagreement between friends, whereby they separate or withdraw from each other.

TO DISUNITE, v. a. to part or divide that which was united before; to separate or part friends or allies.—v. n. to fall asunder; to become separate.

DISUNITY, s. the state of actual separation.

TO DISVOUCH, v. a. to destroy the credit of; to contradict.

DISUSAGE, (disusage) s. the leaving off a practice or custom by degrees.

DISUSE, s. want of custom or practice; the discontinuing a custom or practice.

TO DISUSE, (disuse) v. a. to cease to make use of or practise; to lay aside or quit a custom or practice.

DITATION, s. [ditatus, Lat.] the act of enriching.

DITCH, s. [ditch, Sax.] a trench made to separate and defend grounds; any long narrow cavity, formed in the ground for holding water. In Fortification, a trench formed by digging between the scarp and counterscarp of a fort, and is either dry or filled with water.

TO DITCH, v. n. to make a ditch.

DITCHBUR, s. in Botany, a plant, the lesser burdock.

DITHYRAMBIC, s. [Dithyrambos, Gr.] a species of poetry, full of transport and poetical rage, so named from the Dithyrambos, or ode, formerly sung in honour of Bacchus, and partaking of all the warmth of ebriety.

DITHYRAMBIC, a. wild; enthusiastic.

DITTANDER, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there are three British species, viz. the mountain, pepper, and narrow-leaved: the first species is found on St. Vincent's rock near Bristol, flowering in April and May; the second, with numerous terminating white blossoms, and ovate serrated leaves, is found in most pastures, flowering in June and July, called also pepperwort and poor-man's pepper; the last, called also narrow-leaved wild cress, is found on the sea-coast, flowering in June.

DITTANY, s. in Botany, a medicinal plant, allied to the marjoram, generally brought over dry from the Levant.

DITTON, HUMPHREY, a learned mathematician of the beginning of the last century. He was a dissenting minister at first, but afterwards devoted himself to his favourite study, and had the friendship of Newton, Leibnitz, and most of the great mathematicians of his time. His writings contain some matters of considerable value. He died in 1715, aged 40 years.

DITTY, s. [dicht, Belg.] a poem set to music; a song.

DIVAN, s. [Arab.] a council-chamber, wherein justice is administered among the eastern nations; a council of eastern princes.

DIVARICATE, v. a. [dis and varico, Lat.] to part in two.—v. n. to become parted, or to divide into two.

DIVARICATION, s. a partition of a thing into two. Figuratively, division or difference of opinions.

DIVE, v. n. [dippan, Sax.] to go voluntarily under water; to go under water, and remain there some time, in quest of something lost. Figuratively, to make strict inquiry or examination; to go to the bottom of any question, science, or doctrine.

DIVER, s. one who professes to go under water in quest of things lost by shipwreck, &c. A genus of birds, which bears some resemblance to the ducks. Figuratively, one who makes himself master of any branch of science; one who goes to the bottom of an affair.

DIVERGE, v. n. [dis and vergo, Lat.] to recede farther from each other, applied to the rays of light which proceed from one point.

DIVERGENT, part. or a. in Geometry, applied to those lines which constantly recede from each other.

DIVERS, a. [diversus, Lat.] sundry; several; more than one. It is not out of use.

DIVERSE, a. different in form or nature; various; in different directions, or contrary ways.

DIVERSELY, ad. in different ways, methods, or manners; in different directions, or towards different points.

DIVERSIFICATION, s. the act of changing forms or qualities; variation; a mixture of different colours; alteration.

DIVERSIFY, v. a. [diversifier, Fr.] to make different from another, or from itself; to vary; to mark with various colours.

DIVERSION, s. the act of turning a thing aside from its course; something which unbends the mind, by taking it off from intense application or care; something lighter than amusement, and less forcible than pleasure; sport; the public exhibition of shows, plays, operas, &c., which unbend the mind. In War, the act of drawing off an enemy from some design, by an attack made at some other place.

DIVERSITY, s. [diversité, Fr.] difference which distinguishes things from each other; variety; variegation, or a composition of different colours. Synon. Diversity supposes a change which taste is always in search of, in order to discover some novelty that may enliven and delight it; variety supposes a plurality of things differing from each other in likeness, which cheers the imagination, apt to be clogged with too great a uniformity.

DIVERT, v. a. [dis and verto, Lat.] to turn aside from any direction or course; to seduce or turn aside from a rule of conduct; to please, or unbend the mind by public sports, or other things which afford pleasure. In War, to draw forces to a different part. Used by Shakspeare in the sense of, to subvert; to destroy. Synon. We are gay by disposition, merry through turn of mind, diverting by our way of acting.

DIVERTER, s. any thing that unbends the mind, and alleviates its fatigue.

DIVERTISEMENT, s. [divertissement, Fr.] diversion; delight; pleasure. A word now not much in use.

DIVERTIVE, a. having the power to unbend and recreate the mind.

DIVEST, v. a. [dis and vestio, Lat.] to strip or deprive of. DIVESTURE, s. the act of putting off.

DIVIDE, v. a. [divido, Lat.] to separate a thing or whole into several parts; to stand between things as a partition, to hinder them from joining or meeting; to part one person from another; to separate friends by discord; to give or distribute among several persons.

DIVIDEND, s. [divido, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the number proposed to be divided. In Stocks and Companies it is a share or proportion of the interests of stocks or public funds. In the University, it is that part or share which the fellows equally divide among themselves of their yearly stipend. In Trade, it is when a man's effects are taken by statute, inventoried and valued, and after all charges are deducted, the remainder is divided among the several creditors in proportion to their debts.

DIVIDER, s. that which separates any thing into parts; one who distributes to others; the person who separates friends by promoting discord between them.

DIVIDUAL, a. divided; shared or participated in common with others.

DIVINATION, s. [divinatio, Lat.] the act of foretelling future events which are of a secret and hidden nature, and cannot be known by the bare exercise of reason. Synon. Divination relates to the bringing of hidden things to light; prediction foretells what will come to pass. The first regards things present and past; the objects of the second are things to come.

DIVINE, a. [divinus, Lat.] partaking of the nature of, or proceeding from, God. Figuratively, excellent; extraordinary; seeming beyond the nature of mankind.

DIVINE, s. a minister of the gospel; a clergyman, or one who is peculiarly dedicated to the service of the church, and performance of the rites in public worship.

DIVINE, v. a. to foretell some future event by means of omens, &c.; to foresee, foreknow, or presage.—v. n. to utter a prediction; to conjecture or guess.

DIVINELY, ad. in a divine or heavenly manner; by the operation of God; excellently; in a supreme or superlative degree.

DIVINER, s. one who professes to foretell or discover future events by means of external signs or supernatural influence.

DIVINERESS, s. a woman professing divination.

DIVING, s. the art or act of descending under water to considerable depths, and abiding there a competent time. Diving is used in the fishing for pearls, corals, sponges, &c., and machines have been invented for the purpose, as the diving-bell, &c.

DIVING-BELL, s. a strongly built vessel in the form of a bell, capable of containing several persons, which being sufficiently weighted, can be let down into the sea over wrecks, &c. to enable persons to descend to examine them, and recover valuables from them, or to recover the vessels themselves. It is open at the bottom, and is supplied with fresh air continually by means of air-tight hose from an air-pump, the air which has been used escaping as the unused air is introduced. Sometimes strong glass is let into the sides, and then there is sufficient light in the bell to read, in clear weather.

DIVING-ROD, s. a forked branch of hazel, which being held in a particular manner in the two hands, is said to be affected very peculiarly when it is borne over a vein of gold or silver. It has been accounted for by electricity by some, but has few believers now.

DIVINITY, s. [divinitas, Lat.] a partaking of the nature and excellence of God; Godhead. Figuratively, God, the Supreme Being, the Creator and Preserver of all things; a false deity or idol; any thing supernatural; the science conversant about God, heavenly things, and the duties we more immediately owe to him.

DIVISIBILITY, s. [divisibilité, Fr.] the quality of admitting division, either mentally or actually.

DIVISIBLE, (divisible) a. [divisibilis, Lat.] capable of being actually or mentally divided into parts.

DIVISIBLENESS, s. the quality of being divided.

DIVISION, s. [divisio, Lat.] the act of dividing any thing into parts, also the parts themselves into which any thing is divided. In Arithmetic, it is one of the four fundamental rules, and teaches us how often a less number, called the divisor, is contained in a greater, called the dividend, the number of times which the divisor is contained in the dividend being termed the quotient. In Music, it is the dividing the interval of an octave into a number of less intervals. In Rhetoric, it is the arrangement of a discourse into several heads. In War, the divisions of a battalion are the several parts into which it is divided in marching. At sea, it is the third part of a fleet of men of war, and sometimes the ninth, which last case happens when a fleet is divided into three squadrons, for then each squadron is distributed into three divisions. In an engagement, the order of battle is to place all the squadrons and all the divisions on each side in one line; and this order is kept as long as the wind and other circumstances will permit.

DIVISOR, (divisor) s. [Lat.] in Arithmetic, the dividing number, or that by which the dividend is divided, and which shows how many parts it is to be divided into.

DIVORCE, s. (divortium, Lat.) a breach or dissolution of the bond of marriage, or the legal separation of man and wife. The usual divorces among us are of two kinds, viz. a mensa et thoro, from bed and board; and, a vinculo matrimonii, from the bond or tie of marriage. The first does not dissolve the marriage, since the cause thereof is subsequent to it: and at the same time supposes the marriage to be lawful. This divorce may be on account of adultery in either of the parties, for the cruelty of the husband, &c. As this divorce dissolves not the marriage, so it does not debar the woman of her dower, nor bastardize her issue, or make void any estate for the life of the husband and wife. A divorce a vinculo matrimonii, entirely dissolves the marriage, as the cause is a pre-contract with some other person, consanguinity, or affinity within the Levitical degrees, impotency, impuberty, &c. In this case, the dower is gone, and the children begotten between the parties divorced are bastards. On this divorce, the parties are at liberty to marry again; and in divorces for adultery, several acts of parliament have allowed the innocent party marriage with another person. Divorces are only to be had by consent of parliament.

To DIVORCE, v. a. to separate a husband and wife from each other; to abolish and annul the marriage contract. Figuratively, to force asunder, or to separate by violence; to take away by force.

DIVORCEMENT, s. the abrogating, annulling, or setting aside the marriage contract, and separating a man and wife from each other.

DIVORCER, s. the person who causes the legal separation of a man and his wife.

DIURETIC, a. [diureticus, Gr.] having the power to provoke urine.

DIURNAL, a. [diurnus, Lat.] relating to the day; constituting the day; performed in the space of a day; daily.

DIURNAL, s. [Fr.] a journal or day-book.

DIURNALLY, ad. daily, or every day.

DIUTURNITY, s. [diuturnitas, Lat.] the length of duration, or long continuance of any being.

To DIVULGE, v. a. [divulgo, Lat.] to publish; to make known or publish; to proclaim or manifest.

DIVULGER, s. a publisher; one who exposes to public view; one that reveals a secret.

DIVULSION, s. [divello, Lat.] the act of pulling away, plucking, or rending one thing from another.

To DIZEN, v. a. [a corruption probably from To DIGHT,] to dress, deck, or spruce up. A low word.

DIZZARD, s. a blockhead; a fool.

DIZZINESS, s. giddiness, or a swimming in the head.

DIZZY, a. [dizy, Sax.] giddy, having a swimming in the head, or a sensation of turning round. Figuratively, giddy, thoughtful.

To DIZZY, v. a. to make giddy; to whirl round.

DNIESTER, anciently BOISTHENES, a large river of Europe, rising in the government of Smolensk, and falling into the Black Sea by the harbour of Cherson. It flows entirely through the Russian dominions, through its whole course of about 1000 miles; during which its navigation is only once interrupted by a series of cataracts, which begin below the mouth of the Samara, and continue for 40 miles. They are passed, however, in spring without much hazard, even by loaded barsks.

DNIESTER, a fine river of Europe, which rises in the Carpathian Mountains, and passing by Choczim, Bender, &c., after a course of about 500 miles, falls into the Black Sea at Akerman, between the mouths of the Danube and Dniaper.

To DO, v. a. preter. did, past part. done; [don, Sax.] to perform, act, or practise; to execute or discharge, applied to a message; to cause; to transact; to have recourse to, used as a sudden and passionate question; to perform; to exert; to deal; to gain a point; to put; to finish; to conclude; to settle. What to do with, signifies to bestow, to employ, to dispose of, or what use to make of. "He knows not what to do with his money."—v. n. to cease to be concerned with. "I have done with him." To fare; to be conditioned with respect to health or sickness. To be able to succeed, or perfect a design. "We shall do without him," Addison. Sometimes however it is used to save the repetition of another verb. "I shall come, but if I do not, go away;" i. e. if I come not. Sometimes it is used as a word of peremptory and positive command; as, "Help me, do." It is also used as an auxiliary verb, to express the meaning of the verb very emphatically. "But I do love her," Shak.

DOB-CHICK, s. in Zoology, the common English name of the water-hen.

DOCBLE, a. [docco, Lat.] submitting to instruction; easy to be taught; tractable.

DOCBLE, a. teachable; easily taught; tractable.

DOCLITY, s. aptness to receive instruction; readiness to be taught.

DOCMASTIC, a. [dokimazo, Gr.] belonging to trials or experiments. The doctimastic art, is the art of assaying metals.

DOCK, s. in Law, an expedient for cutting off an estate-tail in lands or tenements, that the owner may be enabled to sell, give, or bequeath the same. In maritime affairs, it is a pit, great pond, or creek, by the side of a harbour, made convenient either for the building or repairing of ships; and is of two sorts; the dry-dock, where the water is kept out by great flood-gates; and the wet-dock, a place where a ship may be hauled into out of the tide's way. Among sportsmen, it is the fleshy part of a beast's chine, between the middle and the buttocks. Also the stump of a horse's tail that remains after docking. In Botany, a plant too familiar to farmers, having a tapering root and most astonishing vitality, producing also seeds most abundantly.

To DOCK, v. a. to cut a tail off, or short; to cut any thing short; to lay a ship in a dock. In Law, to cut off an entail; to lessen the charge of a bill.

DOCKET, s. a direction tied or fastened to goods; a summary or abridgment of a larger writing.

DOCTOR, s. [Lat.] one so well versed in any science as to be able to teach it; a person who has taken the highest degree of music, law, physic, or divinity.

DOCTORAL, a. [doctor, Lat.] belonging to a doctor's degree.

DOCTORALLY, ad. after the manner of a doctor or physician.

DOCTORSHIP, s. the office or rank of a doctor.

DOCTRINAL, (sometimes accented on the second syllable), a. [doctrina, Lat.] belonging to or containing doctrine or instruction formerly taught.

DOCTRINALLY, ad. positively; in the form of precepts or instruction.

DOCTRINE, s. [doctrina, Lat.] the principles or positions of any sect or master; the thesis or maxims delivered in a discourse; any thing taught; the act of teaching.

DOCUMENT, s. [documentum, Lat.] an instruction, admonition, precept, or direction; a precept of some dogmatical or positive person, or master; vouchers, or original writings, produced in support of any charge or accusation.

DODBROOK, Devonshire. It is 219 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1229.

DODD, DR. WILLIAM, an English clergyman, whose melancholy end has made his name and his writings most widely known. He was a careless and extravagant young man, but having some reputation as a preacher, which obtained him a royal chaplaincy, which he lost through an attempt at simony. He forged the signature of Lord Chesterfield, who had been his pupil, to a bond, for the purpose of gaining time to clear himself of debt; but it was discovered, and in spite of every effort made to save him, he was publicly executed in 1777, aged 48 years.

DODDER, s. [Teut.] in Botany, is the name of a very singular plant: when it first shoots from the seed it has little roots, which pierce the earth near the roots of other plants; but when the stem has twined about these plants the roots wither away. It sustains itself by rootlets which it inserts into the stems of the plant it twines about, and soon destroys it. It has no leaves, but has little bunches of white flowers. There are two English species.

DODDERED, a. overgrown with dodder; wasted or decayed. "Dodder'd with age." Dryd.

DODDRIDGE, DR. PHILIP, an eminent divine of the Independent denomination, of the last century. He was not merely a faithful teacher to his own congregation; but the principal of an academy, or high school, for the preparation of fitting young men for the ministry; a diligent student, and a voluminous writer. In character, he combined great earnestness with great liberality, and a most fascinating playfulness; and at a time when indifference or infidelity marked most who occupied the like place, he remained true to the truth. Of his works, the Family Expositor, and the Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, and his Hymns, are best known and most valued. He died in 1751, aged 49 years.

DODECAGON, s. [dodeka and gonia, Gr.] a figure having twelve sides.

DODECATEMORION, s. [dodeka and meros, Gr.] the twelfth part.

To DODGE, v. a. [probably corrupted from dog.] to use craft, evasions, or low shifts; to shift place as another approaches. Figuratively, to play fast and loose; to raise high expectations and baffle them; to shuffle, or baffle.

DODMAN, s. in Natural History, the common name of the large brown snail.

DODO, s. in Zoology, a large bird, bearing a very slight resemblance to the ostrich, but, being much thicker, incapable of flight, which the early navigators saw in New Holland and other islands of the Indian Ocean, and of which only a few parts, some exaggerated drawings, and fossilized remains are known.

DODSLEY, ROBERT, a writer, and a famous bookseller, of the last century. He was rescued from livery by a trifling play which he wrote; in the character of bibliopole, which he assumed at once, he lived on terms with all the great writers of the day. He produced several dramas with various success. His Annual Register is continued to this day. He died in 1764, aged 61 years.

DODWELL, HENRY, a learned champion of High-churchism, and non-juring clergyman. His writings are numerous, full of scholarship, not valuable for much beside. The most curious is that in which he thinks he has proved immortality to be conferred on the soul as part of the grace of true Episcopal baptism. He died in 1694, aged 52 years.

DOE, (do) s. [da, Sax.] a she-deer, the female of a buck. A feat; what one can perform.

DO'ER, (dier) s. [from to do.] one who performs any thing, whether good or bad; a performer; one who practises.

To DOFF, v. a. [from do off.] to strip; to put off dresses; to put away or get rid of; to delay or shift off. This word is obsolete in all its senses, and seldom used but by rustics.

DOG, s. [doghe, Belg.] a domestic animal, the varieties of which are remarkably numerous, comprising the mastiff, spaniel, bull-dog, hound, greyhound, terrier, &c., all of them being remarkable for their great intelligence and docility. In Astronomy, the name of two constellations, one called the Greater, and the other called the Lesser Dog, the former belonging to the southern, and the latter to the northern hemisphere. Figuratively, used as a term of reproach to a man. When added to the names of other animals, it signifies a male of the species, as a dog-fox, a dog-otter. Used as a particle, and prefixed to another word, it signifies something worthless, as a dog-rose. To go to the dogs, is a phrase implying to be ruined.

To DOG, v. a. to hunt, or pursue like a hound.

DOGBANE, s. in Botany, a plant common in England.

DOGBERRY-TREE, s. in Botany, a species of cornel, called also gatter-tree.

DGBOULT, a. wretched; miserable.

DOG-BRIER, s. in Botany, a name of the wild rose tree.

DOG-CHEAP, a. extremely cheap, as cheap as dog's meat.

DOG-DAYS, the days in which the dog-star rises and sets with the sun; which, on account of their great heat, are supposed to be very unwholesome or unhealthy.

DOGE, s. [doge, Ital.] the title of the supreme magistrate of the republics of Venice and Genoa, whilst they were republics.

DOG-FISH, s. in Natural History, the name of a fish frequenting our coasts, very destructive in the herring-fishery, by eating the fish that are caught and breaking the nets.

DOG-FLY, s. in Natural History, a very troublesome biting fly. DGGED, (dig-ed) a. sullen; sour; morose, or ill-humoured. DGGEDLY, (dig-edly) ad. in a sour, morose, or ill-humoured manner.

DGGEDNESS, (dog-edness) s. a disposition of mind wherein a person is not moved to pleasantry by any objects of mirth, or pleased by offices of kindness and civility; sullenness; moroseness.

DGGER, (dig-er) s. a small ship, or fishing-vessel, built after the Dutch fashion, with a narrow stern, commonly but one mast, and a well in the middle for keeping fish alive; principally used in the cod-fishery on the Dogger Bank in the German Ocean, from whence it derives its name.

DGGEREL, s. in Poetry, applied to such compositions as have neither accuracy with respect to their rhymes, harmony with regard to their metre, dignity of expression, fertility of invention, nor elevation of sentiment.

DGGEREL, a. loosed from the measures or rules of regular poetry; vile; despicable; mean: used of verses. "Doggerel rhymes." Dryd.

DGGISH, a. churlish; brutish.

DGMA, s. [Lat.] a principle stated in a positive and authoritative form; a doctrine; an axiom; a maxim.

DGMATIC, DGMATICAL, a. positive; strongly attached to any particular notion or opinion; authoritative, or imperious in forcing one's opinions as indubitable truths on others.

DGMATICALLY, ad. in a positive, imperious, or peremptory manner.

DGMATICALNESS, s. the quality of being positive of the truth of one's own opinions, and endeavouring to force them magisterially or imperiously on others.

DGMATIST, (dogmatiste, Fr.) one who advances his opinions as infallible, supports them with great obstinacy, and magisterially demands the assent of others to them.

To DGMATIZE, v. n. to advance any opinion positively, and endeavour to propagate it imperiously.

DGMATIZEI, s. one who advances opinions with an air of insolent confidence.

DG-ROSE, s. the flower of the wild briar.

DG-SLEEP, s. a pretended or dissembled sleep.

DG'S-MEAT, s. carrion, or horse-flesh, sold for the food of dogs.

DG-STAR, s. the star which rises and sets with the sun during the dog-days.

DG'S-TAIL, s. in Botany, a kind of grass.

DG'S-TOOTH, s. in Botany, a plant not very common in England, but rather pretty.

DG-TEETH, s. in Anatomy, the four teeth, two in each jaw, which are situated between the incisors and the grinders; they are by some called the eye-teeth.

DG-TRICK, s. an ill turn; surly and brutal treatment.

DG-TROT, s. a gentle trot, resembling that of a dog.

DG-WOOD, s. in Botany, a species of cornelian cherry.

DOILY, s. a coarse woollen stuff, supposed to be so called from the name of the inventor.

DOINGS, s. plural, and seldom used in the singular, [from do, the verb,] any thing performed, whether good or bad; performances; exploits; behaviour; conduct; bustle; tumult; merriment. Seldom used but in a ludicrous sense.

DOIT, s. [duyt, Belg. doight, Erse,] a small piece of money current in Holland. Also, a half-farthing in England.

DOLCI, CARLO, an Italian painter of great celebrity, whose subjects were almost all taken from sacred story or saintly legend; but whose great excellence lay in the care and delicacy with which he elaborated his paintings. The heads of his Madonnas are most beautiful. His natural disposition unfitted him for grander works. He died in 1686, aged 70 years.

To DOLE, v. a. [dolan, Sax.] to divide in portions or shares; to deal out, or distribute.

DOLE, s. [dealt, Sax.] the act of dividing into shares or portions. In Law, a portion or share. Portion, or condition, applied to the circumstances or incidents happening to a person.

—(from doleo, Lat.) grief, sorrow, misery. “In equal scale weighing delight and dole,” Shak.

DOLE, s. in Husbandry, a void space left in tilling. See DALE.

DOLEFUL, a. dismal; sorrowful; having the external appearance of sorrow; melancholy.

DOLEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to show or cause sorrow.

DOLEFULNESS, s. the quality which shows or expresses grief, or causes it in others.

DOLEGELLY, Merionethshire, Wales. It is seated in a vale, on the river Avon, at the foot of the great mountain Cader Idris. It has a manufacture of cottons, and coarse undyed woollen cloths, for exportation. It is 205 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 3695.

DOLESONE, a. full of grief; extremely sorrowful, applied to persons. Gloomy, dull, or affecting a person with melancholy.

DOLESONELLY, ad. in such a manner as to affect a person with deep sorrow.

DOLESONENESS, s. the quality of affecting a person with extreme sorrow.

DOLL, s. a contraction of DOROTHY; and applied to a wooden image, clothed either with the dress of a female or male, used by children as a plaything.

DOLLAR, s. [daler, Belg.] a silver coin current in several parts of Germany and Holland, of the value of 4s. 6d. sterling. There are various species of them; as the six-dollar, semi-dollar, quarter-dollar, &c.

DOLLOND, JOHN, a famous practical optician, and inventor of the achromatic object-glass, and the micrometer for microscopes. He was well informed on general sciences, though brought up with all disadvantages in circumstances; and his acquaintance with the branch of his own science which he devoted himself to, was most intimate. He enjoyed the friendship of most of the astronomers and optical students of his day, and died in 1761, aged 55 years.

DOLOMIEU, DEODATUS, a French mineralogist of the last century. He had travelled much, and on the formation of the National Institute devoted himself to its cause. He accompanied the French army to Egypt, but was captured by the Neapolitan government and imprisoned on his return. Being set at liberty through Sir Joseph Banks's interposition, he returned to his favourite study, and travelled over the Alps to prosecute it. He died in 1801, aged 52 years.

DOLORIFIC, a. [dolor and facio, Lat.] that causes grief or pain.

DOLOROUS, a. [dolor, Lat.] mournful or sorrowful, applied to persons. Affecting with grief or pain, applied to things.

DOLOUR, s. [douleur, Fr.] grief or sorrow, pain or pang.

DOLPHIN, (dolphin) s. [dolphinus, Lat.] in Natural History, a large sea-fish, belonging to the whale tribe, remarkable for the docility it displays; of which some wonderful anecdotes are recorded. In Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

DOLT, s. [dol, Teut.] a fool, or person of dull apprehension; a blockhead.

DOLTISH, a. stupid; like a fool or blockhead.

DOMABLE, a. [domo, Lat.] tailable.

DOMAINE, s. [domaine, Fr.] land possessed by one as a proprietor, heir, or governor.

HOME, s. [domus, Lat.] a house or building, generally applied to a stately building, or to one set apart for divine service. In Architecture, a roof of a spherical form, resembling the bell of a great clock, raised over the middle of a building, called also a cupola.

DOMENICHINO, a celebrated painter of Bologna, Italy, in the beginning of the 17th century. His great excellence lay in design. He was a singular instance of the combination of the most plodding patience with thorough enthusiasm. He had some reputation as an architect also. He died in 1641, aged 60 years.

DOMESTIC, a. [domus, Lat.] belonging to a house, or the management of a family; fit to inhabit a house, applied to animals. Private, not open. Applied to wars, intestine or civil; opposed to those carried on in a foreign country.

DOMESTIC, s. a servant who lives in the same house with his master; generally applied to the servants of persons of distinction.

DOMESTICATE, v. a. to make domestic; to withdraw from the public.

DOMIFY, v. a. to tame.

DOMINANT, a. [Fr.] predominant; presiding; ascendant. In Music, the name given to the fifth in the common chord.

DOMINATION, s. [dominus, Lat.] power; dominion; tyranny; one highly exalted in power, used of angelic beings.

TO DOMINATE, v. a. to prevail over others.

DOMINATIVE, a. imperious; insolent.

DOMINATOR, s. [Lat.] the presiding, ruling, or governing power.

TO DOMINEER, v. n. to exert authority or power in an insolent, arbitrary, or tyrannical manner.

DOMINGO, ST. See HAYTI.

DOMINIC, ST., or DOMINGO DE GUSMAN, of Spain, the most celebrated saint of the 12th century, who founded the Preaching Friars, called also Black Friars and Dominicans; and who finding that by his preaching and example of mortification he could not win back to the bosom of the church the Albigenses, who in the deep and almost inaccessible valleys of the W. Alps had retained a simple form of Christianity, and were untainted with the later corruptions of Rome, preached a crusade against them, and chastised them for their heresy by the sword of Simon de Montford, and the arm of the Inquisition, which, if not his invention, was monopolized by him and his friars. Many miracles and visions were reported and believed, as divine attestations of the zeal he manifested. He died in 1221, aged about 50 years, and was afterwards canonized. It would have been a happy thing if his spirit had not lived on in the world after his death.

DOMINICA, a West-India island, lying between Guadeloupe and Martinico, about 29 miles in length and 16 in breadth. It is very hilly, one height exceeds 5000 feet. It is well supplied with rivulets of water, and there is one extensive lake. There is no considerable bay or harbour, but the anchorage round the coast is commodious and safe, and ships find shelter under its capes. It yields coffee, indigo, ginger, and other articles of West-Indian produce; but the soil, being thin, is more adapted to the rearing of cotton than sugar. In the woods are innumerable swarms of bees, which produce great quantities of wax and honey. This island belongs to the English. Rousseau and Portsmouth are its chief towns. Pop. about 20,000, Lat. 15. 32. N. Long. 61. 23. W.

DOMINICAL, a. noting the Lord's day or Sunday. The dominical letter in the ecclesiastical calendar denotes the Sunday. In this calendar the first seven letters of the alphabet are used to denote the seven days of the week beginning with the first day of the year, the letter, therefore, which is assigned to the first Sunday, will be the dominical or Sunday letter throughout the year; and as in leap-years there is an intercalary day, there are then two, the first of which denotes every Sunday till the intercalary day, and the second all the Sundays which follow after it. The great use of this dominical letter is unknown except in those churches in which the great festival of Easter is celebrated according to the rules of Clavius, the inventor of the present ecclesiastical calendar of the Churches of Rome and England. The tables at the beginning of the Book of Common Prayer will fully explain it to those whom it concerns.

DOMINICANS, an order of monks, called in France Jacobins, and in England Black Friars, or Preaching Friars. This order, founded by St. Dominic, a native of Spain, was approved of by Innocent III. in 1215, and confirmed by a bull of Honorius III. in 1216, under St. Austin's rules, and the founder's particular constitutions.

DOMINION, s. [dominus, Lat.] the exercise of power and authority; predominancy; preference. The space of ground or territory subjected to a person, applied to place.

DOMINO, s. a hood worn by a canon of a cathedral. Also a dress in form of a gown worn at masquerades.

DOMITIANUS, TITUS FLAVIUS, one of the worst emperors of Rome, successor and brother to Titus the conqueror of Jerusalem. The record of his crimes is too horrible to be attempted. He had all but absolute power, and he scrupled not to employ it as he listed. His reign was however distinguished by the real conquest of Britain by Agricola, whose early death there was too much reason to charge to the emperor, who was jealous of his virtue. He was assassinated in 96 A. D., after a tyranny of 15 years.

DON, one of the principal rivers of Europe, which in part of its course separates it from Asia. It rises in the government of Toole, in Russia, and receiving many streams almost equal to itself, it approaches the Volga, just where this river ceases to be the boundary of Europe and Asia, and turns aside to the Caspian Sea. It has many windings, and the navigation is impeded by shoals and sand-banks. After a course of about 800 miles it enters the Sea of Azov, at its N. E. angle. The Don-Cossacks are so named from their territory lying on the lower part of this river.

DON, s. [dominus, Lat.] the Spanish title of a gentleman, as Don Quixote. It is used with us ludicrously.

To DON, v. a. to put on; to invest one with. Obsolete.

DONAGHADEE, Down, in Ulster, Ireland. It is the nearest port or harbour to Scotland, and receives chief of the direct traffic between the two countries. It is 94 miles from Dublin. Pop. 3157.

DONARY, s. [dono, Lat.] a thing given for sacred uses.

DONATELLO, or DONA'TO, an eminent Florentine sculptor of the 15th century. His works have always commanded the admiration of such as could appreciate high art. He died in 1466, aged 83 years.

DONATION, s. the act of giving any thing voluntarily or unasked, the grant by which any thing is given.

DONATISTS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of schismatics in Africa, who took their name from their leader Donatus, in the 4th century. It sprang from a dispute about the election of a bishop, but Donatus proceeded to teach that baptism administered by heretics was null; that every church but the African was become prostituted, &c. It gradually died out.

DONATIVE, s. [donativ, Fr.] a gift, largess, or some considerable present. In the Canon Law, it is a benefice given by the patron to a priest without presentation to the ordinary, and without institution or induction. The king may found a church or chapel, and exempt it from the jurisdiction of the ordinary; or by letters patent he may license a common person to found such a church, and ordain it to be made a donative. There can be no lapse of such a benefice, though the bishop may compel such person to nominate a clerk by ecclesiastical censures, and the clerk must be qualified as other clerks of churches are.

DONCASTER, Yorkshire, W. R. It is seated on the river Don, and is a considerable wool-market. Here are manufactures of stockings, petticoats, knit waistcoats, gloves, and leather caps. It is perhaps better known for its race. It is 160 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 11,245.

DONE, past part. of To Do. Used also as a technical interjection in accepting a wager or bet.

DONEGAL, a county of Ulster, Ireland, bounded on the W. and N. by the ocean; on the E. by the counties of Londonderry and Tyrone; and on the S. by Fermanagh and the Bay of Donegal. It is 60 miles in length, and about 36 in breadth, and contains 42 parishes. The country is hilly and rocky, producing rare minerals, such as are peculiar to volcanic districts. The coast is very rocky and precipitous, but there are several excellent harbours. Besides small streams, it has the river Fin, which runs into Loch Foyle. In the valleys are extensive bogs, and also tracts of very fertile land. Agriculture does not much flourish. The fisheries are valuable. The linen trade carried on here is pretty extensive. Pop. 296,448. Its capital, Donegal, is situated on a bay of the same name, at the mouth of the river Esk. It is 111 miles from Dublin. Pop. 1366.

DONGO'LA, a province of Nubia, Africa, on the banks of the Nile, lying between 15 and 20 deg. N. lat. It is bounded by the Desert on the W. and the district occupied by Arabs on the E., and comprehends the alluvial tract on both sides of the river. Old Dongola and New Dongola are its principal towns, whence also the province takes its name. It is little known, not having been much visited by European travellers.

DON'JON, s. in Fortification, signifies the strong tower of a fortress.

DONNE, DR. JOHN, a learned and witty divine and poet of the beginning of the 17th century. He was brought up a Romanist, and was engaged in the study of the law, and afterwards as secretary to Lord Chancellor Ellesmere. Subsequently he entered the church, having abjured Popery, and obtained valuable preferments. As a preacher he does not always exhibit a superiority to the spirit of his age, and as a poet his fancy led him often to such subjects and to such expressions as almost smothered the genuine flame within. Wonder-exciting vigour, intenseness and peculiarity of thought, using at will the almost boundless stores of a capacious memory, and exercised on subjects where we have no right to expect it, such has the wit of Donne been described, and it pervades both his poems and his sermons. He died in 1631, aged 58 years.

DON'NINGTON, Lincolnshire. It is 110 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2026.

DONOR, s. [dono, Lat.] one who gives a thing to another.

DOO'DLE, s. [a cant word, perhaps corrupted from do little,] a trifler; an idler.

To DOOM, v. a. [deman, Sax.] to judge; to pass sentence against; to condemn; to destine; to command judicially, or by uncontrollable authority.

DOOM, s. [dom, Sax.] the sentence or condemnation of a judge; the great judgment at the last day; the state to which a person is destined; fate, or destruction; sentence, or the last determination of the judgment with respect to the condition of a person.

DOOMSDAY, s. [domedæg, Sax.] the last day, when judgment is to be passed upon all mankind; the day of judgment; the day in which a person is condemned, or is to be executed. Doomsday, or Doomsday Book, denominated Liber Judicarius, vel Censuarius Anglie; that is, the judicial book, or book of the survey of England, composed in the time of William the Conqueror, from a survey of the several counties, hundreds, tithings, &c. The intent or design of this book was, to be a register, by which sentence may be given in the tenures of estates, and from which that noted question, whether lands be ancient demesne or not, is still decided. The book is still remaining in the exchequer, fair and legible, consisting of two volumes, a greater and lesser; the greater comprehends all the counties of England, except Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durham, and part of Lancashire, which were never surveyed, and except Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk, which are contained in the lesser volume.

DOOR, s. [dor, or dure, Sax.] a vacant place left as an entrance to a building or apartment. Also, and more generally, the wooden enclosure for such an entrance. This is generally applied to private houses; but the entrance into cities, palaces, or the mansions of the nobility, is called a gate. Out of doors, means not within a house, and is sometimes used for a thing abolished, laid aside, quite gone, vanished, exploded, or sent away. At the door, implies something near, impending, or imminent; "Death is at the door." At the door of a person, signifies something that may be charged or imputed to a person; "The fault lies wholly at my door." Dryd. Next door to, implies approaching to, bordering on.

DOORCASE, s. the frame in which doors are hung.

DOORKEEPER, s. porter; one that keeps the entrance of a house.

DO'ORWAY, s. the entrance to a building or to an apartment.

DO'QUET, s. a paper containing a warrant.

DOIT, s. the English name for the beetle that flies about hedges in the evening. See DORR.

DORADO, s. in Ichthyology, the name of a large Brazilian sea-fish. In Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere, called Xiphias.

DORCHESTER, Dorsetshire. It is a town of great antiquity, and stands by the river Frome. The houses are well built, and it has three handsome streets. It is a corporate and assize town. It has but little trade. It is 120 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3249.

DORCHESTER, Oxfordshire. It was formerly of much greater account than it is at present; it has now some good buildings, and the church is a large handsome structure. It was formerly a bishop's see. It is 49 miles from London. Pop. 1089.

DORDOGNE, a department of France, named from a considerable river flowing through it into the Garonne. It is bounded by the departments Gironde, Charente Inferieure, Charente, Haute Vienne, Corrèze, Lot, and Lot et Garonne. It is about 80 miles in length, and 70 in breadth; and beside the Dordogne, has the rivers Vézère, Drome, &c. flowing through it. It has mines of coal and iron, and other valuable sources of mineral wealth; good pasturage for swine, abundance of winged game, and most ad-

DORSETSHIRE.

REFERENCE to the HUNDREDS and LIBERTIES.

A B C

D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54 55 56 57 58 59 60 61 62 63 64 65 66 67 68 69 70 71 72 73 74 75 76 77 78 79 80 81 82 83 84 85 86 87 88 89 90 91 92 93 94 95 96 97 98 99 100

The County returns 3 members.

mirable vineyards, which supply its export trade. Perigueux is its capital. Population, about 500,000.

DORÉE, JOHN DORY, s. in Ichthyology, the vulgar name of a fish, which is very broad and flat, and of a yellow colour. It is found on the coasts of Cornwall.

DORIA, ANDREAS, a famous admiral of Genoa in the 16th century; who, after many brilliant services, demanded as his reward the liberty of the republic. Aided by Charles V., he drove the French from the town, and established what was called a republic, but with a narrow aristocracy for its government. After a while a conspiracy was formed against it and him, but it was but partially successful. He died in 1560, aged 94 years.

DORIANS, the name of one tribe of the Hellenes, whence sprang the Spartans and other nations of the Peloponnesus, and some small nations on the main-land, and whose colonies spread to Asia Minor, Crete, Rhodes, Cyprus, &c. The prevailing characteristic of this race was its unyielding conservatism, and rigid military aristocracy. See SPARTA.

DORIC, a. belonging to the Dorians. Doric dialect, in the Greek language, was that variety spoken at Sparta, and the Dorian settlements in and about Greece. It was comparatively rude and unpolished, yet it has been used by some of the Greek writers, especially for lyric poetry. Doric order, in Architecture, was that kind of column without any ornament either at its base or capital, or with a very simple capital in Roman buildings. It is fluted, and its proportions also distinguish it from the Tuscan order, which it otherwise resembles.

DORISLAUS, DR. ISAAC, one of the distinguished men of the English revolution in the 17th century. He was a native of Holland, and accomplished as a jurist. Receiving an appointment at Cambridge, he spoke too freely for the authorities, and was silenced. Subsequently he was engaged by Charles during the war, but he left him for the Independents, and aided in the impeachment of the monarch. Having been sent as ambassador to the Hague, he was murdered by some of the exiles, in 1649, aged about 50 years. His body, which was buried in the Abbey, was exhumed at the Restoration.

DORKING, Surrey. A town standing beside the river Mole, on the high ridge of chalk hills overlooking the Wealden valley. It is famed for a peculiar breed of fowls. Box-hill, known of Londoners, is near at hand. It is 23 miles from London. Market, Saturday. It has a May fair for lambs. Pop. 5638.

DORMANT, a. [Fr.] sleeping; in a sleeping posture. Secret, or private, opposed to public.

DORMITORY, s. [dormitorium, Lat.] a place furnished for sleeping in, with a great many beds. In old records, a burial-place.

DORMOUSE, s. [dormio, Lat. and mouse,] in Natural History, a mouse which passes a great part of the winter in sleep.

DORN, s. [dorn, Teut.,] in Natural History, a fish, perhaps the same as the thornback.

DORNIC, s. a species of linen cloth used in Scotland for the table, so called because first made in Doornick in Flanders.

DORNOCK, Sutherland, Scotland. It is situated at the entrance of a fine frith of the same name. It is a small place, mostly in ruins, but it is the county town. About 9 miles above Dornock ferry is a water-fall, and salmon-leap, where the fishes that fail in their leap are caught in baskets on their fall. Dornock is about 140 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 458.

DORPAT, a town of Livonia, Russia. It stands on the river Embach, and is a handsomely built place, having a fine and commanding situation on the side of a hill. It has a university with an extensive library. Population, about 12,000. Lat. 58. 25. N. Long. 26. 41. W.

DORR, s. [for, Teut.,] in Natural History, an insect, probably so called from its sound, and named likewise the hedge-chaffer.

DORSEL, DO'RSER, s. [dorsum, Lat.] a pannier or bag hung on each side of a horse, for holding things of small bulk.

DORSETSHIRE, a county of England, lying on the English Channel, bounded by Devonshire, Somersetshire, Wiltshire, and Hampshire. It is about 52 miles in length, and 36 in breadth, and contains 248 parishes. The range of hills belonging to the chalk formation crosses the county, some of which are above 500 feet in height. It is watered by the Stour, the Frome, the Ivel, &c. Some part of the coast is precipitous, and there are some good harbours. Portland Point is at low water connected with the main-land by a long narrow spit of sand. Very good building-stone is obtained here. The greater part of the county is laid down in pasture, the Chalk Downs affording excellent sheep-walks. The fisheries are also valuable. It has both linen and woollen manufactures. Dorchester is its county town. Pop. 175,043. It returns 14 members to parliament.

DORSIFEROUS, DORSIPAROUS, a. [dorsum and fero, or pario, Lat.] bearing or bringing forth on the back. In Botany, applied to plants of the capillary kind, without stalk, which bear their seed on the back-side of their leaves; such as the fern, &c. In Natural History, applied to the American frog, which brings forth her young at her back.

DORT, a town and port of Holland, having a good trade, but chiefly famous for a synod of Protestant theologians, held there in the beginning of the 17th century, by which Arminianism, as taught by Episcopius, was condemned as heresy, and a persecution of those that held it ordained; also a translation of the Bible into Dutch was determined on. Divines from the Church of England, and from the Presbyterians of Scotland, attended. It showed, as all such assemblages have always showed, that the truth of Scripture cannot be determined by such means. The influence of James I. of England was the chief cause of the decision against the Arminians; but he shortly after, through the influence of Laud and the High-church party, adopted the very doctrines he had had condemned.

DORTURE, s. [dortoir, Fr.] a place to sleep in; a bed-chamber.

DOSE, s. [dosis, Gr.] in Physic, as much of any medicine as is proper for a person to take at one time. As much of any liquor as a person can bear: sometimes used for that quantity which intoxicates a person.

To DOSE, v. a. to proportion a medicine properly to the patient or disease; to give physic or any thing nauseous to any man, in a ludicrous sense.

DOSSEL, s. a plectrum; or a small lump or quantity of lint to be laid on a sore.

DOST, the second person of the verb To Do.

DOT, s. a small point or spot made to mark any thing, by pressing the tip of a pen on the paper in writing, and resembling the mark at the end of the sentence [.]. In Music, a dot after a note indicates that it is to be sustained half as long again as its proper length.

To DOT, v. a. to mark with specks.—v. n. to make dots or spots.

DOTAGE, s. want or weakness of understanding; excessive fondness for any person or thing; generally applied to persons in years.

DOTAL, a. [dotalis, Lat.] relating to the portion of a woman; constituting her dowry.

DOTARD, s. a person whose understanding is impaired by age.

DOTATION, s. [dotalio, Lat.] the act of giving a dowry or portion.

To DOTTE, DOAR, v. n. [dolere, Belg.] to have one's understanding impaired by age or passion.—v. a. to regard with excessive fondness.

DOTER, s. one whose understanding is impaired by years; one who loves a person or thing with excessive fondness.

DOTTINGLY, ad. with an excessive love or fondness.

DOTTARD, s. in Gardening, a tree kept from growing to its full height by cutting.

DOTTRELL, s. in Natural History, the name of a bird of the plover kind.

DOUAY, a considerable city in the department of Nord, France, long celebrated for its English college, to which the Roman Catholics of our nation were generally sent for education. Its principal trade consists in making and vending wrosted camlets. It is seated on the river Scarpe. It is about 120 miles from Paris. Population, about 20,000. Here was made a translation of the Old Testament, from the Latin Vulgate into English, by the Romanists, in the beginning of the 17th century, by which it was hoped to check the influence of translations of the Scripture; but it was, as might be expected, of no avail.

DOUBLE, (dabble) a. [Fr.] two things of the same sort, joined in pairs, and answering each other. Twice as much, applied to quantity; the same number repeated. Having twice the effect or influence, applied to power. Figuratively, deceitful, acting two parts, one openly, and a different one in private. It is used in composition for two ways, as double-edged, having an edge on each side; or for twice the number or quantity; double-dyed, i. e. twice dyed.

To DOUBLE, (double) v. n. to increase to twice the quantity, number, value, or strength; to turn back, or wind, in running; to play tricks; to use sleights.—v. a. among sailors, to pass round a cape or promontory; to fold; to repeat the same word; to increase by addition.

DOUBLE, (double) s. twice the quantity, number, value, or quality; strong beer, so called from its being twice as strong as the common sort; a trick; a shift; an artifice. In Hunting, a turning back or winding made by game.

DOUBLE, ad. twice over. "I was double their age," Swift.

DOUBLE-BASS, s. the largest kind of violin, having but three strings, but of great value in a full orchestra.

DOUBLE-DEALER, (double-dealer) s. one who is deceitful, by acting two parts at the same time, one to a person's face, and the other behind his back.

DOUBLE-DEALING, (double-dealing) s. an artifice; dissimulation; the acting two different parts, by pretending friendship to a person's face, at the same time being intimate with his enemy; low, insidious, and fraudulent; cunning.

DOUBLE-HEADED, a. in Botany, having the flowers growing one to another.

DOUBLE-MINDED, (double-minded) a. deceitful; acting two contrary parts; prosecuting contrary designs.

DOUBLENESS, (doubleness) s. the state of a thing repeated twice; the state of a thing folded, or made twice its natural size.

DOUBLER, (double) s. one who is guilty of deceit or dissimulation; one who increases any thing by repetition, addition, or folding.

DOUBLET, (double) s. an under or inner garment, so called from its affording double the warmth of another.

DOUBLE-TO'NGUED, (double-tong'd) a. giving contrary accounts of the same thing; deceitful.

DOUBLETOOTH, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the water hemlock-agricola.

DOUBLO, (double) s. [Fr.] amongst Spanish coins, the name of the pieces worth 2, 4, and 8 crowns. That of 4 crowns is the most usually so designated, equal in value to about £1 12s. 4d. English money.

DOUBLY, (double) ad. in a twofold manner; in twice the quantity; to twice the degree.

DOUBS, a department of France, bordering on Switzerland, and bounded by the departments Jura, Haute Saône, and Haute Rhin. It is about 70 miles in length and 40 in breadth. The mountains of Jura cross its Swiss edge, the highest of which here exceeds 2000 feet. The Doubs, (whence this department is named,) and the Oignon, with the streams tributary to them, water it. Building-stone, &c. are obtained here. The pastures are good, but corn, though grown, is not abundant. There are many iron-works, and other manufactories. Besançon is its chief town. Population, about 300,000.

To DOUBT, (doubt) v. n. [doubter, Fr.] to be unable to determine the reality, truth, or possibility of a thing, on account of the equality of the arguments on each side; to fear; to suspect; to hesitate; to desist or keep from action through suspense.—v. a. to fear; to suspect; to distrust.

DOUBT, (doubt) s. uncertainty; suspense; a state of the mind wherein it remains undetermined. Figuratively, a question or some point undetermined and unsettled; a scruple; perplexity; suspicion; a difficulty proposed to the understanding. SYNON. We are in uncertainty with respect to the success of our proceedings; in doubt what step to take; in suspense when we are held from acting by a delay of certainty. Uncertainty requires caution; doubt, consideration; suspense, patience.

DOUBTER, (doubter) s. one who is not able to determine the truth or probability of a thing; one who is in an uncertain state of mind.

DOUBTFUL, (doubtful) a. full of uncertainty; not settled in opinion; not determined in the mind on account of the quality of the proofs for and against; not secure; suspicious; timorous; ambiguous, or not clear, applied to the meaning of words.

DOUBTFULLY, (doubtfully) ad. with uncertainty and irresolution; with ambiguity, or want of clearness.

DOUBTFULNESS, (doubtfulness) s. a state of the mind wherein it is unable to determine certainty, reality, or truth, for want of preponderating proofs; uncertainty. That which may admit of various and contrary senses, applied to words.

DOUBTINGLY, (doubtfully) ad. in such a manner as to be uncertain with respect to the reality or truth of a thing; in such a manner as to be fearful of some future ill.

DOUBTLESS, (doubtless) a. without any fear or apprehension of danger or ill; without doubt; certainly.—adv. without doubt, question, or uncertainty.

DOUCKER, s. in Zoology, a bird that dips in the water.

DOVE, s. [dovo, old Teut.] in Zoology, a pigeon.

DOVECOT, s. a small building in which pigeons are kept; a pigeon-house.

DOVOR, Kent. It is a sea-port of some consequence, being but 21 miles from Calais in France. It is one of the Cinque Ports, and has a corporation. Its castle stands on a high hill, and is very strong, containing barracks for 3000 men, and commanding a view of the French coast. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by the shipping, and by ship-building, rope-making, &c. It is 72 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 13,872.

DOVETAIL, s. in Carpentry, a form or manner of joining boards, or timber, by letting one piece into another, in the form of a wedge reversed, or a dove's tail. This is one of the strongest kinds of joinings.

DOUGH, (do) s. [dah, Sax.] the paste made for bread or pies before it is baked.

DOUGHBAKED, a. unfinished; not hardened to perfection.

DOUGHY, (doity) a. [dohtig, Sax.] brave, noble, illustrious, in ancient authors. Obstinately brave; stiff. Used by moderns to convey some ludicrous or ironical idea of strength and courage.

DOUGHY, (doey) a. not baked; not baked enough. Figuratively, soft; not confirmed by years or education in the love of virtue.

DOUGLAS, the name of a noble family, which has figured largely in Scottish history, being associated with that fierce and ceaseless struggle the Scotch nation maintained against England, till the union of the crowns by James I. The most eminent were, Sir William Douglas, who was the companion of Sir William Wallace in his patriotic efforts for Scotland in 1297.—Sir James Douglas, the companion of Robert Bruce in his successful conflicts against the English, who was also intrusted with the Bruce's heart, in 1320, to carry to the Holy Sepulchre.—James, Earl of Douglas, whose death at the hands of Hotspur, in 1388, is celebrated in the ballad of Chevy-chase.—William, Earl of Douglas, under whose command the power of his house rose to be a rival to the king's, and who was tyrannically cruel, and was killed by his own king, James II., who had invited him to Stirling Castle, to court, in 1452.—Archibald, Earl of Angus, called Bell-the-cat, from some word of his when a royal favourite was plotted against; he gave wise counsel to his king, and was insulted, whence, perchance, he fell not at Flodden; he died in 1514.—his son, Gawain Douglas, was bishop of Dunkeld, and the only one of the house whom the Muses loved; his translation of Virgil is his chief work, but his other poems have not been without admirers; he died in 1522, an exile from Scotland, at London:—and lastly, George and William Douglas, a brother and a kinsman of Sir William Douglas, Lord of Lochleven, at whose island fortress the beautiful and unhappy Mary, Queen of Scots, was imprisoned by the lords who confederated against her and Bothwell; these two young men planned and executed her escape from the castle with most chivalrous devotion to her; George is said to have fallen at Langside; the escape was effected in 1568.

DOUGLAS, DR. JOHN, an eminent divine and bishop of the Church of England. He was on intimate terms with the literary men of his time, and he contributed a work on miracles, called the Criterion, to the defence of Christianity. He died in 1807, aged 86 years.

DOURO, a river of Spain and Portugal, which rises in Old Castile, and receiving the waters of many tributaries, flows through Leon, to the borders of Portugal, serving for awhile as the boundary between the countries, and then crossing Portugal, enters the Atlantic at Oporto, after a course of near 500 miles.

To DOUSE, v. a. [onomatopoeic.] to plunge suddenly over head in the water; to give a person a box on the ear.—v. n. to fall suddenly into the water.

DOUSE, s. a box on the ear: a low and cant word.

DOW, GERARD, a painter of the Dutch school, a pupil of Rembrandt, whose productions are celebrated above all things for the elaborate and exquisite care bestowed on their finishing. He died in 1680, aged 67 years.

DOWAGER, s. [douairière, Fr.] a widow who has a jointure; a title given to the widows of kings, or other nobility.

DOWDY, s. an awkward, ill-dressed, and clownish woman. — a. awkward, inelegant.

DOWER, s. that portion which the law allows a widow out of the estates of her husband, after his decease.

DOWERED, part. portioned; supplied with a portion.

DOWERLESS, a. without a portion.

DOWLAS, s. a coarse kind of linen.

DOWN, s. formerly spelt down; [dunn, Dan.] soft feathers, generally those which grow on the breasts of birds or fowls. Figuratively, that which softens or alleviates any uneasy sensation; soft wool, or tender hair.

DOWN, s. [dun, Sax.] a large open plain or valley. In the plural, used for a road near the coast of Deal in Kent, which is passed by shipping homeward and outward bound, and is a general place for men of war to rendezvous.

DOWN, a county of Ulster in Ireland, lying on the Irish Sea, and bounded by Antrim and Armagh. It is about 40 miles long and 27 broad; containing 72 parishes. It is very hilly, many points exceeding 2000, and some even 2500 feet in height. The Upper Bann, the Lagan, the Newry, and other rivers water it; it touches Loch Neagh, and Loch Strangford is wholly included in it. It has some good harbours, but the navigation is dangerous, owing to the rocky character of the coast. Some metals and valuable building-stones are obtained. It is a fertile country, though partly encumbered by bogs, and carries on a large linen manufacture. The habitations are neat, with an orchard to almost every cottage. Its chief town is Downpatrick, a small town, 74 miles from Dublin. Pop. 4651. Near it are the remains of an old cathedral, remarkable for the tomb of St. Patrick, the founder. Pop. 361,446. It sends 4 members to parliament. Down, in conjunction with Connor and Dromore, is an Irish bishopric.

DOWN, prep. [aduna, Sax.] from a higher to a lower situation; along a descent, from a rising ground to the plain on which it stands. Towards the mouth, applied to a river.

DOWN, ad. on the ground; from a higher to a lower situation; tending to the ground, or towards the centre. Out of sight, or below the horizon, applied to the situation of the sun, moon, &c. "The moon is down," Shak. To boil down, is to exhaust all its strength, or so as to macerate or boil to pieces. Up and down, every where, or without any confinement to place.

DOWNCAST, a. bent down; directed to the ground.

DOWNFALL, (downfall) s. ruin, applied to buildings. Calamity, disgrace, or change from a state of dignity, affluence, and power, to one of indigence, misery, and disgrace.

DOWNHAM, MARKET, Norfolk, a town noted for the great quantities of butter that are sent thence to London, and generally known there by the name of Cambridge butter. It is seated on the Ouse. It is 86 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2953.

DOWNHILL, s. declivity; descent. — a. declivous, descending.

DOWNING COLLEGE, one of the colleges of Cambridge University, recently founded out of the estates of Sir George Downing, after much litigation and difficulty; and not yet in full operation.

DOWNTON, Wiltshire. It has a trade in malting, paper-making, tanning, and lace-making. It is seated on the river Avon. It is 84 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 3648.

DOWNLOOKED, a. with the eyes cast down or looking towards the ground, the natural expression of sorrow.

DOWNLIVING, a. about to be in travail of childbirth.

DOWNRIGHT, (downright) ad. straight down; in a straight or perpendicular line; in plain terms; completely; without any dissimulation, flattery, or ceremony.

DOWNRIGHT, (downright) a. plain; open; professed; without disguise or dissimulation; directly tending to the point; without circumlocution; artless; without ceremony; honestly surly.

DOWNSITTING, s. the act of going to rest, alluding to the eastern custom of lying on the ground; rest, repose.

DOWNWARD, Downwards, ad. [dhuneward, Sax.] towards the centre, or towards the ground; from a higher to a lower situation. In a course of succession from father to son, &c., applied to descent or genealogy.

DOWNWARD, a. moving from a higher to a lower situation; declining; bending, or sloping towards the ground.

DOWNY, a. covered with soft and short feathers, or with a nap; made of soft feathers or down; soft; tender; soothing.

DOWRY, s. is properly the money or fortune which a wife brings to her husband in marriage; and differs from dower.

DOXOLOGY, s. [doxa and logos, Gr.] a short verse or sentence including praise and thanksgiving to God; such as "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost."

To DOZE, v. n. [duces, Sax.] to slumber; to be half asleep; to be in a state of sleepiness. — v. a. to stupify or make dull.

DOZEN, (dizen) s. [douzaine, Fr.] a collection of twelve things or persons.

DOZINESS, s. sleepiness, drowsiness; a strong inclination or propensity to sleep.

DOZY, a. inclined to sleep, drowsy, sleepy.

DRAB, s. [drabbe, Sax.] a thick cloth, made of wool.

DRACHM, (drum) s. [drachma, Lat.] an ancient silver coin worth about seven-pence three farthings sterling; the 16th part of an ounce Avoirdupois weight. Among apothecaries, the 8th part of an ounce, weighing either 3 scruples or 60 grains. An ancient Jewish coin, having on one side a harp, and on the reverse a bunch of grapes, called by the Jews half a shekel, but by the Greeks a drachm.

DRAÇO, the dragon; in Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

DRAÇO, a famous legislator of Athens, whose laws awarded death for almost every crime they specified. They were superseded by the laws of Solon. He flourished about 620 B.C.

DRAFF, s. [draef, Belg.] refuse; lees; dregs; properly something fluid.

DRAFFY, a. abounding in dregs or sediments. Figuratively, worthless, or only fit to be flung away.

DRAFT, s. See DRAUGHT.

DRAFT, a. a corruption of DRAUGHT.

To DRA, v. a. [dragan, Sax.] to pull along the ground by main force; to draw along contemptuously, and as unworthy any notice; to pull along with violence. — v. n. to hang so low as to trail upon the ground.

DRA, s. [dreg, Sax.] an instrument with hooks, used to catch hold of things under water.

To DRAGGLE, v. a. to make dirty by trailing along the ground. — v. n. to grow or become dirty by drawing along the ground.

DRA'GNET, a. a net which is drawn along the bottom of the water.

DRA'GOMAN, s. [Türk.] the name given to the interpreters engaged by European travellers, &c. in Turkey.

DRA'GON, s. [dragon, Fr.] the name of a fabulous monster, represented in the form of a huge serpent, with crocodile's jaws and feet, and enormous wings. Figuratively, one of a fierce and violent temper.

DRA'GONET, s. [diminutive of dragon,] a little dragon.

DRA'GON'S-BLOOD, s. a moderately heavy resin, of which there are two kinds; the one firm and compact, brought to us in small leaves, wrapped up in long and narrow leaves, and are called the Drops or Tears of Dragon's Blood. The other is brought in larger masses or cakes of an irregular figure; this is less compact, less pure, and of much less value than the other. The genuine dragon's-blood is the fruit of a tall tree of the palm kind, common in the island of Java, and some other parts of the East Indies.

DRA'GONFLY, s. in Natural History, a genus of beautiful four-winged flies, which prey on smaller flies and are quite harmless.

DRA'GONTREE, s. in Botany, a species of palm.

DRA'GOON, s. [dragen, Teut.] a soldier who serves both on foot and horseback.

To DRAIN, v. a. [traine, Fr.] to draw off water or other fluids gradually; to empty a vessel by gradually drawing off what it contains; to dry by setting in such a posture or position as the fluid must naturally run out; to open a channel under the soil, so as to improve the fertility of it, by carrying off the standing water.

DRAIN, s. a channel through which waters are gradually exhausted or drawn; a water-course; a sluice.

DRAKE, s. [dreck, Belg.] in Natural History, the male of a duck. A small piece of cannon, from draco, Lat.

DRAKE, SIR FRANCIS, the famous buccaneer, circumnavigator, and naval commandeur in the days of Queen Elizabeth. He entered the sea-service whilst young, and was patronized by Sir John Hawkins. He first rose into notice by his privateering exploits against the Spaniards of S. America. He was honoured by various commissions under the queen; and was the first English captain who crossed the Pacific, after which exploit he was knighted. His crowning service against Spain was the part he took in the destruction of the celebrated Armada. He died in 1596, aged 51 years.

DRAKE, DR. NATHAN, a country physician, whose critical and miscellaneous essays and writings are a valuable addition to our domestic literature. His History of Shakespeare and his Times, and his works relating to the seasons, are particularly interesting. He died in 1836, aged 70 years.

DRAM, s. in Weight, the eighth part of an ounce. Such a quantity of spirituous liquors as is usually drunk at once.

DRA'MA, s. [drama, Gr.] a poem accommodated to action; in which the action is not related, but represented; and in which therefore such rules are to be observed as make the representation probable. It should be observed, however, that some of the finest dramas are altogether unfitted for being brought on the stage. The principal species of drama are two, comedy and tragedy. Some others there are of less note; as pastoral, satire, tragic-comedy, opera, &c.

DRA'MATIC, DRA'MATICAL, a. represented by action, or on the stage.

DRA'MATICALLY, ad. after the manner of a poem acted on the stage.

DRA'MATIST, s. the author or composer of a dramatic piece acted on the stage.

DRA'NK, the preterite of To DRINK.

To DRAPE, v. a. [drap, Fr.] to make cloth. Figuratively, to jeer, to satirize.

DRA'PER, s. one who sells either linen or woollen cloth.

DRA'PERY, s. [drapperie, Fr.] the trade or art of making cloth; cloth made either of linen or woollen. In Painting and Sculpture, the representation of the garments or clothing of any figure.

DRA'STIC, a. [drastikos, Gr.] powerful, vigorous, efficacious. In Medicine, a remedy which works soon and with speed.

DRAUGH, (draff) s. refuse; swill; a scum of a pot; pot-liquor, or the liquor given to hogs.

DRAUGHT (draff) s. [draecht, Belg.] the act of drinking; a quantity of liquor drunk at once; the action of moving or dragging carriages; the quality of being drawn or moved by pulling; the representation of a person or thing by painting; a sketch or plan of some building or picture; a picture; a sharp current of air in a room; the depth which a ship sinks into the water. In Fishing, the act of catching fish by a drag-net. In War, forces drawn off from the main army. In Commerce, a bill drawn by one person on another for money. In the plural, a game played on a chequered table, with round pieces of box and ebony.

DRAVE, the preterite of To DRIVE. Drove is more used.

DRAVE, a river of Europe, springing in the Tyrol, and falling, after a course of above 250 miles, into the Danube, near Essek: this town and Klagenfurth are the chief seated on its banks.

To DRAW, v. a. preter. drew; past particip. drawn; [dragan, Sax.] to pull along upon the ground from one place to another; to pull up, or raise from a deep place; to suck; to attract; to draw towards itself; to inhale, applied to air; to take from a cask or vessel; to pull a sword out of the scabbard; to unseat; to take bread out of an oven; to unclose curtains, if close before, but to close together, if open; to let out any liquid; to extract; to convey secretly; to protract or lengthen; to derive; to deduce as from postulates; to imply, infer, or introduce a consequence; to induce or persuade; to win; to gain; to receive; to take up; to extort; to force; to wrest; to distort; to entice; to seduce; to inveigle; to prevail on by fondness, used with in. In Commerce, to address a bill for a sum of money to a person. In Military affairs, to detach or separate from the main body; to prepare for action; to range in battle-array. In Painting, to sketch the outline of a picture; or generally, to represent any thing with chalk, or pencil, &c. In Pharmacy, applied to the action of some plaisters and unguents. To draw up, to form in writing; to compose. To draw back, to retreat or retire; to retract a design, or decline an undertaking. To draw off, to extract by distillation; to drain out by vent; to decline an engagement or make a retreat. In Cookery, to disembowel; to take out the entrails of poultry.

DRAW, s. the act of drawing; the lot or chance taken or drawn.

DRAW/BACK, s. money paid back or abated for ready payment. Figuratively, a deduction, or diminution of the value or qualities of a thing. In Commerce, certain duties either of the customs or excise, allowed upon the exportation of some of our own manufactures, or on foreign merchandises that have paid a duty on importation.

DRAW/BIDGE, s. a bridge moving on hinges, and by means of chains lifted up or let down at pleasure, in order to preserve or destroy the communication between two places, or a country and some fort.

DRAW'ER, s. applied to persons, one employed in fetching water from a well or cask; in public-houses, one who draws liquors from casks; one who forms the resemblance of a person on paper or canvass, with a pen, pencil, or brush. Applied to things, that which has the power of attracting towards itself; also, a box which slides in a groove or case. In Surgery, that which brings a tumour or gathering to maturity.

DRAW'ING, s. the act of taking or forming the likeness of a thing or person with a pen or pencil; a picture drawn with a pen or pencil.

DRAW'INGROOM, s. a room to which company retire after an entertainment; a room set apart for the reception of company at court. Figuratively, the person or company assembled in a drawing-room.

To DRAW'L, v. n. to pronounce one's words with a slow, disagreeable whine.

DRAW'WELL, s. a well out of which water is raised by means of a bucket and rope.

DRAY, DRAY-CART, s. [drag, Sax.] a low cart, used by brewers to convey their beer.

DRA'YHORSE, s. a horse which draws a dray.

DRA'YMAN, s. one who drives a dray.

DRA'YPOUGH, (drayploon) s. a plough resembling a dray.

DRAYTON, Shropshire. It is 154 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4680.

DRAYTON, MICHAEL, a poet of the Elizabethan age in England, whose merits are almost forgotten in the glare of the other poets of that age; and are of themselves so clouded by a peculiar and, to us moderns, wearisome phraseology, that they are little known. His Polyolbion is about the most famous of his writings. He was made poet-laureate in 1626, and died in 1631, aged 68 years.

DREAD, (dred) s. [dræd, Sax.] terror, or fear; the sensation occasioned by the sight of some terrible or dangerous object.—a. awful or venerable in the highest degree.

To DREAD, (dred) v. a. [drædan, Sax.] to fear to an excessive degree.

DRE'ADER, (dræder) s. one who lives in continual fear or apprehension of some danger.

DRE'ADFUL, (drædful) a. causing excessive fear; frightful; formidable.

DRE'ADFULLY, (drædfully) ad. in such a manner as to cause fear or terror.

DRE'ADFULNESS, s. that quality which causes excessive fear or terror.

DRE'ADLESS, (drædless) a. void of fear; undaunted.

DRE'ADLESSNESS, (drædlessness) s. a disposition of mind that is void of fear; intrepidity; undauntedness.

DREAM, (dream) s. [droom, Belg.] the images which appear to the mind during sleep. Figuratively, a chimera; a groundless fancy, or conceit, which has no existence but in the imagination.

To DREAM, (dream) v. n. to have pictures before the mind, while the outward senses are stopped during sleep, which are not always suggested by any external object or known occasion, nor are under the control of the dreamer; to think, to imagine, to fancy, without reason.

DRE'AMER, (dræmer) s. one who perceives things during sleep, without the suggestion of external objects; a person fond of conceits; a fanciful man.

DREAMLESS, (dreamless) a. without dreams.

DREAR, (dreer) a. [dreorig, Sax.] affecting with melancholy; mournful.

DREARY, (dreary) a. [dreorig, Sax.] full of sorrow, or mournful, applied to persons. Gloomy, dismal, or affecting with melancholy, applied to places.

DREDGE, s. a thick, strong net, fastened to three spalls of iron, and drawn at a boat's stern, gathering whatever it meets with at the bottom of the water, used for catching oysters, and is a species of the drag-net.

To DREDGE, v. a. to fish with a dredge. In Cookery, to strew flour over meat while roasting.

DREDGER, s. one who fishes with a dredge; a box with small holes at the top, used for strewing flour on meat when roasting.

DREGGINESS, (dregginess) s. fulness of lees or dregs. Foulness, applied to liquors abounding with a rosy sediment.

DREGGISH, (dreggish) a. abounding with lees or sediment; feculent.

DREGGY, (dreggy) a. muddy, foul, full of sediment.

DREGS, s. it has no singular; [dregten, Sax.] the bottom, lees, or foul part of any liquor. Figuratively, the refuse, sweepings, or worthless part of any thing; the dross or meanest part of a people.

To DRENCH, v. a. [drencean, Sax.] to soak or bathe; to plunge all over in some liquor; to wash; to steep; to moisten, or make very wet; to administer physic by violence.

DRENCH, s. a draught or swill, used by way of contempt; a potion or drink, prepared of several physical ingredients, for a sick horse; physic which must be given by force.

DRENCHER, s. one who dips or soaks any thing; one who administers physic by force.

DRESDEN, the capital of Saxony, Germany. It stands on the Elbe, and by it is divided into the New Town and Old Town, which are joined by a stone bridge supported by 19 piers. Both towns are surrounded with strong fortifications. The palace is in the Old Town, which is a noble building, richly and curiously ornamented. There are also other royal residences, and public buildings devoted to the arts. The churches are very fine. In the New Town, also, there are some noble buildings for libraries, picture-galleries, museums, &c., and some good educational and charitable institutions. The streets are regularly built, and some of them are very imposing in their style of architecture, &c. Its trade arises from its fairs, and the concourse of the people of the neighbourhood. Lat. 51. 2. N. Long. 13. 43. E.

To DRESS, v. a. [dresser, Fr.] to put on clothes; to adorn, deck, or set out with clothes. Figuratively, to clothe, or represent in a favourable light. In Surgery, to apply a plaster or other remedy to a wound. To curry, or rub, applied to horses. To make straight, applied to a line of soldiers. To trim, applied to lamps. To prepare victuals fit for eating, applied to cookery. To curl, to comb out, applied to hair.

DRESS, s. that which a person wears to cover his body from the inclemency of the weather; clothes or splendid attire; the skill or taste in choosing or wearing clothes.

DRESSER, s. one employed in putting on a person's clothes; one who acts under a surgeon at an hospital; a broad and long kind of table or shelf, in a kitchen, used to prepare victuals.

DRESSING, s. in Surgery, the plaster or other remedy applied to a sore.

DREW, SAMUEL, an eminent metaphysician of the society of Wesleyans, and one of their most original writers and thinkers. He was of very humble origin, and not indebted to the schools for his acuteness of mind. His Essay on the Soul, and that on the Being of God, are his chief productions. He was editor of the Imperial Magazine also; and died in 1833, aged 68 years.

To DRI/BBLE, v. n. [drip, Sax.] to fall in drops; to let the spittle fall from one's mouth; to slaver like an infant or an idiot.—v. a. to throw-down, or scatter in drops.

DRI/BLET, s. a small sum of money.

DRI/ER, s. in Medicine, that which has the quality of absorbing moisture.

DRI/FT, s. the force which impels or drives a person or thing; violence; course; a raft, or any thing driven at random, or in a body; a stratum, or layer of any matter blown together by the wind, or heaped together by a current of water; the tendency or particular design of an action; the scope or tenor of a discourse.

To DRIFT, v. a. to drive or force along; to throw together on heaps; to amass.

To DRILL, v. a. [drillen, Belg.] to make a hole with an auger, gimlet, or drill; to bore; to drain, or make its passage through small holes or interstices.—[from drille, Fr.] to exercise soldiers.

DRILL, s. an instrument used to bore holes in wood, iron, or brass; also a machine used in agriculture, which when the soil is well prepared draws regular furrows, and sets the seed in equal proportions in them.

DRI/LL-SOWING, s. a method of sowing grain or seed of any kind by a drill.

To DRINK, v. n. preter. drank or drunk, past participle drunk or drunken; [drincan, Sax.] to swallow liquors. Figuratively, to swallow an immoderate quantity of liquor. To drink to, to salute in drinking; to wish well in drinking. Figuratively, to suck up, or absorb; to hear; to see.

DRINK, s. liquor to be swallowed, opposed to meat, or solid food; any particular kind of liquor.

DRINKABLE, a. that may be drank.

DRINKER, s. one who is fond of swallowing quantities of intoxicating liquors.

DRINK-MONEY, s. money given to buy liquor.

To DRIP, v. n. [drippen, Belg.] to fall in drops.—v. a. to let fall in drops, to drop as fat in roasting.

Drip, s. that which falls in drops.

DRI/PING, s. the fat which drops from meat while roasting, called also kitchen-stuff.

DRI/PING-PAN, s. the pan in which the fat of roast meat is caught.

To DRIVE, v. a. preter. drove, past participle driven or drove; [drifan, Sax.] to make a person or thing move by violence; to send to any place by force; to convey animals, or make them walk from one place to another; to compel; to enforce or push home a proof or argument; to distress; to straiten; to conduct a carriage; to purify by motion. To drive trade, to carry it on. To let drive at, to intend; to mean; to endeavour to accomplish; to aim or strike at with fury.

To DRI/VEL, v. n. [a corruption from dribble] to let the spittle fall out of one's mouth like an infant or idiot.

DRI/VEL, s. slaver, spittle, or moisture dropped from the mouth.

DRI/VELLER, s. a fool or idiot, so called from their letting the slaver drop from their mouths.

DRI/VELLING, part. doting; weak in the understanding; foolish.

DRI/VER, s. the person or thing which communicates motion by force; one who guides and conveys beasts from one place to another; one who manages and guides the cattle which draw any carriage.

To DRI/ZZLE, v. a. [driselen, Teut.] to shed in small drops, or wet mist, like dew.—v. n. to let fall in small slow drops.

DRI/ZZLY, a. descending in small slow drops; descending in a mist; resembling a mist, or moist vapour.

DRO/GHELA, (drogheda) a town reckoned to be a county by itself, in Leinster, Ireland. It is a sea-port on the Boyne, lying between the counties of East Meath and Louth, into which last county part of the parliamentary borough of Drogheda extends. It is not badly built in the principal parts. Its harbour is good, and it has a considerable trade in corn, coals, &c. It has also some good linen manufactures. It is 30 miles from Dublin. Pop. 17,300.

DROIL, s. a drone; a sluggard.

DROI/TWICH, Worcestershire. It is seated on the Salwarp, and is of great note for its salt-pits, from which they obtain many thousands of bushels of salt annually. It is 118 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2832.

DROLI, a. [drole, Fr.] comical; exciting laughter.

DROLI, s. [droler, Fr.] a person whose business and employ it is to raise mirth by antic gestures or comical jests; a merry-andrew or jack-pudding; a farce composed to excite laughter.

To DROLL, v. n. to play the buffoon.

DROLLE/RY, s. jest; ridicule; or an endeavour to make a thing the object of mirth, ridicule, or laughter.

DROME, a department of France lying on the Rhone, and bounded by the departments Ardèche, Vaucluse, Basses Alpes, Hautes Alpes, and Isère. It is about 85 miles long and 50 broad. The Alps extend into this department, some elevations exceeding 5000 feet. The Rhone, the Isère, and Drome (whence it is named) are its chief rivers. Iron, copper, coal, &c. &c. are obtained here in plenty; these, with fruits, and wines, (amongst which are some of the most famous French wines,) form its wealth. Valence is its capital. Population, about 310,000.

DROMEDARY, s. [dromedare, Ital.] in Natural History, a sort of camel, smaller, slenderer, and nimbler than the common camel, having two protuberances on its back. Its hair is soft and short; it has no fangs or fore-teeth, nor horn on its feet, which are covered with a fleshy skin: it is about seven feet and a half high, from the ground to the top of its head. Like the camel, it is capable of sustaining great fatigue, and is said to travel 100 miles a day.

DROMORE, with Down and Connor, an Irish bishopric in the province of Armagh. See those names.

DRONE, s. [drone, Sax.] in Natural History, the male hive-bee, which makes no honey, has no sting, and is driven from the hive and killed when the bees begin to lay up their winter stores, and all the swarming is over. Also, a kind of two-winged fly somewhat resembling a bee in colour and shape. Figuratively, an inactive, useless, or sluggish person.

To DRONE, v. n. to live an inactive, useless, and dull life, like that of a drone.

DRO'NFELD, Derbyshire. It is situated in a valley among the mountains at the edge of the Peak, in a fine healthy air. It is 153 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 4583.

DRO'NISH, a. like a drone; useless; sluggish and inactive.

DRO'NTHEIM, a sea-port of Norway, and chief town of a province of the same name. It is well built, but mostly of wood. Its cathedral is a fine structure. The trade is considerable, and it exports timber, fish, copper, &c. &c. Some good institutions both for charitable and educational purposes are here. Pop. about 13,000. Lat. 63. 30. N. Long. 11. 5. E.

To DROOP, v. n. [droef, Belg.] to languish with sorrow; to hang down the head with sorrow. Figuratively, to grow faint, weak, or dispirited; to sink; to lean downwards; to decline, beautifully applied by Milton.

DROP, s. [drappa, Sax.] a small portion or particle of water, or other fluid, in a spherical form; as much liquor as falls at once when there is not a continual stream; a diamond hanging loose from the ear, so called from its resembling the form of a drop of any fluid in its descent. Drops, the plural, in Architecture, are ornaments, in the Doric entablature, representing drops, or little bells, immediately under the triglyphs. In Physic, any spirituous medicine to be taken in drops.

To DROP, v. a. [drappan, Sax.] to pour in small round particles; to let go; to let a thing fall from the hand; to utter slightly, or without caution; to insert or introduce by way of digression; to intermit, cease, or decline; to lose in its progress; to bedrop, or speckle,—v. n. to fall in separate particles of a roundish form; to let drops fall; to consume in drops; to fall, or come from a higher to a lower situation; to fall without violence; to die suddenly. To drop in, to come unexpectedly by.

DROPPING, s. any liquor which has fallen in drops.

DROP SERENE, s. [grutta and serena, Lat.] in Physic, a disease of the eye, consisting of an entire loss of sight, without any apparent fault or disorder of the part.

DROPSICAL, a. diseased with a dropsy; hydropical; tending to a dropsy.

DROPSIED, part. affected with a dropsy.

DROPSSTONE, s. a spar formed into the shape of a drop.

DROPSY, s. anciently written hydropsis, whence dropsey, or dropsy [hydrops, Lat.] in Physic, a preternatural collection or extravasation of aqueous serum, or water, in any part of the body, which greatly distends the vessels, is attended with weakness of digestion, and a continual thirst.

DRO'WORT, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there are three British species, viz. the water, henlock, or dead-tongue, and pimperl dropwort; the first and last species are found in ponds and ditches, and the second on the banks of rivers.

DROSS, s. [droe, Sax.] the scum, sediment, or gross parts of any metal; the crust or rust of a metal. Figuratively, the refuse or most worthless part of any thing.

DROSSINESS, s. the impurity of metals; foulness; rust. DROSSY, a. full of impurities, foulness, or impure particles. Figuratively, as worthless as dross.

DROVE, s. a number of cattle under the guidance of one or more persons; any collection of animals. Figuratively, a great crowd or multitude.

DROVER, s. one who drives cattle to market for sale.

DROUGHT, (drout) s. [drugode, Sax.] applied to the weather, dry weather, want of rain; thirst; or great want or desire of drink.

DROU'GHTINESS, (drobtiness) s. the state of a soil which wants rain; the state of a person affected with thirst.

DROU'GHTY, (drohty) a. wanting rain; parched with heat; thirsty, or wanting drink.

To DROWN, v. a. [drunenian, Sax.] to plunge and suffocate under water; to plunge or overwhelm in water; to overflow, or cover with water. Figuratively, to immerge, plunge in, or overwhelm with any thing; to die, or be suffocated under water.

DROWNING, s. the state of being suffocated by immersion in water. Recovery from drowning should be attempted as soon as possible after the rescue of the body, by the application of warm flannel, &c. to the body and soles of the feet, for the restoration of animal warmth, and by bringing the lungs into play by inflating them through the nostril, and gentle pressure on the chest, to imitate respiration. A medical man should be instantly sent for, and not one of the old customs on such occasions observed, as they are sure to kill, if the water has not.

To DROWSE, (drowse) v. a. [droosen, Belg.] to make heavy with, or strongly inclined to, sleep,—v. n. to sleep.

DROWSILY, ad. sleepily; heavily; sluggishly; idly; slothfully; lazily.

DROWSINESS, (dröziness) s. a strong propensity and inclination to sleep. Figuratively, slothfulness, or inactivity.

DROWSY, (drözzy) a. strongly inclined to sleep; heavy with sleep. Figuratively, causing sleep; dull, or stupid.

To DRÜB, v. a. [druber, Dan.] to beat soundly with a stick; to thresh, thump, or cudgel.

DRÜB, s. a thump, knock, or blow; a sound beating.

To DRUDGE, v. n. [draghen, Belg.] to work hard at mean and servile employments; to slave.

DRUDGE, s. one employed in mean, hard, and fatiguing labour; a mere slave.

DRUDGERY, s. low, mean, servile, hard, and fatiguing labour.

DRUDGINGLY, ad. in a laborious, fatiguing, and toilsome manner.

DRUG, s. [drogue, Fr.] an ingredient used in physic or dying. Figuratively, any thing of small or no value.

To DRUG, v. a. to mix with physical ingredients; to taint with something disagreeable.

DRUGGEL, s. in Commerce, a sort of thin stuff, sometimes all wool; sometimes half wool, half thread; and sometimes corded, but usually plain, and wove on a worsted chain.

DRUGGIST, s. one whose business it is to sell drugs.

DRUID, s. [Celt.] the priests and ministers of religion amongst the Britons, Celtic Gauls, and Germans. They were in Britain the first and most distinguished order in the island, chosen out of the best families; and the honours of their birth, added to those of their function, procured them the highest veneration. They were versed in such science as the times had developed; had the administration of all sacred things; were the interpreters of the gods, and supreme judges in all causes, whether ecclesiastical or civil. From their determination was no appeal; and whoever refused to acquiesce in their decisions, was reckoned impious, and excommunicated. They were generally governed by a single person, called an Archdruid, who presided in all their assemblies. Once a year they used to retire, or rather assemble in a wood in the centre of the island, at which time they used to receive applications from all parts, and hear causes. They held the immortality of the soul, and its transmigration; that there was one supreme Deity, who presided over all others; human sacrifices were offered to propitiate Divine wrath; certain plants, such as vervain and mistletoe, were sacred, &c. &c. Their instructions were communicated in rude verse.

DRUM, s. [drumme, Erse.] a musical instrument made of thin pieces of oak, bent in a cylindrical form, covered at each end with vellum, or parchment, which stretches by means of braces running from one extremity to the other; and made to sound by beating one of the ends with sticks generally made of Brazil wood. Kettle-drum, is that whose body is made of brass or copper, in the form of a kettle, and covered at the top with parchment like the common one. The drum of the ear, is a small membrane in the inner part of that organ, which is so stretched as to convey the sensation of sound, by the vibration which sounding bodies cause upon it.

To DRUM, v. a. to beat a march, &c. on a drum with a stick. To beat, or vibrate, applied to the motion of the heart.

DRUMMAJOR, s. the chief drummer of a regiment. Every regiment has a drummajor, who has the command over the other drums. They are distinguished from the soldiers by clothes of a different fashion; when the battalion is drawn up, their post is on the flanks; and on a march, between the divisions.

DRUMMER, s. he that beats the drum; every company of foot has one, and sometimes two.

DRUMMOND, WILLIAM, the first poet of Scotland who wrote in good English, and one of our sweetest British bards. His life was one romance. Renouncing law, he retired to his patrimony in classic Haworthenden, and dreamed of all bliss. But on the very day of his purposed marriage, a fever carried off his bride, and the poet wandered forth to assuage his grief by travel. After some years he married a lady whose resemblance to his lost love won his heart, and once more hoped for peace and home; but the great civil war came, and the poet's heart had ever been most true to the Stuarts king. He felt most keenly all the losses of his master, and died in 1649, aged 64 years, from grief, it is believed, at his execution. His poems are too little known for their beauty.

DRUNK, a. [from drink,] intoxicated, or deprived of the use of the understanding, by immoderate drinking. Figuratively, soaked; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

DRUNKARD, s. one given to the excessive use of strong liquors.

DRUNKEN, part. [from drink,] intoxicated with liquor; given to habitual drunkenness; frequently intoxicated with liquor.

DRUNKENLY, ad. after the manner of one intoxicated with strong liquors.

DRY-KEENESS, s. intoxication, or ebriety; the habit of getting drunk. Figuratively, an intoxication or disorder of the mind. Prov. What soberness conceals, drunkenness reveals.—He that kills a man when he is drunk, must be hanged when he is sober.

DRUSES, a people of Syria, on the mountains Libanus and Antilibanus, governed by particular princes, called Emirs. They are very friendly to Europeans; worship the images of the saints, like the Roman Catholics, yet observe the fast of Rammedan; and offer their devotions both in Mahometan mosques and Christian churches. Some of them admit circumcision, but others reject it. They are a strong and robust people, of an active and enterprising character, and accustomed from their infancy to fatigues and hardships. Their language is pure Arabic. See MARONITES.

DRY, a. [drip, Sax.] without wet or moisture. Without rain, applied to the seasons. Figuratively, barren; plain; hard; acrid; severe; thirsty.

To DRY, v. a. to free from, or exhale moisture or wet; to wipe away moisture, used with up; to drain; to drink up.—v. n. to grow dry.

DRYADES, in the Heathen Mythology, were a sort of deities or nymphs, which the ancients thought inhabited groves or woods. They differed from the Hamadryades; these last being attached to some particular tree, wherewith they were born, and with which they died; whereas the Dryades were the goddesses of trees and woods in general.

DRYDEN, JOHN, one of our great English poets. He studied at Cambridge, and was employed under Cromwell during his protectorate. He wrote a poem on his death, but soon turned his lamentation into rejoicing at the golden age which Charles II. was to bring. He then entered on his literary career, which soon obtained him the situation of poet-laureate, and wrote the principal part of his plays, which are not very noticeable either for their dramatic or poetic character. Abdalom and Achitophel, and some others of his pieces, were written now. After the accession of James II. he abjured Protestantism, and avowed himself a Romanist, and The Hind and the Panther was written to justify and commend his conversion. Translations from Virgil, Ovid, Persius, &c. &c., some sad modernizations of Chaucer, his magnificent Odes for St. Cecilia's Day, some more plays, and minor pieces, were produced after this. He died in 1700, aged 69 years. His private character before his profession of Romanism was not of the best kind; and the various changes he avowed impel the contrast with another poet living then, in obscurity and blindness, whose steadfast and pure soul, undazzled by the honours so attractive to Dryden, and untainted by such principles and courses as he pursued, could be content to abide by the overthrow of his hopes, and wait for his immortal fame. It is surprising that a poet who could write as Dryden has in his noblest works, should be capable of such sorry stuff as much of his writings is, should be capable of perpetrating such travesties as his alterations of Shakspeare and Chaucer, and his dramatizing of the Paradise Lost, are. It ought to be observed, that Dryden's poems are hardly fit for general perusal now, through the happily purified taste of the literary and the reading worlds.

DRYER, s. that which has the quality of absorbing moisture, DRY-EYED, a. without tears; without having the eyes moistened with tears.

DRY-LY, ad. without moisture. Figuratively, in a cold or indifferent manner. With great reserve, applied to treatment or behaviour; in a sarcastical or ironical manner. Without any embellishment, applied to style.

DRY-NESS, s. want of moisture; want of rain; want of juice. Figuratively, want of embellishment, applied to style, or set discourses.

DRY-NURSE, s. one who brings up an infant without sucking.

To DRY-NURSE, v. a. to bring up an infant without sucking. DRY-ROT, s. a species of fungus which insinuates its fibres into the substance of timber, and destroys it; against which no effectual remedy, save that of destroying the seed of the fungus, has been discovered.

DRY-SHOD, a. without wetting the feet; without treading in the water above the shoes.

DUAL, a. [duo, Lat.] expressing or including only two. In the Hebrew or Greek language, a set of case-endings to substantives, expressing simply two, in distinction from both the singular and the plural set of terminations.

To DUB, v. c. [to cut,] to create or make a man a knight; to confer any title or dignity.

DUB, a. a blow or knock.

DUBIOUS, a. [dubius, Lat.] not settled in an opinion, applied to persons. Not fully proved, or that which has equal probability on either side, applied to opinions. Not plain; not clear.

DUBIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as will admit of different senses.

DUBIOUSNESS, s. uncertainty.

DUBITABLE, a. that may be questioned or doubted; that a person may decline assenting to.

DUBITATION, s. [dubitatio, Lat.] the act of doubting, or questioning the truth of a thing.

DUBLIN, a county of Leinster, Ireland, lying on the Irish Channel, and bounded by Meath, Kildare, and Wicklow. It is about 30 miles in length and 15 in breadth, and has 87 parishes. There are some considerable hills in this county, producing lead, limestone, granite, &c. &c. They are in some parts about 1000 feet high. The coast is bold, and has some good harbours. The Liffey is the chief river. The soil of the greater part of the county, though not deep, is rich and fertile in corn and pasture. It exports much of its produce. Pop. (exclusive of the city of Dublin,) 140,047.

DUBLIN, the capital of this county and of Ireland, stands on the Liffey's mouth, at the head of Dublin Bay. It is a large and handsome city, and its appearance from the sea is highly imposing. The streets are broad, and the houses well built, and many of the squares may vie with those of London. The public buildings are very noble, both churches, the castle, government buildings, prisons, charitable institutions, public monuments, docks, &c. &c. Quays extend along each side of the river, and there are five bridges over it. There are wharfs towards the bay, and for the improvement of the harbour, a lighthouse at the end of a strongly-built stone pier. Towards the land a circular road about 10 or 11 miles in extent encompasses the city, and the country round is very pleasant. The trade of Dublin is not great, nor are there any very extensive manufactories here. Trinity College is the principal Protestant University of Ireland.

Pop. 232,726. It gives name to one of the archiepiscopal provinces of Ireland, and is also a bishop's see.

DU'CAL, a. belonging to a duke.

DU'CAT, s. [so called because struck in the dominions of a duke,] a foreign coin, current on the continent; when of silver, valued at four shillings and sixpence, but when of gold, at nine shillings and sixpence.

DU'CATOON, s. a foreign coin, struck chiefly in Italy; when of silver, valued at four shillings and eight-pence sterling; and in gold, which is current in Holland, is worth about one pound nineteen shillings and two-pence.

DU'CK, s. [Teut.] in Natural History, a water-fowl, both wild and tame. Figuratively, used as a word of great fondness and endearment, "My dainty duck," Shak.; a sudden bending down, or declining of the head.

To DU'CK, v. n. to plunge one's head or dive under water; to drop down one's head; to bow low; to cringe; to make obeisance. —v. a. to plunge a person under water.

DU'CKING, s. the plunging or dipping a person in water.

DU'CKLEGGED, a. having legs like a duck; having short legs.

DU'CKLING, s. a young duck.

DU'CKMEAT, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there are three British species, viz. the ivy-leaved, least, and greater. They flower in June and July, and are very acceptable food for ducks.

DU'CT, s. [duco, Lat.] guidance or direction. In Anatomy, any canal or tube in any animal body, through which the humours or fluids are conveyed.

DU'CTILE, a. [duco, Lat.] easy to be bent; easy to be drawn out in length. Tractable, complying, or yielding, applied to the mind.

DU'CTILENESS, s. the quality of being drawn out in length.

DU'CTILITY, s. in Physic, a property of certain bodies, whereby they become capable of being pressed, beaten, stretched, or drawn out to a great length without breaking. Tractableness, compliance, applied to the mind, or to persons.

DU'DGEON, s. [dolch, Teut.] a small dagger. "On the blade of thy dugeon," Shak. Also, quarrel, ill-will, malice, jars, or commotions.

DU'DLEY, Worcestershire (but insulated in Staffordshire). It is the great place for the manufacture of nails and other iron wares. It is 120 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 31,232, of whom 17,077 occupy the town itself.

DU'DLEY, the name of a noble English family, some members of which appear in the pages of the History of England. John, Duke of Northumberland, was one of the advisers of Edward VI., who, after he had compassed the overthrow of his rival, the Protector Somerset, plotted to secure the crown in his own family. He married his son, Lord Guildford Dudley, to the beautiful and accomplished Lady Jane Grey, and persuaded the king to nominate her as his successor, to the exclusion of his sisters Mary and Elizabeth. On Edward's death, Lady Jane was proclaimed queen, but her party soon fell before the power of Mary, and she, with her husband and his father, were beheaded, in 1553. Robert, Earl of Leicester, son of the preceding, occupied the dangerous and insinuating post of royal favourite to Elizabeth. He was offered as husband to Mary, Queen of Scots, but rejected. His military fame was not equal to his court-favour. He was married privately twice; and is more than suspected of having caused his wives to be put to death, in the insane hope of becoming the queen's consort. He died in 1588, aged 50 years.

DUE, a. [Fr.] that which a person has a right to demand as a debt, as stipulated in a compact or otherwise; that which a person ought to pay, or which a thing might lay claim to.

DUE, ad. among sailors, directly, exactly. "Due east."

DUE, s. that which belongs to, or may be claimed by, a person; right; just title to a thing. In the plural, custom, or taxes.

DU'EL, s. [duellum, low Lat. from duo and bellum, Lat.] is a single combat at a time and place appointed, in consequence of a challenge; it must be premeditated, otherwise it is called a rencontre. If a person be killed in a duel, both the principal and seconds are guilty of murder, whether the seconds engage or not.

To DU'EL, v. n. to fight in single combat. —v. a. to attack or fight with singly.

DU'ELLER, DU'ELLIST, s. one who engages another in single combat; a coward who is none the braver for exposing himself to the chance of being killed.

DU'EYNA, s. [Span.] an old woman kept as a domestic in Spain, in order to take care of a young lady.

DU'ET, s. a term in music for a song or air composed for two voices or instruments.

DU'G, s. [daggia, Ital.] a pap, nipple, or teat, applied to that of a beast.

DU'GDAL, SIR WILLIAM, the eminent antiquary, Chester Herald to Charles I., and Norroy King at Arms to his son. He attended Charles I. during the war. He wrote several large works of reference, on the monasteries, and the nobility of England, &c. He died in 1686, aged 81 years.

DUKE, s. [duco, Lat.] is either the title of a sovereign prince, as the duke of Savoy, Parma, &c., or it is the title of honour and nobility next below princes. The commanders of armies in time of war, the governors of provinces, and wardens of marches in time of peace, were called Duces, under the late emperors. At present, duke is a mere title of dignity, without giving any domain or territory, or conferring jurisdiction over the place from whence the title is taken. A duke is created by patent, cincture of sword, mantle of state, imposition of a cap, and coronet of gold on his head, and a virge of gold put into his hand. His title is Grace; and in the style of the heralds, most high, potent, high-born, and noble prince. Their eldest sons are, by the courtesy of England, styled marquises, and their youngest, lords, with the addition of their Christian names, as Lord George, Lord Robert, &c., and to take place of viscounts, though not so privileged by the laws of the land.

DU'KEDOM, s. the dominion of a duke.

DU'LBRAINED, a. slow of apprehension; stupid; wanting sagacity.

DU'LCET, a. [dulcis, Lat.] sweet to the taste; agreeable to the ear.

DULCIFICATION, s. [dulcis and facio, Lat.] in Pharmacy, the sweetening or rendering insipid any matter impregnated with salt, by washing it often in water; the act of rendering any thing which is acid, sweet, by mixing it with sugar; the combination of mineral acids with alcohol, thus we have dulcified spirit of nitre, dulcified spirit of vitriol, &c.

To DU'LCIFY, v. a. [dulcifico, Fr.] to sweeten; to free from salts, foulness, or acrimony of any sort.

DU'LCIMER, s. [dolecimello, Ital.] a musical instrument, strung with wires, resembling a harpsichord, and played on with iron or brass pins.

To DU'LCORATE, v. a. [dulcis, Lat.] to sweeten; to render less acrimonious.

DULCORATION, s. the act of sweetening.

DULL, a. [dul, Brit.] slow of apprehension, applied to the understanding. Blunt, applied to the edge of any instrument. Not quick, or not easily perceiving objects, applied to the senses. Slow, applied to motion. Not bright, or wanting vigour; drowsy, sleepy, or melancholy.

To DULL, v. a. to blunt the edge of an instrument; to sully the brightness of some shining body; to make a person sad or melancholy; to damp vigour; to stop or retard motion.

DULLARD, s. a person slow of apprehension; a blockhead.

DULLY, ad. in a stupid or foolish manner; in a slow, sluggish, or melancholy manner.

DULNESS, s. weakness of understanding; slowness of apprehension; drowsiness, or strong propensity to sleep. Dimness, or want of lustre, applied to the change made on a shining body. Bluntness, or want of edge, applied to instruments.

DULVERTON, Somersetshire. It has a manufacture of coarse woollen cloth and blankets. It is seated on the Dunsbrook, near its fall into the Exe. It is 164 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1422.

DULWICH COLLEGE. See ALLEYN.

DULY, ad. in such a manner as a thing or person might claim; properly; fitly; regularly; punctually.

DUMB, (dum) a. [dumbe, Sax.] mute; not able to speak; deprived of speech; not using words; refusing to speak.

DUMBAR'TONSHIRE, anciently LENOX, a county of Scotland, bounded by Argyleshire, Perthshire, Stirlingshire, Lanark, and Renfrew. Its greatest length is 45 miles, its breadth from 6 to 15. It has some lofty mountains, Ben Voirlich, which is above 3000 feet in height, and others. It has the Clyde and the Leven as its rivers. Loch Lomond and Loch Long are partly within its borders. The W. part of this county abounds with morasses; in other parts it is fertile in corn and pastures; but the principal riches arise from the fisheries in the lochs in and about its coasts. Pop. 44,296. It returns 1 member to parliament.

DUMBARTON, the capital of the county, is a large, ancient town. Its principal manufacture is crown and bottle glass, but many of the young women are employed in the neighbouring priory fields, on the banks of the Leven. Close to the river is a castle, built on a vast rock, formerly deemed impregnable. It has a harbour for large brigs, secure in all weathers. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Leven and Clyde. It is 46 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 3828.

DUMBLY, (dumbly) ad. mutely; silently; without speaking.
DUMBNESS, (dämness) s. incapacity of speaking; forbearance; silence.

DUMFERMLINE, Fifeshire, Scotland. It was remarkable for its magnificent abbey, and a royal palace, in which King Charles I. was born. The ruins of the abbey are yet to be seen. It is 15 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 7805.

DUMFOUND, (dämfound) v. a. to confuse a person so as to render him unable to speak. A low word.

DUMFRIESSHIRE, a county of Scotland, lying on the Solway Frith, and bordering on England. It is bounded by the shires of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanark, Ayr, and Kirkcubright. It is about 50 miles in length and 20 broad. It is very mountainous, and many of its heights exceed 2000 feet. It has the Annan, the Esk, and the Nith as its chief rivers; and the valleys through which they flow are extremely beautiful, and famed in the old tales of the borders. There are a few small lochs also. Coal is found here, and lead, abundantly. Silver and even gold are occasionally found. Building and lime stones abound. Farming is carried on with vigour and enterprise, and with some degree of success. Its fisheries are good also. Pop. 72,830. It returns 2 members to parliament.

DUMFRIES, the capital of the county, is a well-built town, surrounded on all sides, at the distance of a few miles, by a continued chain of hills, forming altogether one of the grandest natural amphitheatres in Britain. It has a brisk trade both coasting and foreign; and some few and trifling manufactures. It is seated on the river Nith. It is 71 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 11,409.

DUMONT, ETIENNE, a French writer on legislation, since the Revolution. He has translated and commented on some of Bentham's works. He was intimate with Mirabeau, and employed by him during the early stages of the Revolution. After wandering and staying long in France and England, he returned to his native place, Geneva. He died in 1829, aged 79 years.

DUMOURIEZ, CHARLES F., the first famous French military commander produced by the Revolution. He had been employed in various ways by the government under the old regime; and during the Revolution formed part of the short-lived Girondin ministry. On the invasion of France by the duke of Brunswick he seized the passes of Argonne wood, and delayed the invader's march till by fresh forces and the inclement season he was driven back, and France saved. As the Jacobins grew in power Dumouriez was suspected, being a constitutional monarchist, of plotting against the republic, and summoned to account for his doings before the Convention. Committing himself by seizing the deputies, and being deserted by his troops, he fled, and after many wanderings died in England in 1823, aged 84 years. The present king of the French, Louis Philippe, was an officer under him during his command.

DUMP, s. (dom, Belg.) sullen and silent sorrow; melancholy; absence of mind; a piece of leaden coin or medal, with which children amuse themselves.

DUMPISSH, a. sad; silently and sullenly sorrowful; melancholy.

DUMPLING, s. a kind of small and coarse pudding.

DUN, s. (dun, Sax.) a colour partaking of a mixture of brown and black; dark; gloomy.

TO DUN, v. a. (dunam, Sax.) to demand a debt with vehemence and frequent importunity.

DUN, s. one who asks a person for a debt with clamour and incessant importunity.

DUNA, a river of Russia in Europe, rising in the government of Suolensk, and forming for some way the boundary of Russia, before the partition of Poland. After a course of about 300 miles it falls into the Gulf of Riga, by Riga.

DUNBAR, Haddingtonshire, Scotland. It has a good harbour, and a coasting and foreign trade, besides fisheries. This town trades largely in malt and grain. Under the rock, on which are the ruins of a castle, are two natural arches, through which the tide flows; and here are vast basaltic columns of red grit stones. It is 27 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 3013.

DUNBAR, WILLIAM, an early Scottish poet. He was a Franciscan friar, and employed in various ways by the court. His best piece was written on the occasion of the marriage of his king with the English king's daughter, and is entitled The Thistle and the Rose. His works exhibit great poetical power, with considerable skill in versification; although the dialect is sufficiently rude. He is supposed to have died about 1555, aged about 60 years.

DUNCAN, ADAM, LORD, the English naval commander who conquered the Dutch at Camperdown. He died in 1804, aged 73 years.

DUNCE, [perhaps from dom, Belg.] one who has not a capacity for receiving instruction.

DUNDALEK, Louth, in Leinster, Ireland. It consists of a wide street nearly a mile long, and some cross lanes; has a good market-house, and carries on a manufacture of muslins, lincens, and cambrics. It is most advantageously situated for an extensive inland trade, and the port is very safe for shipping. The bay also has good moorings, and abounds with fish. It is an assize town. It is 40 miles from Dublin. Pop. 10,782.

DUNDEE, Forfarshire, Scotland. It has manufactures of glass, coarse linen, sail-cloth, cordage, coloured and white thread, buckram, tanned leather, shoes, and hats; and here is also a sugar-house. The houses are built of stone, generally three or four stories high, and the principal streets, with a number of lesser ones, are all paved in the best manner. Trading vessels of the largest burthen can get into the harbour, which is safe, commodious, and of easy access, with broad extensive piers, well adapted for the purposes of loading and discharging vessels; and there is good room on the quay for ship-building, which is carried on here to a large extent. It is situated on the Frith of Tay. It is 40 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 60,553.

DUNG, s. (dineg, Sax.) the excrement of animals used in manure.

TO DUNG, v. a. to manure with dung.

DUNGEON, s. (dönjon, Fr.) a close prison, generally applied to a dark or subterraneous one.

DUNG-FORK, s. a fork to toss out dung from stables.

DUNGHILL, s. a heap of dung. Figuratively, any mean or vile abode; a situation of meanness; a man descending from mean parentage; a cock of a spurious and degenerate kind, not fit for fighting.

DUNGHILL, a. sprung from the dunghill. Figuratively, mean; base; or worthless.

DUNGY, a. abounding in dung, resembling dung.

DUNKELD, Perthshire, Scotland. It is situated amid romantic rocks and woods, under which rolls the majestic Tay. It is much resorted to in the summer months, for the benefit of goats' whey. It is the market town of the Highlands on that side, and carries on a manufacture of linen. The Duke of Athol has a beautiful modern seat here. It is 45 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2612.

DUNKIRK, a considerable and important maritime town of the department of Nord, France. It is a well-built place, and strongly fortified. It once was close to the sea, but the tide has washed up so much soil that it is now at some distance from it. By means of a sluice, 42 feet wide, the basin within the town will hold 40 ships of the line always floating. It has a considerable trade, and some manufactures. It is 160 miles from Paris. Population, about 30,000. Lat. 51. 2. N. Long. 2. 28. E.

DUNNEI, Dun, s. a person employed in collecting petty debts, and making use of vehement importunity for that purpose.
DUNFOW, GREAY, Essex. In the reign of Henry III. the Lord Fitzwalter instituted a custom here, which is still the tenure of the manor, that whatever married couple did not repent of their marriage, or quarrel, in a year and a day afterwards, should go to the priory, and receive from the lord a gammon or fitch of bacon, provided they swore to the truth of it. Several persons have claimed and received this reward; and it has been received so lately as since the year 1750, by a weaver and his wife of Coggeshall. It has been demanded more recently, but the demand is now evaded, from the ceremony being attended with considerable expense to the lord of the manor. It is situated on the Chelmer, and has a manufacture of baize. It is 37 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2792.

DUNS SCOTUS, JOHN, one of the schoolmen of the 13th century, an Irishman by birth, trained at Oxford, who by his skill in the theological disputations of the age, at Oxford and at Paris, acquired the title of the Subtle Doctor. He afterwards removed to Cologne, and died in 1309, aged about 70 years. He contributed not a little to the triumph of Realism, against William Ockam. And on many theological questions he stands opposed to the great St. Thomas Aquinas. His writings are almost endless, and purely unreadable.

DUNSE, Berwickshire, Scotland. It has a good market, and four considerable fairs for horses, sheep, and black cattle, in March, June, August, and November. It is situated between the forks of the rivers Blackadder and Whiteadder. It is 25 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1939.

DUNSTABLE, Bedfordshire. It is noted for elegant baskets, hats, &c. made of straw, which are considerable, and even articles of exportation. The fairs taken herabouts are said to be the largest and best in the kingdom. It is seated on a dry chalky eminence, near the Chiltern Hills. It is 34 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 2582.

DUNSTAN, ST., of Glastonbury, archbishop of Canterbury in the 10th century. A most redoubted churchman, and miracle-working saint, in the Anglo-Saxon church. He maintained the contest of the spiritual against the secular power, which in this country has filled so large a portion of history, and been productive of such innumerable evils, and, incidentally, of so much good. His mode of warfare was however somewhat unscrupulous, and his conduct often far from saintly. His deeds of valour in conflict with the prince of darkness have a smack of the ludicrous in them, but they raised his power in those days. He died in 988, aged 63 years.

DUNSTER, Somersetshire. It has a manufacture of kerseys. It stands on a low ground. It is 158 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1078.

DUNWICH, Suffolk. It was once a large and populous city, being an episcopal see; but it is now only a village, the greater part having been swallowed up by the sea. Some fishing is carried on. It is 99 miles from London. Pop. 237.

DUODECIMAL, a. a branch of the art of computation used in calculating sums relating to superficial measurement.

DUODECIMO, s. [duodecim, Lat.] a thing divided into twelve parts; hence a book is said to be in duodecimo, when twelve of its leaves make just a sheet of paper.

DUODECUPLE, a. [duo and decuplus, Lat.] consisting of twelve.

DUODENUM, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the name of that intestine which is immediately connected with the stomach, and into which the pancreas and the liver discharge their secretions. It is usually about a foot in length, whence its name.

DUPE, s. [duppe, Fr.] a credulous person, or one who is imposed on and deceived on account of his credulity.

To DUPE, v. a. to trick or cheat a person of too great credulity.

DUPIN, LOUIS ELLIS, a French ecclesiastical historian of the 17th century. He was not of the bigoted school of the day, for which he had to suffer much opposition. But his works are on that account the more valued. He died in 1719, aged 82 years.

DUPLE, a. [duplus, Lat.] double, the same thing or number repeated.

DUPLEIX, JOSEPH, the man whose skill and courage raised the French possessions in Hindustan to their highest pitch of prosperity. He successfully resisted the attacks of the English on Pondicherry. But the superior genius and power of Clive, the founder of British India, triumphed. Duplex received honours and titles, till the reverse came, and then was superseded, and died of grief at the treatment he received at home, in 1763, aged about 50 years.

To DUPLICATE, v. a. [duplico, Lat.] to double; to increase or enlarge by the repetition of the same number; to fold together.

DUPPLICATE, a. in Arithmetic, applied to proportion, the ratio or proportion of squares.

DUPPLICATE, s. the exact copy or counterpart of a letter, book, or deed; a thing of the same kind as another.

DUPPLICATION, s. the act of doubling; the act of folding together; a fold or doubling.

DUPPLICATION, s. a fold; any thing doubled.

DUPPLICITY, s. [duplicitas, Lat.] doubleness; the division of things or ideas into pairs; the quality of being twice as much as another; deceit or double-dealing, opposed to simplicity.

DUPUIS, CHARLES FRANCIS, a French savan of the last century, who having left the paths of philosophy to join in the revolutionary movement, was driven back by the terrible excesses which attended it and he could not prevent. He was the first to assign the origin of the zodiacal constellations to Egypt, having accompanied Napoleon thither, and engaged most ardently in the investigations opened by the discovery of the zodiacs of Dendera and Esné. He did not agree with his learned companions respecting these, although he was not less anxious than they were to lay hold on any thing to discredit the Bible. He was one of the first members of the National Institute, and of the Legion of Honour. He died in 1809, aged 67 years.

DURABILITY, s. [durio, Lat.] the power of bearing the injuries of time and weather, without being destroyed; the property of lasting or containing a long while.

DURABLE, a. not easily destroyed by length of time or violence of weather; lasting; permanent.

DURABLENESS, s. the property of continuing or lasting long.

DURABLY, ad. in a lasting manner.

DURAMATER, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the laminated membrane of considerable thickness covering the brain; being the outermost of the several tunics by which this most delicate and important organ is preserved from injury by too close contact with the bones of the skull. It is covered with blood-vessels, but is quite devoid of feeling.

DURANCE, s. [duresce, low Fr.] the state of a person confined in a prison; confinement; imprisonment; duration, or the length of time which any thing continues.

DURATION, s. [durio, Lat.] distance or length, applied to time.

DÜRER, ALBERT, the celebrated German painter and engraver of the beginning of the 16th century. He was brought up to his father's trade, but goldsmiths' work was not then merely mechanical as it is now. He practised and taught geometrical perspective, and was accomplished in other arts beside those already named. He died in 1528, aged 57 years. He received honours from the emperors of his times; but not such as are now shown him by the revival of his style of high art. The correctness of his designs, and the glowing fancy he displays, are sufficient to compensate for all that he seems to lack in mere execution, when compared with the showy painters of more recent days, or the elaborate realities of the Dutch school.

DURESSE, s. [Fr.] hardship; imprisonment. In Law, a plea used by way of exception to a bond sealed to a person by one cast in prison at his suit, or otherwise hardly used.

DURHAM, a county of England, lying on the German Ocean, and bounded by Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Yorkshire. It is about 40 miles in length and 30 in breadth, and contains 1 city, 8 market towns, and 113 parishes. It is hilly, and some points are nearly 2000 feet high. There are wide moors amongst the hills, and other tracts completely uncultivated. There are some islands on the coast, Holy Island being the largest. The coast is cliffy in some parts; other parts are shelving sands. The principal rivers are the Wear, the Tees, the Tyne, and the Derwent. Coal, iron, lead, mill-stone grit, lime-stone, &c., are found here abundantly. The east and south parts of the county are fruitful in corn and pasture, and have a milder air than the other parts. It sends to other parts of the United Kingdom, and to foreign countries, both its native productions, and the goods it manufactures, such as coarse woollen goods, sail-cloth, steel, glass, iron, &c. &c. This county was formerly under the special jurisdiction of the bishop of Durham as a Prince Palatine, but in 1836 the palatinate was vested in the crown. Pop. 324,284. It returns 10 members to parliament.

DURHAM, the capital of the county, is an ancient city, situ-

REFERENCE
to the BISHOP.

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4

The Country yet
under 7 members.

Scale of Miles

ated on seven hills, and surrounded by others more lofty, in a beautiful winding of the river Wear, along the banks of which are pleasant walks, covered with woods, and edged with lofty crags. Here are woollen manufactories, and iron-works. The cathedral is a fine building, and the castle is a curious relic of antiquity. A university was established here by Oliver Cromwell, which, under the control of the Church of England, is now a flourishing institution for arts and learning. It is a bishop's see. It is 257 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 14,151.

DURHAM, JOHN GEORGE LAMTON, EARL OF, one of the leaders in the late Parliamentary Reform. A stanch aristocrat, but who was amongst the most advanced of the statesmen who guided that popular movement. He was sent as governor-general, with extraordinary powers, to Canada, at the last rebellion there; but he returned before his mission was accomplished, because he did not find adequate support for his measures in the cabinet at home. He died in 1840, aged 48 years.

DURING, part. [from dure,] for the time any thing lasts; while any thing continues unaltered.

DUR'ON, s. in Natural History, the name of a fruit common in China and the East Indies, which is esteemed by the natives the finest of all fruits, but is disliked by the Europeans on account of its disagreeable smell. It is of the size of an ordinary melon, is enclosed in a prickly husk, has a delicious taste, and intoxicates those who eat it plentifully.

DUR'ITY, s. [dureté, Fr.] hardness; firmness.

DUR'SLEY, Gloucestershire. It has a manufacture of broad cloth. The manufacture of cards for clothers has been long settled here. It is seated on a branch of the Severn. It is 107 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2931.

DUST, the preter. of To DARE.

DUSK, v. [dusker, Teut.] want of day-light; approaching to darkness; blackish; or of a dark colour.

DUSKISH, a. inclining to darkness; tending to blackness; dark-coloured.

DUSKISHLY, ad. darkly; in such a manner as to afford but little light.

DUSKY, a. [duskyer, Teut.] tending to darkness. Tending to blackness, applied to colour. Figuratively, gloomy, sad, melancholy, applied to the mind.

DUSSEL'DORF, a city of Rhenish Prussia, and capital of a county of the same name. It is situated on the river Dussel, at its confluence with the Rhine, and is a regular and handsome place. It has some fine public buildings, and a good library. There are some manufactories of importance here; and by means of its harbour it commands a good trade. The population is about 25,000. Lat. 50. 16. N. Long. 6. 45. E.

DUST, s. [dust, Sax.] earth, or other matter reduced to small particles. Figuratively, the state of dissolution to which bodies are reduced after being long buried; a mean, low, and dejected state, alluding to the custom of the Jews, who, in the time of affliction, sat in the dust, and covered their heads with it likewise.

DUSTY, a. filled, coloured, covered, or spread with dust.

DUTCHESS, DU'CHESS, s. [duchesse, Fr.] the lady of a duke.

DUTCHY, DU'CHY, s. [duché, Fr.] a territory which gives title to a duke, or its sovereign. Duchy court is that wherein all matters pertaining to the duchy of Lancaster are decided by the decree of the chancery.

DUTE'OUS, a. obedient; or performing those offices which parents or superiors can claim; obsequious; or complying; enjoined by, or arising from, those relations a person stands in with respect to others.

DUTIFUL, a. obedient; submissive to, or performing the offices due to parents or superiors; respectful; reverential.

DUTIFULLY, ad. in an obedient, submissive, or respectful manner.

DUTIFULNESS, s. obedience; submission to just authority; the act of performing the offices which flow from our relations as children or subjects; reverence; respect.

DUTY, s. any actions, or course of actions, which flow from the relations we stand in to God or man; that which a man is bound to perform by any natural or legal obligation. In Commerce, a tax or custom paid for any commodity, and levied by the government. SYNON. Duty means something conscientious, and springs from law; obligation, something absolute in practice, and springs from custom. We are said to fail in our duty, and to dispense with an obligation.

DUVAL, VALENTINE, the great French geographer in the last century. He was of humble origin, and owed to charity his earliest instruction and sustenance. His taste for geography being discovered, he was introduced to the Duc de Lorraine, and by him introduced to the emperor, who made him librarian at Vienna. His maps, published under the auspices of the king of France, were long the great authorities in Europe. He died in 1775, aged 80 years.

DWARF, s. [dwerg, Sax.] a man below the common size or stature. In Gardening, a low fruit-tree, kept short by pruning.

To DWARF, v. a. in Botany, to hinder from growing to its natural size, by pruning; to lessen; to make little; to shorten.

DWARFISH, a. below the natural size; small; very short.

DWARFISHLY, ad. like a dwarf.

DWARFISHNESS, s. shortness of stature; extremelittleness.

To DWELL, v. n. preter. dwelt or dwelled; [dualla, old Teut.] to inhabit or live in a place or house. Figuratively, to continue in a state or condition; to fix the eyes immovably on an object; to treat of in a copious manner; to continue long in speaking. SYNON. To live relates to the particular place where we inhabit; dwelt, to the building in which we reside. We live in London, in Middlesex, in the country; we dwelt in a large house, a cottage, or a furnished lodging.

DWELLER, s. a person who resides constantly in a place; an inhabitant.

DWELLING, s. the place of a person's habitation, residence, or abode.

DWELLING-PLACE, s. the place of residence.

DWIGHT, DR. TIMOTHY, a New England theologian of great repute amongst the orthodox denominations in his own and this country. He was many years President of Yale College, Newhaven, Mass. U. S.; and though afflicted with blindness, not only continued to discharge his duties as lecturer on theology, but composed and published his work on that subject, which has gained him his well-deserved name, both as a divine and as a writer. He is pre-eminently a popular writer, and was not acquainted with the methods of science and of criticism which have given such an impulse to this study in the few last years. He died in 1817, aged 65 years.

DWI'NA, a river of Russia in Europe, which rises in the government of Vologa, and after a course of above 200 miles, falls into the White Sea, by Archangel.

To DWINDLE, v. a. [dwinnan, Sax.] to decrease, consume, or grow less by degrees.

DYE, s. a colour given to a thing; a stain.

To DYE, v. a. [deagan, Sax.] to tinge or colour a thing.

DYER, s. one who follows the trade of colouring silks, stuffs, &c.

DYER, JOHN, an English poet, whose Grongar Hill every one knows and admires, and whose Fleece every one names and knows nothing of. He nevertheless, on the ground of this quasi-pastoral poem, is ranked with our classics. He died in 1758, aged 53 years.

DY'ING, part. [of die,] expiring; giving up the ghost; giving a new colour.

DYKE, s. [Teut.] an embankment of earth, such as has always been used in the construction of long lines of defence round camps, or across passes. In Geology and Mining, a wall of trap or volcanic rock running through and displacing regular strata, occasioned by the dyke matter filling up a fissure in the earth, such as is often caused in earthquakes. In coal-mines, the occurrence of a dyke is often a serious loss to the proprietors of the pit, as it effectually prevents the extension of the works in that direction. There is one basaltic dyke running from Teesdale to Robin Hood's Bay in Yorkshire, a distance of 70 miles, in almost a straight direction.

DYNAMICS, s. [dynamai, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, a branch of the science of mechanics, which treats of the various forces producing motion. See MECHANICS, STATICS, KINEMATICS.

DYNASTY, s. [dynasteuo, Gr.] in History, a race or succession of kings in the same line; government; sovereignty.

DY'SART, Fifeshire, Scotland. It has a very ancient church, said to have been built by the Picts. It is situated on the North coast of Forth, 11 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1885.

DY'SCRASY, s. [dus and kraisis, Gr.] an ill temperament, habit, mixture of the blood, or other fluids, in an animal body.

DYSENTERY, s. [dus and enteron, Gr.] in Medicine, a disease affecting the whole of the intestines, chiefly occasioned by exposure to weather, often fatal, characterized by the great discharge of blood from the bowels.

DYSPEPSY, s. [dus and pepto, Gr.] a bad digestion.

DYS-PHONY, s. [dus and phone, Gr.] a difficulty in speaking.

DYS-PNOEA, s. [dus and pneo, Gr.] a difficulty of breathing.

DYSURY, s. [dus and oureo, Gr.] difficulty in making water.

E

E, THE fifth letter of the alphabet, and the second vowel, has different pronunciations in most languages. In English it has two sounds; long, as scene, and short, as men; it is used at the end of words for the purpose of lengthening the foregoing vowel, as cán, cáne; mán, máne; gáp, gápe; glíd, glíde, &c. Sometimes, however, the foregoing vowel is not lengthened, as gone, give. Anciently, almost every word ended with e; as, for can, canne; for year, yeare; for great, greate; for need, neede; for flock, flocke. Ea has the sound of e long; the e is commonly lengthened by the addition of a; as, mén, méne; sél, séal; miel, miéat; nelt, néat. As a numeral, E stands for 250. In Music, it is the name of the note standing in the top space in the treble clef, and in the top but one in the bass clef. On the Mariners' compass, it signifies East. Among writers, e, e exempli gratia, or for example.

EACH, (each pron. [ele, Sax.]) either of two; every one of any number. To each the correspondent word is other, whether it be used of two, or a greater number.

EAD, Ed, [Sax.] in compound words, and eadig in the simple, denote happiness or blessedness. Thus Eadheard, Edward, is a happy preserver; Eadgar, happy power.

EADMER, an ecclesiastical writer of the 12th century. He was a Benedictine and the abbot of St. Albans. Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, sought to raise him to the archiepiscopal see of St. Andrews in Scotland, but without success. He died in 1124; but nothing is known of his age.

EAGER, (eager) a. [eagor, Sax.] earnest, ardent, longing; impetuous; hot, or vehemence of disposition; quick, busy. Keen; severe; biting, applied to the air. Brittle; inflexible; not ductile, when used by artists. Sharp, or sour, applied to the taste.

EAGERLY, (eagerly) ad. with great ardour of desire; impatiently; sharply; quickly.

EAGERNESS, (eagerness) s. warmth of desire; impetuosity; quickness; an extreme longing, or impatience for the enjoyment of something.

EAGLE, (eagle) s. [aigle, Fr.] in Natural History, a genus of birds of the hawk kind, remarkable for their strength of wing and fierceness—the golden eagle is a native of this island, it affects the solitude of the Scotch and Welch mountains, and makes itself a pest to the surrounding country by carrying off lambs, &c., for food, to its eyrie; it has been known to carry infants off; a larger species has been discovered in the United States, and is called the Bird of Washington—the habits of some species and individuals of this race are sadly in contrast with the common tales of its dignified and courageous demeanour. In Mythology, this bird figures as the minister of Jove, and the bearer of his thunderbolt. It is used in Heraldry, spread, to represent a prince of the Roman Empire. The standard of the ancient Romans; and of the French armies under Napoleon. In Money, the name of a gold coin in the United States, equal in value to five dollars: there are also half-eagles and double-eagles.

EAGLE-EYED, a. sharp-sighted as an eagle.

EAGLE-STONE, s. a round stone which rattles, and was thought to be a defence against lightning, and to be used by eagles as such, till prying science cracked one and found it to be a fossilized sponge, whose interior had become detached from the flinty covering.

EAGLET, (eagle) s. [a diminutive of eagle,] a young eagle.

EA'GRE, EA'GER, s. [aigir, Sax.] the name of a tribe of river spirits in Teutonic Mythology, now applied to the tidal wave in the Severn, Trent, and other rivers with narrow and precipitous mouths. See BRISTOL, BORE, SEVERN, &c.

EA'LDERMAN, (elderman) s. [Sax.] the name of a Saxon magistrate, the same as our alderman; whicsh see.

EAR, (ear) s. [ære, Sax.] the organ of hearing, or that part where animals receive the impression of sounds. In Music, that peculiar quickness in the power of hearing, either natural or acquired by training, which enables a person readily to judge of the pitch and harmony of musical sounds. Used with about, it signifies the whole head or person. "The city beaten down about their ears." Knolles. Joined to up, all over, or entirely. "Up to the ears in love," L' Estrange. To lend an ear, to listen to with attention; to regard or favour. In Botany, a long string or cluster of flowers or seeds produced by certain plants. "An ear of corn." To fall together by the ears, to scuffle, to fight. To set together by the ears, to promote strife or quarrels.

To EAR, (er) v. a. [erian, Sax.] to plough or manure ground. — v. n. to shoot into ears.

EA'RED, (éred) part. having ears, or handles; having ears, or ripe corn.

EARL, (erl) s. [eorl, Sax.] a title of the third rank among the nobility, though anciently the highest in the nation. Earl marshal of England is a great officer, who anciently had several courts under his jurisdiction, as the court of chivalry, and the court of honour. Under him also is the herald's office, or college of arms. He has some pre-eminence in the court of Marshalsea, where he may sit in judgment against those who offend within the verge of the king's court. This office has for several ages been hereditary in the family of Howard.

EARLDOM, (erldom) s. the jurisdiction of an earl, or county from whence an earl receives his title.

EA'RLINESS, (erliness) s. the being soon; or the priority or equality of any action compared to something else, opposed to lateness.

EA'RLLESS, (erlless) a. without ears.

EA'RLY, (erly) a. [er, Sax.] soon, in comparison with something else; as, in the morning, with respect to the sun rising; in time, with respect to creation, a period appointed, or the space of continuance; in the season, in comparison with other products.

EA'RLY, (erly) ad. soon, betimes. In youth, or infancy, applied to age.

To EAR, (ern) v. a. [earnian, Sax.] to gain as the reward of wages or labour, or other performances; to deserve; to obtain.

EA'RNEST, (érnest) a. [eornest, Sax.] ardent; warm, or important in any application; intent; fixed; eager; serious; important.

EA'RNEST, (érnest) s. [eornest, Sax.] seriousness; a serious affair, opposed to a jest; a reality, opposed to a fiction; also, a pledge; handsel; something given by way of security and obligation; a token or specimen of something future; money given in order to confirm or bind a bargain.

EA'RNESTLY, (érnestly) ad. with great importunity; warmly; affectionately; zealously; eagerly.

EA'RNESTNESS, (érnestness) s. eagerness; vehemence; warmth; solicitude; care.

EA'R-RING, (éer-ring) s. jewels worn in the ear; a ring worn in the ear.

EA'R-SHOT, (éer-shot) s. that space or distance within which any thing may be heard.

EARTH, (erth) s. [eorth, Sax.] in Astronomy, the third planet from the sun, on which we live. In Theology, the present state of existence, as distinguished from the eternal states of the dead, and especially from heaven. In common conversation, mould or dust, that unorganized matter which generally appears in a solid form, but is not stone. In old Philosophies, one of the four imaginary elements. In Chemistry, a substance compounded of oxygen and some one of the metallic bases. Figuratively, the inhabitants of the earth.

To EARTH, (erth) v. a. [earidian, Sax.] to hide under ground; to cover with earth.—v. n. to go or hide itself under ground.

EARTH-BORN, (erth-born) a. sprung from the earth. Figuratively, descended from mean parents.

EARTH-BOUND, a. fastened by the pressure of the earth.

EARTHEN, (erthen) a. made of earth or clay.

EARTHENWARE, s. the name by which certain kinds of pottery are distinguished from china and porcelain on the one hand, and from coarser and heavier kinds of pottery on the other.

EARTHFLAX, s. a kind of fibrous fossil.

EARTHLING, (érthling) s. an inhabitant of the earth; a poor frail creature.

EARTHLY, (érthly) a. belonging to the earth, or to this present state of existence; gross, opposed to spiritual; corporeal, opposed to mental.

EARTHNUIT, s. in Botany, the same with the pignut.

EARTHQUAKE, (érthquake) s. a tremor or shaking of the earth, accompanied, when violent, by changes in the level of the surface, and great destruction to life and property; also, by many phenomena akin to those observed in volcanic eruptions, whence it is concluded to be caused by the expansion of perfectly fused matter under the surface of the earth. Earthquakes are of very common occurrence in some countries, as on the W. coast of S. America, which has been discovered to be undergoing a gradual elevation throughout its whole length; in Italy, which is a manifestly volcanic district; and in Scotland, though the shocks are comparatively feeble. The earthquake of Lisbon, in 1775, was the most violent which has ever been felt in this quarter of the globe.

EARTHWORM, s. in Natural History, a worm that lives in the ground. Figuratively, a mean, sordid wretch.

EARTHY, (érthy) a. consisting, composed of, or inhabiting the earth; gross, opposed to spiritual.

EAR-WAX, (éer-wax) s. the viscous substance with which the ear is lined.

EAR-WIG, (éer-wig) s. [ear and wiga, Sax.] in Natural History, a common insect, very destructive to delicate flowers and to fruits, whose colour and armed tail have procured it a bad character amongst the imaginative and timid. Its wings, which it uses rarely except at night, are folded under small covers on its back, and are very beautiful.

EASE, (éee) s. [aise, Fr.] freedom from care or disturbance, applied to the mind. Freedom from pain, applied to the body. Rest, or cessation from labour, in order to recover from fatigue. Absence of the appearance of effort or elaboration, applied to literary compositions.

To EASE, (éee) v. a. to free from pain; to release from labour; to free from any thing which causes a disagreeable sensation either in the body or mind.

EASEFUL, (éeezful) a. affording relaxation from toil or fatigue; allaying, diminishing, or removing pain; fit for rest.

EASELY, (éeezly) s. an instrument used by painters to set their pictures for the more ready performance of their work.

EASEMENT, s. in Law, a service that one neighbour has of another by charter or prescription, without profit, as a way through his ground, a sink, or such like.

EASILY, (éeezly) ad. without difficulty, labour, impediment, or pain.

EASINESS, (éeeziness) s. a relative term, implying that a person's abilities are sufficient, or more than sufficient, to accomplish any undertaking, to solve any point in learning, or to prosecute any design proposed; freedom from difficulty; the quality of being soon persuaded to do or believe; compliance without opposition; credulity without suspicion or examination; freedom from disturbance, or from any painful sensation.

EASINGWOLD, Yorkshire, a town trading in bacon and butter. It is 210 miles from London. Pop. 2719.

EAST, (éest) s. [east, Sax.] the quarter from whence the sun rises. In popular geographical language, the regions in the eastern parts of the world.

EASTBOURN, Sussex. It is near Beachy Head, and is much frequented for sea-bathing. It is 65 miles from London. Pop. 3015.

EASTER, (éestre) s. [Sax. or from Ashlaroth, a Syrian goddess,] the day on which some churches celebrate the resurrection of Christ. It is a moveable feast, that is, is fixed by the occurrence of a certain full moon, as the Jewish passover was. But it is not the full moon of the heavens, but that of a certain calendar invented by one Clavins, to the confusion of heretics, (and sometimes of the orthodox too,) in which calculations are made according to certain rules which for ever prevent the actual full moon from regulating the feast. Full tables, but unhappily without explanation, are given at the beginning of the Book of Common Prayer.

EASTER ISLAND, a solitary island of the S. Pacific Ocean, in Lat. 27. 30. S. and Long. 110. 0. W. It is of volcanic origin, and about 12 miles across. Some part is very lofty. Captain Cook found some huge but very rude images here carved in stone. Its population is about 1000.

EASTERN, (éestern) a. situated, looking, or tending towards the east, or that point of the compass in which the sun rises.

EAST-GRINSTEAD, Sussex. It is a borough, and has a handsome church. The assizes for the county are sometimes held here. It is 29 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 3586.

EAST-HARLING, Norfolk. It is 88 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1062.

EAST-ILSLEY, Berkshire. It is seated between two hills, among fruitful corn-fields and excellent downs for feeding sheep. It is 53 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 733.

EAST INDIA COMPANY. See HUYONSRA, IVAR.

EAST-LOOE, Cornwall. It is seated pretty commodiously on a creek of the sea, over which there is a large stone bridge, supported by many arches, which leads to West-Looe, standing between two hills. The chief benefit which the inhabitants have is in their fishery. It is 232 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 926: and of W. Looe, 616.

EASTON, a town of Pennsylvania, United States. It stands on the Delaware river, at the junction of the Lehigh river. The streets are very regularly planned. There is a fine bridge, 570 feet long, over the Delaware, a chain bridge over the Lehigh, and two bridges over Bushkill creek, which with the two rivers includes the town. Lafayette College, where manual labour is connected with study, a rising institution, is here. It is 199 miles from Washington. Pop. 4865. There are three other places of this name.

EASTWARD, (éeastward) a. [eastward, Sax.] towards the east, or that point of the compass where the sun rises when in the equinoctial points.

EAST WINDSOR, a town of Connecticut, United States. It stands a mile from the Connecticut river, and consists of one long street running parallel to it. Here is the Theological Institute of Connecticut, a college of the Congregationalists, where manual labour is practised in addition to the general and peculiar studies of the place. It has a good library. It is 343 miles from Washington. Pop. 3600. One other place in the States bears this name besides.

EASY, (éasy) a. to be performed without fatigue, encumbrance, or difficulty; free from disturbance or anxiety; believing without inquiry or opposition; credulous; complying; free from bodily pain, without formality; elegantly negligent.

To EAT, (éet) v. a. preter. ate or eat, participle eat or eaten; [etan, Sax.] to devour or consume by the mouth. Figuratively, to corrode or destroy, applied to the action of some corrosive substance; to consume prodigally; to retract or unsay a thing, when joined to word.—v. n. to go to meals; to feed; to take food; to consume by corroding.

EATABLE, (éetable) a. fit for food, or capable of being chewed and swallowed.

EATER, (éeter) s. a person who chews and swallows any food; that which corrodes.

EATINGHOUSE, s. a house where provisions are sold ready dressed.

EAVES, (éeeves) s. [efese, Sax.] the edges of a roof which hang over a house.

To EAVESDROP, (éeeves-drop) v. a. to catch what drops from the eaves of a house. Figuratively, to listen under the windows of a person's house, in order to discover secrets.

EAVESDROPPER, (éeeves-dropper) s. one who listens under a person's windows, in order to discover the secrets of a family.

EBB, s. [ebba, Sax.] the flowing back or retreat of water towards the sea; a shrinking of water in a river, by the turn of its tide. Figuratively, decay; decline; waste; a low condition.

To EBB, v. n. to flow back towards the sea. Figuratively, to decline; to decay; to waste.

E'BIONITES, s. in Ecclesiastical History, a sect which arose very early, which, to the belief in Christianity, added the practice of the Jewish ceremonies. Two divisions are said to have existed; but the accounts of the Fathers must be received with caution, as they had branded these men as heretics, and so were interested in proving them such.

E'BEN, E'BON, E'BONY, s. [ebemus, Lat.] in Commerce, a kind of wood, brought from the Indies, of a black colour, exceedingly hard and heavy, susceptible of a very fine polish, and on that account used in Mosaic and inlaid works.

EOBE, the name of a comparatively peaceful and inoffensive race of Africans, whose native country lies to the N. E. of the Gulf of Guinea, and extends inland towards Bournou.

EBRIETY, s. [ebrius, Lat.] intoxication occasioned by strong liquors; drunkenness.

EBRILLADE, s. [Fr.] a check of the bridle which a horseman gives a horse, by a jerk of one rein, when he refuses to turn.

EBRIOSITY, s. [ebrius, Lat.] habitual drunkenness.

EBRO, a river of Spain, having its source in Old Castile, and after a course of about 400 miles, during which it receives the waters of many tributaries, and passes by Saragossa and Tortosa, it enters the Mediterranean, making a small delta, in which, towards the sea, is the Cape de los Alfaques.

EBULLITION, s. [Lat.] the act of boiling with heat. Figuratively, an intestine motion of the particles of the body; the commotion, struggle, fermentation, or effervescence occasioned by the mingling together any alkaline and acid liquor.

ECCENTRIC, ECCENTRICAL, (eksen'trick, eksen'tri'al) a. [ex and centrum, Lat.] departing or deviating from a centre; not having the same centre. Figuratively, not answering the same design; not answering the end intended; irregular; not consistent with any rule or established custom.

ECCENTRICITY, (eksen'tricity) s. the departing from, or the state of a thing with, a different centre from another; excursion from an employment, or proper sphere of action; an improper situation. In Astronomy, applied to a planet, the distance between the focus and the centre of its elliptic orbit.

ECCHYMOSES, (eky'mosis) s. [ekchuo, Gr.] in Surgery, extravasation of blood from a vein in the arm, betwixt the flesh and skin.

ECCLESHELL, Staffordshire. It is noted for trading in pedlars' wares. It is situated on a branch of the river Sow, and is 143 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 4730.

ECCLESIASTES, (ekkle'siastes, Gr.) a book of the Old Testament, attributed to Solomon, but regarded by critics as the production of a later writer. Some of it appears to be written in the form of objections and replies, and the scope and purport of it is, that the great thing for man is to fear God and keep his commandments.

ECCLESIASTIC, ECCLESIASTICAL, a. [ekkle'siastikos, Gr. ecclesiasticus, Lat.] relating to the ritual, &c. of a church.

ECCLESIASTIC, a. a person devoted to ecclesiastical service; a clergyman.

ECCLESIASTICUS, s. otherwise called The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, a book placed with the Apocrypha at the end of the Old Testament, as not received by the Jews amongst their Scriptures. It is a collection of maxims, aphorisms, proverbs, arguments, &c., containing much most excellent wisdom, and cannot be carefully studied without profit.

ECOPROPTICS, (ekop'rotiks) s. [ek and koprois, Gr.] in Physic, medicines which purge gently.

ECHINATE, ECHINATED, (ek'inate, ek'inated) part. or a. [echinus, Lat.] bristled like a hedgehog; set with prickles.

ECHINUS, (ek'inus) s. [Lat.] in Natural History, a hedge-hog; the name of a genus of marine animals, which are covered with a shell armed with very thick-set spines. In Botany, the prickly head or cover of the seed or top of any plant. In Architecture, a member or ornament near the bottom of the Ionic and other capitals, next to the abacus; taking its name from the roughness of its carving, resembling the prickly rind of a chestnut, or the prickly coat of a hedge-hog; it is called ovolo by the Italians, and eggs and anchors by English workmen, because carved with anchors, darts, and ovals, or eggs.

ECHO, (eko) s. [Gr.] a sound reverberated, or reflected to the ear from some surface. In Music, it is the repeating some parts of the strain in a very low or soft tone. By the poets, Echo is supposed to be a nymph, who pined into a sound.

To ECHO, (eko) v. to resound; to be sounded back a second time.—v. a. to multiply a sound.

ECLAIRCISSEMENT, (eklair'se'mang) s. [Fr.] the act of clearing up, or explaining any affair by word of mouth.

ECLAT, (eklat) s. [Fr.] splendour; lustre, or glory.

ECLATIC, (eklatik, Gr.) selecting, or having the power of choosing or preferring.

ECLIPSE, the designation assumed by a school of philosophers commenced by Victor Cousin at Paris, and now one of the fashionable philosophies of France. It is decidedly Platonic in its principles, and proceeding on the psychological method, first introduced by Locke, gathers from all systems such as harmonizes with its leading thought. The name is not quite new, having been employed by some of the philosophers of Alexandria, who sought to establish their school by a league with Christianity.

ECLIPSE, s. [ek and leicho, Gr.] a form or medicine made by the incorporation of oils with syrups, and which is to be taken upon a licorice stick.

ECLIPSE, s. [ekleipso, Gr.] in Astronomy, an eclipse of the sun is the concealment of that luminary, wholly or in part, by the moon's intervening between the earth and the sun: an eclipse of the moon, is when the earth being between the sun and moon, the light of the sun is prevented from falling upon her; if the light of the sun is kept off from the whole body of the moon, it is a total eclipse; if from a part only, it is a partial one. An annular eclipse takes place when the sun is so distant from the earth, that the moon only partially covers it, a ring of light appearing round the opaque circle at the height of the eclipse. Eclipses of the sun can take place only at the period of the new moon; and eclipses of the moon only when it is at the full. The eclipses of the satellites of Jupiter are now the means by which longitude is calculated at sea, the difference between the time of the eclipse noted in the Nautical Almanack, and the time when it is observed, affording the means of computing it. A state of darkness, or want of knowledge, applied to the mind.

To ECLIPSE, v. a. to darken any luminary. Figuratively, to destroy any light; to drown a lesser light by superior splendour; to cloud; to obscure; to disgrace.

ECLIPTIC, s. [ekleipsis, Gr.] in Astronomy, is a great circle of the sphere, supposed to be drawn through the middle of the zodiac, making an angle with the equinoctial, in the points of Aries and Libra, of about 23° 28', which is the sun's greatest declination; or, more strictly speaking, it is the path or way, among the fixed stars, that the earth appears to describe to an eye placed in the sun. Some call it the way of the sun, because the sun, in his apparent annual motion, never deviates from it. In Geography, it is a great circle on the terrestrial globe, not only answering to, but falling within the plane of the celestial ecliptic.

ECCLOGUE, (eklog) s. [ekloge, Gr.] a pastoral poem, whose scenes are confined to rural life, and whose personages are shepherds.

ECONOMY. See ECONOMY.

ECONOMY, a town of Pennsylvania, United States. It stands on the Ohio, and is regularly laid out in streets parallel to the river, and others at right angles with them. It is a settlement of the Rappites, and was founded by Rapp himself, and consists wholly of Germans from Suabia. There are some good public buildings, but all the property is held in common. It is 243 miles from Washington. Pop. 1283.

ECPIRACISTICS, (ekp'ratiks) s. [ek and phratto, Gr.] such medicines as open the vessels through which the humours are to pass, or which promote their discharge.

ECSTASY, s. [ekstasis, Gr.] any sudden passion of the mind, by which the thoughts are for a time absorbed; excessive joy or rapture; enthusiasm.

ECSTASIED, a. enraptured; elevated; or absorbed.

ECSTATIC, ECSTATICAL, a. enraptured, or elevated to an ecstasy; tending to external objects.

ECTYPE, s. [ek and typos, Gr.] a copy.

ECUADOR, a republic of S. America, lying on the Pacific, just under the line, whence its name, and bounded by Venezuela, Brazil, and Peru. It is about 700 miles in length and 500 in breadth. It is crossed by the Andes; Chinchorao and some other of the distinct mountain masses being about 20,000 feet high. The chain is traversed longitudinally by several valleys, and there are elevated table-lands amongst and approaching the mountains, about 10,000 feet above the sea. The Amazon and its tributaries water the E. part of the state; but there are no great streams running into the Pacific. Its seasons are tropical, and it is very subject to earthquakes. Mines of lead, and, less numerous, of gold, silver, and quicksilver occur. The climate and the soil in the higher regions are both favourable to pasturage and agriculture, and corn, fruits, sheep, horses, timber, &c. &c., with the metals, and cochineal, are amongst its exports. Its disturbed condition from the time when the first revolt from Spain took place, has prevented the rapid development of its resources. Quito is its capital; Guayaquil, Cuenca, Riobamba, &c. are also places of importance. Its population is about 1,000,000.

ECURIE, (écurie) s. [Fr.] a covered place wherein horses are housed.

EDDA, s. [Scandinav.] the name given to two collections of poems, containing the old mythic traditions and legends of the Scandinavian or Northman people. The author of the first or elder Edda, was Sæmund; Snorro Sturleson compiled the younger Edda, which has only fragments of poetry in it. The divinities whose greatness and deeds are celebrated, are either deified men, such as Odin, or deified powers and objects in nature, as Thor and Baldur. There is an air of wild sublimity and of genuine pathos about these legends, which lie as a substratum, or foundation, to most of the peculiarities of language, custom, and feeling of the Northmen races.

To EDDER, v. a. to bind or interweave a fence.

EDDER, s. such fence wood as is commonly put upon the top of fences, and binds or interweaves each other.

EDDY, s. [Sax.] water which is beat and returns back again to the place from whence it flowed. Figuratively, a whirlpool; a circular motion; a whirlwind.

EDDY, a. whirling, moving in a circular manner. Eddy water, among mariners, implies dead water.

EDDYSTONE, a group of rocks on the S. coast of England, 14 miles from Plymouth Sound, which were very dangerous to vessels in the Channel. At the end of the 17th century a lighthouse was built on the chief rock, by a Mr. Winstanley, which, 3 years after its completion, was utterly destroyed by a storm, and with it was carried away its hapless builder. Some few years afterwards, a new one, constructed altogether of wood, from the basement, was built by Mr. Ruyard, which lasted for 50 years, and then was consumed by fire. In the following year Smeaton built the present pharos, of stone throughout; in form he copied the bole of a tree, which combines firmness with the advantage of presenting a curve both to the sweep of the wave and the violence of the wind; and by dovetails and cramps fixed the whole mass securely together, and to the rock. The lantern is 80 feet from the base, and often during the prevalence of the W. winds, which bring in the long swell from the Atlantic, the waves wash completely over it, and fly many yards above the lantern itself. It has now stood for 90 years, and has passed through most violent storms without any injury.

EDEMATOSE, a. [oedema, Gr.] swelling; full of humours. See ŒDEMATOS.

EDENTATED, a. [edentatus, Lat.] deprived of teeth.

EDFOU, a town of Egypt, remarkable for the beauty of the ruins near it. The temple at Edfou is especially famous.

EDGAR, one of the Saxon monarchs of England, the successor of Edwy; who having the wisdom to gain the priests and monks by adopting their cause in the person of St. Dunstan, has been represented to us as one of the greatest and best kings of the early period of this monarchy. He had been by this party made king or sub-king of Northumbria and Mercia, before the death of his brother; and the able administration of the ambitious and grasping Dunstan gave a real vigour to his government, apart from the empty laudations of his shaven followers. He was called the Pacific, there being but one slight skirmish with the Britons during his reign, and yet he had a wider and more unquestioned power than any of his predecessors. In one of his royal progresses, he assembled his royal vassals at Chester, and was by eight of them rowed to the monastery of St. John's on the Dee, a dignity no other king ever enjoyed in this land. He exacted from Wales a tribute of wolves' heads yearly, which rid that part of the island of these unlovely natives. He encouraged the settlement of foreigners in England, much to the chagrin of the English priests; but he suffered the rigorous enforcers of clerical celibacy to have their way on the married priests, whom they soon harried out of the land, or out of matrimony. He himself was not very scrupulous on this point; and only once, when the sufferer by his lust was the inmate of a nunnery, did his good friends interfere, and by a seven years' penance, and fast twice a week, seek to impress on him, that the daughters of the cloister must not be deemed subject to his will. The tale of his marriage with Elfrida the Fair, after the treachery and murder of Ethelwold, one of his earls, who had been sent to see if she corresponded with the description he had received of her, and had married her himself, is an old and familiar story. He died in 975, aged 32 years, in the 16th year of his reign.

EDGE, s. [egge, Sax.] the sharp side of any cutting instrument; a narrow part arising from one which is broader; the extremity, border, or outside of a thing; intuseness of desire; keenness; acrimony of temper. To set the teeth on edge, means to cause a tingling pain in the teeth, by any shrill and rasping noise.

To EDGE, v. a. to sharpen or make an instrument cut better; to border, or put something round the extremities of a thing; to exasperate; to excite; to put in such a position as to make way or give room; to advance beyond a line, or situation.—v. n. to advance, or move forward against any obstacle, or body moving in an opposite direction; to go close upon a wind, and sail slow.

EDGED, part. sharp, opposed to blunt.

EDGELESS, a. not fit to cut with; unable to cut; blunt.

EDGETOOL, s. a tool made sharp to cut.

EDGEWARE, Middlesex, 8 miles from London. Market, Thursdays. Pop. 650.

EDGEWORTH, ad. with the edge placed in a particular direction. EDGEWORTH, RICHARD LOVELL, the father of Maria Edgeworth, well known for his mechanical ingenuity, and for the zeal with which he studied the principles of education. He was joint writer of several works with his daughter, and he died in 1817, aged 73 years.

EDGING, s. something added by way of ornament; a narrow lace. In Gardening, rows of shrubs or plants, placed round the extremities of a bed instead of borders.

EDIBLE, a. [edulis, Lat.] fit to be eaten; fit for food.

EDICT, s. [edico, Lat.] in matters of civil policy, is an order or instrument, signed and sealed by a prince, to serve as a law to his subjects.

EDIFICATION, s. [edifico and facio, Lat.] Figuratively, improvement; the act of advancing in religion.

EDIFICE, s. [edifico and facio, Lat.] a building, or house, generally applied to signify some large or pompous building.

EDIFIER, s. one who improves another by instruction.

To EDIFY, v. a. to build; to improve by instruction; to instruct or teach.

EDILE, s. [ediles, Lat.] the title of an officer among the Romans, who combined the duties of our modern surveyor and churchwarden.

EDINBURGH, the capital city of Scotland, situated in the county to which it gives name, on three hills. It may properly be divided into the Old and New Towns. The situation of the Old Town is singular and striking: it stands on the middle ridge, or hill, which is narrow and steep, and terminated abruptly on the W. by the castle, a very ancient building, accessible only by a drawbridge, and erected on a lofty precipitous rock. The High Street, a mile in length, and generally 90 feet broad, extends from the castle to Holyrood House. On each side of this steep hill the houses form narrow lanes, which are called closes, and extend N. and S. Many of them are lofty; but so piled, as it were, upon each other, that they are neither commodious nor elegant. The New Town is situated on the N. side of the Old, on an elevated plain, from which the ground descends to the S. and N. with a gentle declivity. It forms an assemblage of uniform streets and squares, including several public buildings, the whole built entirely of stone, with considerable taste and elegance. The buildings on the S. side of the Old Town, though inferior to those on the N., are extensive and stately. The principal public buildings are the palace of Holyrood House, the Royal Exchange, built in 1753, the Register Office, the Physicians' Hall, Heriot's Hospital, founded in 1628, Watson's Hospital, an hospital for orphans, and a Royal Infirmary. There is a flourishing university here, with a fine library, and all other accessories needful for a seat of learning. It has some, but not very considerable, manufactures. In its population is included that of Leith, its port; which see. It is 396 miles from London. Lat. 55. 58. N. Long. 3. 12. W. Pop. 166,450.

EDINBURGHSHIRE, or MID-LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by the Frith of Forth, which separates it from Fifehire; and by the shires of Haddington, Berwick, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanark, and Linlithgow. It is about 25 miles in length and 10 in breadth. It has hills of above 1000 feet in height, but in general it is a good agricultural district. It furnishes coal and excellent building-stone. Pop. 225,623.

EDITION, s. [ed., Lat.] the publication or impression of a book.

EDITOR, s. one who prepares a manuscript for the press, and corrects the errors of the proof sheet while it is printing.

EDMUND, the name of two of our Saxon kings. The first of this name was the immediate successor of the great Athelstan. At the very beginning of his reign he had to engage in a contest with the former kingdom of Northumbria, which rose in revolt, at the head of which was Olave, a king of the Eastmen, or Danes, which ended in a partition of the country, with the reversion of either part to the survivor. Olave died in the following year, and Edmund, seizing the opportunity, regained the whole. He also expelled Donald from Cumbria, and installed the king of the Scots, as earl, on condition of his being his vassal for it. His fame was great, for he received the title of Magnificent. His end was unworthy of him, for he perished in a brawl at a feast, by the hand of one Leof, a man whom he had outlawed, in 946, aged 23 years, in the 6th of his reign. The second, who was surnamed Ironsides, was a great warrior, whose whole public career was a struggle against foes, in the person of Canute with the Danes, or traitors, such as Eadric Streone. By the abduction of the widow of Sigiferth, one of the thanes of the Danish boroughs, he acquired a claim to their territory, which he soon successfully enforced. This put him into a position to cope with Eadric. But Eadric deserted to Canute, who was harassing the kingdom with numerous forces, whose movements he conducted with great skill. On Ethelred's death, Edmund was proclaimed king, but Canute was prepared to contest the possession of the throne with him, by law as well as by arms. Eadric, who was Edmund's evil genius, rejoined the Saxon cause, and did his best to destroy it by his treachery. At length a partition of the kingdom was effected between the rival claimants, Edmund retaining the S. of the island, and the nominal supremacy. Soon afterwards he died, and Eadric Streone was believed to have killed him. He died in 1016, aged but 27 years, and before he had reigned one year.

EDMUND, ST., a king of the East Angles, under Ethelred I., who was Bretwalda, or king paramount, of the southern part of the island. He was a ruler of great valour and piety, and deserved and received the confidence of his people. The Danes, to revenge the death of their famous chief Ragnar Lodbrok, had descended on the E. coasts, and sailing up the Houlad, now the Bedford Level, attacked his kingdom. He met them in battle, but was defeated. Crouched beneath Hoxne bridge, he was discovered by his pursuers; who, to convert him to their rude heathenism, made him a mark for their arrows, till wearied by his constancy, Hingwar, their leader, beheaded him. This was in 870. Bury St. Edmund's is the existing monument of his spotless fame; his body, preserved in a monastery there, built by Canute, himself a Dane, in after years, gathered together that town.

E/DOM, [Heb.] the name given in the Holy Scriptures to Esau, the eldest son of the patriarch Jacob, because of the colour of his hair; and afterwards to the country which he occupied, called in classic times, Idumea, which see.

E/DRED, a Saxon king of England, successor to Edmund I. An insurrection in Northumbria was the first event of his reign, for there was an intriguing churchman, Archbishop Wulstan, desirous of gaining more power than could be gained in a vassal's court. Eddred, though enfeebled by disease, hastily attacked and put down this revolt, and a second attempt, under Eric, his vassal, his mere threat destroyed. He imprisoned his priestly opponent, afterwards, and degraded him; the other was assassinated. Dunstan, the famous saint, and an earl of Danish extraction, Turketil, were his chief counselors. He died in 955, aged about 40 years, and in the 9th of his reign.

EDRISSI, ABU ABDALLAH MOHAMMED, a learned Moorish geographer of the 11th century. His work, which was dedicated, (with a silver globe representing the earth, which has long been lost,) is yet extant; and though of no great intrinsic value, is a document of great interest from its connexion with the history of a most valuable science.

To E/DUCATE, v. a. [educare, Lat.] to bring up a person; to give instruction to a child or young person.

EDUCATION, s. actually, the training of a child or young person for manhood, by whatever means accomplished; as generally understood, the training in learning such as the spirit of the age requires for its youth; or, considered as a branch of mental culture, the calling into play of the various intellectual faculties by appropriate and gradual exercise. The objects of education ought to be the cultivation of each individual mind so as to develop its peculiar ability, and teach it, first, self-help and self-reliance; in order, secondly, to the well-being and progress of society. No system can be a good one, or right, which overlooks or supplants this.

To E/DUCATE, v. a. [educare, Lat.] to bring out; to extract; to bring to light; or to bring from a state of concealment.

EDUCATION, s. the act of bringing any thing into view.

To E/DUCORATE, v. a. [dulce, Lat.] to sweeten.

EDUCORATION, s. in Pharmacy, the sweetening of a thing by means of honey, sugar, or syrup. In Chemistry, the act of freshening or cleansing a thing from its salts by frequent washing in water.

EDWARD, the name of nine of our English kings, three before the Norman Conquest, and six since. Edward, surnamed the Elder, a Saxon monarch, was son of Alfred the Great. But he had only the nominal supremacy of England. Ethelwald, his cousin, contested his right, and with some success, till he fell in a battle, in which his army was victorious. The Danes were his next foes, but them he routed. The most remarkable person of his reign was his sister Ethelfleda, who, as widow of the alderman of Mercia, continued to administer that kingdom, with great vigour and success. Her kingdom afterwards fell to Edward, who became at last lord paramount of the whole island. He died in 925, after a reign of 24 years. Edward the Martyr was another Saxon king, and successor to Edgar. He was supported by St. Dunstan and the ecclesiastics, and violently opposed by some of the great earls, and the fair Elfrieda, who wished to secure the crown for her own child. He was assassinated by order of the queen-mother, on whom he had called in a hunting party, and was exalted to the title of Martyr by the monks, who ruled by him. He died in 978, having reigned three years.

The third Saxon king of this name was surnamed the Confessor, and he succeeded Hardicanute. He was a younger son of Ethelred II., his brother Alfred having been murdered, as was believed in Earl Godwin, who was now the most powerful man in the kingdom; and Edward, son of Edmund Ironside, being absent as an outlaw, though the lawful heir to the throne. He had been brought up at the Norman court, whither he had fled from the Danes; and this was the occasion of sore trouble to him. Godwin soon gained complete supremacy over the weak, well-meaning monarch, married him to his own daughter, and established himself and his sons in the great earldoms of the country. In Edward's court were some Norman nobles, who seemed yet to divide the king's heart with Godwin and his sons; these therefore sought to make it a national quarrel, but some of the earl's Saxon opponents sided with the Normans, and thus began the discord. At last Count Eustace of Boulogne, (a man of great note in those days, from this cause amongst others,) that he would war moustaches, contrary to the Norman custom,) the king's brother-in-law, coming through Dover got into a street-riot, and the two parties of the kingdom flamed up thereupon into civil war; ending without bloodshed in a truce and a meeting of the Witan, and the exile of Godwin and his sons. Edward, like a feeble-minded creature, even included his wife, Editha the fair, in the proscription, and immured her in an abbey. William, the Norman duke, now came over to England, and after his visit Norman influence waxed yet greater. A change came now: Earl Godwin and his sons, partly by force, and partly by a vote of the Witan, were reinstated in England, and then shortly after the earl died. But Harold could well carry on their game, and civil war and broils were ceaseless. Edward about this time recalled his nephew the outlaw, and announced him to be his heir; but he fell soon after, it was believed, by Harold's hand; on this, the old king gave the succession to his cousin, William of Normandy; and wearied out with his task, died in 1066, aged about 60, after a reign of 23 years. He abolished an odious tax called the Dane-gelt; and introduced Norman law customs into English law courts, which have never left them. The laws of the Confessor were afterwards regarded by the subject Saxon population as the bulwark

Edward I

King of England and Wales

Lady Elizabeth Grey interceding for her children

Edward IV.

Edward IV. standing in the Temple of the Sun of the little liberty that remained to them under the sway of the Normans.

Edward I., king of England, succeeded his father Henry III., returning hastily from an unfinished crusade he had set out on, to assume the throne. He found the kingdom harassed by the anarchical schemes of the De Montforts, and threatened by both Wales and Scotland. He first advanced against the Welch, and completely reduced them, yet suffered Llewellyn to reign, till his son Edward of Caernarvon should be fit to govern. Scotland was in a state of great confusion through the contests of Bruce and Baliol for the throne; Edward claimed it, and made Baliol his deputy. But the Scots could not endure this, and they drove their poor deputy to a revolt, disastrous for him, for he was overthrown and consigned to the Tower. All Scotland was subdued save Bruce, who was in arms again, and Edward, hastening against him, died in 1307, aged 68 years, after a reign of 35.

Edward II., his son, succeeded him, a feeble king, who was driven from Scotland by Bruce, endangered his power in Ireland, and by his silly favouritism gained universal contempt. The nobles rose against him, he was dethroned, and, by order of the queen's paramour, murdered at Berkeley Castle, in 1327, aged 43, after a reign of 20 years. Edward III., his son, was a minor, and did not acquire his rights when of age without a struggle; he was however victorious, and the murder of his father was avenged. Edward's first attempts were made on Scotland, and he must have succeeded in destroying that monarchy, had not he been lured from it by a nobler quarry. The throne of France was vacant, Edward was grandson to the last monarch, his opponent was nephew. Females could not inherit in France, but could the descendants of females? Edward invaded the country, and aided by the astonishing valour of his son, the Black Prince, and the indomitable courage of his troops, he won two great pitched battles, at Crecy and Poitiers, against all the chivalry of France. The only real gain was Calais, which with Dover commanded the narrow seas; and after a few years this alone remained of all the territory that English blood and treasure had been so prodigally expended to win. Edward had at his court, as prisoners, the kings of France and Scotland, but such glory was most empty. After the return of the king to England, he found a new trouble: the representatives of the burgesses and knights of the shires had, during the three preceding reigns, been growing in influence in the nation; and before the French expedition, Edward had conceded points to them, which he thought he could easily recover; but now the parliament was in open opposition to him, headed by his own son at first, and after his death in name by his son who was next heir to the crown. At length he died, in 1377, aged 64 years, having reigned 51. During this reign, not only did constitutional liberty first get an established footing in England, but poetry, and religion too, for Chaucer and Wicliffe began their works in England now.

Edward IV. succeeded Henry VI., having waged against him, under the banner of his father first, and afterwards in his own name, a civil war for six years. This was the war of the Roses, as the struggle of the two branches of the royal family, York and Lancaster, was called; and which, after Edward's accession, was maintained for ten years with alternate success, Edward being once compelled to flee the kingdom. But he was ultimately victorious. In character and proceedings he was much like Charles II., but the people had no voices then to speak, and the wars had almost exterminated the nobility. It was by this fearful slaughter that the way for the tyranny of the Tudors was prepared, and so for all that it led to. Printing was introduced into England, by Caxton, in this reign. Edward died in 1483, aged 42 years, after a reign of 22.

Edward V., his son, was but an infant, and merely proclaimed king. His uncle, the Duke of Gloucester, who was his guardian, was believed to have murdered him, with his brother, in the Tower. This tale is not credited now; but the prince was removed, having been nominally king but a few months. Edward VI., son and successor of Henry VIII., was but 9 years old on his accession. His mother, Jane Seymour, had been interested in the Reformation, and Edward had been brought up most carefully according to its principles. The Duke of Somerset was Lord Protector of the king by his father's will, and the great work was carried on in a purer spirit, and with an aim more nearly agreeing with the aim of the continental reformers, than it had been before. The spirit of the Protector was ambitious, he sacrificed his own brother, provoked a popular revolt by encouraging popular violence, and at last fell on the scaffold, through the arts of a mightier schemer, the Duke of Northumberland. In spite of these things matters were advancing so as to favour Puritanism, when the king died, in 1553, aged but 16 years, and in the 7th year of his reign.

EDWARD, THE BLACK PRINCE, was the son of Edward III., who distinguished himself by his cool valour and chivalrous courtesy at the battles of Crecy and Poitiers, which he won. But humanity and filial reverence were not amongst his qualifications. He died in 1376, aged 45 years.

EDWARDS, DR. JONATHAN, (commonly named President Edwards), one of the most eminent divines of America, whose works, especially the Treatise on the Will, have produced, both in his own country and in this, a most profound impression. He was first the minister of the Presbyterian church, and soon was made a tutor at Yale College. He afterwards removed to Northampton, as assistant to his grandfather in the oversight of a congregation. Here he was involved in a long and painful controversy with the congregation, and other ministers, owing to his earnest endeavours to preserve the purity and Christian character of his charge, which ended in his dismission. We next find him working with all his zeal and love as a missionary to the native Indians; and finally he accepted the presidency of the college at Princeton, New Jersey. His writings were very numerous, and though many were highly metaphysical, have enjoyed great popularity. He has done more to inflict a logical Calvinism on Christians as the only true theology, than any other writer; and it is only now beginning to be renounced. His character was of the noblest and purest order. One word of his—a resolution formed in his youth—might serve to make young men a different race from what they are,—“Resolved, to live with all my might, whilst I do live.” He died in 1758, aged 55 years.

EDWARDS, WILLIAM, the builder of the famous one-arched bridge over the Taaf, in Wales. He was a self-taught architect, and by the force of his native genius acquired a reputation for skill in this department, which his works still maintain. He died in 1789, aged 70 years.

EDWARDS, THOMAS, one of the famous divines of the Puritans' revolt in the 17th century. He was a rigid Presbyterian, and hated the toleration which Independency offered to opposing opinions. His book named Gangrene was written against this hateful liberality. He fled from England on the rise of Cromwell, and died in 1647, aged 38 years.

EDWARDS, BRYAN, a writer and actor in the cause of humanity towards slaves. His residence in the W. Indies enabled him to judge fairly respecting this matter, and his works, both in the colonial legislature and British parliament, and as an historian of those islands, approve his judgment and his truth. He died in 1800, aged 55 years.

EDWIN, the Saxon king of Northumbria, and Bretwalda or supreme king of England, in the 7th century, under whose protection Paulinus preached Christianity and overthrew Paganism in the N. of the island. It was at the discussion of the question amongst his nobles, that the beautiful address was given by one, which Wordsworth has immortalized in one of his sonnets. He fell in battle against the Welch in 633, having reigned about 40 years.

EDWY, an Anglo-Saxon king of England, successor to Edred, surnamed the Fair, a mere boy on his accession, and, unhappily for him and his reputation, no admirer of St. Dunstan. The monks have given him as bad a character, both personally and royally, as can be imagined. Dunstan grossly insulted him at his coronation feast, and was banished in consequence; but his party was powerful, and had a leader equal to the occasion. Odo raised a revolt and deprived Edwy of almost all his kingdom, robbed him of his wife, (the occasion of the quarrel,) cruelly spoiled her beauty, and afterwards more cruelly destroyed her. Edgar his brother had been the tool of the priests, in this opposition to Edwy, and the brokenhearted king either died or was murdered in 958, not 20 years old, and having reigned but 3 years.

EDYSTONE. See E/DYSTONE.

EEL, s. [æ, Sax.] in Ichthyology, a genus of fishes whose general appearance has some resemblance to that of serpents. They are very tenacious of life; and their habits are very remarkable, their migrations over land, to surmount waterfalls, or to gain better feeding places, are well attested, although at first so seemingly impossible.

EFF. See EFF.

TO EFFACE, v. a. [effacer, Fr.] to destroy any painting; to spoil the form of any piece of carving; to blot out; to destroy all marks or traces of a thing from the mind.

EFFECT, s. [efficio, Lat.] that which is produced by an operative cause; a consequence; advantage; profit or service. In the plural, goods, furniture, or movables.

TO EFFECT, v. a. to bring to pass; to attempt with success; to produce as a cause, or by the application of power.

EFFEFTIBLE, a. that may be produced, done, or performed.

EFFEFTIVE, a. having the power to produce an effect; proper for action.

EFFEFTIVELY, ad. with power; powerfully; really; entirely.

EFFEFTLESS, a. without effect; without causing any change or alteration by the application of power; without producing any effect.

EFFEFTOR, s. [Lat.] one who produces any effect; one who is the cause of a thing.

EFFEFTUAL, a. [effectual, Fr.] producing the object, end, or design, for which it is intended. SYNON. With respect to these two words, that of efficacious seems not so powerful as that of effectual. The first gets the better of most obstacles; the last, of all. By an efficacious remedy we put an effectual stop.

EFFEFTUALLY, ad. in such a manner as to produce the end for which it is applied.

TO EFFEFTUATE, v. a. [effectuer, Fr.] to bring to pass; to accomplish.

EFFEFTMINACY, s. the acting like a woman; softness, or want of those qualities which distinguish and become a man.

EFFEFTMINATE, a. [effeminatus, from femina, Lat.] void of the qualities which distinguish and adorn the male sex; acting or behaving like a woman; voluptuous, or luxurious.

TO EFFEFTMINATE, v. a. to make womanish.

EFFEFTINATION, s. the quality or cause of rendering a person womanish.

TO EFFERVESCE, (effervescere) v. a. [effervesco, Lat.] to grow warm, to produce heat by fermentation, or the motion of the particles of a body among themselves.

EFFERVESCECE, s. the production of heat by internal motion. Among chemists, it is the rapid evolution of a gas, excited in fluids, either by the mixture of fluids of a different nature, or by the mixture of certain compound substances, as a carbonate and an acid, in fluids.

EFFETE, a. [effatus, Lat.] barren; worn out with age.

EFFEFTICACIOUS, (effikashious) a. [efficax, Lat.] producing the effect or end intended.

EFFEFTICACIOUSLY, (effikashiously) ad. in such a manner as to produce the effect or end intended.

EFFEFTICACY, (efficacy) s. the power of producing the end or effect intended. Applied to speech, persuasion.

EFFEFTICIENCE, EFFEFTICIENCY, (efficience, efficiency) s. [efficacia, Lat.] the act of producing effects or changes in things or persons; agency.

EFFEFTICIENT, (efficicient) s. a cause; one that makes or causes things to be what they are.

EFFEFTICIENT, (efficicient) a. having the power to produce or cause alteration or change in things, either by altering the qualities or introducing new ones.

EFFEFTIGY, s. [effigies, Lat.] the resemblance or representation of any thing drawn, painted, or carved; also, the mental image of any thing.

EFFLORESCENCE, EFFLORESCENCY, s. [effloresco, Lat.] in Botany, a production of flowers. In Natural History, an excretion in form of flowers. In Medicine, a breaking out of some humours, &c. in the skin.

EFFLORESCENT, a. shooting out in the shape of flowers. In Medicine, appearing in pimples, or other eruptions on the skin.

EFFLUENCE, s. [effluo, Lat.] that which flows from some other principle.

EFFLUVIA, EFFLUVIUM, s. [effluo, Lat.] the small particles continually emitted by, or flowing from, a body, which, though they do not sensibly decrease the body from whence they proceed, have perceptible effects on the senses.

EFFLUX, s. [effluxus, Lat.] the act of flowing out; effusion; spreading; or the visible effect of some cause; that which flows from something else; an emanation.

TO EFFLUX, v. a. to flow from; to move in succession.

EFFLUXION, s. [effluxio, Lat.] that which flows out; the action of flowing out.

TO EFFORCE, v. a. [efforce, Fr.] to force; to break through by violence.

EFFORMATION, s. [efformo, Lat.] the act of giving form to, or making.

EFFORT, s. [effort, Fr.] a struggle; a laborious or vehement exertion of power.

EFFOSSION, s. [effodio, Lat.] the act of digging from the ground.

EFFRONTERY, s. [effronterie, Fr.] an unbecoming and undaunted boldness, by which a person is capable of undertaking any action, including the idea of impudence and daring.

TO EFFULGE, v. n. [effulgeo, Lat.] to send forth lustre or effulgence.

EFFULGENCE, s. splendour, or a glorious degree of light.

EFFULGENT, a. shining with a superlative degree of light or splendour.

EFFUMABILITY, s. [fumus, Lat.] the quality of flying away or vapouring in fumes.

TO EFFUSE, (effuse) v. a. [effusus, Lat.] to pour out; to spoil. EFFUSION, s. [effusio, Lat.] the act of pouring out; shedding; the act of uttering or pronouncing with fluency; profusion, or generous giving. Figuratively, the thing poured out.

EFFUSIVE, (effusive) a. poured out.

EFT, s. [efeta, Sax.] in Natural History, a genus of water lizard, very common in ponds and ditches; called also a neet.

EFTSOONS, ad. [eft and soon, Sax.] soon afterward; in a short time; again. Obsolete.

EGBERT, a Saxon king of Wessex, usually regarded as the first supreme monarch of the various kingdoms of Saxon England, really only one of a succession of Bretwaldas; the first really sole monarch of England being Athelstan. He first turned his arms against the Britons, and became master of Wales; the rest of the island fell part by part, in like manner; each kingdom being under a king who swore fealty to Egbert. In his reign the Danes made their first serious attack on England, but were defeated. He died in 835, aged about 60 years, and having reigned 35.

EGEDE, the name of a father and son, who were the first Christian missionaries to the desolate Greenland. Their labours were very successful; the son, Paul, formed the language, and translated part of the Bible. Hans, the father, left his native country, Denmark, in 1721, and died in 1758; his son, who accompanied him, died in 1780.

EGG, s. [egg, Sax.] in Animal Physiology, the cell in which the embryo is formed. In birds, reptiles, and the lower orders of animals, these cells are extruded, and the development of the embryo is effected either by incubation or by atmospheric warmth. The eggs of birds are oval in form, and are covered with a thin shell consisting chiefly of phosphate of lime; externally they are of various colours, and some are very beautifully marked. The eggs of reptiles are defended by a tough gelatinous integument. The eggs of insects are very beautiful microscopic objects.

TO EGG, v. a. [eggian, Sax.] to incite; to instigate; to induce a person to prosecute an action with vigour.

EGINHARD, the secretary and historian of Charlemagne; and, according to general repute, his son-in-law. He served his successor also, and finally, retiring from the world, became abbot of Seligenstadt. He died about 850, aged about 50 years.

EGLANTINE, s. [eglantier, Fr.] in Botany, the sweet-brier rose.

EGMONT, LAMORAL, COUNT OF, a Flemish nobleman, who served in the wars of Charles V. and Philip II. with great distinction. He was in the best sense of the word a nobleman, and so was not a fitting instrument for the policy of the latter king, as carried on by the ferocious Alva. He was seized by this monster, most treacherously, in company with his friend Count Horn, declared a traitor, and beheaded in 1568, aged 46 years. His name and that of his friend and companion in death, are rightly regarded as those of martyrs to the cause of their country's freedom.

E'GOTISM, E'GOTISM, [ego, Lat.] too frequent mention of a person's self in writing or conversation; too great self-esteem, or selfishness.

EGOTIST, s. one who often repeats the word I; a person who mentions himself too frequently, and with ostentation; one who cares too much about himself.

To EGOTIZE, v. n. to mention oneself too frequently and too ostentatiously.

EGREGIOUS, a. [egregius, Lat.] somewhat above the common or ordinary run; remarkable; worthy of notice, or extraordinary, either in a good or bad sense, but generally in a bad one.

EGREGIOUSLY, ad. better or worse than ordinary; uncommonly better or worse; prodigiously; extremely.

EGREMONT, Cumberland. It is seated not far from the sea, on the banks of a river, over which there are two bridges; and on the top of a peaked hill a strong castle. It is 299 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1750.

EGRESS, s. [egressus, Lat.] passage out of a place; liberty to go out.

EGRESSION, s. [egressio, Lat.] the act of coming out.

EGRET, s. in Natural History, a fowl of the heron kind, with red legs.

EGRETTE, s. [Fr.] an ornament of ribbons, worn by ladies on the front part of their hair.

EGYPT, a large country of N. Africa, adjoining to Asia, bounded by the Mediterranean and Red Seas, by Nubia and the desert. It is above 500 miles in length, and about 150 in breadth. Most of the area is desert, and mostly uninhabited; but the valley of the great river Nile, which is from 5 to 10 miles wide, is richly fertile, and thickly studded with towns and villages. Between the Nile and the Red Sea, the country is partly rocky and partly desert, but there are numerous fertile spots, which are chiefly occupied by branches of the great Arab race. The Nile, which is very broad in general, divides into several branches when approaching the sea, or rather the wide, open embouchure of the river has gradually been filled up, so as to produce this appearance; and this triangular district, the sides of which are about 80 miles in length, is the famous Delta. The most extraordinary phenomenon of the country is the periodical overflow of this river, occasioned by the copious summer rains which prevail in the regions whence it flows, and which, commencing at the summer solstice, increases during the next three months, and covers either directly, or by means of canals cut for the purpose of irrigation, the whole valley, leaving in its rapid fall a copious deposit of new soil. The climate is very healthy, except during the fall of the water, and the southerly winds of the early part of the year, and except that the simoom occasionally visits this country during the spring and summer. Rain is a very rare occurrence. Amongst the ranges of low mountains are quarries of various kinds of building-stone, and on the E. of the Nile, in addition, of granite of different kinds, of some marbles, &c. In the valley, and in the green spots which occur round the few springs found in the desert, palm trees abound, and all kinds of grain, rice in particular, many fruits, &c. &c. are cultivated. The wild animals of the country are such as are common to Africa, excepting that those which retire from the occupations of man are not often met with, and some few more common in Asia. The river especially abounds in crocodiles, and a kind of horned snake is found. The present state of Egypt is highly encouraging. Under the shrewd and vigorous sway of Mehemet Ali, the foundation has been laid for the advance of the people in all the improvements of European civilization. Absolute power may, perhaps, thus working, in conjunction with the influences of commerce, on the deep-seated religious instincts of its (mainly) Arab population, produce results, which will restore to this land a glory more excellent than pertained to it in the days when those stupendous monuments of the wealth and the might of its sovereigns, which are scattered throughout its whole length, and rival in their durability the everlasting hills, were set up. The commerce of the country is carried on chiefly with Great Britain and France, and the produce and the wealth of the interior of Africa, brought to Egypt by caravans, is exchanged for our manufactures and other wares. The population is about 2,000,000; seven-eighths of whom are of true Egyptian blood, the greater part of the remainder Copts and Turks, and the rest Jews, and emigrants or temporary residents of various nations. Cairo is the capital. Beside the ports on the Mediterranean, there are some small ports, and Suez, on the Red Sea. Of the pyramids, tombs, temples, and marvellous relics of antiquity in Egypt, by which the whole life and doing of its inhabitants, from the magnificent despot to the meanest slave, thousands of years ago, has been revealed to us, see under the various articles.

To EJACULATE, v. a. [ejaculo, Lat.] to dart out; to shoot. —v. n. to breathe a short occasional prayer.

EJACULATION, s. in its primary sense, the act of throwing or darting out. Figuratively, an occasional, extemporary, short prayer; an interjectional, or sudden, short speech.

EJACULATORY, a. suddenly darted out; expressed in short, abrupt, or unconnected sentences.

EJCHHORN, JOHN GEORGE, an eminently learned theologian and Biblical critic of Germany, whose labours tended greatly to the advanced state of Biblical science in that country, as much as those of any of her scholars. He held the professorship of the Oriental languages at Jena, first; and displayed such stores of learning in this department as placed him at once amongst the foremost of his day. He afterwards occupied a similar post at Göttingen, and with it other offices both at that university and in the state. The list of his works is too long for insertion. His principles were not by any means those of the Evangelical school, and those allied to it; and as far as vital religion is concerned, were not such as one would on any account receive. The service that he did was to break down, with relentless logic and scholarship, the dogmas of the preceding generation, which had encephalated the mind of man, and prevented immediate access to the fountain of truth. If he drank not thereof, we, thankful for his labours, and helped thereby, will not fail. He died in 1827, aged 75 years.

To EJECT, v. a. [e and jacio, Lat.] to throw, cast, or dart out with force.

EJECTION, s. the act of expelling or driving from a place of possession.

EJECTMENT, s. in Law, a writ by which any inhabitant of a house, or tenant of an estate, is commanded to depart.

EIDER-DOWN, s. the down of the eider duck, which is remarkably fine, and in such high esteem for its warmth when used in the lining of certain apparel, as to be sold at a very high price.

EIGH, interjection, a sudden expression of delight.

EIGHT, a. this word and its compounds is pronounced like ait: [eahtha, Sax.] a number consisting of twice four.

EIGHTEEN, a. a number consisting of ten and eight units added together.

EIGHTEENTH, s. the order of a thing either in place or succession, which is removed the distance of seventeen from the first; or twice as much or as far as nine.

EIGHTFOLD, a. eight times the number or quantity.

EIGHTH, a. a word expressing the order in which a thing stands from the first, and is next beyond the seventh. In Music, see OCTAVE.

EIGHTHLY, ad. in the eighth place.

EIGHTIETH, a. an ordinal, implying that a thing or succession is removed eighty times including the first.

EIGHTSCORE, a. eight times twenty, or 160.

EIGHTY, s. a number consisting of eight times ten added together.

EIGNE, (aine) a. [aisne, Fr.] in Law, the elder, or firstborn; not alienable; entailed.

EISEL, s. [essil, Sax.] vinegar; verjuice; any acid. An old word.

EISENACH, a town of Germany, capital of a principality of the same name. It stands at the junction of the rivers Nessel and Hursel, and is a neat and pleasing place. Beside the palace, it has some handsome public buildings, such as churches and colleges, &c. Here is a good library also. Its manufactures are considerable. Population, about 10,000. Lat. 51. 0. N. Long. 10. 20. E. Near to this town is the fortress called the Wartburg, where Luther was concealed as Ritter George, after the Diet of Worms, and where he translated great part of the sacred Scriptures.

EISLEBEN, a town of Prussia, near the Böse, well built and fortified. It has some good public buildings, and some manufactures and trade. Population, about 10,000. Lat. 51. 30. N. Long. 11. 29. E. Here was born, and here too died Luther.

ETHERE, pron. [æther, Sax.] one or other of two persons indifferently; both, or each, —adv. and in distribution, to distinguish between two or more things.

EJULATION, s. [ejulatio, Lat.] an outcry of affecting or penetrating grief.

EKE, ad. [ecce, Sax.] likewise; also; besides. Obsolete, unless in poetry.

To EKE, v. a. [ecce, Sax.] to make bigger by the addition of another piece; to supply any deficiency, sometimes including the idea of bungling, or botching; used with the particle out.

To ELABORATE, v. a. [elaboro, Lat.] to produce with difficulty and labour; to exalt or improve the nature of a thing by successive changes or improvements.

ELABORATE, a. finished with great labour; performed with patience and diligence.

ELABORATELY, ad. in such a manner as to bespeak elegance, owing to pains and diligence.

ELABORATION, s. the improving or exalting the nature of a thing by successive changes and alterations; the producing with great care and industry.

To ELANCE, v. a. [elancer, Fr.] to dart; to throw out.

To ELAPSE, v. n. [e and labor, Lat.] to pass without notice or impression, applied to time.

ELASTIC, ELASTICAL, a. [elao, Gr.] having the property of returning to its own form or shape, after having lost it by some external force; springy.

ELASTICITY, s. a property in bodies, by which they return forcibly, and of their own accord, to the same dimensions or form they were of before compression, or before their having lost it by that force.

ELATE, a. [elatus, Lat.] flushed, puffed up, or haughty, on account of success.

To ELATE, v. a. to puff up, or make one proud with praise, prosperity, or success; to exalt or heighten.

ELATERIUM, s. [Lat.] in Pharmacy, imports any purging medicine, but particularly applicable to those which operate by violence.

ELATION, s. haughtiness, or pride, occasioned by success.

ELBA, a small island of the Mediterranean Sea, off the coast of Tuscany, about 20 miles long and 10 broad, having mountains in the interior of above 3000 feet high, and a fertile region between them and the shore. It has abundance of iron, and other sources of mineral wealth. And it produces corn, wine, oil, fruits, cattle, &c. &c., and has excellent fisheries. Its population is about 15,000. Porto Ferrayo is its capital. Besides its famed iron ore, it has had in later times a place in history, as the spot to which the sovereigns of Europe hoped, for the sake of their own crowns and the safety of the old course of things, in 1814, to confine the spirit of Napoleon Buonaparte. It had been happier for him had they prospered in their design.

ELBE, a large river of Germany, which rises in Silesia, runs through Bohemia, Saxony, and Brandenburg, passing by Pirna, Dresden, Magdeburg, &c., divides Lauenburg from Mecklenburg, and Bremen from Holstein, then passes on to Hamburg and Gluckstadt, and falls into the German Ocean, after a course of about 700 miles, by Cuxhaven. Nearly 500 miles of its course are open for boats and vessels of some draught, and at its mouth it is quite an estuary.

ELBERFELD, a town of Prussia, standing on the Weipper, a tributary of the Rhine. It is celebrated as a place of trade, and has some first-rate manufactures. Its public institutions, which are numerous, are carried on in the same spirit. It has a neat appearance, and boasts some good-looking edifices. Its population is about 40,000. Lat. 51. 10. N. Long. 7. 10. E.

ELBING, or ELBLANG, a sea-port town of Prussia. It is a place of considerable trade, and is situated on a river of the same name, near the Frische Haffe. Its manufactures are of some importance. It is adorned with some useful institutions and noble buildings. Population, about 20,000. Lat. 54. 9. N. Long. 19. 35. E.

ELBOW, (elbow) s. [elboga, Sax.] the joint or bending of the arm next below the shoulder. Figuratively, any bending or angle.

To ELBOW, (elbow) v. a. to push with the elbow. Figuratively, to struggle for room; to encroach upon.—v. n. to jut out in angles.

ELBOWCHAIR, s. a chair with arms to support the elbows.

ELBOWROOM, (elbow-room) s. room to stretch out the elbows on each side. Figuratively, freedom from restraint or confinement.

ELD, (eld) s. [æld, Sax.] old age; decrepitude.

ELDER, a. [the comparative of eld] surpassing another in years.—s. one who is born before, or one who survives another.

ELDER, s. in Botany, the name of a tree, or rather arborescent shrub, with fragile wood, producing flat clusters of flowers, which are used in making cosmetics, and berries which produce the best of home-made or British wines.

ELDERLY, a. bearing the marks of old age; advanced in years.

ELDERS, s. (plural,) persons whose age gives them a claim to honour and respect; those who are born before others; ancestors. Among the Jews, the rulers of the people; answering to the word senator among the Romans. In the New Testament, it is a designation of those persons who were intrusted with the oversight, or pastoral and ministerial care, of a church. See PRESBYTER, &c.

ELDERSHIP, s. a claim founded on being born before another; seniority.

ELDEST, a. [the superlative of eld] exceeding others in years: born before others.

ELDORADO, s. [Span.] the name given by early European geographers and adventurers to a country paved with gold, which they hoped to discover some where in the interior of the New World, when that was first revealed to them by Columbus and others.

ELIATICS, a sect of Greek philosophers, which sprung up in the Greek city of Elea, in Italy, and of which Xenophanes was the founder, Parmenides and Zeno of Elea being his two most distinguished followers. Their speculations were chiefly directed to the origin of all things; human affairs were regarded only as affected by consequences from their first principles. They dared to affirm some of the most lofty spiritual truths that man's heart knows; but having no better method than a very lame and imperfect logic, they drove themselves almost as wrecks on the barren rocks of scepticism. The oneness of the Godhead was their prime assertion. That truth was for all men, and was the sublime end whereto philosophy should lead men, was another. But, to solve the great problem of God's universe, and of man, greater than the universe, they skilled not. They put these questions however into the very shape in which we find them now proposed by the greatest spirits of these times. From Parmenides, Plato himself borrowed much, and to good purpose.

ELECAMPA'NE, s. in Botany, a plant belonging to the class of the star-worts. It is used in pharmacy, and especially commended by the old herbalists, for very many superlative qualities.

To ELECT, v. a. [e and lego, Lat.] to choose a person for the discharge of some post or office; to take in preference of others.

ELECT, a. chosen; taken by preference from other things; proposed as objects of choice; chosen to supply an office or place, but not yet in possession. In some theological schemes, the objects of Divine favour, exercised in choosing them to eternal life.

ELECTION, s. the act of choosing a person from other competitors, to discharge any office or employ; choice. Figuratively, the power of choosing; the privilege of electing a person to discharge an employ; the ceremony of a public choosing of a representative for parliament, or of a person to discharge an employ. In Theology, a doctrine based on certain logical deductions from the admitted fact of the power of God, and on some phrases and passages of the New Testament, to the effect that certain human beings have been eternally, and immutably, and irrespectively of all circumstances, chosen by God to the redemption of Jesus Christ. This is held rigidly with all consequences by true Calvinists, utterly rejected by Rationalists, misinterpreted by Arminians, and paltered with by a large class calling themselves Modern Calvinists. Rid of all deductions, it is one aspect of a great truth, which is revealed in conscience and in Scripture, that men may find and keep the very way of life, and not for them to argue about, and turn into a mere dogma, or use as a weapon of ecclesiastical warfare.

ELECTIVE, a. exerting the power of choice; regularly bestowed, or conferred by free choice, or votes. Elective affinities, in Chemistry, a technicality based on a theory, now exploded, but which presumed that there were in cases of decomposition and recombination a stronger attraction observed towards one substance than another.

ELECTIVELY, ad. by choice; with preference of one to another.

ELECTOR, s. one who has a vote in the choice of an officer; a prince who had a vote in the choice of the emperor of Germany.

ELECTORAL, a. having the title, dignity, and privilege of an elector.

ELECTORATE, s. the territory, dominion, or government of an elector.

ELECTRIC, s. a substance that is capable of producing electrical phenomena by friction, as glass, sealing-wax, brown paper, &c.—a. the same as electrical. See TELEGRAPH.

ELECTRICAL, a. belonging to electricity. Electrical machine, an instrument made for the purpose of accumulating electricity, in order to perform experiments exhibiting its nature and laws. There are two kinds of machines; in each of them by rapid friction on a glass surface with a rubber connected with the earth the electricity is accumulated, and by means of a series of pointed wires placed nearly in contact with the glass, it is transferred to a globe or cylinder with rounded ends, mounted on a glass pillar so as to be, electrically, out of connexion with the earth; where it can be employed in charging jars, and any other way. One kind is called a cylinder machine, because the glass surface used is a cylinder of glass, which is turned on its axis by means of a winch; the other is called the plate machine, because in it a circular plate of glass, revolving round its centre, by means of a winch as before, is used. Electrical jar, is a vessel of glass coated for about two-thirds of the way up the sides with tinfoil or steel filings, within which electricity may be accumulated so much in excess, that the release of it by connecting the inner coated surface with the outer is accompanied by phenomena and effects resembling, on a small scale, those of the thunder-storm. A battery is a collection of such jars, so arranged that the effects shall be increased in intensity in proportion to the number of them.

ELECTRICITY, s. [electron, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the most subtle and potent agent in the universe; represented by earlier writers as two distinct kinds of fluid, named according as they were accumulated by the friction of glass, or of wax and similar substances, vitreous and resinous electricity, which were mutually repellent, &c.; afterwards, as a fluid existing every where in a normal state, but which could be accumulated in one place, then said to be positively electrified, and lessened in another, then said to be negatively electrified, and substances in the same condition of positive or negative electricity repelled each other, whilst substances would mutually attract each other if one was negative and the other positive; this second hypothesis was best able to explain the wide range of varied but common phenomena. In the progress of experiment, however, the identity of electricity with the so-called galvanic fluid, and afterwards with the magnetic influence, was proved beyond a doubt, all the phenomena of each being exhibited by the others, a wider and more philosophical theory was required, one which would bring it under the grasp of mathematics; and it is now stated to be a force ever tending to equilibrium, and recent experiments and calculations have almost identified this force with that which, called gravitation, is the bond whereby this universe is kept together. Since the discovery of the identity of these three wondrous agents, magnetism, galvanism, and electricity, most experiments are conducted by those machines or batteries which will be described under GALVANISM, as being more portable and more powerful. The commonest phenomena of electricity are those of attraction and repulsion, and the discharge in the form of a spark, or a brush of flame, varying as it takes place from a rounded surface, or from a point. These may be varied in many, and some very beautiful, ways. By means of the jars, combustibles are fired, metals melted or deflagrated, a smart shock given to the nervous system, and small animals blinded and even killed. Other phenomena will be described under GALVANISM. Thunder-storms, the aurora borealis, the balls of fire seen on the mast-heads of vessels, and many other natural phenomena, have been explained by electrical experiments. Electricity is also the name given to that branch of natural philosophy which investigates the nature and laws of this force.

To ELECTRIFY, v. a. to communicate an excess of electricity to a body. Figuratively, to startle by some confounding piece of intelligence.

ELECTRO-CHEMISTRY, s. that branch of electrical science which treats of the chemical effects of electricity.

ELECTRODE, s. [electron and trodos, Gr.] the pole or end of a galvanic circle, being a way through which electrical power is exerted.

ELECTRO-DYNAMICS, s. [electron and dynamai, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, that department of the science of electricity which investigates the laws of electricity as displayed in magnetic currents and other similar phenomena.

ELECTROLYTE, s. [electron and lyo, Gr.] in Electricity, a body decomposable by electric action.

ELECTRO-MAGNETISM, s. that branch of electricity which treats of the phenomena common to it and to magnetism.

ELECTRO-METALLURGY, s. [electron, metallon, and ergon, Gr.] in Electricity, the science and practice of decomposing and of recombining metals by electric action. One of the most useful applications of modern electrical science, by which metallic moulds are made, copies of seals, medals, engravings, &c., plating in silver and gold effected, &c. &c.

ELECTROMETER, s. [electron and metreo, Gr.] in Electricity, an instrument to measure the amount of electric force accumulated on any surface or body. There are various forms, the simplest being a pith ball at the end of a light slip of wood, placed so as to move on the other end in a semicircle, which shows the amount by the number of degrees it moves over. Coulomb's torsion electrometer is the most beautiful and exact, but is too delicate for common use. Others are made so as to show the amount of electricity accumulated in a jar or battery, and to discharge them when it arrives at a fixed quantity.

ELECTRO-MOTIVE, a. set in motion by electric action. Such are certain clocks which have been made lately, and which as the rate of electric motion is such that it would travel round our globe in one-tenth of a second, can all be kept, however distant, if connected by wires as in the electric telegraph, so nearly alike that the difference would be inappreciable. Electro-motive engines for railways have been proposed.

ELECTRO-PLATING, s. See ELECTRO-METALLURGY.

ELECTROPHORUS, s. [electron and phero, Gr.] in Electricity, an instrument consisting of a flat cake of resin, and a metallic disc with a glass handle, by means of which free electricity is produced in unlimited quantity, by the agency of a small charge communicated to it by friction, or from a machine.

ELECTROSCOPE, s. [electron and skopeo, Gr.] in Electricity, an instrument whereby the excess or defect of electricity on any surface is signified to the experimenter.

ELECTRO-STATICS, s. [electron and histemi, Gr.] that department of electrical science which investigates the laws of electrical equilibrium.

ELECTRO-TINT, s. a process by which from a design constructed on a metallic plate, with pigments of various qualities and textures, a plate is cast by the electro-metallurgical plan, whence impressions can be taken as from a wood-cut or copper-plate.

ELECTRO-TYPE, s. [electron and typos, Gr.] See ELECTRO-METALLURGY.

ELECTUARY, s. [electuarius, Lat.] a medical composition made to the consistence of a conserve.

ELEEMOSYNARY, a. [eleemosine, Gr.] living upon alms; given in charity.

ELEGANCE, ELEGANCY, s. [elegantiā, Lat.] beauty rather soothing than striking; beauty without grandeur; the beauty of propriety, not of greatness.

ELEGANT, a. pleasing, or causing pleasure by meaner beauties; neat; nice. SYNON. Gentle implies something aspiring to be above the common run; elegant means actually so. By a house gently furnished, is understood one containing furniture which seems to be fitted for one belonging to a wealthier and more tasteful person than the occupier; by elegantly furnished, is meant one furnished with good taste.

ELEGANTLY, ad. in such a manner as to please by the taste exhibited.

ELEGIAC, a. [elegia, Gr.] used in elegies; mournful; sorrowful.

ELEGY, s. a poem written on some mournful subject; a poem on any subject written in a simple plaintive style, without any points or turns; a funeral song. It was not such in classic times.

ELEMENT, s. [elementum, Lat.] the first or constituent principle to which any thing is resolved, and which will not admit of any further resolution. Anciently, fire, air, earth, and water were called elements. Figuratively, the letters of any language; the lowest or first rudiments or grounds of any art or science. In Ecclesiastical matters, the bread and wine used in the eucharist.

TO ELEMENT, v. a. to compound of elements.

ELEMENTAL, a. composed of, or produced by, some of the elements; arising from some first principle.

ELEMENTARITY, s. the simplicity of nature, or absence of composition; the state of being uncompounded.

ELEMENTARY, a. uncompounded; simple; without mixture; having only one principle or element for its essence.

ELEMI, s. a drug, improperly called gum Elemi, being a resin. The genuine Elemi is brought from Ethiopia. The American Elemi, among the only kind known, proceeds from a tall tree.

ELENCH, s. [elenchus, Lat.] an argument in opposition to another; a sophism.

ELEPHANT, s. [elephas, Lat.] in Natural History, the name of a genus of quadrupeds, of which two species alone are now living, the Asiatic and the African. Their peculiar form is well known, as is their astonishing sagacity and intelligence. The relic of some fossil species have been found, and one in Siberia, in an ice-field, whose flesh and hairy and woolly coverings were preserved.

ELEPHANTA, or GALLI POURI, a small island on the W. coast of Hindustan, about five miles from Bombay, which contains one of the most astonishing antiquities in the world. The figure of an elephant, of the natural size, cut coarsely in black stone, appears in an open plain, near the landing-place, from which an easy slope leads to a stupendous subterranean temple, hewn out of the solid rock, 80 or 90 feet long, and 40 broad. The roof, which is cut flat, is supported by regular rows of pillars about 10 feet high, with capitals resembling round cushions, and at the farther end of it are three gigantic figures, mutilated by the absurd zeal of the Portuguese, when this island was in their possession. The style of this temple-cavern very much resembles that of the oldest Egyptian temples.

ELEPHANTIASIS, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a species of leprosy, so called from covering the skin with incrustations, like those on the hide of an elephant.

ELEPHANTINE, a. [elephantinus, Lat.] appertaining or belonging to an elephant; to a ranking of the qualities of an elephant; likewise a title given to certain books among the Romans, which contained an account of the actions of emperors, and the laws made by the senate; supposed to be so called either from their vast size, or their being composed of ivory.

TO ELEVATE, v. a. [elevo, Lat.] to raise aloft, on high, or at a distance from the ground; to exalt or dignify; to raise the mind with great and sublime ideas; to exalt.

ELEVATED, part. or a. raised or situated on high.

ELEVATION, s. the act of raising on high. Exaltation, appertaining to dignity or preferment. In Astronomy and Geography, the height of any object above the horizon. In Architecture, a draught of the principal side or face of a building, called its upright. In Perspective, a draught or representation of the whole body of a building. In Gunnery, the angle which the chase of a piece of ordnance, or the axis of its hollow cylinder, makes with the plane of the horizon.

ELEVATOR, s. [Lat.] a raiser or lifter up.

ELEVE, s. a term purely French, but naturalized in our language, and signifies a disciple or scholar bred up under any one.

ELEVEN, a. [endelefen, Sax.] one more than ten; twice five and one added.

ELEVENTH, a. [endelefta, Sax.] an ordinal, expressing the next in order beyond the tenth.

ELEUSIS, a town of Attica, in Ancient Greece, with a harbour on the Gulf of Salamis. It was celebrated for mysteries, or a sacred society, formed here, and holding festivals in honour of Demeter or Ceres. The initiation into this society was conducted at the time of the annual festival, with great pomp and solemnity. The purport of the whole has been variously stated by different writers; the most feasible theory being that it was a distinct declaration of some of the simpler principles of natural religion; the pomp and show being used to mislead idle curiosity, and to attract such as found in mere ceremonial Polytheism, or in vague philosophy, no contentment for their souls. The ecclesiastics of the (so-called) Catholic Church, borrowed largely from the Eleusinian mysteries in their improvements on apostolic Christianity.

ELF, s. plural elves; [Brit.] a wandering spirit, frequenting solitary places; a fairy, an evil spirit or devil.

ELFIN, a. relating to fairies; belonging to elves. "That elfin knight," Spem.

ELFLOCK, s. knots of hair twisted by elves.

ELGIN, a shire of Scotland, known by the name of Moray, or Murray, also, lying on Murray Firth, and bounded by the shires of Banff, Nairn, and Inverness, which last runs up so far into Elgin as to divide it into two portions. It is altogether about 30 miles in length and 10 in breadth; but at the sea it is considerably broader. The inland part is mountainous, some points being about 4000 feet in height. The Spey is its largest river, and forms its E. boundary; it has also the Findhorn and the Lossie. There are some lakes, but not of any great extent. Building-stone abounds, and some kinds of limestone. This county is well wooded, and has some wide heaths or moors, some of which supply plenty of peat for fuel. Nearer the sea, where the surface is more level, some attention has been paid to agriculture. Its fisheries of salmon, &c. in the rivers, and its sea-fisheries, are valuable. It grazes some few sheep and cattle. In addition to these productions raw spirits are a staple article of trade. Population, 35,012. It joins Nairn in sending a representative to parliament. Elgin, its county town, stands on the Lossie, 5 miles from its mouth. It has many ruins of its former grandeur, and it has also some handsome modern buildings. During the last 50 years it has wonderfully increased in importance. It is 120 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 6083. It is associated with some neighbouring towns in returning one representative to parliament.

ELGIN SALOON, in the British Museum, is a large and lofty apartment, in which is arranged a collection of Greek sculptures, almost all of which were brought from Athens. The greater part of the Panathenaeic frieze, that ran round the Parthenon in the Acropolis, some of the metopes, some grand statues from the pediment, and many other marbles from other sources, such as the stone containing the Boustrophedon inscription from Sigeum, and the monumental inscription to the Athenians who fell at Potidea, are gathered together here, forming a very valuable study for those interested in such relics, or in the beautiful city whence they were taken. The Theseus, and the head of one of the Horses of Night, are magnificent works, worthy of Phidias, to whom they are attributed.

ELHAM, Kent. It is situated on the lesser Stour, nearly between Wye and Hythe. It is 67 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1291.

TO ELICIT, v. a. [elicio, Lat.] to strike, find out, or discover by dint of labour and art.

ELICIT, a. brought from a state of bare possibility to that of real existence; brought into act; internally acted; exerted by the will.

TO ELIDE, v. a. [elido, Lat.] to cut in pieces.

ELIGIBILITY, s. worthiness of being chosen.

ELIGIBLE, a. [eligo, Lat.] fit to be chosen; worthy of choice; preferable; possessing all those qualities and excellences, which are sufficient to set a thing above others, and recommend it.

ELIGIBLENESS, s. worthiness to be chosen; preferableness.

ELIMINATION, s. [elimino, Lat.] banishment; rejection.

ELIOT, JOHN, best known as the apostle to the Indians, was one of the noble band who sought freedom from restrictions on conscience in the wilds of New England. After many years' labours at Roxbury, he undertook to teach the Indians, and successfully contended with the difficulties of the language, and the greater difficulties he met with in the deeply-rooted habits of savage life. He was a noble man, and has left us an example both of personal character and of devoted work such as it were well to give heed to. He died in 1690, aged 86 years.

ELIOT, SIR JOHN, one of the patriot leaders in the early parliamentary conflict of Charles I. He was appointed one to conduct the impeachment of the Duke of Buckingham; attacked Laud, and opposed the proceedings of the king and his infatuated advisers with all earnestness. At length Charles imprisoned him, and had him heavily mulcted on his trial. He could not pay; and after lingering three years in confinement, experceiving hard measure from the minions of the arbitrary monarch, he died in 1632, aged 48 years.

ELLIOT, GENERAL GEORGE, afterwards Lord Heathfield, the British commander who defended Gibraltar against the fleets of Spain and France, during the pre-revolutionary war in Europe. He had distinguished himself in other services before that time. He died in 1790, aged 72 years.

ELIQUATION, s. in Metallurgy, an operation whereby one substance is separated from another by fusion. It consists in giving the mass a degree of heat that will make the more fusible matter flow, and not the other.

ELIS, a state of ancient Greece, in the Peloponnesus, lying on the Ionian Sea, and bounded by Achaia, Arcadia, and Messenia. Elis, its capital, was the place where the Olympic games were held; it stood beside the Peneus, and its outlines can be traced still. The famous chryselephantine statue of Olympian Jove, by Phidias, was here. See GAMES, OLYMPIC.

ELISION, s. [elido, Lat.] in Grammar, the cutting off a vowel or syllable in a word, as in "th' attempt," where e is cut off, before coming before a vowel. This is called synalepha, frequently practised in English poetry, and always observed in Latin verse. A division, cutting, dividing, attenuation, or a separation of parts.

ELIXATION, s. [elizo, Lat.] in Pharmacy, the extracting the virtues of ingredients by boiling or stewing.

ELIXIR, s. [Arab.] a Medicine made by strong infusion, where the ingredients are almost dissolved in the menstruum, and give it a thicker consistence than a tincture; the extract or quintessence of any thing; any cordial or invigorating fluid or substance.

ELIZABETH, queen of England, and successor to Mary I. She was daughter of Henry VIII. and Anna Boleyn, and was brought up in the Protestant religion. Her accession was hailed by the Protestants, and especially by the Puritan section, with most unfeigned joy; and she countenanced them as much from policy, for the security of her throne, as from the preference she felt for their principles. The Church of England was finally established in her reign, and laws against Romanists and Dissidents severely enforced. She furthered the doctrines of the Reformation in the Netherlands, where Philip II. was to be opposed; in France, where no very friendly feeling to her was entertained by the government; and in Scotland, where the queen, the beautiful and unfortunate Mary, was a dangerous rival to her throne and person. Against Mary she at length waged war, took her prisoner, and after a long and wearing captivity, contrived her death. The king of Spain despatched against her his famous Armada, which by storms, and by the courage of the British admirals, was utterly dispersed. She ruled with absolute sway, yet chose wise and grave counsellors. Howbeit, even in her reign, men began to feel here and there the stirrings of a spirit not of submission to mere royalty. Elizabeth never married, though she had many suitors; some from the greatest thrones in Europe. She pleased herself with favourites; such as the Earl of Leicester, whose handsome person made her forget the emptiness of his head and the blackness of his heart; and after his death, the Earl of Essex, whose generosity merited a better end than his own rashness and his false friends brought him to. The persecutions of this reign, being directed against Romanists, and against men who had no influence in the state, have not been fairly recorded; they were as numerous and as bloody as those of the preceding reign. For all that, Elizabeth realized more the idea of a hero, as king, than any other crowned sovereign, before or since; and the popular feeling has handed down a sort of proverbial tradition of those golden days; for her vigorous and prosperous government, by the spread of trade, diffused plenty through the land, in spite of heavy monopolies and most arbitrary rule. Nor was this reign less distinguished for other great men. It was the era of Shakspeare, Spencer, and Sydney; and Francis Bacon was fast rising to his immortality; Raleigh also, and Ascham, and the judicious Hooker, flourished now. Elizabeth died in 1603, aged 70 years; having reigned 45 years.

ELK, s. [elc, Sax.] in Natural History, an animal of the deer kind, with the horns palmated, and without a stem. It is a native of the northern parts of Europe; and is a large and strong animal, being equal in size to a horse, but much less beautiful.

ELL, s. [eln, Sax.] a measure of length, varying in different countries; but those mostly used in England are the English and Flemish ells; the former of which is 3 feet 9 inches, or one yard and a quarter; the latter only 27 inches, or three quarters of a yard; in France, one yard and a half; and in Scotland, 37 two-tenths English inches.

ELLENMERE, Shropshire. It is situated on a large mere, famous for fish, in a small but fertile district of the same name. It is 170 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 7080.

ELLIPTIC, ELLIPTIC, s. [ellipse, Gr.] in Grammar, or Rhetoric, a figure by which something left out in a sentence is to be supplied by the reader or hearer. In Geometry, a regular continued curve line, vulgarly called an oval. It is distinguished by this peculiarity, that the sum of the two lines drawn from any point of its periphery to the two foci is always the same.

ELLIPTIC, ELLIPTICAL, a. having the form of an ellipse; of an oval form.

ELM, s. [elm, Sax.] in Botany, a well-known tree, a native of this country, whose wood is much used for common furniture, and posts and gates, or where it is not exposed to changes from wet to dry, or dry to wet.

ELOCUTION, s. [elocutio, Lat.] the power of expressing one's ideas with fluency of speech; eloquence; the power of expression or diction; the choosing and adapting words and sentences to the things or sentiments to be expressed.

ELOHI, ELOI, or ELOHIM, [Heb.] one of the names of God in Scripture; but sometimes applied to princes, angels, and even false gods, and then used in the plural.

To ELONGATE, v. a. [longus, Lat.] to stretch; to lengthen or draw out, applied to the surface or dimensions of a thing.—v. n. to go farther off from a thing or place.

ELONGATION, s. the act of stretching or lengthening; the state of a thing stretched. In Astronomy, the digression or recess of a planet from the sun, with respect to an eye placed on the earth. Also, distance; departure; removal.

To ELOPE, v. a. [loopen, Belg.] to run away; to break loose; to escape from law or restraint. In Law, to quit or leave a husband.

ELOPEMENT, s. departure, or withdrawing from just restraint or lawful power. In Law, the voluntary departure of a wife from a husband.

ELOQUENCE, s. [eloquor, Lat.] the art of speaking with elegance, so as to move the affections; the power of speaking with fluency; a figured and elegant style or diction, adapted to warm the imagination and move the passions.

ELOQUENT, a. having the power of speaking with elegance, fluency, and in such a manner as to move the passions.

ELPHINSTON, LORD BALMERINO, one of the Jacobite lords executed after the battle of Culloden. He had been engaged in the battle of Sheriff-muir, and lived for a time in France. He afterwards returned to Scotland, and was one of the first who joined the Pretender's standard. He was beheaded in 1746, aged 58 years.

ELSE, pron. [elles, Sax.] other; one besides that which is mentioned.

ELSE, ad. otherwise; excepting the person or place mentioned.

ELSEWHERE, ad. in some other place, in any other place.

ELSLINORE, a sea-port town of Denmark, seated on the Sound, in the island of Zealand. Many foreign merchants, and the consuls of the principal nations which trade to the Baltic, reside here. It has a considerable trade, and is a place of great importance. Vessels passing through the Sound pay a toll to the king of Denmark, which, with those of the two Belts, supply an annual revenue of above £100,000; and, in return, he takes the charge of constructing light-houses, and erecting signals, to mark the shoals and rocks, from the Cattegat to the entrance into the Baltic. Population, under 20,000. Lat. 56. 2. N. Long. 12. 37. E.

ELVAS, a city of Alentejo, Portugal; containing, besides the cathedral, three parish churches, two hospitals, and seven convents, with an academy founded in 1732. Here is a cistern so large, that it will hold water enough to supply the town for six months. It is brought by an aqueduct three miles in length. Elvas is seated near the river Guadiana, 112 miles from Lisbon. Population, about 15,000.

To ELUCIDATE, v. a. [elucido, Lat.] to cast light upon a difficult or intricate subject; to clear; to make clear.

ELUCIDATION, s. the act of rendering difficult subjects plain; an explanation.

ELUCIDATOR, s. a person who explains difficulties; a commentator.

To ELUDE, v. a. [eludo, Lat.] to escape by stratagem; to avoid any mischief or danger by artifice; to mock or disappoint the expectation by any unforeseen escape.

ELUDIBLE, a. possible to escape by artifice; possible to be defeated or disappointed.

ELUSION, s. an artifice which is concealed from the knowledge of another; a fraud.

ELUSIVE, a. using artifice to escape or avoid.

ELUSORY, a. fraudulent.

To ELUTE, v. a. [eluo, Lat.] to wash off.

To ELUTRIATE, v. a. [elutri, Lat.] to strain off.

ELUTRIATION, s. in Chemistry, the operation of pulverizing metallic ores or other substances, and then mixing them with water, so that the heavier parts are capable of suspension may be poured off, and thus separated from the grosser particles. Most of the metallic substances which are reduced to an impalpable powder are prepared by this process.

ELVES, JOHN, one of the miserable beings whose names are preserved to us from the fact of their having been misers. Every species of despicable, degrading meanness this man resorted to, for the sake of saving money. He was rewarded by being elected member for Berkshire; and by leaving behind him half a million of pounds sterling, beside his estates. He died in 1789.

ELY, Cambridgeshire. It has but one good street, well paved, the rest being unpaved, and miserably dirty. The minster is a fine building, and has a stately tower, which can be seen at a great distance. The bishops have all the rights of Counts Palatine, which also they had through the whole Isle of Ely, till the reign of Henry VIII. Ely is completely subordinate to the bishop in its civil government, and is the only city in England unrepresented in parliament. It has become a central railway station, which may be expected to rub off a little of its mediæval rust soon. It is seated on a rising ground, near the river Ouse and other streams, the former of which is navigable to Lynn, and by which it carries on a pretty good trade. It is 66 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 6825.

ELYSIAN, (elysian) a. [elysium, Lat.] pertaining to elysium; pleasant; deliciously soothing; exceedingly delightful.

ELYSIUM, (elysion) s. [Lat.] in the Ancient Mythology, a place in the lower world, furnished with pleasant fields, and supposed to be the receptacle for the happy souls of the departed.

ELZEVIR, the name of a family of printers in various places of Holland, whose typography and care in printing have given them a name in the world. They flourished from 1590 to 1680. Their edition of the Greek Testament, 1624, has been taken as the Textus Receptus, to which all subsequent variations, &c. have been adapted.

To EMACIATE, (emaciate) v. a. [emacio, Lat.] to make a thing waste, or grow lean.—v. n. to grow lean; to waste away.

EMACIATION, s. the act of making lean; the state of a person growing lean, wasted away, or in a consumption.

EMACULATION, s. [emaculo, Lat.] the act of freeing any thing from spots or foulness.

EMANANT, a. [e and mano, Lat.] issuing or flowing from something else.

To EMANATE, v. n. to issue or flow from something else.

EMANATION, s. the act of proceeding or flowing from something else; that which flows from any substance like effluvia.

EMANATIVE, a. issuing or flowing from.

To EMANCIPATE, v. a. [e and mancipium, Lat.] to set free from slavery of any sort; to restore to liberty.

EMANCIPATION, s. the act of setting free, deliverance from slavery.

To EMARGINATE, v. a. [margo, Lat.] to take away the margin or edge of a thing.

To EMASculate, v. a. [e and mas, Lat.] to render soft, effeminate, or womanish.

EMASCULATION, s. effeminacy; a soft and luxurious habit.

To EMBALEM, v. a. [embaurner, Fr.] to impregate a dead body with gums and spices to prevent its putrefying.

EMBALMER, s. one who preserves the bodies of the dead in such a manner as to prevent their putrefying.

EMBALMING, s. the preparing the bodies of the dead so as to prevent their putrefaction.

EMBANKMENT, s. a continuous mound so constructed, that it shall not lose its form by the weight of its own materials, nor there suffer displacement, if a road run along the top of it, or if it be designed to keep the waters of a stream to a particular course. The greater part of Holland depends for its existence on the strength of its embankments; and many parts of this country near the coast, or near our great rivers, the same.

To EMBAR, v. a. to shut, enclose, stop, or block up.

EMBARGO, s. [Span.] a prohibition or restraint laid upon vessels by a sovereign, whereby they are prevented from going out of, or from entering into, a port, for a certain time.

To EMBARRK, v. a. [embarquer, Fr.] to put on board or into a ship. Figuratively, to engage another in an affair.—v. n. to go on ship-board. Figuratively, to engage as a party in an affair.

EMBARKATION, s. the act of putting or going on board a ship.

To EMBARRESS, v. a. [embarrasser, Fr.] to perplex or confound a person with an affair of difficulty and trouble.

EMBARRESSMENT, s. perplexity or confusion, arising from some difficult affair, subject, or undertaking.

To EMBASE, v. a. to deprave, or lessen the worth or quality of a thing; to degrade or vilify.

EMBASSAGE, EMBASSY, s. a mission of a person from one prince to another, in order to treat of affairs relating to their respective states. Figuratively, any solemn message; an errand or message, in an ironical sense.

To EMBATTLE, v. a. to range in battle-array.

To EMBA'Y, v. a. [from bay,] to enclose in a bay or port; to bathe; to wet.

EMBDEN, a large, strong, commercial town of Hanover, with a good harbour. It is divided into three parts, the Old and New Town, and the two suburbs. Embden is seated near the mouth of the river Embs, and carries on an astonishing trade by means of its fisheries, and through its easy communication with the interior of the country. Its cheese is celebrated. It has too some considerable manufactures. Population, about 15,000. Lat. 53. 22. N. Long. 7. 11. E.

To EMBELLISH, v. a. [embellir, Fr.] to adorn; to beautify; to grace or set out with ornaments.

EMBELLISHMENT, s. ornament; any thing which gives a grace to the person or mind.

EMBERS, (ember) s. plural; not used in the singular; [emberia, Sax.] wood or coals half burnt, and not extinguished; ashes which retain fire, though not visible on their surface.

EMBER-WEEK, s. [probably from ymber, Sax.] the time set apart by the church for public ordinations, at the four seasons of the year, wherein some ember-days falls, viz. the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, after the first Sunday in Lent; the feast of Pentecost; September 14th, and December 13th. The ember-days were seasons of periodical fasting and prayer for the kindly fruits of the earth, that in due time men might enjoy them.

To EMBEZZLE, v. a. [perhaps derived from a corrupt pronunciation of embeal, Fr.] to turn to one's own use what belongs to, and is intrusted by, another. Figuratively, to waste; to consume in riot; to squander.

EMBEZZLEMENT, s. the act of making use of what belongs to, and is intrusted by, another. Figuratively, the thing dishonestly made use of.

To EMBLAZE, v. n. [blasoner, Fr.] to adorn with glittering ornaments. In Heraldry, to blazon or paint a coat of armour.

To EMBLAZON, v. a. [blasoner, Fr.] to adorn with bearings in heraldry. Figuratively, to deck in gaudy colours; to display with pomp and ostentation.

EMBLAZONRY, s. pictures upon shields.

EMBLEM, a. [emblem, Gr.] inlay; any thing inserted in another; an hieroglyphical device or picture, representing some history or moral instruction.

EMBLEMATIC, EMBLEMATICAL, a. containing an emblem, or conveying some truth under an hieroglyphical or pictorial description.

EMBLEMATICALLY, ad. after the form of an emblem, riddle, or hieroglyphic; in a figurative or allegorical manner.

EMBLEMATIST, s. a writer or maker of emblems.

EMBOLISM, s. [embolismos, Gr.] in Chronology, the addition of a certain number of days to make the lunar year, which is but 354 days, equal to the solar, which is 365.

EMBOLOS, (emballo, Gr.) the movable part of a pump or syringe, named likewise the piston, and by the vulgar the sucker.

To EMBOSSE, v. a. [bosse, Fr.] to form into knobs, protuberances, or unevennesses of surface. Figuratively, to adorn with embroidery or other raised work; to enclose; to cover. In Carving, to form in relieve. In Hunting, to enclose in a thicket, from emboscare, Ital.

EMBOSSEMENT, s. any thing jutting or standing out. In Carving, relieve, or figures which stand out beyond the ground, and swell to the sight.

To EMBOTTLE, v. a. to enclose in a bottle; to bottle.

To EMBOWEL, (the oe is pronounced as in now), v. a. to take out the bowels or entrails of any creature.

To EMBRA'CE, v. a. [embrasser, Fr.] to hold or clasp fondly in the arms. Figuratively, to seize on eagerly; to make use of, and accept willingly. To admit; to receive, or assent to, as truth, applied to the mind.

EMBRA'CE, s. a fond clasp or hug.

EMBRA'CEMENT, s. the act of encircling and fondly pressing a person with one's arms. Figuratively, the state of a thing contained or encompassed by another.

EMBRA'CE, s. the person who clasps another fondly within his arms.

EMBRA'SURE, (embrasure) s. [Fr.] in Fortification, the hole or aperture through which cannon are pointed, either in casemates, batteries, or in the parapets of walls. In Architecture, the enlargement made of the aperture of a door or window, on the inside of the wall; its use being to give the greater play for the opening of the door or casement, to admit the more light.

To EMBROGATE, v. a. [embreche, Gr.] to rub any diseased part with medical liquors.

EMBROGATION, s. in Medicine, the act of rubbing any diseased part with medical liquor; the lotion with which any diseased part is rubbed.

To EMBROIDER, v. a. [broder, Fr.] to border with ornaments; to adorn silk, velvet, or other stuff with ornaments wrought with a needle, either in gold, silver, silk, or thread of the same colour.

EMBROIDERER, s. one who works a thing with flowers, or other ornaments of raised needle-work.

EMBROIDERY, s. the enriching with figures wrought with the needle; figures raised or wrought on a ground with a needle. Figuratively, the different figures which adorn the fields in summer.

To EMBROIL, v. a. [brouiller, Fr.] to disturb; to set persons at variance; to excite quarrels; to involve in confusion and trouble by civil discord and commotion.

EMBRYO, EMBRYON, s. [en and bruo, Gr.] the first rudiments of an animal which is not come to its state of perfection. In Botany, the grain or seed of a plant; or the germ or first sprout appearing out of the seed. Figuratively, the state of a thing not finished or come to maturity.

EMENDABLE, a. [emendo, Lat.] capable of being made better by change or alteration.

EMENDATION, s. the act of making a thing better by alteration, change, or correction; an alteration made by the reading of an author by a critic.

EMENDATOR, s. one who improves or renders a thing better by alteration or correction; a corrector.

EMERALD, s. [emeraude, Fr.] in Mineralogy, a precious stone, usually of a very bright and naturally polished surface, always of a pure and beautiful green, without admixture of any other colour, and of all the various shades, from the deepest to the palest. It is composed of silicon, the base of flint; aluminium, the base of clay; and glucinium, a substance found only in this mineral, and in the beryl, and in enclase.

To EMERGE, v. n. [emergo, Lat.] to rise out of any thing with which it is covered or depressed; to issue or proceed; to rise from a state of obscurity, distress, or ignorance.

EMERGENCE, EMERGENCY, s. the act of rising from any thing which covers; the act of rising from a state of obscurity and distress; any pressing necessity; a sudden occasion; an unexpected incident.

EMERGENT, part. rising from that which covers, conceals, obscures, or depresses. Proceeding or issuing from, used with from. Sudden, or pressing, joined to occasion.

EMERODS, EMERODS, s. [corrupted from hemorrhoids,] the piles.

EMERSION, s. [emersio, Lat.] in Physics, the rising of any solid above the surface of a fluid, into which it is violently thrust. In Astronomy, the reappearance of a star or planet from behind the moon, after having been hid for some time. Applied also to the moon or any satellite, when coming out of the shadow of its primary.

EMERSON, WILLIAM, an eminent English mathematician of the last century. He resided in a village of Durham, and at first kept a school there. He was one of the numerous class of men found in our country places, who have been led by some circumstance to the cultivation of the sciences, for whom that pursuit is every thing. Lacking the polish acquired by regular learned culture, and not requiring in the circles they are known in any thing beyond their undoubted skill and superiority to others to commend them, and so, quaint and careless in dress and manners, they rarely are known beyond their own narrow district; and yet many have, by combined scientific acquirement and inventive skill, powers that might fit them to advance the empire of truest science, beyond what learned societies may wot of. Emerson was known, by his valuable works on various branches and applications of mathematical science, beyond his native village, and finds a place here specially because of the many like him now living unknown. He died in 1782, aged 81 years.

EMERY, s. [emerys, Lat. emert, Fr.] in Mineralogy, a species of corundum, or adamantina spar, allied in its nature to the garnet and other precious stones, found in a granulated state, in various degrees of fineness. It occurs in large quantities in the island of Jersey. It is employed by lapidaries, and by glass-cutters, to cut glass, and to stopper bottles for chemical and other purposes. It is also used for cleaning and polishing steel, and for giving an edge to tools. See CORUNDUM, &c.

EMETIC, s. [emeco, Gr.] a remedy which excites vomiting.

EMETIC, EMETICAL, a. having the quality of provoking vomits.

EMICATION, s. [emico, Lat.] sparkling; flying off in small particles.

EMIGRANT, s. [e and migro, Lat.] a person who removes from his own place or country into another.

To EMIGRATE, v. n. to remove from one place to another.

EMIGRATION, s. the act of removing from one place or country into another.

EMILI'ANUS, MARCUS JULIUS, one of the later Roman emperors. He was by birth a Moor, and had entered the army as a common soldier, but being a man of great personal courage, rose rapidly in those troubled times. He was proclaimed after the murder of Gallus, and after a reign of four months was himself murdered, in 253.

EMINENCE, EMINENCY, s. [eminco, Lat.] loftiness; height from the ground upwards; the summit, or highest part of a thing. Figuratively, exaltation; preferment; fame; or the state of being exposed to public view and notice; a supreme and superior degree.

EMINENT, a. high, lofty, applied to situation. Figuratively, exalted, preferred, or conspicuous on account of place, rank, or merit.

EMINENTLY, ad. conspicuously; in such a manner as to attract notice; in a high degree.

EMIR, AMEER, s. [Arab.] a title of dignity or quality among the Turks, attributed to such as are relations or descendants of their great prophet Mahomet, and to such as sustain certain offices. It is also given to the chiefs of some tribes and nations of Arabic origin.

EMISSARY, s. [e and mitto, Lat.] one sent out on private messages; a spy, or secret agent. In Anatomy, that which emits or sends out; the same as excretory.

EMISSION, s. the act of sending out; vent; the act of throwing or drawing a thing, particularly a fluid, from within outwards; the expulsion or ejection of the seed.

To EMIT, v. a. to drive outwards; to dart; to send forth. In Law, to issue out according to the form prescribed.

EMLY, an Irish sex, held in conjunction with those of Cashel, Waterford, and Lismore. The town is in Tipperary, in Munster, 125 miles from Dublin. Pop. 650.

EMMANUEL COLLEGE, Cambridge, was founded during Elizabeth's reign, by Sir W. Mildmay. It is moderately wealthy as regards endowments and livings, and has turned out a few men of note. The buildings were anciently a monastery.

EMME'NAGOGUES, (eménagogs) s. [emmeno and ago, Gr.] medicines to promote the menses.

EMMET, s. [emette, Sax.] See ANT.

EMMETT, the name of two brothers, distinguished amongst the men of '98 in Ireland. Thomas, the elder, escaped to America, and died in 1827. Robert, the other, was gifted with powers which were worthy of a better conducted cause, and a nobler termination. Being secretary to the United Irishmen, he was of course seized when the treachery practised against them was ripe; and he was executed in 1803, being considerably under 30 years of age.

EMMETTSBURG, a town of Maryland, United States, near to which is a Roman Catholic college, called Mount St. Mary's. It has a good library. It is 65 miles from Washington. Population, about 800.

EMOLLIENT, part. or a. [emolliens, Lat.] softening, or rendering pliable.

EMOLLIENTS, s. in Medicine, such medicines as are used to allay irritation, whether internally, as sedatives, or externally, as soothing cataplasms.

EMOLUMENT, s. [emolumentum, Lat.] profit arising from an office or employ; gain, or advantage.

EMOTION, s. [emotio, Fr.] a violent struggle or disturbance in the mind; a strong and vehement sensation, or passion, excited either by a pleasing or a painful object.

TO EMPALE, v. a. [empaler, Fr.] to fence with pales; to fortify, enclose, shut in; to put to death by spitting on a stake fixed upright.

EMPALEMENT, s. in Botany, the cup or outmost part of a flower, which encompasses the petals, or the foliation of the attire.

EMPAÑNEL, s. [panne, Fr.] the writing or entering the names of a jury in a parchment by a sheriff.

TO EMPAÑNEL, v. a. to summon a person to serve on a jury.

EMPARLANCE, s. [parler, Fr.] in Law, motion or desire for a day of respite, to consider of the result of a cause; the conference of a jury in a cause committed to them.

EMPASS, s. [empasso, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a powder sprinkled on a body, to correct some ill smell.

TO EMPASSION, v. a. to move with a strong affection or passion; to excite the passions vehemently.

EMPEDOCLEAS, an ancient Greek philosopher, respecting whose opinions, modern wise men have been greatly at a loss what place in connexion with the great schools to assign to them. Perhaps they do not need any place, but may stand as this man's veritable thoughts expressed in his own way. He travelled much, and gathered lore from all sources; and was so much famed in his native land, Sicily, that legends of all kinds abound respecting him. He was a haughty man, but he did his best to teach truly and act so too. His opinions were highly spiritual, and amongst other things marking his truthfulness, amongst his verses a distinct lamentation over the apostasy of man from good and from God is found. His name for God the Creator was Love. One must ever regret that he knew not that which would have solved his difficult problems, and given him peace. He lived in 450 a. c.

TO EMPER, v. a. to form into a people or community.

EMPEROR, s. [empereur, Fr.] a title of honour among the ancient Romans, conferred on a general who had been victorious, and now made to signify a sovereign prince, or supreme ruler of an empire. The title adds nothing to the rights of sovereignty; it only gives pre-eminence over all other sovereigns. Charlemagne was the first emperor of Germany, crowned by Pope Leo III. in 800.

EMPERY, s. [imperium, Lat.] the command of an emperor; sovereign command; empire.

EMPHASIS, (emfasis) s. [en and phaino, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a force, stress, or energy in expression, action, or gesture. In Grammar, a remarkable stress of the voice, placed on any word or syllable.

EMPHATIC, EMPHATICAL, (emfatik, emfatikal) a. forcible, strong, striking, or of great energy; striking the sight.

EMPHATICALLY, (emfatikally) ad. strongly, forcibly, full of energy, power, or significance; spoken with a great stress of voice.

EMPHYSEMA, s. [emphusao, Gr.] is a light puffy humour, easily yielding to the pressure of the finger, arising again in the instant you take it off.

EMPHYSEMATOUS, (emfysematous) a. bloated; swelled; puffed up.

EMPIRE, s. [Fr.] the territory or extent of land under the jurisdiction or command of an emperor; imperial power; sovereign authority or command; command over any thing.

EMPIRIC, s. [empirikos, Gr.] one whose skill depends purely on practice and experiment, without any acquaintance with scientific principles; a quack. It is usually bestowed on petty dabblers in medical art, exclusively.

EMPIRIC, EMPIRICAL, a. dealing or versed in experiments; belonging to or resembling a quack. This epithet, which is challenged as the peculiar and honourable distinction of Lord Bacon's inductive philosophy, does not pertain to it strictly; nor can it to any science, or philosophic method.

EMPIRICALLY, ad. after the manner of a quack, or one not scientifically grounded in the knowledge of principles.

EMPIRICISM, s. quackery.

EMPLASTER, s. (this word is now always pronounced and generally written plaster.) [emplastro, Gr.] in Surgery, a medicine of a stiff, glutinous consistence, composed of several ingredients, spread on paper, linen, or leather, and applied externally.

TO EMPLASTER, v. a. to cover with a plaster.

EMPLASTIC, a. [emplastro, Gr.] viscous; glutinous; fit to be applied as a plaster.

TO EMPEAD, (empeled) v. a. in Law, to indict, accuse, or prefer a charge against.

TO EMPLOY, v. a. [employer, Fr.] to set a person about a thing; to keep at work or exercise; to use as an instrument or means, or materials; to commission, or intrust with the management of an affair; to fill up time with study or undertaking.

EMPLOY', s. the object which engages the mind, or is the subject of action; a person's trade; business; a public office.

EMPLOY'ABLE, a. capable of being used; fit to be applied or used.

EMPLOYER, s. a person who sets one about any undertaking; one who uses, or causes a thing to be used.

EMPLOYMENT, s. business; the object of labour or industry; a person's trade, office, or post; an affair intrusted to the management of another.

TO EMPOISON, (empoizon) v. a. [empoisonner, Fr.] to destroy by poison, venom, or any deadly or mortal drug; to taint with poison. Figuratively, to deprave the ideas or principles of a person by bad advice or seditious counsels.

EMPORETIC, a. [emporetikos, Gr.] that is sold at common markets; belonging to goods, commodities, or merchandise.

EMPORIUM, s. [emporion, Gr.] a place of merchandise; a great city or market town which has communication with the sea, and carries on foreign trade.

TO EMPOVERISH, v. a. [pauvre, Fr.] to make poor. Figuratively, to render a soil unfertile or barren.

EMPOVERISHMENT, s. the act of exhausting money; the cause of poverty. The lessening fertility, when applied to ground or vegetables.

TO EMPOWER, v. a. to give a person authority to transact business, or carry on any undertaking.

EMPRESS, s. the wife of an emperor; a female who has the sovereign command over an empire.

EMPRISE, s. [emprise, Fr.] an undertaking which is attended with hazard and danger, and shows boldness.

EMPTIER, (entier) s. one who makes any place or thing void by taking out that which was in it.

EMPTINESS, (entiness) s. without having any thing in it, applied to space or vessels. The state of a thing which has nothing in it. Figuratively, want of judgment or understanding; incapacity to satisfy one's wishes.

EMPTION, (emshon) s. [emptio, Lat.] the act of buying; a purchase.

EMPTY, (enty) a. [entig, Sax.] having nothing in it; not possessing, furnished with, or using; devoid. Void of body, applied to space, place, or any vessel. Figuratively, void of judgment or understanding; void of substance, solidity, or real existence.

TO EMPTY, (enty) v. a. to exhaust, drink up, take, or pour out whatever is contained in a vessel or receptacle.

TO EMPURPLE, v. a. to make of a purple colour.

TO EMPURZZLE, v. a. to perplex and confound the mind with a difficulty which it cannot solve or explain.

EMPYEMA, s. [en and puon, Gr.] in Medicine, a collection of purulent matter in the cavity of the breast, which is discharged therein on the bursting of some abscess or ulcer in the lungs, or membranes that enclose the breast.

EMPHYREAL, a. [empurus, Gr.] formed of ether, or pure and celestial fire; belonging to the highest region of heaven.

EMPHYREAN, s. the highest heaven; the scene of the beatific vision, wherein the pure element of fire or ether is supposed to exist.

EMPHYREUM, EMPHYREUMA, s. [en and pur, Gr.] in Chemistry, used when in boiling or distilling any thing burns to the bottom of the vessel or alembic; a smell or taste of burning. In Medicine, the heat remaining upon the declension of a fever.

EMPHYROSIS, s. conflagration; general fire.

EMS, a river of Europe, rising in Westphalia, near Paderborn, crossing various states, &c., and after a course of about 200 miles in the whole, nearly parallel to the boundary line of Holland, it enters the German Ocean, near Embden, forming a spacious bay.

EMU, s. in Ornithology, the cassowary, a bird of the ostrich kind.

To EMULATE, v. a. [emulor, Lat.] to rival or propose as an object for imitation; to imitate with an endeavour to surpass. Figuratively, to copy; to resemble; to rise to an equality with.

EMULATION, s. [emulatio, Lat.] a noble jealousy between persons, whereby they endeavour to surpass each other in virtue and excellence. SYNON. Emulation aims at equality with others, by raising oneself to their level. Envy aims at the same, by depressing them to one's own grade.

EMULATIVE, a. inclined to contest superiority with another, either from a love of excellence, or a principle of envy.

EMULATOR, s. [Lat.] one who endeavours to surpass another in good qualities; one who envies another's success or reputation; a rival.

EMULGENT, part. or a. [emulgeo, Lat.] milking out.—s. in Anatomy, applied to those arteries which bring the blood to the kidneys, and to those veins which carry what is superfluous to the vena cava.

EMULOUS, a. [emulus, Lat.] rivaling; contending with another for superiority in fame, riches, interest, or virtue.

EMULOUSLY, ad. in the manner of a rival or competitor; with a desire of surpassing another.

EMULSION, s. [emulgeo, Lat.] a soft liquid medicine, of the colour and consistency of milk.

EMUNCTORIES, s. [emungo, Lat.] in Medicine and Anatomy, a part of the body wherein some fluid, which is useless or noxious, is separated or collected in readiness for ejection or expulsion.

EN, an inseparable particle at the beginning of words derived from the French, who borrowed it of the Latin in; hence words are indifferently written with either, as they are supposed to be derived from each of those languages.

To ENABLE, v. a. to make able or give power sufficient for the performance of a thing.

To ENACT, v. a. to make a law; to establish by law.

ENACTOR, s. one who forms decrees; one who founds or establishes laws.

ENALLAGE, s. [enallatto, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein the order of words in a sentence is inverted. In Grammar, a figure whereby one part of speech, or accident of a word, is put for another; as when a pronoun possessive is put for a relative, or one word or tense of a verb for another.

ENAMEL, s. in the Arts, a kind of vitreous metalline colour, by the Latins called encaustum. This composition is made by calcining 10 parts of lead and 3 parts of tin in a furnace, and then fluxing these oxides, with 10 parts of sand and 2 of potash; to it every kind of colour may be given by metallic oxides. Any thing painted with enamel.

To ENAMEL, v. a. to paint or adorn a thing with amel, or enamel.

ENAMELLER, s. one who paints in enamel.

ENAMELLING, s. the act of applying enamel of various colours on metals, &c., either after the method of painting, or by the lamp; called likewise the encaustic art, or encaustic painting.

To ENAMOUR, v. a. [amour, Fr.] to raise the affections or love of a person; to make a person fond.

ENARTHROSIS, s. [en and arthron, Gr.] the insertion of one bone into another to form a joint.

To ENCAVE, v. a. to shut up or confine in a cage.

To ENCAAMP, v. n. to pitch tents, or settle in a place for a time, applied to an array.—v. a. to form a regular camp.

ENCAMPMENT, s. the act of encamping or pitching tents; a camp, or tents pitched in proper order.

To ENCAVE, v. a. to conceal, or hide as in a cave.

ENCAUSTIC, s. [en and kato, Gr.] the same with enamelling, which see.

ENCEINTE, s. [Fr.] an enclosure, or ground enclosed with a fortification.

To ENCHAÎN, v. a. [enchaîner, Fr.] to fasten with a chain. Figuratively, to confine, or keep in bondage or confinement.

To ENCHANT, v. a. [enchanter, Fr.] to subdue or influence by magic or sorcery; to delight irresistibly.

ENCHANTER, s. one who practises magic, or other spells; one who delights or pleases irresistibly.

ENCHANTINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to attract love irresistibly.

ENCHANTMENT, s. magical charms or spells; that which has an irresistible influence, or can impart an overpowering delight.

ENCHANTRESS, s. [enchantresse, Fr.] a woman who exercises magic or spells. Figuratively, a woman whose beauty cannot be resisted.

To ENCHASE, v. a. [enchasser, Fr.] to set jewels in gold, silver, &c. Figuratively, to adorn.

To ENCIRCLE, v. a. to surround, encompass, or enclose in a ring or circle.

ENCIRCLET, s. a circle; a ring. "In whose encirclets if ye gaze," Sidney.

ENCITINGS, s. [enkltino, Gr.] in Greek and Latin Grammar, certain particles or syllables joined to words which, when united, seem to form but one word, and on that account remove or throw back the accent upon the foregoing syllable.

To ENCLOSE, (enclôze) v. a. [enclos, Fr.] to part or surround common ground by a fence; to surround or encompass on all sides.

ENCLOSER, (enclôzer) s. one who encloses or parts off any parcel of common ground by pales or other fences; any thing in which another is enclosed.

ENCLOSURE, (enclôzure) s. the act of encompassing common ground with a fence; the appropriation of things which have been common; the space contained within any fence or limits; ground enclosed.

ENCOMIAST, (enkomiasies, Gr.) one who bestows praise on another; one who speaks in praise of another.

ENCOMIASTIC, ENCOMIASTICAL, a. [enkomiasitikos, Gr.] containing or bestowing praise.

ENCOMIUM, s. [encomion, Gr.] an advantageous representation of the virtues and excellences of another; praise; panegyric.

To ENCOUNTERPASS, v. a. to enclose; to surround on all sides; to shut in.

ENCÔPRE, (enkôpre) ad. [Fr.] again; over again. A word used at public shows to testify the highest approbation, and to desire the person to repeat the part.

ENCOUNTER, s. [encontre, Fr.] in its primary sense, a combat or fight between two persons only. Figuratively, a battle, or attack, wherein enemies rush with violence against each other.

To ENCOUNTER, v. a. to go to meet; to meet face to face; to attack an enemy; to meet with proofs; to oppose, or engage with.

ENCOUNTERER, s. an enemy, or antagonist in war. Figuratively, an adversary, or opponent, with respect to opinions.

To ENCOURAGE, (enkôraje) v. a. [encourager, Fr.] to animate, or reciprocally exhort to a practice; to animate, or support the spirit and courage of a person to undertake and accomplish an affair; to countenance.

ENCOURAGEMENT, (enkôrajement) s. an incitement to any action or practice. Figuratively, favour; countenance; support.

ENCOURAGER, (enkôrajor) s. one who incites a person to do a thing; one who favours or gives countenance to a person or an undertaking.

To ENCROACH, (enkrôch) v. n. to invade the right and property of another; to advance gradually by stealth to that which a person has no right to.

ENCROACHER, (enkrôcher) s. one who gradually seizes upon the possessions of another.

ENCROACHMENT, (enkrôchement) s. in Law, an unlawful trespass upon a man's grounds, or the act of enclosing the ground of another to one's own use; extortion, or the insisting upon payment of more than is due.

To ENCUMBER, v. a. [encombrer, Fr.] to load; to hinder or clog by any weight from action, or from the free use of one's limbs. Figuratively, to embarrass and distract the mind by variety of difficulties; to load with or bring to great difficulties by debts.

ENCUMBRANCE, s. any thing which is troublesome by its weight; a useless addition and burden; a burden upon an estate; that which abates from the profits of an estate, generally applied to debts and mortgages.

ENCYCLICAL, a. [en and kuklos, Gr.] circular; sent round through a large region.

ENCYCLOPE/DIA, s. [en, kuklos, and pauleia, Gr.] the circle of the sciences; applied by the Greeks to the seven liberal arts, and all the sciences. In modern times, applied to works which either in alphabetical arrangement, or in accordance with some scientific method, undertake to treat of the whole circle of human knowledge.

ENCYSTED, a. [kystis, Gr.] enclosed in a bag. Encysted tumours, in Anatomy, borrow their name from a bag in which they are confined.

END, s. [end, Sax.] the extremity of any thing which is extended in length; the last period or moment of time; a final determination; conclusion of a debate; death; abolition; total loss; consequence; the cause of a person's death; a piece or fragment; design; purpose; intention; or the object of a person's designs and actions. The conclusion, or last part, applied to action or writing.

To END, v. a. to perfect or finish an undertaking; to destroy, or put to death.—v. n. to come to a conclusion; to cease; to conclude; to terminate.

To ENDAMAGE, v. a. to prejudice; to lessen the value of a thing; to affect with loss; to spoil, mischief, or do hazard.

To ENDANGER, v. a. to expose to danger, risk, or hazard.

To ENDEAR, (endeer) v. a. to make dear or beloved.

ENDEARMENT, (endeerment) s. any thing which causes love; the state of a person or thing which is beloved.

ENDEAVOUR, (endeavour) s. an attempt, trial, or exertion of power to perform any thing.

To ENDEAVOUR, (endeavour) v. a. to exert power, in order to gain some end; to make an attempt; to try.

ENDEAVOURER, (endeavourer) s. one who exerts power to attain some end.

ENDECA/GON, s. [endeka and gonia, Gr.] a figure having eleven sides.

ENDEMIAL, ENDEMIC, ENDEMICAL, a. [en and demos, Gr.] peculiar to a country; applied particularly to some diseases.

To ENDITE, v. a. to draw up, compose, or relate, applied to history.

ENDIVE, s. [endive, Fr.] in Botany, a species of succory.

ENDLESS, a. [endeleas, Sax.] without coming to a conclusion. Without bounds, applied to extent or space. Without ceasing, applied to action. Continual, or eternal, applied to time.

ENDLESSLY, ad. without ceasing; without limit.

ENDLESSNESS, s. want of bounds or limits, applied to time or space.

ENDLONG, a. with the end or point foremost; in a straight line.

ENDMOST, a. farthest off; at the farthest end.

To ENDORSE, v. a. [endorser, Fr.] in Commerce, to write one's name on the back of a bill of exchange, or promissory note, in order to pay it away, to negotiate it, or to discharge the person who pays it from any future claim on account of it.

ENDORSEMENT, s. in Commerce, the act of writing one's name on the back of a bill of exchange, to signify that the contents are received, or to direct it to be paid to a person mentioned.

To ENDOW, (the ow is pronounced as in cow.) v. a. [endow, Fr.] to give a portion to a person; to assign or alienate any estate or sum of money to the support or maintenance of any charity, or any alms-house.

ENDOWMENT, s. wealth bestowed on a person, or devoted to any particular use; a sum of money secured for the perpetual support of a school, church, alms-house, &c.; the gifts of nature.

To ENDUE, v. a. [enduo, Gr.] to supply or furnish with internal gifts, virtues, or excellences; to give as a portion or dowry.

ENDURANCE, s. continuance; lastingness; the act of supporting or bearing troubles without complaint or dejection.

To ENDURE, v. a. [duro, Lat.] to suffer, undergo, bear, or support.—v. n. to last, remain, or continue; to bear patiently, or without resentment.

ENDURER, s. one that hath strength to support any fatigue or hardship; one who is unaffected with any hardship.

ENDWISE, ad. on end; upright, or perpendicular.

To ENECATE, v. a. [eneco, Lat.] to kill; to destroy.

ENEMY, s. [enemi, Fr.] one who is of an opposite side in war; one who opposes the interests or welfare of another; one who has a strong dislike to a person or thing.

ENERGETIC, a. [energetikos, Gr.] acting so as to perform or produce; active, operative, or working.

ENERGY, s. [energeia, Gr.] power in the abstract, or considered without being exerted or brought into action; vigour, force, or efficacy. Strength, spirit, life, or force of expression, applied to language.

To ENERVATE, v. a. [enerro, Lat.] to weaken; to deprive of strength; to render effeminate.

ENERVATION, s. the act of weakening, or rendering effeminate.

To ENERVE, v. a. to weaken; to lessen force or strength; to render effeminate.

To ENFEEBLE, v. a. to weaken or deprive of strength.

To ENFEOFF, v. a. [feoffamentum, low Lat.] in Law, to invest with any title or possession.

ENFEOFFMENT, s. in Law, the act whereby a person is invested with any dignity or possession; the instrument or deed by which one is invested with possessions.

ENFIELD, Middlesex, a town formerly noted for the tanning of hides. Its once royal chase was disforested by an act of parliament in 1737. It is 10 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 9369.

ENFIELD, a town of New Hampshire, United States. It contains a considerable Shakers' settlement, with 1000 acres of land attached to it. The people are distinguished for their neatness, industry, and mechanical skill. It is 492 miles from Washington. Pop. 1514. There are six other places of the same name in the States, at one of which, in Connecticut, is another Shakers' settlement, of the same extent as that above.

ENFIELD, DR. WILLIAM, the well-known compiler of some school books, just now beginning to lose ground, from the multitude of newer, if not better, ones. He was a Unitarian minister at Warrington, in connexion with the academy there, and afterwards at Norwich. His character was amiable, and his taste correct, and that, with indefatigable diligence, and such earnestness as was kindled by shocks given to those qualities, (unhappily frequent in this world, and more-unhappily for such as Dr. Enfield, given by truth and goodness in mortal conflict with falsehood and wickedness.)—that was the sum of the man. We owe to him almost the only history of philosophy in the language. He died in 1797, aged 56 years.

ENFILADE, s. [Fr.] a series or collection of things disposed as it were in a straight line. In War, applied to those trenches, &c., which are ranged in a right line, and may be swept or scored by the cannon lengthwise, or in the direction of a line, and rendered defenceless.

To ENFILADE, v. a. to pierce or sweep in a right line.

To ENFORCE, v. a. [enforce, Fr.] to give strength to; to strengthen; to sling with strength, violence, or force; to animate; to incite to action; to urge an argument strongly; to compel to do a thing against one's will; to press with a charge or accusation.—v. n. to prove; to evince.

ENFORCEDLY, ad. by violence or compulsion, opposed to voluntarily.

ENFORCEMENT, s. an act of violence; force offered; compulsion; a pressing occasion or exigence. A sanction, or that which gives force, applied to laws.

ENFORCER, s. one who causes any thing by force, strength, or violence.

ENFOLDRED, a. [foudre, Fr.] mixed with lightning. "With foul enfoldred smoke," Spenser.

To ENFRANCHISE, v. a. to incorporate a person into a body politic; to admit to the privileges of a freeman; to free from ENGLAND AND WALES.

ENGLISH MILES
0 10 20 30 40 50 60 70 80 90 100

slavery; to free or release from custody; to naturalize or adopt a foreign word.

ENFRANCHISEMENT, s. the act of incorporating a person into any society or body politic; a release from imprisonment or slavery.

TO ENGAGE, v. a. [engager, Fr.] to give as a security for, or be liable to make good, a debt; to stake, or hazard; to bind a person by any obligation to espouse the cause of a party; to bring in to a party; to embark or take part in an affair; to employ oneself in an attempt; to unite by some attraction or amiable quality.—v. n. to encounter; to fight. SYNON. To oblige, implies rather something of force; to engage, rather something agreeable. Duty and necessity oblige us; promises and good manners engage us.

ENGAGEMENT, s. the act of giving security, or making a person liable to discharge a debt; an obligation by promise, appointment, or contract; affection or adherence to any party; employment of the attention; fight, conflict, or battle; a strong motive, argument, inducement, or obligation.

TO ENGAGE/OL, v. a. to imprison; to confine. "You have engaged my tongue," Shaks.

TO ENGARRISON, v. a. to protect or defend as by a garrison.

TO ENGENDER, v. a. [engenderer, Fr.] to beget. Figuratively, to form or produce; to excite; to cause.—v. n. to be caused or produced.

ENGINE, s. [engin, Fr.] a compound instrument consisting of a complication of mechanic powers, such as wheels, screws, levers, &c., united, and conspiring together to effect the same end; a military machine; an instrument for casting water to great heights, in order to extinguish fires.

ENGINEER, s. [ingénieur, Fr.] one who makes or works at engines; an officer in the army, whose employ is to inspect the works, attacks, defenses, &c., to point and discharge the great artillery. Civil Engineer is one who projects and superintends the execution of such works as canals, railroads, embankments, &c.

ENGINEERY, s. the art of managing artillery; artillery, or ordnance.

TO ENGIRD, v. a. preter. and past part. engirt: to surround, or encamp.

ENGLAND, the S. and most considerable portion of the island of Great Britain, so named after the most numerous of the Saxon tribes who, in the 5th and 6th centuries, took possession of it. It is surrounded on the E. S. and W. by the German Ocean, the English Channel, and the Irish Sea; to the N. of it lies Scotland, and about the middle of the W. side, Wales. It is about 350 miles in length, and 200 in breadth in the midland district. Its geographical and other natural features will be given under the word Great Britain. But as it is distinct in many respects from the other parts of the kingdom, certain statistical and historical facts had better be given here. It is divided into 40 counties, or shires, of which Yorkshire is the largest and Rutland the smallest; and these are divided into ridings, hundreds, rapes, wapentakes, and other smaller divisions, for civil legislation. Ecclesiastically, it is divided into two provinces, Canterbury and York; and these are subdivided into twenty-six bishoprics, under which are deaneries, archdeaconries, and parishes. Under the present Poor Law, unions of the larger divisions of the counties have been formed. It alone, on the principles of the existing representative system, is fairly represented. Both Scotland and Ireland, though they have no parliaments of their own, have in both houses a very inadequate share. In this portion of the kingdom Episcopacy, as it was framed during the period between Henry VIII. and Charles II., is the Established Church. But the freedom of other communions has been secured by various measures from the time of the Revolution of 1688; and the number of Romanists and members of various Dissident denominations is very considerable. The Jews alone are not yet put on a complete equality with other religionists. At the time of the Roman invasion, just before the Christian era, two Celtic tribes possessed the greater part of this country; the inhabitants of the coasts being a party who had established themselves there for purposes of barbaric traffic with the other Celtic tribes of the neighbouring countries, by driving the former possessors inland. All seem to have united against the new invaders, but they were conquered, and the greater portion of them, who survived, driven into Cornwall, Wales, Cumberland, and North Britain. This land was divided into three provinces, (Wales and Scotland forming two others,) when the Roman sway was completely established. And under the powerful dominion of the early empire, all the signs of Roman civilization rapidly began to spread. But in the later empire its remoteness and insularity only made it a nursery for would-be emperors, and after an occupation of about 400 years the troops were gradually withdrawn, leaving the native monarchs, who had enjoyed their titular dignities much as those of British India in later years have done, without troops, or arms, or money, effeminized by their subjection and the luxurious life they were constrained to, to resist as they could the incursions of the hardy and unsubdued Celts of North Britain, and the invasions of the Teutonic or Saxon tribes, which had for many years assailed the eastern coast. During this period Christianity was first preached here; and a great speculative theologian—one of those called heretics, because found in the minority—Pelagius, a Briton by birth, went from the borders of Wales to Rome to distract the powers there with a controversy, then first put into a definite form, which is not yet, nor likely to be soon, ended. The Saxons were soon after invited by the unwarlike Britons, as being the least dangerous, or rather the least known, to aid in keeping the North Britons out of England, and tracts of land were settled on them as pay. New tribes ever poured in, and in the course of about 150 years, the Britons, with their semi-Roman civilization and their dim light of Christianity, were driven to Cornwall, Wales, and Cumberland, and the remainder of the country occupied by different Saxon tribes, under the title of the kingdoms of Kent, Wessex, Essex, East Anglia, Mercia, Deira, and Bernicia, which two last were subsequently united as Northumbria. And now a scene of ceaseless petty intestine conflict opened, brightened by such names as Offa of Mercia, Edwin of Northumbria, and Egbert of Wessex; brightened with the half-light of a re-proclamation of Christianity, by missionaries sent forth by the Roman pontiff, and the destruction of the savage but poetical mythology of the North, or the conversion of it into a sort of half-heathen Romanism. On the midst of all this confusion a new wave broke. New Northmen tribes, animated by ferocious spirit of adventure, mercenary desire to prove the fame of English wealth, and bigoted abhorrence of the recreants from the faith of Odin,—the sea-kings, Danes, year after year, ravaged first the coasts and afterwards the inland region; unchecked till Alfred the Great, and Athelstane the first sole monarch of England, two of the wisest and best kings this land ever knew, by valour and discipline defeated their best troops, settled some as tributary chiefs in the desolated parts of the land, and for a while maintained peace. It was not, however, till long years afterwards that this fierce power was wholly ejected, and then not till it had given four kings to England, Canute, worthy to rank with Alfred, being one. During this time also, under a succession of not very competent kings, one phase of the struggle awakened by the character of the Roman Church was manifested, and it ended in the victory of the strong, united, well-trained, and well-led power of the Church, over both the state and the irregular attempts at the embodiment of religious faith. We approach now the time when this land was involved in the destinies of European nations, by more intimate implication than that of sharing with them sufferings from Danish invasions. Edward the Confessor had been trained in the court of the newly-set-up duchy of Normandy; and in his childless dotage gave occasion for the said duke to claim this realm. Which claim was made, and solemnly and terribly made good at Hastings and in other lesser fights, by the devastation of the country N. of the Humber, and by the parcelling of the whole land out into manors, and giving them as fiefs to the Conqueror's army, to the almost utter disinheriting of the whole Saxon population, most surely to the reduction of them, as a people, to the condition of serfs and vassals to this newly-created and fierce nobility. It will be needful to give merely a sketch of the great movements from the Conquest till the present age, and after that a list of the kings, an opportunity of doing which is afforded here. The various elements of English society which have by their conflicts and co-operation made the story of the English nation, were, and are, the monarch, the nobility, the church, the traders, and the workers. For the first few reigns the strife lay between the two first together against the third, and ended in the clear triumph of the latter. Next, between the two worsted classes rose a contest, and the monarch was compelled to grant Magna Charta. Under the three reigns following John's, we see the traders distinctly recognised as a class in the nation, able to speak and act for themselves; which from Edward III.'s time, with more or less effect, and more or less truth, they have done. At this point two movements were attempted and failed. The first was that of the working clergy against the hierarchy, in the Church, which, perhaps as being an intestine strife, and as the hierarchy alone could be of any essential service to the other powerful classes, was in the course of the three succeeding reigns completely stopped. The other was the attempt of the workers, oppressed by all manner of wrongs, to become a recognised portion of the state, and not the mere sport of the frays and tumults of the other classes. This movement was crushed at the very outset; but it expedited, what the Church had already begun, their emancipation from mere villenage, or slavery. A contest between two great aristocratic families followed next, for we must leave out of sight all attempts on other crowns, originating in the personal ambition of the English monarchs. It led to the wars of the Roses, the most sanguinary this country ever knew, which completely broke down the power of the nobility, and left them at Bosworth Field in the hands of a king with as good a determination to be unfettered in his sovereignty, and as good a dash in a quiet way to effect his purpose, as ever reigned. The House of Tudor were, practically, a dynasty of absolute monarchs. But the traders, during those wars, had been quietly gaining wealth. Henry VII. was every inch a tradesman. The great geographical discoveries made just about that time, gave a new impulse to commerce of all kinds. Then rose up again the flame which Wicliffe had first kindled, but this time not to be put out. It had begun on the continent now, just as it did in England before. In England, it was the revolt of the absolute monarch from the only power that seemed able to cope with him. But though thus of questionable truth in its new birth, it fell amongst a people who needed only this, and who speedily gave it its proper character and lustre. It gradually formed amongst the trading classes, who now, by this religious revolution, were joined by lawyers, medical men, and schoolmasters, (who were separated from the clergy by the Reformation,) and with them formed the middle class,—it formed amongst them gradually a conviction which lay at the foundation of the Puritan revolution of 1640; and with more clearness, and wider comprehension and scope, must be the foundation of any movement that is truly an advance of the nation. This was apparent under Elizabeth, more so under James (under whom also Scotland, by mere course of hereditary succession, came to be united to England under her own king, and as there was no nobility, nor Church, as powers, to feel their pride wounded, it was most satisfactorily accomplished); and under Charles it broke out into actual war, and overthrew both the monarchy and the Church, which, by the weakness and superstition of these two kings, had grown to be almost greater than they. During the latter part of the Tudor dynasty, and more under the Stuarts, the recruiting of the nobility by drafts from the middle class began; the increase of which custom has helped not a little to form one remarkable feature of the present times, we shall have to notice. Under the commonwealth, a totally different order of things appeared, just like a mass of rock thrust up from the nether fire-deeps of the earth, bearing in its bosom all costliest treasures, such as time would shortly have displayed, and turning up to light the relics of foregone ages, making us able to see what genuine wealth and worth was in them too. But just as often, on the opposite side of such a rock, the strata are found lying straight and level as if no such disturbance had taken place as the upheaving of a mountain mass; so it was on the Restoration. An age of unreality begun. Two weak kings, and wicked withal, had raised the Church higher in power yet, and the nobility, most of it new, and dragging the upper portions of the middle class after it, higher even than the Church. And the Revolution of 1688, misnamed glorious, was the expression of the determination of the nobility to have the game henceforth in their own hands. To this day the nobility are the great and ruling class, under various shapes of councils, and cabinets, and so forth. The Church has followed obediently at their heels; nor have the recent attempt of the Oxford divines,—the fervours of the revived evangelical preaching during the preceding century,—nor the various encroachments of the secular power, from the Toleration of Dissent to the Emancipation of the Catholics and the repeal of Test Acts, from the imprisonment and shame of the non-jurors to the abolition and creation of bishoprics at this very hour,—sufficed to rouse in it any of its ancient spirit. Its very existence is threatened now, and yet it follows the aristocracy. The middle class have been growing in wealth and importance during all this period,—extended commerce, springing from ever-growing empire and ever-daring and doing science, the spread of learning and literature, these, and an easy admission to the ranks of the nobility, have advanced them in all but actual worth. Whilst the spirit of religion that once made them irresistible by kings, has declined into mere speech about it, and show of it, and vast demonstrations of the appearance of its power. Respectability, which is affectation of the spirit and manners of the nobility, has as good as ousted religion. The workers, though in many things their condition has been prodigiously bettered by the slight share they have had in all these advances of civilization, as to manhood, and perhaps, too, as to religion, remain where they were when, in the first years of the 15th century, they aspired after freedom, but could not obtain it. By no one government have they been thought of, when the people, or the nation, was professedly cared for. Legislation has contemplated them mainly as rebels, or as paupers. The numberless party conflicts which have made the nation ring again, have been never any thing more than the strife of two sections of the nobility, envious of influence and power, and using the name of the public good for that ignoble end. Such is the nation of to-day. The one surely cheering sign being, that in all classes men are beginning, here one, and there another, to see that these things are so, and to prepare themselves for that breaking up of the powers that be, which alone can pave the way for future progress.

SOVEREIGNS OF ENGLAND, FROM THE CONQUEST.

Names.	Began to reign.
William I.	25 Dec. 1066
William II.	26 Sept. 1087
Henry I.	5 Aug. 1100
Stephen	26 Dec. 1135
Henry II.	19 Dec. 1154
Richard I.	3 Sept. 1189
John	27 May, 1199
Henry III.	28 Oct. 1216
Edward I.	20 Nov. 1272
Edward II.	8 July, 1307
Edward III.	25 Jan. 1327
Richard II.	22 June, 1377
Henry IV.	30 Sept. 1399
Henry V.	21 Mar. 1413
Henry VI.	1 Sept. 1422
Edward IV.	4 Mar. 1461
Edward V.	9 April, 1483
Richard III.	26 June, 1483
Henry VII.	22 Aug. 1485
Henry VIII.	22 April, 1509
Edward VI.	23 Jan. 1547
James I.	6 July, 1553
Mary I.	17 July, 1553
(Philip and Mary, from 25 July, 1554.)
Elizabeth I.	17 Nov. 1558
James I.	24 Mar. 1603
Charles I.	27 Mar. 1625
Commonwealth	30 Jan. 1649
Oliver Cromwell, Protector	16 Dec. 1653
Richard Cromwell, Protector	3 Sept. 1658
Republic again	22 April, 1659
Charles II.	29 May, 1659
(usually dates from 30 Jan. 1649.)
James II.	6 Feb. 1685
William III. and Mary II.	13 Feb. 1688
(William alone, from 28 Dec. 1694.)
Anne	8 Mar. 1702
George I.	1 Aug. 1714
George II.	11 June, 1727
George III.	25 Oct. 1760
George IV.	29 Jan. 1820
William IV.	26 June, 1830
Victoria	20 June, 1837

ENGLAND, NEW, a district of the United States, North America, contained six States, namely, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, and Vermont. See these names and UNITED STATES.

ENGLISH, (pron. English) a. [Englic, Sax.] belonging to England.—s, the language spoken by the people of England; the natives of England.

To ENGLISH, v. a. to translate into English.

ENGLISH CHANNEL, the narrow sea extending from the Straits of Dover to the Atlantic Ocean, dividing England from France. It is called by the French, La Manche. Its average breadth is about 90 miles.

To ENGLUT, v. a. [engloutir, Fr.] to swallow up; to glut; to pamper.

To ENGORGE, v. a. [gorge, Fr.] to swallow; to devour.

To ENGRAFT, v. a. [greffer, Fr.] In Gardening, to take a shoot from one tree, and insert it into another, in such a manner as both shall unite, and grow together.

ENGRAFTING, s. in Gardening, the act of taking a shoot from one tree, and inserting it into the stock of another, in such a manner as both shall unite, grow together, and bear fruit.

To ENGRAIL, v. a. [grele, Fr.] in Heraldry, to represent a thing with its edges ragged or notched circularly, as if something had fallen on and broken it; it differs from indented, because the edges are in that in a straight line, but in this semicircular.

To ENGRAIN, v. a. to dye deep; to dye in the grain.

To ENGRASP, v. a. to seize; to hold fast in the hand; to gripe.

To ENGRAVE, v. a. [engraver, Fr.] to cut copper, iron, or other metals, or stone, so as to represent figures thereon. Figuratively to make a deep impression on the mind.

ENGRAVER, s. one who cuts figures on metals, marble, or stones.

ENGRAVING, s. the act or art of cutting metals and precious stones with a graver, or other means, in order to represent figures &c. thereon. Also, the act of cutting, by graving tools or acids, on plates of copper, steel, zinc, and even glass, or on blocks of wood, designs, which can be copied by impressions with printer's ink on paper.

To ENGROSS, v. a. [grossir, Fr.] to thicken or increase in bulk; to seize upon the whole of any thing; to purchase or buy up any commodity, in order to sell it again at an advanced price. In Law, to copy writings, in law text, on parchment.

ENGROSSER, s. he who purchases large quantities of any commodity, in order to sell it at a high price; one who seizes or appropriates the whole of any thing to himself.

ENGROSSMENT, s. an exorbitant acquisition; the act of encroaching or seizing upon the whole of any thing.

To ENHAUCE, v. a. [enhausser, Fr.] to raise the value or price of a thing; to heighten the esteem or degree of any quality.

ENHANCEMENT, s. increase of esteem, of value, or of degree.

ENHARMONIC, a. [en and harmonia, Gr.] in Music, a scale in which the divisions of the tones are made mathematically accurate, so that in every key a perfect chromatic scale is obtained. An organ has been built lately on this plan, which dispenses with what is called temperature, and admits of being tuned with complete accuracy in every key.

ENIGMA, s. [ainigma, Gr.] a proposition delivered in obscure, remote, and ambiguous terms, in order to exercise the wit.

ENIGMATICAL, a. of the nature of an enigma; obscurely, darkly, or ambiguously expressed; obscurely or imperfectly received or apprehended.

ENIGMATICALY, ad. in a sense different from that which the words in their peculiar acceptation imply.

ENIGMATIST, s. a maker of riddles.

To ENJOIN, v. a. [enjoindre, Fr.] to order. SYNON. It implies something more authoritative than direct, somewhat less than command, and includes the idea of superiority in the person requiring any thing to be done.

ENJOINER, s. a person who gives directions, including the idea of superior rank or authority.

ENJOINMENT, s. the order of a person of superior rank and authority.

To ENJOY, v. a. [enjoir, Fr.] to feel a flow of joy in the fruition of a thing; to obtain possession of it; to gladden, to delight, used with the reciprocal pronoun himself, &c.—v. n. to be in fruition or possession; to live happily.

ENJOYER, s. one who has a thing in his possession; one who makes use of or receives satisfaction from the consciousness of using or possessing a thing.

ENJOYMENT, s. pleasure arising from possession or fruition; possession, use, or fruition.

To ENKINDLE, v. a. to set on fire; to inflame; to rouse or inflame the passions.

To ENLARGE, v. a. [enlargir, Fr.] to make greater in quantity, dimensions, quality, or appearance. Figuratively, to make a thing appear greater than it is by representation or discourse; to magnify; to extend the capacity of the mind; to be very minute in a description, or copious in speaking on a subject; to free from confinement or constraint.—v. n. to expatiate or speak much on any subject. SYNON. The word enlarge is properly used to signify an addition of extent. Increase is critically applicable only to number, height, and quantity. We enlarge a town, a field, a garden. We increase the inhabitants of a town, our expenses, our revenues.

ENLARGEMENT, s. increase of dimensions, quality, or degree; release from confinement; a representation of a thing beyond what it really is; a minute, long, and copious discourse on a subject.

ENLARGER, s. one who increases any thing; one who magnifies a thing in discourse.

To ENLIGHT, (enlit) v. a. to communicate light or knowledge.

To ENLIGHTEN, (enliten) v. a. to supply with light. Figuratively, to supply with knowledge not before acquired, and sufficient to clear up some difficulty, which was previously inexplicable; to cheer, or gladden; to supply with a greater perfection of sight.

ENLIGHTENER, (enliten) s. one that gives light. Figuratively, an instructor.

To ENLINK, v. a. to join or connect in like manner as the links of a chain are fastened to each other.

To ENLIST, v. a. to write in a list; to engage any one, according to certain appointed forms, to be a soldier in the regular army.

ENLISTMENT, s. the engaging any one to be a soldier, in legal form.

To ENLIVEN, v. a. to make alive. Figuratively, to inspire with new vigour; to animate; to make sprightly or gay; to give a thing a gay and cheerful appearance.

ENLIVENER, s. that which gives motion, or communicates action, spirit, or vigour, to a person or thing.

To ENMESH, v. a. to net; to entangle; to entrap.

ENMITY, s. [from enemy,] a disposition of mind which excites a person to contradict and oppose the interests, inclinations, or sentiments of another; a state of irreconcilable opposition; malice.

ENNEAGON, s. [ennea and gonia, Gr.] a figure having nine angles.

ENNEATICAL, a. [ennea, Gr.] in Medicine, enneatical days, are every ninth day of a sickness; and enneatical years, every ninth year of a person's life.

E'NNIS, Clare, in Munster, Ireland. A village, called Clare, is distant about two miles from Ennis, which is also sometimes called Clare. It is the county town, and is situated on the Fergus, which is navigable for large boats to the Shannon, and adds greatly to the trade of the town. It is 112 miles from Dublin. Pop. 9318. Clare, 879.

ENNSKILLEN, Fernernagh, in Ulster, Ireland. It is seated on an island in the narrow water that connects the two parts of Loch Erne, over which are two bridges. It is a pretty town, most pleasantly situated; and both by its position and trade, and its being the county town, is of some importance. It is 85 miles from Dublin. Pop. 5686.

ENNIS, Q. a celebrated Roman poet, in the 3rd century a. c. Being by birth a Greek, he was engaged as a teacher at Rome, in that language, and in Greek learning. We have only a few fragments of his epics. He died in 269 n. c.

To ENNOBLE, v. a. [ennoblir, Fr.] to raise a person to a higher rank, or from being a commoner to be a peer. Figuratively, to communicate worth; to dignify; to raise, exalt, or elevate.

ENNOBLEMENT, s. the act of raising to the degree of a peer or nobleman; a quality which dignifies and exalts our nature; elevation, exaltation, dignity.

ENOCH, an ancient patriarch, of whom it is simply recorded in the Book of Genesis, that he "walked with God, and was not, for God took him." A mention of certain prophecies by him in the Epistle of Jude, led to a search for them, and three copies in the Ethiopic language were obtained by Bruce, in his travels during the last century, in Abyssinia. The passage in Jude occurs near the commencement of the book, which is made up almost wholly of most preposterous figments, related as visions; intended, however, to convey some sort of notion of the conflict of good and evil, and the ultimate victory of the good. It is evidently not much older than the apostolic age, and its quotation by the apostle Jude is no more testimony to its value, than the quotations from Menander and Aratus, by Paul, are to theirs: the passage answered the immediate purpose of the writer; and no more needs to be asked.

ENODATION, s. [enodatio, Lat.] the act of untying a knot; solution of a difficulty.

ENORMITY, s. departure from any rule or standard; an irregularity; a corruption. In the plural, used for great crimes; or such as show a great degree of villany and guilt.

ENORMOUS, a. [e and norma, Lat.] irregular; not confined to any stated rule; without restraint. "Wild, above rule or art, enormous bliss," Par. Lost. Exceedingly wicked. Exceeding the common bulk, applied to size, including the ideas of dislike, horror, or wonder.

ENORMOUSLY, ad. prodigiously; beyond measure.

ENORMOUSNESS, s. excess of guilt or wickedness.

ENOUGH, (enuff) a. [enough, Sax.] sufficient; that will answer any purpose, wish, or design. It should be observed, that though other adjectives are placed in English before their substantives, yet this always follows it. SYNON. The object of the words sufficient and enough is quantity; but with this difference, that enough relates more to the quantity one desires to have, and sufficient to that quantity one really wants to employ. Thus the avaricious man never has enough; let him accumulate ever so much, he still desires more; and the prodigal never has sufficient, he is still wanting to expend more than he has.

ENOUGH, (enuff) s. that which is sufficient to answer a person's expectations or wishes; a quantity answerable to any design, or proportionable to a person's qualities and abilities.

ENOUGH, (enuff) ad. in such a manner as to give content or satisfaction. When repeated, it is used as an interjection, implying that there is already more than a sufficiency, and that a person is desired to desist. "Henceforth I'll bear affliction, till it do cry itself—Enough, enough!"

ENOW, (enow) a. [the plural of enough, according to Johnson,] a sufficient number. In this number it is used before its substantive; but in the singular after it.

EN PASSANT, (ang-passang) ad. [Fr.] by the way.

ENRAGE, v. a. [enrager, Fr.] to put a person in a violent passion of anger.

To ENRANGE, v. a. to place regularly; to put in order.

To ENRANK, v. a. to place in order.

To ENRAPT, v. a. to transport to a great degree of ecstasy or enthusiasm.

To ENRAPTURE, v. a. to transport and affect to the highest degree of delight and pleasure.

To ENRAVISH, v. a. to throw into an ecstasy; or to affect with the most exalted degree of joy.

ENRAVISHMENT, s. ecstasy of delight.

To ENRHEUM, v. n. [enrhæum, Fr.] to have rheum through cold.

To ENRICH, v. a. [enricher, Fr.] to give riches or money to a person. Figuratively, to make fat or render fruitful, applied to ground. To adorn or improve with new knowledge, applied to the mind.

ENRICHMENT, s. an augmentation or increase of wealth. Amplification or improvement, applied to soil, books, or to understanding.

To ENRIDGE, v. a. to form with long eminences or ridges.

To ENRING, v. a. to bind round; to surround as with a ring.

To ENRIPEN, v. a. to make ripe.

To ENROBE, v. a. to dress; to clothe.

To ENROLL, v. a. [enroller, Fr.] to enter in a list, or roll; to record or commit to writing; to involve; to inwrap.

ENROLLER, s. a person who writes another's name in a list.

ENROLEMENT, s. a writing in which any thing is recorded; the act of registering.

To ENROOT, v. a. to fix by the root. Figuratively, to fasten or implant deeply.

ENS, (enz) s. [Lat.] in Metaphysics, any thing which the mind apprehends, and of which it affirms, denies, proves, or disproves; something that is, and exists, some way further than barely in conception; that to which there are real attributes belonging; or that which has a reality, not only in the intellect, but likewise in itself.

ENS, THE PROVINCES OF THE UPPER AND LOWER; the designation of Austria Proper; which see.

ENSAMPLE, s. [ensampio, Ital.] example; pattern; copy; subject of imitation.

To ENSANGUINE, v. a. [sanguis, Lat.] to smear with gore; to suffuse with blood.

To ENSCHEDULE, v. a. to insert in a writing or schedule.

To ENSCONCE, v. a. to cover as with a fort; to secure.

To ENSEAM, v. a. to sew up; to enclose by a seam or juncture of needwork.

To ENSHINE, v. a. to preserve in a sacred or hallowed place.

ENSIFORM, a. [ensis and forma, Lat.] having the shape of a sword.

ENSIGN, (énin) s. [enseigne, Fr.] the flag or standard of a regiment; a signal to assemble; a mark or badge of distinction and authority; the officer of a foot regiment who carries the flag or ensign.

To ENSLAVE, v. a. to deprive of liberty. Figuratively, to betray to another as a slave.

ENSLAVEMENT, s. the state of a slave. Figuratively, a state of mean and sordid obedience to the violence of any passion.

ENSLAVER, s. one who deprives of liberty.

To ENSUE, v. a. [ensuire, Fr.] to follow; to pursue; to practise for a continuance.

ENTABLATURE, ENTABLEMENT, s. [Fr.] in Architecture, that part of a column which is over the capital, and comprehends the architrave, frieze, and cornice.

ENTAIL, s. [entaille, Fr.] in Law, a fee estate entailed, i. e. abridged and limited to certain conditions, at the will of the donor.

To ENTAIL, v. a. [entailler, Fr.] in Law, to settle the descent of an estate, so that it cannot be bequeathed at pleasure by the person who succeeds to it.

To ENTAME, v. a. to tame; to conquer, or subdue.

To ENTANGLE, v. a. to ensnare, or involve in something which is not easily got clear from, as briars; and not easily extricated from, as a net; to twist or knot in such a perplexed manner, as cannot be easily unravelled. Figuratively, to perplex or confuse with difficulties; to ensnare by captious questions; to distract with a variety of affairs, which a person cannot easily free himself from.

ENTANGLEMENT, s. that which involves a thing in intricacies, or with such things as are not easily got rid of; the confused state of the thread, which requires great patience to unravel and undo; an obscurity, difficulty, or insuring argument, which involves the mind in confusion and perplexity.

ENTANGLER, s. one that ensnares, or involves in perplexity.

To ENTER, v. n. [entrer, Fr.] to make one's appearance, or go into any place; to commence the discharge of the duties of any office. In Commerce, to set down or write any article in a book; to give notice to the Custom-house, and pay the duties for the import or export of any commodity; to begin or engage, used with on or upon.

ENTERING, s. an avenue by which a person may go into a place; the act or motion by which a person goes into a place.

ENTERITIS, s. [Gr.] in Medicine, a disease in which the outer coat of the intestines is inflamed, and is accompanied by acute pain and sickness. It is very dangerous, and needs immediate and speedy treatment. See Colic.

To ENTERLACE, v. a. [entrelasser, Fr.] to interweave; to intertwine.

ENTEROCLE, s. [enteron and kele, Gr.] in Medicine, a rupture wherein the intestines, and particularly the ilium, fall into the groin.

ENTEROLOGY, s. [enteron and logos, Gr.] a treatise on the bowels, or an anatomical description of all the internal parts.

ENTEROMPHALOS, s. [enteron and omphalos, Gr.] a disorder wherein the intestines having fallen out of their place occasion a tumour in the navel.

ENTERPRISE, (enterprise) s. [enterprize, Fr.] an undertaking attended with danger.

To ENTERPRISE, (enterprize) v. a. to attempt; to undertake; or to try to perform.

ENTERPRISER, (enterpriser) s. one who undertakes or engages himself in important, dangerous, and hazardous designs.

To ENTERTAIN, v. a. [entretenir, Fr.] to communicate improvement, or employ a person's time in agreeable discourse; to treat at table; to receive hospitably; to retain or keep a person as a servant; to please, amuse, or give pleasure. To reserve, or conceive, applied to the mind.

ENTERTAINER, s. one who keeps others as servants; he that treats others with food, or at his table; he that amuses, diverts, and communicates pleasure.

ENTERTAINMENT, s. a conversation, wherein time is spent agreeably; a feast; hospitable reception; amusement, or diversion; a farce; a low species of comedy, or a pantomime. The state of being hired or in pay, applied to soldiers and servants.

ENTERTISSED, a. interwoven or intermixed with various colours or substances.

To ENTHRONE, v. a. to place on a throne, or the seat of a sovereign. Figuratively, to invest with the dignity or authority of a king.

ENTHUSIASM, (enthúsiásmos) s. [en and Theos, Gr.] a transport of the mind, whereby it is led to imagine things in a sublime, surprising, yet probable manner. This is the enthusiasm felt in poetry, oratory, music, painting, sculpture, &c. In a religious sense, it implies a transport of the mind, wherein it believes itself inspired with some revelation, impulse, &c. from heaven.

ENTHUSIAST, (enthúsiástes) s. in Divinity, one who believes he is immediately inspired by God. One of warm imagination or passions; also one of an elevated fancy, or exalted ideas.

ENTHUSIASTIC, ENTHUSIASTICAL, (enthúsiástiké, enthúsiástikós) a. strongly persuaded of receiving extraordinary communications from the Deity; warmly earnest in any cause; of elevated fancy or exalted ideas.

ENTHYME, s. [en and thymos, Gr.] in Logic, an argument consisting only of an antecedent and consequential proposition; a syllogism, where the major proposition is suppressed, and only the minor and consequence produced in words.

To ENTICE, v. a. to seduce, allure, or draw by blandishments or hopes, to something bad.

ENTICEMENT, s. the art or practice of drawing or alluring a person to do ill; the alluring means by which a person is drawn to commit something ill.

ENTICER, s. one that allures to ill.

ENTICINGLY, ad. so as to charm or allure.

ENTICK, DR. JOHN, author of a well-known, and now little used, Latin and English Dictionary for schools; and some other works. He died in 1780.

ENTIRE, a. [entier, Fr.] whole; undivided; unbroken; complete; having all its parts; full; firm; fixed; solid; unmingled; honest; faithful.

ENTIRELY, ad. wholly; without exception, reserve, or abatement.

ENTIRENESS, s. the state of a thing which has all its parts.

To ENTITLED, v. a. [entituler, Fr.] to grace a person with a title of honour; to call by a particular name; to give a claim or right; to superscribe; to make use of the name of a person or thing as a sanction; to grant as claimed by a title.

ENTITY, s. [entitas, low Lat.] the being, or rather actual existence, of any thinking thing; a particular collection of qualities which constitute the species or nature of a thing.

To ENTOMB, (entómb) v. a. to shut up in a tomb.

ENTOMOLOGY, s. [entoma and logos, Gr.] the Natural History of insects.

To ENTRAIL, v. a. [intraliare, Ital.] to mingle; to interweave; to diversify.

ENTRAILS, s. has no singular; [entrailles, Fr.] the intestines of an animal.

ENTRANCE, s. [entrant, Fr.] the passage or avenue by which a person may go into a place. Figuratively, the power, act, or liberty of going in; the beginning or first rudiments of a science or art.

To ENTRANCE, v. n. [transon, Lat.] to reduce to such a state that the soul seems to be absent from the body, while the latter has no apparent signs of life; to hurry away; to exalt to such a pitch of ecstacy as to be insensible to external objects.

To ENTRAP, v. a. [entrapper, Fr.] to catch in a trap or snare. Figuratively, to betray, or subject insidiously to danger and difficulties; to take advantage of.

To ENTREAT, (entréte) v. a. [traiter, Fr.] to ask with humility and earnestness; to treat or use well or ill; to make a petition or request for a person in a humble manner; to entertain, or amuse.

ENTREATY, (entréty) s. a request made for some favour in a humble manner.

ENTRE DOURO E MINHO, a province of Portugal, lying on the Atlantic, and bounded by the provinces of Beira, Tra los Montes, and Spain. It is about 60 miles in length and 37 in breadth. It is divided into 6 jurisdictions, which contain 963 parishes. It has some hills, but of no great height, and it is watered by the Douro, the Minho, the Tamega, &c. The air is pure and healthy, and the soil is fertile, producing corn, wine, oil, and flax in abundance; also feeding great numbers of sheep, and there is plenty of fish and game. Braga is the capital. Population, about 900,000.

ENTRY, s. [entrée, Fr.] the passage by which a person goes into a house; the act of going in. In Law, the taking possession of an estate. See BOOK-KEEPING.

To ENVELOP, v. a. [envelopper, Fr.] to inwrap; to cover or enclose in a covering. Figuratively, to surround or hide from the sight.

ENVELOPE, s. [Fr.] a wrapper; a cover; an outward case of a letter, &c.

To ENVEINOM, v. a. to mix with poison; to make poisonous. ENVIALABLE, a. deserving envy; that may excite envy.

ENVIER, s. one who is affected with grief at the prosperity of another.

ENVIOUS, a. affected with envy.

ENVIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to show displeasure or ill-will, on account of the happiness or excellence of another.

To ENVIRON, v. a. [encirronner, Fr.] to surround; to encompass. Figuratively, to hem in, or surround in a hostile manner; to enclose; to invest.

ENVIRONS, s. [Fr.] the neighbourhood, or places situated round about any town or city.

To ENUMERATE, v. a. [enumerare, Lat.] to reckon up, or count over singly and distinctly; to give a minute account of all the circumstances of a thing.

ENUMERATION, s. the act of numbering or counting over singly and distinctly; a minute detail.

To ENUNCIATE, v. a. [enunzio, Lat.] to declare; to proclaim; to express; to relate.

ENUNCIATION, s. a simple expression, or declaration of a thing, either in affirmative or negative words, without any application; a declaration, proclamation, or public attestation.

ENUNCIATIVE, a. declarative; expressing either affirmatively or negatively.

ENUNCIATIVELY, ad. declaratively.

ENVOY, s. [envoye, Fr.] a person deputed to negotiate an affair with some foreign prince or state. Those sent from Britain, France, Spain, &c. to any petty prince or state, go in quality of envoys, not ambassadors, to whom they are inferior in dignity, though they have the same right to protection, and enjoy the same privileges with ambassadors, except in ceremonies.

To ENVY, v. n. [envier, Fr.] to grieve at the excellences, prosperity, or happiness of another; to hate another for excellence, prosperity, or happiness; to grudge.

ENVY, s. the feeling of pain at the happiness of another, which leads to the wish to deprive him of it; the feeling which makes one wish to rise by another's fall.

EOPIPILE, s. [Eobis and pila, Lat.] a hollow ball of metal with a long pipe; which ball, filled with water, and exposed to the fire, sends out, as the water heats, at intervals, blasts of cold wind through the pipe.

EPACT, s. [epacte, Gr.] in the Ecclesiastical calendar, the day of the calendar moon on which the 1st of January falls in each year; which must not be confounded with the actual day of the moon's age.

EPAMINONDAS, a young Theban general, under whom Boetia made the only effort it ever made to obtain the supremacy of Greece. He was a soldier in the same cause that Athens had fought and perished for. And Sparta was still the sullen opponent of democracy. Epaminondas overthrew the Spartan army of invaders at Leuctra, and then marching into the Peloponnese, was joined by numbers from other states, who had felt the weight of the hand of Sparta. He was victor in another fight at Mantinea, but he fell in the conflict. With him departed the glory of this dream of Thebes. He died in 362 B. C.

EPAULE, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, the shoulder of the bastion, or the angle made by the face and flank.

EPAULEMENT, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, a side-work of earth hastily thrown up, of bags filled with sand, or of gabions, fascines, &c., with earth, to cover the men or cannon; likewise a demi-bastion, or little flank, placed at the point of a horn or crownwork.

EPAULETTES, s. [Fr.] a kind of shoulder-knot worn by officers of the army.

EEZE, C. MICHAEL DE L', one of those men who have devoted themselves with true Christian zeal to devise means for cultivating the minds of the deaf and dumb. He followed Bonnet, and was succeeded by Sicard. He died in 1789, aged 77 years.

EPENTHESIS, s. [Gr.] in Grammar, the interposition or insertion of a letter or syllable in the middle of a word; as Religio for Religio; Imperator for Imperator.

EPHAI, (eph) s. a Hebrew measure containing fifteen solid inches.

EPHEMERA, (efimera) s. [epi and emera, Gr.] a fever that terminates in one day. In Natural History, an insect which lives only a single day. In Botany, such flowers as open and expand at sun-rise, and shut and wither at sun-setting.

EPHEMERIS, (efimeris) s. a journal, or account of daily transactions. In Astronomy, a table, calculated to show the present state of the heavens, or the places of the planets at noon.

EPHEMERIST, (efimerist) s. one whose knowledge of the places of the planets does not flow from his own observations, but is entirely taken from an ephemeris; a word of reproach.

EPHESIANS, EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE; it was written at Rome, during the apostle's first imprisonment there. It was written before those to Philemon and the Colossians, as no mention is made in this of Timotheus, who had not yet rejoined him. It seems to be most probable, that it was not intended exclusively for the church at Ephesus, but also for others within Proconsular Asia, which had arisen perhaps through the labours of the Ephesian Christians. It would seem also that this letter is alluded to in the end of that to the Colossians, as to be forwarded from Laodicea for their perusal. In general plan, and in similarity of scope and expression, it and the letter to the Colossians are closely alike; only this is more uniform in tone, and is not broken by such lofty flights. The first part relates to the knowledge which had been given to the Ephesians by the gospel; and which he shows to have consisted in the discovery of themselves as sinners and of God as the Saviour; and he ascribes all the praise of it to God, shows them what favour is implied in it, and prays most fervently in their behalf to God. The second part is practical, and evidently based on the first, meant also rather as a sketch of the kind of life and duty springing naturally from such knowledge. The closing representation of a Christian, under the figure of a warrior fully accoutred, and engaged with foes that need weapons and armour of heavenly temper to withstand them, is very noble.

EPHESUS, anciently a celebrated city of Ionia, in Asia Minor, and the capital of the Roman province of Asia. Here was the famous temple of Artemis, or Diana, which the ancient Christians afterwards converted into a place of public worship; but it is now so entirely ruined, that it is difficult to find the ground-plot; however, there are some ruins of the walls, and five or six marble columns, all of a piece, 40 feet in length, and 7 in diameter. It is now called Ajasaloune, but only ruins remain of its former splendour. The desolation is complete, the candlestick is removed out of its place. It is seated at the mouth of the Caystrus, and has still a good harbour, 50 miles nearly S. of Smyrna. Lat. 37. 50. N. Long. 27. 37. E.

EPHOD, (efod) s. [Heb.] an ornament, a king of girdle, worn by the Jewish priests when they attended at the temple; it was brought from behind the neck over the two shoulders; and then hanging down before, was crossed over the stomach, and thence carried round the waist twice, like a girdle, having its two ends brought before, which hung down to the ground. That of the high priest is embroidered with blue, purple, crimson, twisted cotton, and gold. Upon that part which came over the two shoulders were two large precious stones, on each of which were engraven the names of six tribes; where it crossed the priest's breast was a square ornament, called the breast-plate, set with twelve precious stones, on each of which was engraven the name of a different tribe. That of the other priests consisted of linen only.

EPHORI, the name of the chief magistrates of Sparta, under the kings, but yet having a power which they could exert even on them, if needful. They were five in number; and although often rebelled and conspired against, they fell only when the state itself fell under the mightier power of Rome.

EPIC, a. [epos, Gr.] narrative, or consisting of relation, in opposition to dramatic, or that which consists in action. An epic poem is an heroic poem, or discourse delivered in verse, invented with art to form the manners by instruction, disguised under the allegory of an important action, in a probable, entertaining, and surprising manner.

EPICURIUM, s. [epi and kedos, Gr.] among the Greeks and Latins, a poem rehearsed during the funeral solemnity of persons of distinction.

EPICETUS, one of the most distinguished teachers of the Stoic philosophy. He was brought to Rome as a slave from Phrygia, but afterwards obtained his freedom, on which he devoted himself to philosophy. But one treatise, or collection of his various teachings on morality, remains, called the Manual, and worthy of being made one. He lived during the latter part of the 1st century A. D.

EPICURE, s. [from Epicurus,] a person abandoned or given wholly to luxury.

EPICUREAN, s. one who belonged to the school of Epicurus, in ancient times; more recently, one who practically followed out the maxim, Eat and drink, for to-morrow see die.

EPICUREAN, a. luxurious in eating and drinking; contributing to luxury.

EPICURISM, s. [see EPICUREAN,] the sentiments, doctrine, or tenets of Epicurus. Figuratively, luxury of eating, voluptuousness; sensual enjoyments, or gross pleasures.

EPICURUS, an ancient Greek philosopher, whose character and philosophy is not much understood now, because it has been so incorrectly represented. He was the first expounder of the scheme that made happiness the end of man, and pleasure (that is, what is pleasure on the whole, not for a moment) the means of reaching it. Temperance was one of his constant injunctions. In metaphysics and physics, Epicurus advanced nothing new. The pity of the case is, that his ethical doctrines were very good for such a one as himself; but no provision was made that would convict one who professedly adopted them, but sought happiness by sensual pleasures, that he was wrong. Schemes which do not base themselves on the spiritual in man, and square with its instinctive requisitions, have invariably failed most signally, when adopted most completely. Others have had just the opposite lot. Epicurus flourished about 300 B. C. His place of teaching at Athens was called the garden, which others have since turned into the sty.

EPICYCLE, s. [epi and kuklos, Gr.] in Astronomy, a little circle, whose centre is in the circumference of a greater, which being carried along with it, is called its deferent.

EPICYCLOID, s. [epi, kuklos, and eidos, Gr.] in Geometry, a curve generated by the revolution of a point of the circumference of a circle moving at the same time, like a carriage wheel along a road.

EPIDEMIC, EPIDEMICAL, a. [epi and demos, Gr.] in Medicine, a disease which affects a great number of people at the same time, from a cause not belonging to a country.

EPIDERMIS, s. [epi and derma, Gr.] in Anatomy, the cuticle, or scarf-skin. It receives its name from its covering the derma, or true skin; is insensible, and has neither veins, arteries, nor nerves.

EPIGLOTTIS, s. [epi and glotta, Gr.] a small cartilage shaped like a tongue, which covers the larynx of the throat.

EPIGRAM, s. [epigramma, Gr.] in Poetry, a short poem, susceptible of all kinds of subjects, and ending with a lively, just, and unexpected thought.

EPIGRAMMATIC, EPIGRAMMATICAL, a. having the nature or properties of an epigram.

EPIGRAMMATIST, s. one who writes epigrams.

EPIGRAPHIE, s. [epigrapha, Gr.] an inscription on a statue.

EPILEPSY, s. [epilepsia, Gr.] in Medicine, a convulsion either of the whole body or some of its parts, attended with a loss of sense and understanding, and returning from time to time in fits and paroxysms. The English call it the falling-sickness, because persons generally fall down when afflicted with it.

EPILEPTIC, a. affected with an epilepsy, or the falling-sickness; convulsed.

EPILOGUE, (Épilôg) s. [epilogos, Gr.] a poem, or speech, pronounced after a play.

EPIMENIDES, a celebrated Cretan, who was reported to have slept from his early youth till he was above 50 years old, and to have awaked with superhuman knowledge of all things. He was held in the highest esteem during his life, and his sayings and poems were treasured up as infallible truths after his death. He lived about 600 B. C.

EPINYCTIS, s. [epi and nyx, Gr.] in Surgery, a sore at the corner of the eye, which commonly breaks out in the night.

EPIPHANUS, ST. (of Salamina, Cyprus,) was of Jewish origin, became a monk early in life, and after various aberrations and returns, by degrees, was appointed bishop of Salamina. He was an active and popular prelate, and looked upon as a worker of miracles. Against all heresies, as the least exercise of freedom of thought was called, he was most bitter, and spared no ill words nor ill wishes in their behalf. His great work relates to the various heresies of his time, but no very trustworthy account is given of them. He was drowned on his return to Cyprus from a fruitless hunt after some followers of Origen, in 403, aged above 90 years.

EPIPHANY, (Épifany) s. [epiphaneia, Gr.] a festival celebrated on the twelfth day after Christmas, in commemoration of our Saviour's being manifested to the Gentile world, by the appearance of a miraculous blazing star, or meteor, which directed the Magi to the place where he was born.

EPIPHONEMA, (Épifonéma) s. [Gr.] in Rhetoric, a sententious exclamation, frequently added after a narrative or relation of any thing remarkable, containing a useful and spirited reflection on the subject to which it is subjoined.

EPIPHORA, (Épifora) s. [epiphora, Gr.] a preternatural defluxion of the eyes.

EPIPHYLLORHMOUS, a. [epi, phyllon, and sperma, Gr.] in Botany, applied to plants that bear their seed on the back part of their leaves.

EPIPHYSIS, (Épiphysis) s. [epi and physis, Gr.] in Anatomy, a bony substance, or, as it were, a lesser bone, affixed to a larger or principal bone, by the intervention of a cartilage.

EPIPLOCE, s. [epi and ploke, Gr.] a figure of rhetoric, by which one aggravation or striking circumstance is added in due gradation to another; as, he not only spared his enemies, but continued them in employment; not only continued but advanced them.

EPIPRUS, a tract of ancient Greece, lying on the Adriatic Sea, bounded by Illyria, Macedonia, Thessalia, and Ætolia; sometimes however it was regarded as confined within narrower borders. Here was the famous oracle of Dodona. Over this country reled Pyrrhus, famed for his wars with Rome.

EPISCOPACY, s. [episkopos, Gr.] the government of the church by bishops.

EPISCOPAL, a. belonging to, or vested in, a bishop.

EPISCOPATE, s. the government or office of a bishop.

EPISCOPUS, SIMON, a learned divine of Holland, who was chosen to be professor of theology at Leyden, because of his great skill in that science. He was an Arminian in doctrine, indeed may be regarded as the father of the system now known as Arminianism. And he was exposed to great difficulty through the opposition of the Calvinistic majority at the Synod of Dort, which he attended; and was banished. After a while, he returned to Rotterdam, and died in 1643, aged 60 years. His numerous works are valuable to such as feel interested in a struggle which is of the unending kind, both sides being right in what they affirm and wrong in what they deny.

EPISODE, s. [epi and eidodos, Gr.] a separate incident, story, or action, which an historian or poet inserts and connects with his principal action, to furnish the work with a greater variety of events.

EPISODIC, EPISODICAL, a. contained in, or partaking of, the nature of an episode; swelled with unnecessary incidents, or episodes, which are not connected with the main action.

EPISPASTIC, s. [epi and spao, Gr.] in Medicine, a topical remedy, which, being applied to the external parts of the body, attracts the humours to that part.

EPISTLE, s. [epistello, Gr.] a letter, applied generally to the letters of the ancients, and particularly those of the inspired writers.

EPISTOLARY, a. relating, suitable to, or transacted by, letters.

EPITAPH, (Épitaf) s. [epi and taphos, Gr.] an inscription on a tomb or grave-stone.

EPITHALAMIUM, s. [epi and thalamos, Gr.] a poem of compliment written on the marriage of a person.

EPITHIEM, s. [epi and tithemi, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a kind of fomentation or remedy, of a spirituous or aromatic kind, applied externally to the regions of the heart, liver, &c., to strengthen and comfort them, or to correct some intemperance in those parts.

EPITHET, s. an adjective, denoting the quality of the word to which it is joined; a title or surname; a phrase or expression.

EPITOMÉ, s. [epi and temno, Gr.] an abridgment, or reduction of the substance of a book into fewer words and less compass.

To EPITOMIZE, v. a. to abridge; to reduce the substance of a book or writing; to cut short or curtail.

EPITOMIZER, EPITOMIST, s. one who abridges a work: the first word is the most proper.

EPOCH, ÉPOCH, (Époch, époka) s. [epoche, Gr.] in Chronology, a fixed point or period of time, from whence the succeeding years are numbered or counted.

EPODE, s. [epi and ode, Gr.] in Lyric Poetry, the third or last part of the ode; the ancient lyric poem being divided into strophe, antistrophe, and epode. The latter was sung by the priests standing still before the altar.

EPOPEE, s. [epos and poieo, Gr.] the history, action, or fable, which makes the subject of an epic poem.

EPPING, Essex. Great quantities of excellent butter are made in its neighbourhood. Its forest, which is a royal chase, and reaches from the town almost to London, was anciently called the Forest of Essex, and afterwards of Waltham. It is 17 miles from London. Markets, Thursday for cattle, and Friday for provisions. Pop. 2424.

EPSOM, Surrey. It was once celebrated for its mineral waters, of a purgative quality, and the salts produced from them, but now for its races. The orchards, gardens, &c. in and about it, give it a charmingly rural appearance. It is 15 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 3533.

EPSOM SALTS, in Medicine, the common name for sulphate of magnesia, and having its name from being found in the mineral waters at Epsom. It is a useful medicine, and well known.

EPULAT'ION, s. [epulor, Lat.] a feast or banquet.

EPULO'TIC, a. [epi and oule, Gr.] in Medicine, applied to drying, astringent remedies, proper to harden, cicatrize, and incarnate wounds.

EQUALBILITY, s. equality to itself; evenness; uniformity.

EQUABLE, a. [æqualis, Lat.] even; alike; consistent with itself.

EQUALLY, ad. uniformly; in the same proportion. EQUAL, a. [æqualis, Lat.] resembling or like another in bulk, excellence, or any other quality which admits a comparison; even; uniform; in proportion; impartial; indifferent; upon the same terms.

EQUAL, s. one neither inferior nor superior to another in any circumstance, excellence, title, or other quality.

To EQUAL, v. a. to make one thing or person like another. — v. n. to resemble; to be equal; to answer; to recompense.

To EQUALISE, EQUALIZE, v. a. to make even; to be equal to, or in the same proportion.

EQUALITY, s. likeness with respect to any quality; the same degree of quality.

EQUALLY, ad. in the same degree with any other person or thing; alike; impartially.

EQUANGULAR, EQUIANGULAR, a. [æquus and angulus, Lat.] having equal angles.

EQUANIMITY, s. [æquus and animus, Lat.] a state of mind which is neither elated nor depressed; evenness of mind.

EQUANIMOUS, a. even; neither elated nor dejected.

EQUATION, s. [æquo, Lat.] the act of making one thing equal to another. In Algebra, an expression of the same quantity in two dissimilar but equal terms, the value of any unknown terms in which is ascertained by the application of rules, based on general principles of mathematical science. In Astronomy, the reducing the apparent unequal times or motion of the heavenly bodies to equal or mean time. Equation of Time, the difference between mean time as shown by a correct watch or clock, and the apparent time, or that given by an accurately made sun-dial or meridian line. Equation of Payments, in Commercial Arithmetic, a rule to fix the date for the payment of a sum of money, which a debtor had agreed to pay by instalments.

EQUATOR, s. a great circle of the terrestrial sphere, whose poles are the poles of the world. It divides the globe into two equal parts, called the northern and southern hemispheres, passes through the E. and W. points of the horizon, and at the meridian is raised above the horizon as many degrees as the complement of the latitude of any given place. When the sun comes to this circle, the days and nights are equal all round the globe.

EQUATORIAL INSTRUMENT, s. a telescope mounted so as to enable an observer to follow any star in its course by a single motion, the axis of its revolution being parallel to the earth's axis, and its plane of motion to the equator. By means of accurately-marked hour-circles, &c., with this instrument a star can be observed in the day-time, its place being easily known, and this instrument as easily set so as to point to it.

EQUATORIAL, a. belonging to, taken at, or measured on the equator.

EQUERRY, s. [écurie, Fr.] in the British court, is an officer of state under the master of the horse.

EQUESTRIAN, a. [equestri, Lat.] appearing on horseback; skilled in horsemanship. Belonging to the second rank of dignity, or that of knights, in ancient Rome.

EQUICURVE, EQUICURVAL, a. [æquus and crus, Lat.] having legs of an equal length.

EQUIDISTANT, a. [æquus and distant, Lat.] at the same or an equal distance.

EQUIDISTANTLY, ad. at the same distance.

EQUIFORMITY, s. [æquus and forma, Lat.] equality or uniformity.

EQUILATERAL, a. [æquus and latus, Lat.] having its sides equal.

To EQUIBRATE, v. a. to balance equally; to keep even with equal weights on each side.

EQUILIBRATION, s. equipoise; the act of keeping a balance even.

EQUIBRUM, s. [æquus and libra, Lat.] equipoise; equality of weight; equality of evidence, motives, or powers of any sort.

EQUINOCTIAL, (æquinoxial) s. a great circle on the celestial globe, the same as the equator on the terrestrial; to which when the sun comes, the days and nights are equal all round the globe.

EQUINOCTIAL, (æquinoxial) a. [æquus and nox, Lat.] pertaining to the equinox; happening about the time of the equinoxes; being near the equinoctial line, or subject to the inconveniences of those parts which lie near the equator.

EQUINOCTIALLY, ad. in the direction of the equinox.

EQUINOX, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the precise time when the sun enters the equinoctial points Aries or Libra; the former being on the 21st of March, is called the vernal equinox; and the latter on the 23rd of September, the autumnal equinox.

EQUINUMERANT, a. [æquus and numerus, Lat.] having an equal or the same number; consisting of an equal number.

To EQUIP, v. a. [équiper, Fr.] to furnish a horseman with furniture for riding. Figuratively, to furnish, accoutre, or dress out.

EQUIPAGE, s. [équipage, Fr.] furniture for a horse; a carriage; a China tea-service; attendants or retinue; furniture; accoutrements.

EQUIPONDENCY, s. [æquus and pensio, Lat.] freedom from any bias, applied to the will or mind.

EQUIPMENT, s. the act of accoutring or dressing; accoutrement or equipage.

EQUIPOISE, (équipoise) s. [æquus, Lat. and pois, Fr.] equality or evenness of weight; equality of force; that state of a balance wherein the weights on each side are so equal that neither scale will descend.

EQUIPOISENCE, s. [æquus and pollentia, Lat.] equality of force or power.

EQUIPOLENT, a. having equal power or force. Having the same signification, applied to words, synonymous.

EQUIPONDERANCE, EQUIPONDERANCY, s. [æquus and pondus, Lat.] equality of weight.

EQUIPONDERANT, a. being of equal or the same weight.

EQUITABLE, a. [équitable, Fr.] just; impartial; mitigating the rigour of a law, so as to be consistent with justice.

EQUITABLY, ad. in a manner consistent with justice and mercy.

EQUITY, s. [æquitas, Lat.] justice; a correction or abatement of the severity of some law; a temperance which, without being unjust, abates the rigour of the law. Impartiality, applied to opinions, or private determinations. In Law, it is the principles of natural right by which verdicts in the Court of Chancery are presumed to be given; but as chancellors vary, so also does equity.

EQUIVALENCE, EQUIVALENCY, s. [æquus and valere, Lat.] equality of power or worth.

EQUIVALENT, a. equal in value, force, power, importance, weight, dignity, or value.

EQUIVALENT, s. a thing of the same weight, dignity, or value. In Chemistry, the combining proportion of any substance, elementary or compound, with any other.

EQUIVOCAL, a. [æquus and voc, Lat.] of doubtful signification; having different senses or meanings; uncertain; doubtful; happening different ways.

EQUIVOCAL, s. a word of doubtful meaning.

EQUIVOCALLY, ad. in a doubtful or double sense, applied to words. Doubtfully; uncertainly.

EQUIVOCALNESS, s. the ambiguity or double meaning of a word.

To EQUIVOCATE, v. n. [equivocuer, Fr.] to use words of a doubtful or double meaning, with an intention to deceive or impose on another; to quibble.

EQUIVOCATION, s. the using a term or word which has a double signification, used generally in a bad sense.

EQUIVOCATOR, s. one who uses words in doubtful or double meanings, in order to conceal the truth and impose on another.

EQUULEUS, in Astronomy, the little horse, or rather horse's head, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

ERA, in the middle or end of words, especially those which signify the names of places, comes from æer, or æere, Sax. a man, and signifies, when joined to common nouns, an agent, or, when joined to appellatives, or the names of places, an inhabitant. Thus singer, from sing and er, of æer, Sax. a man, denotes a singing man. Londoner, from London and er, of æer, Sax. a man, signifies a London man, or a native and inhabitant of London.

ERA, s. [Lat.] an account of time reckoned from any particular period, or epoch.

ERADICATION, s. [e and radix, Lat.] emission of radience.

To ERADICATE, v. a. [e and radix, Lat.] to pull or pluck up by the roots. Figuratively, to extirpate, or destroy entirely.

ERADICATION, s. the act of pulling or plucking up by the roots; extirpation; total destruction.

ERADICATIVE, a. [e and radix, Lat.] in Medicine, that expels a disease to the very root; that cures radically; that drives entirely away.

To ERASE, v. a. [eraser, Fr.] to scratch out any thing written; to expunge.

ERASEMENT, (erdzement) s. applied to buildings and cities, entire destruction and demolition. Applied to writings, an entire blotting and scratching out.

ERASMUS, DESIDERIUS, one of the great scholars of the time of the Reformation; a native of Holland, who studied in France, and afterwards led a rambling life, appearing now in England, where he had good friends, and was a professor at Cambridge for a while; now in Flanders, where he served the Archduke Charles; again, in Italy, where he visited the chief schools, and availed himself of the aid of the learned men of the country; and in Switzerland, where he resided long at Basle. He wrote many books, and amongst them one on Free Will, in which he attacked Luther's doctrine, and drew from him his heroic but unsatisfactory work on the Enslaved Will. This attack made Luther give up the hopes he entertained of having Erasmus on his side, seeing that he had written with such pungent satire against the absurdities and monstrosities of Rome. His edition of the Greek Testament was the work which cost him most labour, although it is superseded now. We owe to him and the deficient criticism of the age, that the perplexing interpolation of the verses about the three heavenly witnesses, in the First Epistle of John, is in our Bibles. The actual service done by his wit to the cause of the Reformation was very great. He died in 1536, aged 69 years.

ERATO, s. in Greek Mythology, one of the nine Muses that presides over love-poems; she is generally represented like a young maiden of a gay humour, crowned with myrtle and roses, holding a harp in her right hand, and a bow in the other, with a little winged Cupid placed by her, armed with his bows and arrows.

ERATO-STHENES, a distinguished mathematician and astronomer of Alexandria, who also had the charge of the famous library there. The most celebrated of his achievements were the measuring of the circumference of the earth, and the determining of the obliquity of the ecliptic. He flourished about 270 B.C.

EREBUS, s. in Heathen Mythology, an infernal god, born of Chaos and Tenebræ. It is likewise the name of one of the infernal rivers.

ERRE, ad. [er, Sax.] before; sooner than.

To ERRECT, v. a. [er and rect, Lat.] to raise in a straight line; to place perpendicular to the horizon. In Geometry, to erect a perpendicular, is to raise a right line upon another, so as they may form right angles. Figuratively, to build; to exalt; or assume an office without being authorized, used with into. To assume a principle, or found a doctrine; to raise from a state of dejection.

ERECT, v. a. upright, opposed to leaning, or looking downwards; lifted upright; vigorous; bold; unshaken.

ERECTION, (erékahon) s. the act of raising, or the state of a thing raised upwards; the act of building or raising houses; establishment; elevation.

ERECTNESS, s. uprightness of posture or form.

EREMITE, s. [eremos, Gr.] See HERMIT.

ERMITICAL, a. leading the life of a hermit.

ERFURT, a town of Prussia, formerly the capital of a principality of the same name. It stands on the Gera, and is tolerably strongly fortified. It has some good public buildings, and which were once palaces. It has also a good library, and was formerly a good university. It has some manufactures, and is a place of some trade. Population, about 25,000. Lat. 51. 0. N. Long. 11. 6. E.

ERGOT, s. in Farriery, a sort of stub, like a piece of soft horn, placed behind and below the pastern joint. In Botany, and Medicine, a species of disease to which wheats and grasses are subject, the grain being replaced by a peculiarly formed fungus. It is not extensively used in medicine, because of the violent effects it produces.

ERIDANUS, in Astronomy, the river Po, a constellation of the southern hemisphere.

ERIE, LAKE, in N. America, forming the boundary between the United States and Canada. It is 240 miles long, and 60 wide in its broadest part. It receives the waters of Superior, Huron, and Michigan Lakes, through Detroit river, and discharges them over the precipice at Niagara into Lake Ontario. The business done on this lake is immense, and is increasing.

ERIGENA, JOHN SCOTUS, a scholar, or schoolman, of the 9th century, who, though Irish by birth, lived in France, and devoted himself to the cultivation of the liberal sciences as then studied. He visited Alfred the Great, on occasion of his having excited the pope's displeasure. His works are very curious. He died about 870.

ERIVAN, a fortified city of Georgia, Russia. It is dirty and ill built; the ramparts are of earth, and the churches of the Christians are small, and half underground, resembling catacombs. Population, about 10,000. Lat. 40. 20. N. Long. 44. 10. E.

ERLINGO. See ERYNGO.

ERLANGEN, a town and university of Bavaria, Germany. It stands near the Schwabach, and is strongly built, being divided into the Old Town, and the New Town, or Christian's Erlangen. There is a good library, and the university is flourishing. In the town are manufactories, but of no great account. Population, about 12,000. Lat. 49. 34. N. Long. 11. 7. E.

ERMINE, s. [Armenia, Lat.] in Natural History, an animal which nearly resembles the weasel, and inhabits various parts of the world. In the north of Europe and Asia, they have, in the winter, a rich white fur, having only the tip of the tail black, whereas in the summer the body is of a lightish brown. It is valuable only when in its winter dress. In Heraldry, a white field, or fur, powdered or interspersed with black spots.

ERMINE, a. clothed in ermine.

ERNE, at the end of words which signify a repository or receptacle, is derived from erne, Sax. a place.

ERNE, or EARNE, a lake of Ireland, in the county of Fermanagh, Ulster. It is 40 miles in length, and is divided by a narrow strait into two parts. It affords capital fishing. Ennis-killen, the capital of the county, is the only place of importance lying on it.

ERNESTI, the name of an uncle and two nephews, celebrated for their learning and critical skill. The uncle, John Augustus, is most eminent, as being professor of theology at Leipsic. He died in 1781. His nephews died in 1801 and 1802.

To ERODE, v. a. [er and rodo, Lat.] to canker, eat away, or corrode.

EROSION, s. the act of eating away; the state of being eaten away or corroded.

ERPENIUS, THOMAS, a famous Dutch scholar, who studied the oriental languages by actual travel. He taught as professor of those tongues at Leyden. Arabic was, however, his great study. His grammar is still used. He died in 1624, aged 40 years.

To ERR, v. a. [erro, Lat.] to wander, or move without any certain direction; to stray, or miss the right way; to commit an error; to mistake.

ERRAND, s. [erenth, Sax.] a message; something to be done or told by a person sent from one man to another.

ERRANT, a. [erro, Lat.] wandering without any certain direction; roving; rambling; applied to a particular order of knights celebrated in romance, who went about in search of adventures. Vile; abandoned; completely bad. See ARRANT.

ERRANTRY, s. the condition of a wanderer; the profession of a knight-errant.

ERRATA, s. [Lat.] the faults of the printer inserted in the beginning or end of a book.

ERRATIC, a. [erro, Lat.] keeping no certain order of motion; holding no established course; irregular; changeable.

ERRATICALLY, ad. without rules, or without any established method or order.

ERRHINE, s. [errinon, Gr.] something snuffed up the nose, causing sneezing.

ERRONEOUS, a. [erro, Lat.] wandering, or going without any particular direction; irregular, or leaving the right way or road; mistaken, or mistaking.

ERRONEOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to err or mistake.

ERROREOUSNESS, s. mistake; want of conformity to truth.

ERROR, s. [Lat.] a mistake of the judgment in giving assent to that which is not true; an act which implies the taking a thing to be what it is not; a blunder; a roving excursion; a wandering beyond bounds. In Common Law, a fault or oversight, either in pleading or in process. A writ of error is that which is brought to remedy either of these faults, or to reverse a false judgment.

EKS, s. in Botany, a plant, the same as the bitter vetch.

ERSKINE, THOMAS LORD, for a short time chancellor of Great Britain. He was nobly descended, and studied at Edinburgh and St. Andrew's. After trying the navy and the army, he set to work on the law, and studying diligently, rose rapidly, sitting in parliament for Portsmouth, till he became chancellor. He espoused the popular view of many questions, at the risk of losing his own ground; but he seemed to recover all his losses, and was finally placed at the head of the profession. He died in 1823, aged 73 years. His eloquence and wit will not soon be forgotten.

ERST, ad. [Teut.] at first; formerly, till now. Used at present only in poetry.

ERUBE/SCENCE, ERUBE/SCENCY, s. [erubescencia, Lat.] redness; blushing.

To ERUCT, v. a. [e and ructo, Lat.] to belch, or break wind upwards.

ERUCTION, s. the act of breaking wind upwards; the wind broken from the stomach by the mouth; any sudden burst of wind or matter cast upwards.

ERUDITION, s. [eruditio, Lat.] learning or knowledge acquired from reading, especially that which is acquired from the study of the ancients. SYNON. Learning implies simply that knowledge which we acquire by our common study at school; Literature denotes polite learning, or an acquaintance with the BELLES LETTRES, and is rather practical; but Erudition signifies great depth of knowledge, with a particular relation to that which is speculative.

ERUGINOUS, a. [erugo, Lat.] partaking of the substance or qualities of copper.

ERUPTION, (erupshon) s. [e and rumpo, Lat.] the act of breaking or bursting from any confinement; the active state of a volcano; a burst of combustible matter or gunpowder; a breaking out of pimples on the skin. A violent exclamation, applied to the voice.

ERUPTIVE, a. bursting with force and violence from an enclosure or confinement.

ERYNGO, s. in Botany, a plant with prickly leaves, growing on the sea-shore, called also sea holly.

ERYSIPELAS, s. [eruthos and pelos, Gr.] in Medicine, an inflammatory disorder affecting the skin, generally called St. Anthony's fire. In some cases blisters are formed beneath the skin, which is thrown off on their suppuration. The extension of the disease from the supericies to the internal parts of the body, is usually fatal.

ERZERUM, a city of Turkey in Asia, built on a peninsula formed by the sources of the river Euphrates. It lies in a fruitful plain, and is a considerable thoroughfare for the caravans which pass to the Indies. Their merchandise is Persian silks, cottons, calicoes, furs, gall nuts, rhubarb, and madder. Population, about 20,000, most of whom are Turks. It is about 250 miles from Aleppo. Lat. 39. 57. N. Long. 40. 57. E.

ERZGEBIRGE, the name of one of the German mountain chains. It forms part of what were anciently called the Hercynian mountains, and lies between Bohemia and Saxony. Various tributaries of the Elbe spring from both sides of this range. It is covered in good part with valuable timber; but the abundance of metallic and mineral wealth makes this one of the richest tracts in Europe. One or two of the heights exceed 4000 feet, the rest vary between about 2000 and 3000 feet.

ESCALADE, s. [Fr.] a furious attack of a wall or fort, by means of scaling ladders, without breaking ground, or carrying on regular works to secure the men.

ESCALOP, s. [escalope, Fr.] in Conchology, a fish whose shell is somewhat of the cockle kind, but rather flatter, and considerably larger, and is irregularly indented. An inequality of margin; indenture.

To ESCALOP, v. a. See SCALOP, which is the most common but the least proper way of spelling.

To ESCAPE, v. a. [echapper, Fr.] to avoid any inconvenience which surrounds a person; to fly from; to pass unobserved or unnoticed.

ESCAPE, s. an avoiding or flight from danger, pursuit, or confinement; subterfuge, or evasion; a sally, or irregular flight, or start of passion or genius. In Law, a violent or private evasion from some lawful restraint, confinement, or custody.

ESCAPEMENT, s. that part of a watch by which the motion is regulated as to rate and evenness; namely, the balance, hair-spring, and scapement-wheel or lever.

ESCHALOT, (pron. shallô) s. [Fr.] in Botany, a plant having a tumefied bulbous root, like that of an onion, which is increased after the same manner as garlic, but set earlier, because it springs sooner, and taken up soon as the leaves begin to wither. They give a fine relish to most sauces, and are strongly aromatic.

ESCHARA, (pron. shar) s. [eschara, Gr.] in Surgery, a hard crust or scab formed on the surface of the flesh by means of a burning-hot iron or caustic medicine.

ESCHAROTIC, (eschurôtic) a. [eschara, Gr.] having the power to produce a scab by its caustic quality, applied to medicines; caustic.

ESCHE/AT, (eschett) s. [eschœir, Fr.] in Law, any lands or other profits that fall to a lord of the manor by forfeiture, or the death of his tenant without heir general or special; the place in which the king, or other lord, has escheats of his tenants; a writ which lies, where the tenant dies as above, without heir general or special, against him that possesses the lands of the deceased.

To ESCH/AT, (eschett) v. a. in Law, to fall to the lord of the manor by forfeiture, or for want of heirs.

ESCHE/ATOR, (eschettor) s. in Law, an officer that takes notice of the escheats of the king in the county to which he belongs, and certifies them to the Exchequer.

To ESCH/VE, v. a. [eschœir, old Fr.] to fly, avoid, shun, or decline. A word almost obsolete.

ESCOBAR, ANTHONY, a famous Jesuit preacher and writer of Spain, during the 17th century, when he attained great celebrity. Amongst his numerous works, none is so well known, by name at least, as his Cases of Conscience. Pascal, in his Provincials, has unsparingly exposed its principles. He died in 1669, aged 80 years.

ESCORT, s. [escorte, Fr.] a company of soldiers, or ships of war, attending others, to keep them from falling into the hands of an enemy.

To ESCORT, v. a. [escorter, Fr.] to guard or convoy by sea or land with an armed force, to prevent a person or thing from falling into the hands of an enemy.

ESCOT, s. [Fr.] a tax paid in boroughs and corporations towards the support of the community, called vulgarly scot and lot.

To ESCOT, v. a. to pay a man's reckoning; to support.

ESCRITOIR, (commonly pronounced scrutoire) s. [Fr.] a kind of bureau, or chest of drawers, the top of which is furnished with conveniences for writing.

ESCUAGE, s. [escut, Fr.] in our old customs, a kind of knight's service, called service of the shield, by which the tenant was bound to follow his lord to the war at his own charge; also a sum of money paid to the lord in lieu of such service.

ESCALAPIUS, in Mythology, the god of medicine, fabled to be the son of Apollo, usually represented with a serpent twined on a staff.

ESCULENT, a. [esculentus, Lat.] eatable.

ESCULENTS, s. such plants or roots as may be eaten; such as beets, carrots, artichokes, leeks, onions, parsnips, potatoes, &c.

ESCURIAL, a village of New Castile, celebrated for its palace and convent, built by Philip II. of Spain, in 1563. It consists of a royal mansion, a church built after the plan of St. Peter's at Rome, cloisters, a college, a library, containing upwards of 20,000 volumes, shops of different artists, apartments for a great number of families, an extensive park and fine gardens, adorned with a great number of fountains. It stands in a dry, barren country, surrounded by rugged mountains, and is built of gray stones, found in the neighbourhood. It is built in the form of a gridiron, because St. Lawrence, to whom it was dedicated, was broiled on one. In the vaulted chapel there is a magnificent mausoleum, called the pantheon, similar to that at Rome. It is seated on the river Guadara, 20 miles N. W. of Madrid.

ESCUTCHEON, (eschetehon) s. [escutum, Lat.] in Heraldry, the shield whereon coats of arms are represented; taken from a custom of the ancients, who were wont to have their shields painted with some particular device or fancy; which was a token of honour, some not being permitted to have them till they had performed some honourable action.

ESDRAS, s. See EZRA.

ESPALIER, s. [Fr.] in Gardening, rows of trees planted round a garden, plantation, or in hedges, for the defence of tender plants against violence and injury of wind and weather; commonly applied to hedges of fruit trees, which are trained up regularly to a lattice-work of wood, formed of ash-poles, or square long timbers of fir, &c. The trees chiefly planted for espaliers are apples, pears, and sometimes plums.

ESPARCET, s. in Agriculture, a kind of sainfoin.

ESPECIAL, (espeshial) a. [specialis, Lat.] principal; chief; eminently serviceable in effecting any end.

ESPECIALLY, (espeshially) ad. principally; chiefly.

ESPLANADE, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, the empty space between the glacis of a citadel and the first houses of a town.

REFERENCE
TABLE
HUNDREDS

- |              |              |
|--------------|--------------|
| 1. Brecknell | 11. Thurston |
| 2. Epping    | 12. Waltham  |
| 3. Chafford  | 13. Waltham  |
| 4. Chafford  | 14. Waltham  |
| 5. Chafford  | 15. Waltham  |
| 6. Chafford  | 16. Waltham  |
| 7. Chafford  | 17. Waltham  |
| 8. Chafford  | 18. Waltham  |
| 9. Chafford  | 19. Waltham  |
| 10. Chafford | 20. Waltham  |

ESPOUSAL, (esposale) a. used in, or belonging to, the ceremony of betrothing.

ESPOUSALS, (esposale) s. it has no singular, [esponsalia, Lat. esposailles, Fr.] the act of affiancing or contracting a man and woman to each other. Figuratively, a wedding.

To ESPOUSE, (espoûze) v. a. [epouser, Fr.] to contract in marriage, or to betroth to another; to marry; to adopt or engage in a thing as a principal; to defend or maintain an opinion, cause, or party.

To ESPY, v. a. [espier, Fr.] to see a thing at a distance; to discover a thing intended to be concealed; to see unexpectedly; to discover, or make discoveries in the character of a spy.

ESQUILINE, the name of one of the seven hills on which old Rome was built. It is the edge of the ground overlooking the valley of the Tiber, and is immediately opposite the Palatine Hill. On it stood the house of Nero, and the baths of Titus.

ESQUIMAUX, the name of a race inhabiting the most northerly parts of N. America, particularly the tract round Hudson's Bay. They are much like the Mongol variety in some respects, are very short in stature, and have very little intellectual development. Their mode of life is degraded in the extreme; and the uncooked flesh of seals and bears constitutes their chief diet. Rude and simple religious ideas were found amongst them by the Moravian missionaries; some of whom have laboured amongst them, not without success. They live in clans, and have no fixed places of abode, as it costs them little to build their huts, and as their residence depends on the supply of food in the locality.

ESQUIRE, (pron. squire) s. [écuyer, Fr.] the armour-bearer, or attendant upon a knight. A title of dignity next to that of knight. The title is now given to all the sons of noblemen and their heirs male for ever; the four esquires of the king's body; the eldest sons of baronets, and of knights of the Bath, and their heirs male in the right line; to those that serve the king in any worshipful employment, &c., and to such as his Majesty gives arms, and creates esquires, with a collar of SS. of silver, who were formerly called white esquires. The chief of some families enjoy this title by prescription; and those that bear any superior office in the commonwealth, as high sheriff of any county; and he who is justice of the peace; together with under-barristers, and graduates of the university during their residence at college. In Heraldry, the crest of an esquire is set upon a helmet looking sideways, with closed visor. The complimentary use of this title has effectually destroyed the value of it as a class designation.

To ESSAY, v. a. [essayer, Fr.] to attempt, try, or endeavour; to make an experiment; to try the purity of metals. This latter sense is now confined to, and spelt, assay.

ESSAY, [the accent is used on either syllable,] s. an attempt, endeavour, or trial; a loose sally of the mind; an irregular piece, wherein the thoughts are set down as they occur to the mind, without any regard to method.

ESSAYIST, s. an author who writes essays. Addison, Steele, Johnson, Moore, &c., &c., are our classic essayists. Those of the present day have attempted something higher, through the worthier sense of our great periodicals.

ESSENCE, s. [essentia, Lat.] in Logic, the very nature of any being, whether it be existing or no; that which determines and constitutes the nature of a thing, or which is absolutely necessary to its being what it is. Figuratively, being, or a person which has existence. In Medicine and Chemistry, the chief properties or virtues extracted from any simple, reduced to a narrow compass; a perfume or odour.

To ESSENCE, v. a. to scent with any perfume.

ESSENCES, or ESSENCIANS, in Jewish Antiquity, one of the three ancient sects among that people, who outdid the Pharisees in their most rigorous observances. They allowed a future state, but denied a resurrection from the dead. Their way of life was very singular; they did not marry, but adopted the children of others, whom they bred up in the institutions of their sect; they despised riches, and had all things in common; and never changed their clothes till they were entirely worn out.

ESSENTIAL, (essentshiad) s. [essentials, Lat.] necessary to the constitution or existence of a thing; principal; important in the highest degree; pure; highly rectified.

ESSENTIAL, (essentshiad) being or existence; nature, or constituent principles; a chief or principal point.

ESSENTIALLY, (essentshially) adv. principally.

ESSEQUIBO, a river of S. America, flowing into the Caribbean Sea, which formerly gave its name to a province of British Guiana.

ESSEX, a county in the E. of England, lying on the German Ocean, bounded by Suffolk, Cambridge, Hertfordshire, and Middlesex; and separated by the Thames from Kent. It is about 54 miles long, and 48 broad, and is divided into 18 hundreds. Its surface is level, yet sufficiently varied not to be monotonous; but, excepting at a few points, the coast is flat and marshy. The rivers are the Thames, the Stour, the Lea, the Chelmer, the Blackwater, the Coln, &c. The soil is varied, but on the whole it is an admirable corn county. It has also excellent pastures; and some woods of considerable extent, as Epping Forest. It produces in addition to farm-produce, oysters called natives, and some few textile manufactures. Chelmsford is its county town. Colchester is a place of some importance. Population, 344,979. It returns 10 members to parliament.

ESSEX, the title of two earls who have filled a considerable space in English history. Robert Devereux, the first, rose into public notice through the favour showed him by Queen Elizabeth, after the death of the worthless Earl of Leicester. He was young, handsome, accomplished, of a noble spirit; but unschooled by trouble, so that when it came it overthrew him. The queen's arbitrary disposition put him often in such a position, that, like an untamed boy, he burst out into extravagances of passion. Her affection for him still restored him; till he took on one occasion such steps as easily bore the construction put on them by the lawyers, who found him an impediment to their own advancement,—and amongst (with deepest shame) we must rank Lord Bacon, before that a personal friend, and one much favoured by Essex;—and he was accordingly found guilty of high treason, and executed for it in 1601, aged 34 years. The other, Robert Devereux, was known only by being unhappy as to domestic circumstances and much engaged in the continental wars, till Charles I. began to teach these kingdoms those fearful lessons which afterwards recoiled on his own head. He was one of the king's commanders against the Scots, and afterwards a party at the treaty of Ripon. But, on the outbreak of the civil war, he accepted the command of the Parliament's armies, fought at Edgehill, Reading, Newbury, and other places with success and credit, but was disgracefully driven to capitulate in Cornwall. He was the darling of the Presbyterian party, and, like them, he feared to beat the king too well. The self-denying ordinance was levelled most at him. He died in 1646, aged 54 years.

ESSOIGN, essoîn, s. [Fr.] in Law, an excuse allowed for the absence of a person who is summoned to appear in a court of justice; the person who is excused for absence from a court of justice.

To ESTABLISH, v. a. [établir, Fr.] to settle firmly; to fix unalterably; to settle, fix, or confirm in any privilege; to make firm or ratify a law; to found, build, or place in such a manner as not to be subject to fall or move. SYNON. To institute, is to create and form things, having some relation to the author, or him who first contrived or laid down the plan. To found, is to give birth to such plan. To establish, is to fix that plan upon a lasting basis. To endow, is to provide the necessities for its subsistence.

ESTABLISHER, s. one who establishes.

ESTABLISHMENT, s. [établissement, Fr.] a confirmation or ratification of something already done; a settled form of regulation, or management of a government or family; a fundamental principle, or settled law; allowance, salary. In Ecclesiastical affairs it is applied to a church that is taken into the pay and under the special protection of the state.

ESTATE, s. [état, Fr.] condition, circumstance, or rank of life, with regard to prosperity, affluence, nobility, wealth, or their contraries; fortune, generally applied to a person's possessions in land, rank, or quality.

ESTE, one of the most ancient and illustrious families of Italy, coming first to notice in Tuscany, bearing their share both in good and evil, through the long contest for the mastery waged amongst the various republics and states of the peninsula, and against them all by the empire, and afterwards sending forth an offshoot to Germany, whence the house of Brunswick sprang.

To ESTIMATE, v. a. [estimer, Lat.] to set a value on a thing; to compare, or fix the value of a thing by comparison; to prize; to value; to regard as an object of worth and reverence; to respect, or account. SYNON. When we entertain a good opinion of a man, we are said to regard him; when that regard increases, we call it esteem; we testify that esteem by veneration, and prove it by submission through respect.

ESTEE/M, s. the act of respect paid to a person or thing on account of real or supposed worth; the value, respect, or reputation of a person or thing.

ESTEE/MER, s. one who regards a person or thing as an object of worth, and claiming respect.

ESTHER, one of the historical books of the Old Testament, relating the romantic circumstances by which the Jewish people who were residing in Persia were saved from total annihilation. Considerable difference of opinion exists as to which Persian king was intended by Ahasuerus; one theory, as probable (or more) as the rest, states it to be the same Xerxes who invaded Greece, and was so shamefully defeated. But the existence of an annual festival, called Purim, ever since this event, and the high esteem in which this narrative of their deliverance has ever been held by the Jews, is sufficient to establish the authenticity of the record, and the facts also it narrates.

ESTHONIA, or REVEL, a considerable government of Russia, between the Baltic and the Gulf of Finland, bounded by the governments of St. Petersburg and Riga. It is a flat district, and does not contain a large proportion of land fitted for agriculture; but abounds in woods and bogs, and has many lakes. It is not much advanced in civilization, and suffers sadly from absenteeism on the part of the proprietors. The people are mostly Lutherans. Population, under 250,000. Revel is the capital.

ESTHWAITE WATER, a lake in Lancashire between Hawkshead and Windermere Water, about two miles and a half in length, and half a mile in breadth; the shores and vicinity of which are exceedingly beautiful.

ESTIMABLE, a. [estimable, Fr.] valuable; worthy of honour, respect, or esteem.

ESTIMABLENESS, s. that quality which renders a thing worthy of regard and respect.

To ESTIMATE, v. a. [estimo, Lat.] to rate; to fix the value of a thing; to judge of a thing by comparing it with something else; to calculate or compute.

ESTIMATE, s. a calculation or computation; value; the act of valuing, or valuation; the assignment of proportion; a judgment formed from comparing one thing with another.

ESTIMATION, s. the assigning the proper portion or share of a thing; a calculation or computation regarding value or number; judgment, or opinion formed on comparing; that degree of value or respect paid a person or thing, which arises from considering their merits.

ESTIMATIVE, a. having the power of making a comparison or calculation, and thereby determining the surplus or preference between two or more things.

ESTIMATOR, s. a person who, from considering the nature of things, settles their respective importance, worth, preference, or value.

ESTIVAL, a. [æstivus, Lat.] belonging to the summer.

ESTOPEL, s. in Law, such an act as bars any legal process.

ESTOVERS, s. in Law, necessities allowed by law.

ESTRADE, s. [Fr.] an alcove or bed-room; an even or level place; a public road or highway.

ESTRAMADURA, a province of Spain, bordering on Portugal, about 140 miles in length and 120 in breadth; bounded by Leon, Old Castile, New Castile, and Andalusia. It is mountainous, and its rivers are the Guadiana and the Tagus. It has mines of several metals, and abounds with corn, wine, and fruits; but the air is often hot and sultry. Badajoz is its capital. Population, about 500,000.

ESTRAMADURA, a province of Portugal, on the Atlantic; bounded by Beira and Alentejo. It is about 140 miles in length and 80 in its greatest breadth. A range of mountains crosses the N. part, and the Tagus is its chief river. It produces wine, oil, honey, salt, and oranges. Lisbon is its chief place. Population, under 1,000,000.

To ESTRANGE, v. a. [etranger, Fr.] to keep at a distance; to withdraw; to alienate or divert a thing from its original use; to withdraw, or withhold. To alienate, or change from kindness to coolness and indifference, applied to the affections.

ESTRANGEMENT, s. disuse; removal; the act of considering a thing with indifference or coolness.

ESTRAY. See STRAY.

ESTRE/ATE, (alredt) s. [extractum, Lat.] in Law, is a true copy or duplicate of an original writing or record, especially fines, amerciaments, penalties, &c., set down and imposed in the rolls of a court, to be levied by a bailiff, or other officer.

ESTREPEMENT, s. [estrepier, Fr.] in Law, any waste or spoil made upon lands by a tenant for life, to the prejudice of a person who has them in reversion.

ESTUARY, s. [æstua, Lat.] an arm of the sea; the mouth of a lake or river, which communicates with the sea; a frith. See ÆSTUARY.

ESTUATION, s. the state of boiling; agitation; commotion.

ESURIENT, a. [esuriens, Lat.] hungry; voracious.

ESURINE, a. corroding; sharp; eating.

ETA/PE, s. [Fr.] in War, the provisions and forage allowed an army in their route through a country.

ETC., [a contraction of et cetera, Lat.] and so on; and the like; and the rest; and others of the same kind.

ETCH, s. in Husbandry, a first crop, or a crop taken off ground which is fallow.

ETCHING, s. [etizen, Teut.] in Engraving, one of the various ways of preparing a copper-plate for the purpose of multiplying copies of any design. A ground of wax is first laid on the plate, on which the tracing of the design is made with a needle used for the purpose, all the lines being cut through to the plate; a rim of wax is then raised round it, and acid poured on, which in a short time bites into the copper to a sufficient depth to allow of the plate being used to give copies by means of ink and a rolling-press. The advantages of this mode of engraving are, the ease with which a plate may be prepared, the rapidity of execution, and its allowing free scope to the peculiar skill of the engraver.

ETERNAL, a. [æternus, i. e. æviæternus, from ærum, Lat.] applied to the existence of the Deity, without beginning or end; endless; immortal. Figuratively, perpetual; constant; without intermission; that has been and always will be unchangeably the same.

ETERNAL, s. [eternel, Fr.] one of the appellations of God, implying his necessary existence, or his existence before all time.

ETERNALIST, s. [æternus, Lat.] one who holds that the world was never created, but existed from eternity.

To ETERNALIZE, v. a. to make eternal, immortal, or to exist without end.

ETERNALLY, ad. without beginning or end; without change; from eternity to eternity; perpetually; constantly; or without intermission.

ETERNITY, s. [æternitas, Lat.] duration without beginning or end.

To ETERNIZE, v. a. [eterniser, Fr.] to render perpetual or endless; to render immortal; to immortalize.

ETHELBALD, a king of Wessex, during the life of Ethelwolf his father; and, in name, his successor as Bretwalda. He conspired against him during his absence from England; and on his death, married Judith, his second wife; which incest caused great scandal. He reigned about six years, and died in 860.

ETHELBERT, a king of Kent, and third Saxon Bretwalda. He was a monarch of great power and ability, and raised Kent to the greatest dignity it ever reached. During his reign happened the mission of Augustine from Rome, and the conversion of the first Anglo-Saxons to the Roman faith; an event of unspeakable moment to England, and a blessing too, as the subsequent history shows. His laws were highly esteemed, and served as the basis for future codes. He died in 616. Augustine's arrival happened in 598.

ETHELBERT, first, king of Kent during the lives of Ethelwolf his father, and Ethelbald his brother, and successor of the latter to the title of Bretwalda. He was beset throughout his reign by the Danes, and at one time bought them off, and another, drove them away with arms, but always to return again. He died in 866, having reigned six years.

ETHELRED I., king of Kent during his brother Ethelbert's reign, and successor to his titular sovereignty. During this reign the sons of Ragnar Lodbrok, Halfdene, Hingwar, and Hubba, ravaged the N. and E. parts of the country, killed Edmund of E. Anglia, and carried all before them. In one of the numerous engagements with them, Ethelred was fatally wounded, and soon after died, in 871, having enjoyed his title about five years.

ETHELRED II., (the Unready), son of the fair Elfrida, who murdered Edward, his half-brother, to bring him to the throne. Dunstan was the evil genius of the first part of his reign, and the Danes of the last. And in conflicts with Danes and bishops, and rebellions, the unhappy man's reign was spent. He impoverished his country to buy off the Danes, who kept no faith. He had made a peace with the duke of Normandy, and married his sister, whence rose the pretext for Norman invasion, and the ultimate fall of the Saxon kingdom. The worst error of Ethelred was the massacre of the Danes on St. Brice's day, which led to more sanguinary invasions, heavier taxes, ship-money, bad government in all forms. Edric Streone rose in a bad eminence. Sweyn became master of greater part of the north, and had become crowned king. Canute followed him, and was fast conquering the remainder. Ethelred died in 1016, having occupied the throne about 38 years.

ETHELWOLF, king of Kent during Egbert his father's life, and successor to him as king of Wessex and Bretwalda. The first serious Danish invasions happened during his reign. The complete submission of England to Rome also, for Ethelwolf journeyed to Rome for consecration at the pope's hands. He divorced his first wife to marry Judith, daughter of the Frankish monarch. On his return, he found his son Ethelbald in rebellion, but he pardoned him, and gave him Wessex as an appanage, taking Kent, Essex, and Sussex to himself. He died in 857, having reigned about 20 years.

ETHER, s. [ether, Lat.] in Astronomy, a thin, subtle matter or medium, much finer and rarer than air, which is thought to commence from the limits of our atmosphere, and to possess the whole heavenly space. In Chemistry, the oxide of ethule, (which however has not yet been obtained in a separate form,) which possesses the properties of a base. It is a colourless, clear, and very mobile liquid; has a pleasant odour, and an aromatic taste. It is highly inflammable, and the vapour arising during its very rapid evaporation, mixed with atmospheric air, is a very dangerous explosive compound. It is used in medicine, internally as a stimulant; and externally to produce cold by its evaporation, and for embrocations. Its vapour when inhaled produces either a profound stupor, or else suspends the operation of the nerves of feeling, and amputations and other painful operations may be performed without the consciousness of the patient. The application requires care; but resuscitation can be effected by the use of pure oxygen gas. Similar effects will be noticed amongst the phenomena of Mesmerism.

ETHEREAL, a. [ether, Lat.] formed of ether. Figuratively, heavenly.

ETHEREIDGE, SIR GEORGE, a dramatist and wit of the time of Charles II., much admired at court for his prodigality and licentious productions. He was knighted by James II. to help him to a money-match, and employed by him on some embassy, where he died worthy of his life, whilst intoxicated, in 1683, aged about 47 years. His name cannot be excluded from the list of English writers; but the true character of his works may serve to make them estimated at their true worth.

ETHEREOUS, a. formed of ether. Figuratively, heavenly.

ETHIC, ETHICAL, a. [ethos, Gr.] moral; containing precepts of morality.

ETHICALLY, ad. after the manner of ethics, or moral philosophy.

ETHICS, s. [ethikos, Gr.] the science of morality; or that part of philosophy which treats of our duties as men, and the ultimate grounds on which they rest.

ETHIOPIA, the name anciently given to the country occupying the upper part of the valley of the Nile, or to those parts of Africa S. of Egypt and Libya. Various writers use this name so differently as to show that it was often employed without any clear or distinct information. Merce was believed to be the capital; and the kingdom was esteemed more ancient than that of Egypt. Ammon (whom the Greeks represented as their Zeus or Jupiter, with the horns of a ram) was the chief divinity; another is identified with Osiris. A queen of the name of Candace is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, and in general history also. This country seems to have received Christianity in the earliest ages, and the Coptic and Abyssinian churches are the successors of those first followers of the Saviour.

ETHIOPIA LANGUAGE, one of the Semitic family of tongues, closely allied to the Arabic, and very valuable as throwing light on the Hebrew. The system of writing is very peculiar, and bears some resemblance to that of the Sanscrit families, in the way of appending the vowels to the preceding consonants. The Bible was translated into this language very early, some parts of which have been reprinted lately, as it is yet understood in Abyssinia. See ENOCH.

ETHIOP'S MINERAL, s. in Pharmacy, a combination of mercury with sulphur.

ETHNIC, a. [ethnos, Gr.] heathen; pagan; not enlightened with the knowledge of the one and true God, opposed to Jewish or Christian.

ETHNICS, s. heathens; idolaters, opposed to Jews or Christians.

ETHOLOGICAL, a. [ethos and logos, Gr.] treating of morality.

ETIENNE, ST., a town of France, in the department of Loire. It is a celebrated manufactory of cutlery, and iron-ware of all descriptions; and has moreover some silk factories. It is 260 miles from Paris. Population, about 60,000. Lat. 45. 20. N. Long. 4. 26. E.

ETIOLOGY, s. [aitia and logos, Gr.] an account of the causes of any thing, generally applied to distempers.

ETIQUETTE, s. a French word, primarily denoting a ticket or title affixed to a bag or bundle of papers, expressing its contents. At present it is used to denote those forms that regulate the decorum of conduct towards persons of various ranks and stations in life.

ETNA. See ETNA.

ETON COLLEGE, Bucks, separated from Windsor by an old bridge over the Thames. It was founded by Henry VI. in 1440, for the maintenance of a provost and 7 fellows, and the instruction of 70 scholars. It is the chief of the great grammar-schools of England, at which the nobility are trained; and there are seldom less than 300 scholars here, besides those on the foundation. Pop. of town of Eton, 3609.

ETRURIA, the name of that part of ancient Italy now occupied by Tuscany, and the small states immediately N. of it, and that part of the States of the Church lying N. of the Tiber. The people taking their name from this district, other where called Etruscans, or Tuscani, or Tyrrhenians, were a very remarkable race; evidently of Greek origin, and having attained to a high degree of civilization before Rome was built. They appear in the history of Rome during the period of its kings, and immediately afterwards. They occupied cities in Etruria, and the country round was parcelled out into cantons held by the aborigines as serfs under them. They had similar possessions near the Po, and in the Tyrol. The great works of Cyclopean architecture, the solid works draining the swamps in this tract and some parts of the marshes of the Po, are attributed to them, and show both their skill and power. Their taste is seen in the beautiful pottery, of which so many thousands of specimens have been discovered in various towns, and which are well known through those in the British Museum, and the copies and imitations of them now in frequent use. They also worked in bronze. They wrote plays: our Roman numerals were invented by them. In medicine and astronomy they evinced considerable skill. Their chief families practised divination, and taught the practice to Rome. The Tarquins, kings of Rome, were Etruscans; and after their expulsion, Porsena fought against that city; and was defeated in the legendary battle of Lake Regillus. During the wars of Rome with Carthage, the Etrurian state was absorbed into the growing state of Rome; and nothing remains now but their fame, and what their art has made immortal.

ETYMOLOGICAL, a. relating to the derivation of words.

ETYMOLOGIST, s. one who searches out the original, or shows the derivation, of words.

ETYMOLOGY, s. [etymos and logos, Gr.] that part of Grammar which treats of the origin and derivation of words, and thereby arrives at their primary or first signification; the derivation of a word, or the original word from whence another is derived; the analysis of compound words into primitives.

ETYMON, s. [etymos, Gr.] the primitive or original word from whence another is derived.

EVAQUANT, s. [evacuatio, Lat.] in Medicine, a remedy proper to expel or carry off any ill, peccant, or redundant humours in the animal body, by the proper outlets or unctories.

To EVAQUATE, v. a. to empty or clear a thing of its contents; to throw out as noxious and offensive; to void through any of the excretory passages; to make void or annul; to quit or withdraw from a place.

EVACUATION, s. a withdrawing, emission, or discharge, which renders a decrease of men sensible; abolition, or annulling; the quitting of a country; a discharge procured by medicines.

TO EVADE, v. a. [e and evado, Lat.] to escape, elude, or avoid by artifice or stratagem; to decline by subterfuge; to escape or elude by sophistry.

EVAGATION, s. [e and vagor, Lat.] the leaving off, or wandering from a direct course or line.

EVANESCENT, a. [evanesco, Lat.] vanishing; lessening beyond the perception of the senses.

EVANGELICAL, a. [euangelion, Gr.] agreeable to the doctrines of Christianity, as contained in the gospel. This epithet is commonly confined in its application to that system of doctrines held both by Calvinists and Arminians, but most stoutly by the former, the chief of which is that named Justification by Faith.

EVANGELISM, s. the act of preaching the gospel.

EVANGELIST, the name given to the four writers of the history of the ministry and death of our Saviour Jesus Christ; and also to those preachers of the gospel sent forth by the apostles, without those extraordinary gifts and qualifications possessed by themselves and some others with them. Generally applied now to any one who faithfully declares the gospel, especially if not holding the relation of minister to any church.

TO EVANGELIZE, v. a. to instruct in the doctrines of Christianity; to convert to Christianity.

EVA'NID, a. [evaneo, Lat.] faint; weak; vanishing, or growing imperceptible to the sight.

EVAPORABLE, a. [evaporo, Lat.] easily dispersed in fumes or vapours.

TO EVAPORATE, v. a. to exhale, drive away, or dissipate moisture into steam and vapours. Figuratively, to give vent to a sudden sally of the mind.

EVAPORATION, s. the act of flying away in fumes and vapours. In Philosophy, the act of exhaling the moisture of a body, or of dissipating it in fumes and vapours. It differs from exhalation, because that is practised on dry, and this on moist things.

EVAPORATOR, s. a contrivance calculated for expediting the process of evaporation.

EVASION, s. [evasio, Lat.] a stratagem, artifice, or sophistry, made use of as an excuse, or means of freeing a person from a difficulty.

EVASIVE, (evasive) a. practising artifices, sophistry, or stratagems, in order to extricate from a difficulty, or avoid coming to the point.

EVASIVELY, (evatively) ad. in such a manner as to be guilty of sophistry, subterfuge, or artifice.

EU'BŒA, an island of the Ægean Sea, now called Negropont, often named in Grecian history, being subject to Athens, and of great value for its agricultural and other produce to that city.

EUCHARIST (eucharist) s. [eue and charis, Gr.] the act of giving thanks. In the Churches of Rome and England, a name given to the observance of the Lord's supper, according to their rites.

EUCHARISTICAL, (eucharistical) a. containing acts of thanksgiving; relating to the Lord's supper.

EUCLID, the great geometrician of Alexandria, whose Elements are yet the best and most popular text-book of that branch of pure mathematics. This work consisted of 13 books in all; but only the first 6, with parts of the 11th and 12th, are in use, the others treating of arithmetic, or those parts of geometry now brought under the algebraic method of investigation and proof. The most admirable part of this work is the extreme logical precision which is evinced in the style of demonstration, so that the definitions, postulates, and axioms being allowed, (according to Euclid's evident meaning,) the rest of the book follows in a perfectly systematic chain of deductive argument. It is a remarkable fact also, that notwithstanding the numerous attempts that have been made to avoid some difficulties arising from the arrangement, or from the statement of some one or two of the fundamental propositions, Euclid's still appears to be the best. This book, it is as well to observe also, is not one for mathematical students alone. It is a course of study just adapted for the training of any mind in habits of exact thought, and for the correction of that defect of intellectual discipline, which makes Lord Bacon call a man bird-witted. Euclid wrote on optics, music, and other mathematical subjects, and flourished about 300 B. C.

EUCLID, (of Megara,) a pupil of Socrates, and founder of the Megaric school of Greek philosophy. He seems to have grafted on to the Eleatic doctrine of the absolute One, the notion derived from the Athenian sage, that God was the Good. He introduced also a new method of attack in logic, directing his efforts against his adversaries' conclusions. His followers improved on this so much afterwards as to be known chiefly as dialecticians. He lived in the 4th century B. C.

EU'CRASY, (eukrasy) s. [eue and krais, Gr.] an agreeable or good mixture of qualities and fluids in a human body, which denominates it healthy.

EUDIO'METER, s. [eudia and metreo, Gr.] in Pneumatics, an instrument for determining the salubrity of different kinds of air.

EUDO'CIA, a learned Athenian lady, who, after her conversion to Christianity, was married to the emperor Theodosius II. Being divorced from him, she retired to Jerusalem, and spent her life in works of beneficence, and in composing poetic paraphrases of the Bible, and other religious poems. She is charged with Eutychianism. She died in 459, aged 58 years.

EVE, (E'VEN, s. [even, Sax.]) the latter part or close of the day; the interval between broad light and darkness. In Ecclesiastical affairs, eve signifies the vigil, or fast, to be observed in the church the day before a holiday.

EVE'CTION, s. [e and echo, Lat.] in Astronomy, the most remarkable of the periodic inequalities of the moon, first observed by Ptolemy, in 130 B. C., which makes the actual longitude of the moon before or behind her calculated longitude; and which is greatest when the moon is in the first or last quarter, and least at new or full moon; and depends on the irregularity of the motion of that point of the moon's orbit called the perigee, occasioned by the relative position of the sun; and on the alternate increase and diminution of the eccentricity of her orbit, arising from the same cause.

EVELYN, JOHN, a studious and learned man, who lived through the troubled times of the 17th century. During the civil war he was on the continent; but he returned during the Commonwealth, and at the Restoration received some slight marks of royal favour. He was possessed of good property, which he never lost through his great zeal for royalism. He wrote several works and treatises on arts and practical science; but his fame rests on his Horticulture, which he may be said to have been the first cultivator of in England. He died in 1706, aged 80 years.

E'VEN, a. [even, Sax.] smooth; level; capable of being divided into equal parts. Calm, applied to the passions.

TO E'VEN, v. a. to make the height of two bodies, or the quantity of two numbers, the same, or parallel; to make level. —v. n. to become even, or out of debt.

E'VEN, ad. contracted in common conversation and poetry to ev'n, or e'en; a. word of strong assertion, implying that a thing is true in a sense which is the most dubious; verily. So much as, when used as a diminutive. When used as an exaggeration or heightening phrase, it implies a tacit comparison, which gives great force to the words immediately following. In common discourse, pronounced e'en, and used as a word of concession. "I shall e'en let it pass," Collier.

EVENH'ANDED, a. impartial; unbiassed. "Evenhanded justice," Shak.

E'VENING, s. the close of the day.

E'VENLY, ad. equally, uniformly; levelly; in an impartial manner; without elation or dejection.

E'VENNESS, s. applied to surface, the state of being free from ruggedness; smoothness; levelness; the state of a thing when it inclines not more on one side than another; impartiality, or freedom from bias. Calmness, or freedom from any violent perturbation, applied to the mind.

E'VENSONG, s. a song sung at the close of day.

E'VENT, (evenio, Lat.) an incident, or action, or any thing which happens, either good or bad; the result or consequence of any action; the conclusion or upshot.

E'VENTFUL, a. full of incidents; abounding with a variety of actions or incidents.

E'VENTIDE, s. the time of evening.

E'VENTUAL, a. happening in consequence of any action; consequential.

EVENTUALLY, ad. in the event, result, or consequence; consequently.

EVER, ad. [efre, Sax.] at any time, when preceded by if. Always; at all times past, and at all times to come; to all eternity; in any degree. Evergreen signifies always green, or green throughout the year.

EVERGREEN, s. a plant which retains its leaves and green colour through all the seasons.

EVERLASTING, a. lasting and enduring for ever, or without end; immortal. Used to imply time past, as well as time to come, but improperly.

EVERLASTING, s. eternity; eternal duration, whether past or future. In Botany, a plant, called also blite.

EVERLASTINGLY, ad. eternally; without end.

EVERLASTINGNESS, s. eternity.

EVERLIVING, a. immortal.

EVERMORE, ad. always; incessantly; eternally.

To EVERSE, v. a. [e and verso, Lat.] to overthrow, subvert, or destroy. To confuse, or explode, applied to argument.

EVERSHOT, Dorsetshire. It is situated on the borders of Somersetshire, near the rise of the river Frome, which runs into Purbeck Bay. It is 129 miles from London. Pop. 566.

To EVERT, v. a. to destroy; to overthrow.

EVERY, a. [efereade, Sax.] each individual or single person composing any collection of men. Everywhere, in all places; in each place.

EVES-DROPPER. See EAVES-DROPPER.

EVESHAM, Worcestershire. It has a manufacture of woollen stockings. It is seated on a hill, rising with a gradual ascent from the Avon, which almost surrounds it, forming here a harbour for barges, and over which it has a stone bridge. It is 95 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 4245.

EUGENE, FRANCIS, PRINCE, of Savoy, a celebrated military commander at the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. Although born in France, he fought in the cause of Austria; and during a long life, in wars against the Turks, in which he frequently had the odds in numbers fearfully against him; and in wars with his native country, in which he had to cope with such generals as Vendome, and to fight beside such as Marlborough, he gained his great renown. It was not in council that he appeared to advantage; his wonderful power seemed to be a flash of inspiration from some sudden turn or change in circumstances. He died in 1736, aged 72 years.

EUGENIUS, the title assumed by four popes; the pontificate of the fourth of whom was a period of considerable trouble and perplexity to Roman Christendom. The Council of Constance had provided means for gradual reform in the Church; but when the agitation which called forth this plan had subsided, attempts were made to avoid it; and the Church had actually two rival councils sitting at the same time, one at Basle, doing the work of reformation, and setting up an anti-pope, Felix V., to Eugenius; another in Italy, pretending to heal the great schism between the E. and W. Churches. Eugenius died in 1447, having held the papal chair 16 years.

EUGH. See YEW.

To EVICT, v. a. [evincio, Lat.] in Law, to cast out of a possession, or to dispossess by due course of law.

EVICTIOn, s. dispossession by sentence at law; proof, evidence, or certain testimony.

EVIDENCE, s. [Fr.] the state of being clear with respect to proof; undoubted certainty; testimony; proof; a person who is summoned to prove any point or fact. Used sometimes in the plural without the s final, and sometimes with.

To EVIDENCE, v. a. to prove; to discover, or show; to make discovery.

EVIDENT, e. plain; proved beyond doubt; notorious.

EVIDENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to appear plain and indubitable.

EVIL, a. [yfel, Sax.] having bad qualities of any kind. Wicked, malicious, applied to morals. Figuratively, calamitous, or miserable, applied to condition or circumstances. Mischievous, destructive, applied to animals.

EVIL, s. wickedness, a crime; injury, danger, mischief; malignity; corruption; misfortune, calamity. Evil-eye, a malignant power some nations still attribute to the glance of an envious or hostile person. King's evil, a scrofulous disease, which was supposed to be curable by a touch of the king's hand, especially on his coronation day, and a piece of coin hung round the neck; which last many have found of more real worth than the expected cure.

EVIL, ad. not well in whatever respect; not virtuously; not happily; injuriously; not kindly.

To EVINCE, v. a. [evincio, Lat.] to prove; make evident; or establish by arguments.

EVINCIBLE, a. capable of being proved or established by arguments.

EVINCIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to force assent or conviction.

To EVIRATE, v. a. [eviro, Lat.] to deprive of manhood.

To EVISCERATE, v. a. [eviscero, Lat.] to embowel; to draw or take out the entrails.

EVITABLE, a. [evito, Lat.] that may be surmounted or avoided.

EULER, LEONARD, a famous mathematician, born in Switzerland, but who passed the greater part of his life at St. Petersburg, or at the court of Frederic the Great. He was most indefatigable in his labours, and has left memoirs on almost every branch of mathematical science. Nor was he less attentive to those practical questions on which this science throws light. His private life and his religious character were not such as might be expected from his being invited to Frederic's court. He did not cease from his labours, although for many years before his death he had been totally blind. He died in 1783, aged 76 years. Three sons of his have obtained honourable mention, as following in their father's steps.

EULOGY, s. [eu and logos, Gr.] a praise, commemoration, or panegyric; a display or discourse in praise of the virtues of a person.

EUMENES, secretary to Philip of Macedon and Alexander the Great, under whom also he served as a military officer with some distinction. A portion of the conquered territory was allotted to him on Alexander's death; during the contests which ensued he continued steadfast to Perdiccas till his death, when he entered on a contest with Antigonus to keep his province, and at last fell before him, in 315 B. C.

EUMENIDES, in Grecian Mythology, a name by which the Furies were known, given them, apparently, for the sake of conciliating them.

EUNOMIANS, in the History of Christianity, a party in the 4th century, whose doctrines were the same with those of the Arians. They followed one Eunomius of Cyzicum; and altered the fashion of baptizing to accord with his fantastic notions.

EUNUCH, (ευνυκ) s. [eunuchos, Gr.] a person who has been emasculated. Such persons are employed to guard the seraglios in the East; and as public singers in Italy, &c.

EVOCATION, s. [evoco, Lat.] the act of calling out.

To EVOLVE, v. a. [e and volvo, Lat.] to enrol; to unfold; to disentangle.

EVOLUTION, s. the act of enrolling or unfolding. In Geometry, the opening or unfolding of a curve or circle, whereby the circumference gradually approaches to a right line. In Algebra, the extraction of roots from any given quantity. In Tactics, the divers figures, turns, and motions, made by a body of soldiers, either in ranging themselves in form of battle, or in changing their form, whether by way of exercise, or during an engagement.

EVORA, or ELVORA, the capital of Alentejo, Portugal. It is seated in a pleasant country, planted with large trees of divers sorts, and has a good trade. It is about 70 miles from Lisbon. Population, about 15,000.

EUPHONICAL, (ευφωνικα) a. [eu and phone, Gr.] sounding agreeable; giving pleasure by the sound.

EUPHONY, (ευφωνια) s. in Grammar, an easiness, smoothness, and elegance of pronunciation; an agreeable sound.

EUPHORBIUM, (ευφοριβιον) s. in Botany, the genus of plants commonly called spurge. A gum drawn from the plant is imported from the Canary Islands, and the remoter parts of Africa, and is used in medicine in sinapisms.

EUPHRASY, (ευφρασια) s. [euphrasia, Lat.] in Botany, eye-bright, a pretty little flower which grows upon heaths, and was believed to be possessed of ophthalmic virtues.

EUPHRATES, a very famous river of Asia, rising in the N. E. part of Asia Minor in the plain of Erzerum; after serving as a boundary to this part of Asiatic Turkey for some way, it enters on that long and level plain, along which, almost parallel to the Tigris, it flows towards the Indian Ocean; into which, through the Persian Gulf, it discharges itself, near Bozrah, after a course of about 1200 miles. The ruins of Babylon still are traceable about 200 miles above the mouth of the river, near Hillah.

EU/PO/IS, a comic writer of Athens during the time of Aristophanes, and a rival to him. His skill in dramatic poetry cannot be judged, because his works are lost with the exception of some inconsiderable fragments. History is not agreed as to the manner of his death, but thinks he fell in a sea-fight, about 410 B. C.

EURE, a department of France, lying on the embouchure of the Seine, and bounded by Calvados, Seine Inférieure, Oise, Seine et Oise, Eure et Loir, and Orne. It is about 60 miles in length and 50 in breadth. It is level and watered by the Seine, the Eure, (whence its name), the Calonne, &c. It is decidedly an agricultural district, and produces abundance of corn, fruits, cattle, &c. &c. It has manufactures of some value beside. Its population is about 430,000. Evreux is the capital.

EURE ET LOIR, a department of France, bounded by those of Orne, Eure, Seine et Oise, Loiret, Loire et Cher, and Sarthe. It is about 60 miles in length and 50 in breadth. It is level, but high land, and is watered by the Eure, the Loir, (a tributary of the Loire,) by the Sarthe, &c. In produce it greatly resembles the last-described department, but it has no such valuable manufactures. Chartres is its capital. Population, about 300,000.

EVREMOND, ST. CHARLES DE ST. DENIS, a distinguished French wit of the 17th century, who obtained the friendship and patronage of Condé, Louis XIV., and Mazzarin, by his abilities, and lost them by the injudicious exercise of his satiric skill. He was at last, for some unlucky bon-mot, compelled to fly from France, and found a shelter in the court of Charles II. This perhaps may be a fair token of his character. He died in 1703, aged 90 years.

EVREUX, a town of France, capital of the department of Eure. Here is a manufactory of cotton velvets, and another of ticken, which is not inferior to that of Brussels. These, with linen and woollen cloth, lace, grain, wine, and cider, form the principal articles of its trade. It is seated on the river Iton, and is 55 miles from Paris. Population, 10,000. Lat. 49. 16. N. Long. 1. 15. E.

EURIPIDES, a celebrated dramatist of Athens, whose life seems to have been one of unintermitted literary labour, till he was induced to seek a retirement in the court of Archelaus, king of Macedonia. Of his many dramas, nineteen alone have been preserved, and these, though wanting the sublimity of Æschylus, and the dramatic skill of Sophocles, are singularly beautiful for the delineations of purity and beauty in individual characters they contain. One of these plays, The Cyclops, is the only satiric drama extant. He died from hurts received from the king's hounds, in 405 B. C., aged 74 years.

EUROCLYDON, s. [Europs and Kladon, Gr.] the ancient name of a wind which blows between the east and north in the Mediterranean, and is very dangerous.

EUROPE, the least of the six great divisions of the earth; lying to the W. of Asia, from which it is divided by the Ural Mountains, the Volga, and the Black Sea; to the N. of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mediterranean Sea; and the Atlantic Ocean lies between it and the rest of the old continent, and the Americas, or the new continent. To the N. of it is the Arctic Ocean. It is very irregular in its outline, the N. part being separated from the central part, and almost divided in two, by the Baltic Sea. Norway and Sweden, which form the W. division of the N. part, are very mountainous, the chain of heights reaching almost from the shores of the Baltic to the N. Cape, which is the most northerly point of this continent. The rivers are not large, and those that run into the Baltic often expand into lakes. Russia, which forms the E. division of the N. part, stretches in an almost unbroken plain from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea. Its bays are the White Sea, on the N.; the Gulfs of Bothnia, (between it and Sweden,) Finland, and Riga, connected with the Baltic; the Sea of Azov, near which is the Crimea, connected with the Black Sea. Near the N. part of the Baltic are several lakes, those of Ladoga and Onega being the largest. Its great rivers are the Volga, the Don, the Dniester, the Dnieper, and their tributaries. The Uralian chain are its chief mountains. And to the N. of it are the two great islands, named Nova Zembla, with some smaller ones near; and far within the Arctic circle, the island called Spitzbergen. The central part, including Prussia and the Austrian dominions, the German States, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, and France, reaches from Russia to the Atlantic, and is in general a very mountainous and rugged tract; but by cultivation made much superior in every respect to the N. part. Denmark is a peninsula stretching across the mouth of the Baltic, and almost to the coast of Norway; and near it in the Baltic are the islands of Zealand, Funen, &c. The great rivers are the Danube, the Vistula, the Oder, the Elbe, the Rhine, the Seine, the Loire, the Garonne, and the Rhone. The chief mountain chains are the Carpathian and Bohemian, that of the Hartz, and the Alps. Amongst the latter, in Switzerland, are several very beautiful lakes; those of Constance, Lucerne, and Geneva are the most extensive. Holland is a low, flat, marshy land, preserved now, and originally recovered from the sea, by solid embankments, and most careful draining: here is the Zuider Zee, a wide bay connected with the German Ocean. To the N. W. of this part the Britannic Isles are situated, resembling in most of their physical features this central part in their S. division, and the N. part of Europe in their N. division. The N. Sea, or German Ocean, divides them from the main body of the continent, and the English Channel from France. St. George's Channel and the Irish Sea lie between the two main islands of this group, Great Britain and Ireland. Still more northerly than these is a little group of islands, called Faroe; and yet farther to the N. W. the great island of Iceland, resembling the N. part of Europe in physical character, but belonging politically to Denmark. In Iceland is an active volcano, named Hecla; other evidences of volcanic agency also abound; whilst both in Scotland, and Norway and Sweden, there are similar indications, though in a less degree. In France, amongst its low mountain chains, are many traces of volcanic action, such as craters and lava streams; which cannot have long (comparatively) ceased. The S. part of Europe consists chiefly of the three large peninsulas of Spain and Portugal, Italy, and Turkey and Greece. Spain stretches so near to the African continent, that at Gibraltar only a narrow strait divides them; here were the anciently famed but fabulous pillars of Hercules. Between it and France is the stormy Bay of Biscay, and the Pyrenean mountain-chain. Its capes are Finisterre and St. Vincent, stretching into the Atlantic; and Gibraltar and Cape di Gaeta, stretching into the Mediterranean. Its great rivers are the Ebro, the Douro, and the Tagus. Several low ranges of mountains run across it. Between it and Italy lie the Balearic Isles, Corsica, Sardinia, and Elba, partaking more or less of the general features of this part of Europe. Italy, a long narrow peninsula of peculiar form, is divided by the Alps from central Europe, and by the Gulf of Venice from Turkey. The Apennines run with a wavy course throughout its length; the Gulf of Tarento divides its S. extremity into two parts, and the Straits of Messina divide from it the island of Sicily. Mount Vesuvius, near the small but beautiful Bay of Naples, Mount Etna, in Sicily, and Stromboli, in a small group of islands near Sicily, are active volcanoes; but the whole tract in which they form almost the boundaries, continually gives evidence of active volcanic agency. The Po and Adige in N. Italy, and the Tiber, are the chief rivers. A small but important island, Malta, lies farther S. than Sicily. Between the Gulf of Venice, the Black Sea, the Sea of Marmora, and the Ægean or Archipelago, lies the third peninsula, comprising Turkey and Greece. The Danube and the Hungarian Mountains divide it from central Europe. It is crossed by other considerable mountain ranges. The Morea is a complete peninsula at the S. extremity of this tract. It is intersected by bays and gulfs on all sides; and on all its shores, and especially in the Ægean, abounds with islands, not very extensive, excepting Candia; but almost all rendered famous by ancient story. The Hellespont and the Bosphorus, or Straits of Dardanelles and Constantinople, are the two entrances to the Sea of Marmora from the Ægean and the Black Sea. The island of Cyprus, lying in the N. E. angle of the Mediterranean, is considered to belong to Europe, and that part of this sea is called the Levant. The climate of this continent varies from the Arctic temperature and seasons of Lapland, Russia, and Iceland, to the very warm temperate climate of Spain, France, Italy, and Greece. In Germany and Russia a few dangerous wild animals yet remain; but in other parts the clearing of the forests, and bringing of the soil into cultivation, has extirpated all, except the lesser kinds, and those which the waywardness of the aristocracies has protected under the designation of game. The most valuable species of corn and fruit have been imported from other countries, or carefully improved from useless wild plants. The people, the majority of whom are branches of the Caucasian race, with admixtures of the Mongol, in Russia and Germany, are marked chiefly by their practical talent and power. Receiving their successive and varied religions, by different channels, from Asia, they have, in some ages, embodied them in forms, and rites of poetic and dramatic beauty; in others, exhibited them in the practical form of life. In Turkey alone Mohammedism prevails. The Roman Church holds Italy, Spain and Portugal, France, Austria, parts of the German states, and a considerable portion of the English people. The Greek Church holds Russia and Greece. Various forms which arose at, or subsequently to, the Reformation, are found in France and Russia, and predominating in the German states, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden, and the British Isles. Of a like origin are the philosophic systems that have from the earliest days prevailed in Europe. But they have always been recast, and either rendered beautiful, or sternly practical, by the master-minds that have taught them here. (In Germany we find a seeming exception to this representation of the European mind.) In physical science and mechanical skill the genius of Europe is all its own. The political condition of the different nations, Russia alone excepted, is one of constant but varied progress from the feudalism and the monarchy which sprang up after the overthrow of the Roman empire, towards complete freedom. But no nation of Europe has yet, from the earliest ages, adopted a pure democracy. The extent of country held in other quarters of the world by European powers far surpasses Europe in extent, even now that the greater part of the two Americas, which once was occupied by such colonies and possessions, has thrown off this supremacy, and is recognised as independent. These facts, and even the separation of these colonies from the parent states, all serve to illustrate the peculiar character of the people of Europe. The greater part of the languages of this continent belong to the great Indo-Germanic family; and of them the Spanish, Portuguese, French, and Italian, are descended through the Romance dialects from the Latin; the various German dialects, the English, the Swedish, and Danish, are the Teutonic branch of the same; the Irish, Welch, Manx, and Gaelic, the Celtic branch; the Romaine is descended from the Greek; the languages spoken in Russia, Lapland, and Hungary, are the Slavonic and Lithuanian branches; whilst the Basque in Spain, the Osmanli amongst the Turks, the Romany amongst the gypsies, and Hebrew amongst the Jews, with other local and provincial dialects, are either of Semitic origin, or else not yet sufficiently understood to be classed with confidence under any of the great families of languages. The population of this continent is not far short of 300,000,000.

EUROPEAN, a. belonging to, or a native of, Europe.

EURUS, s. [Lat.] in ancient Greece, the name of the east wind.

EURYTHMY, s. [eu and rythmos, Gr.] harmony of verse or pronunciation.

EUSEBIUS, (called PAMPHILI, from a very intimate friend,) an ecclesiastical historian of the 4th century, a man of vast reading and erudition, spent nearly all his life at Caesarea, leaving it only when his friend was martyred, and then not for long. He took a prominent part at the council of Nice, but had a decided leaning to Arianism, if he was not an Arian. His writings are very numerous and valuable; the chief of them being his History; the others being vindications of Christianity, commentaries on some books of Scripture, polemic and hermeneutical works, lives of the prophets, of some martyrs, and of Constantine the Great. He died in about 340, aged about 70 years.

EUSTACHIUS, BARTHOLOMEW, a very eminent Italian physician of the 16th century, who greatly promoted the sciences of anatomy and physiology by his indefatigable diligence in studying them. He was a professor at the college at Rome, and died in 1574, aged about 70 years. He left posterity the welcome task of rewarding his toils with well-earned fame, for he received little encouragement from his contemporaries. The passage from the throat to the ear, and a thin and transparent valve, situated just where the vena cava enters the auricle of the heart, having been discovered by him, are named the Eustachian tube, and Eustachian valve.

EUSTATIA, ST., one of the Leeward Islands, in the West Indies, between St. Christopher's and St. Croix. It is a huge pyramidal rock, whose top is hollow or concave, and serves as a large den for wild animals. It is strong by situation, having but one landing-place, which is difficult of access, and strongly fortified. Tobacco, sugar, &c. are its chief productions. Hogs, rabbits, poultry, &c. are reared for exportation to the other islands. Population, about 20,000. It belongs to the Dutch. Lat. 17. 31. N. Long. 63. 5. W.

EUTERPE, s. in Heathen Mythology, one of the nine Muses, to whom the invention of the mathematics, and playing upon the pipe, is ascribed.

EUTHANASY, s. [eu and thanatos, Gr.] easy death.

EUTROPIUS, FLAVIUS, an historian of Rome, who was secretary to Constantine the Great, and served under Julian in Persia. His history is very brief, a mere epitome, yet it is the only source of information respecting some periods. He lived about 330.

EUTYCHIANS, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the name given to the followers of the monk Eutyches, maintaining that there was only one nature in Jesus Christ. The Divine nature, according to them, had so entirely swallowed up the human, that the latter could not be distinguished; inasmuch that Jesus Christ was merely God, and had nothing of humanity but the appearance. Those who maintained this were also called Monophysites. It appears that Eutyches fell upon this notion in controverting Nestorianism; and it is a striking instance of the pitiable folly of opposing oneself to error, without acting in the spirit of truth. It made much stir for a long time. Councils were held, which approved or condemned it, according as they were packed and managed. It is a matter of no moment, save for warning to idle speculators, now. Eutyches originated this opinion in 448.

EVULSION, s. [evulso, Lat.] the act of plucking off.

EUXINE, the name given anciently to the Black Sea, in bitter jest, since the inhabitants on its shores offered up strangers who sailed thither, to their gods.

EWALD, JOHN, an eminent poet of Denmark, who spent the early part of his life, contrary to the wishes of his friends, in the ranks of the Prussian or Austrian army, whence he deserted; and returning home, gave himself up to literary pursuits, and achieved a name by his poems. He died in 1781, aged 35 years.

EWEL, s. [ewe, Sax.] a female sheep.

E'WEL, Surrey, having many fine streams of water, which uniting, form a river sufficient to drive a mill in the town, and which afterwards falls into the Thames at Kingston. It is 13 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1867.

EWER, s. [ear, Fr.] a vessel in which water is brought for washing the hands.

EW'RY, s. an office in the king's household, to which belongs the care of the table-linen, of laying the cloth, and serving up water in silver ewers after dinner.

EX, a Latin preposition, often prefixed to compound words, sometimes signifying, as in the original, out, as to exhaust, to draw out; sometimes it only enforces the meaning of the word to which it is joined, and sometimes produces a small alteration in the sense.

To EXACERBATE, v. a. [exacerbo, from acerbus, Lat.] to make rough; to exacerbate; to heighten any disagreeable quality. EXACERBATION, s. increase of malignity, or any bad quality. In Medicine, the height of a disease; a paroxysm.

EXACERVATION, s. [aceruus, Lat.] the act of heaping up.

EXACT, (the ex in this word and its derivatives is by many pronounced like egz; as, egzact, egzactishion, &c.) a. [exactus, Lat.] without the least deviation from any rule or standard; accurate; honest; punctual.

To EXACT, v. a. [exigo, from ex and ago, Lat.] to require or demand with rigour and authority; to demand as due; to enjoin or insist upon.—v. n. to require more than is the worth of a thing in sales; to require more than is due in debts or contracts; to be guilty of extortion.

EXACTER, s. one who claims more than his due, or demands his due with outrage and rigour.

EXACTION, s. the act of making a demand with authority; the demanding more than is due, or more than a thing is worth; extortion; a toll; a heavy tax.

EXACTLY, ad. with accuracy; perfectly; with great nicety.
 EXACTNESS, s. a strict conformity to a rule or standard; a conduct regulated with the greatest strictness according to some rule.

To EXAGGERATE, v. a. [exaggero, from aggr, Lat.] to heighten by description; to represent the good or ill qualities of a thing to be greater than they really are.

EXAGGERATION, s. the act of heaping together; a representation wherein the good or ill qualities of a thing or person are described to be greater than they really are.

To EXAGGATE, v. a. [ex and aggr, Lat.] to put in motion.

To EXALT, (exalt) v. a. [exalt, Fr.] to raise on high. Figuratively, to prefer, or raise to power, wealth, or dignity; to elate with joy or confidence; to magnify with praise. To raise or make louder, applied to the voice. In Chemistry, to sublime, refine, or heighten the qualities of a thing by fire.

EXALTATION, (exaltation) s. the act of raising on high; preferment or advancement; a state of grandeur or dignity.

EXAMEN, s. [Lat.] an exact and careful search or inquiry, in order to discover the truth or falsehood of a thing.

EXAMINATE, s. [examine, Lat.] an evidence, or person examined upon a trial.

EXAMINATION, s. a search into the truth of any fact, or the veracity of any evidence, by question; an accurate, nice, and scrupulous inquiry after truth.

EXAMINATOR, s. [Lat.] an examiner.

To EXAMINE, v. a. [examine, Lat.] to try a person suspected of any crime by questions; to ask a witness questions on a trial; to make inquiry into; to try by experiment, observation, or the deductions of reason.

EXAMINER, s. one who searches into the veracity of an evidence, by proposing such questions as shall be suitable to that purpose.

EXAMPLE, s. [exemplum, Lat.] any thing proposed to be copied or imitated; a precedent, or something of the same kind which has happened before; a rule of conduct or action worthy of the imitation of others; a person fit to be proposed as a pattern for others to imitate; a person punished for the admonition of others, or to deter them from being guilty of the same crimes; an instance, or something produced as an illustration or confirmation of what has been asserted, or wherein a rule is explained by an application.

EXANGUIOUS, a. [ex and sanguis, Lat.] having no blood; having only animal juices, in opposition to sanguineous.

EXANIMATE, a. [ex and anima, Lat.] deprived of life. Figuratively, spiritless; dejected.

EXANIMATION, s. death, or deprivation of life.

EXANIMOUS, a. lifeless; dead; killed.

EXANTHEMATA, s. [ek and anthos, Gr.] in Medicine, efflorescences, or breakings out of the skin.

EXANTHEMATOUS, a. in Medicine, pustulous; eruptive; efflorescent; discolouring, or forming pustules on the skin.

EXARATION, s. [exaro, Lat.] the manual act of writing; the manner of manual writing.

EXARTICULATION, s. [ex and articulus, Lat.] the dislocating of a joint; the putting a bone out of joint.

To EXASPERATE, v. a. [exaspero, from asper, Lat.] to provoke a person to anger by some disagreeable or offensive action; to heighten or aggravate a difference; to heighten or increase the inflammation of a wound or disorder.

EXASPERATER, s. one who heightens or increases the anger of a person.

EXASPERATION, s. a representation of a thing in such a light as to occasion great offence and provocation.

To EXCARINATE, v. a. [ex and caro, Lat.] to strip off flesh.

To EXCAVATE, v. a. [excavo, from caus, Lat.] to hollow.

EXCAVATION, s. the act of scooping out, or cutting any surface into hollows; a hollow or cavity.

To EXCEED, v. a. [ex and cedo, Lat.] to go beyond any limit, measure, or standard; to excel or surpass another in any quality. — n. to go too far; to be guilty of excess; to go beyond the bounds of fitness or duty; to surpass in quality or quantity.

EXCEEDING, part. a. surpassing, or going beyond in dimensions, time, or any other quality. Sometimes used adverbially for a great or remarkable degree.

EXCEEDINGLY, ad. greatly; very much.

To EXCEL, v. a. [ex and cello, Lat.] to surpass another. SY-

NON. To excel, signifies a comparison; its being superior to all of the like kind, excludes equals, and is applied to all sorts of objects. To excellent, is being in the highest degree without any sort of comparison; it admits of no equals, and agrees best with things of taste. Thus we say that Titian excelled in colouring; Michael Angelo in design; and that Garrick was an excellent actor.

EXCELLENCE, EXCELENCY, s. the possessing any good quality to a greater degree than another on a comparison; purity; goodness; a title of honour usually given to generals in an army, ambassadors, and governors.

EXCELLENT, a. possessed of great talents or virtues; eminent, or superior to others in good qualities.

EXCELLENTLY, ad. very well. To an eminent or remarkable degree, applied to both good and bad qualities.

EXCENTRIC. See ECENTRIC.

To EXCEPTE, v. a. [ex and capio, Lat.] to leave out; to mention as not included. — v. n. to object to.

EXCEPT, prep. excluding; not including; unless.

EXCEPTING, prep. not including or taking a thing into an account.

EXCEPTION, s. the exclusion from, or not including a person or thing in, a precept, position, or general law; objection; cavil; a dislike, or offence.

EXCEPTIONABLE, a. liable to objection.

EXCEPTIOUS, (exceptious) a. fond of making objections; peevish; easily offended.

EXCEPTIVE, a. including an exception.

EXCEPTIONLESS, a. without exception; without raising any objection; general; universal.

EXCEPTOR, s. one who raises objections, or makes exceptions.

EXCEPTION, s. [ex and capio, Lat.] the act of gleaming or selecting; the thing selected or gleaned.

EXCESS, s. [excessus, from excedo, Lat.] that which is beyond the bounds of moderation, or those limits in which virtue consists; a relative term, implying the quantity or degree which one thing or quality has more than another. Applied to passion, a height or violence beyond the bounds of reason.

EXCESSIVE, (excessif, Fr.) beyond any limit or common standard, with respect to quantity, quality, or bulk; vehement, or beyond the just bounds prescribed by reason.

EXCESSIVELY, ad. in a great or immoderate degree.

To EXCHANGE, v. a. [exchanger, Fr.] to change or give one thing for another; to give and take reciprocally. In Commerce, to give money for a bill, or to settle the exchange with different countries.

EXCHANGE, s. the act of giving or receiving one thing for another. In Commerce, the place where merchants meet to negotiate their affairs. A bill of exchange, is drawn by a person in one kingdom on one residing in another, for such a sum there as is equivalent to a sum paid or estimated here. The actual value of these bills of exchange, as regulated by the fluctuating prices of the commodities for which they are tendered in payment, and the varying quantities of the precious metals held by the nation between whom the transactions take place, and which are unhappily (as it appears) assumed as the standards of value, — is also designated in the money market by the name Exchange; which, again, is (by a more unhappy oversight) made to regulate the quantity of circulating medium issued by the Bank of England. The Royal Exchange at London was originally built by Sir Thomas Gresham, and after being destroyed by fire in the beginning of 1838, is now rebuilt on a much more magnificent scale. There, all these transactions of a monetary character take place.

EXCHANGER, s. a person who remits money to foreign parts, or practises exchange.

EXCHEQUER, (exchequer) s. [exchequer, Norman Fr.] in the British jurisprudence, is an ancient court of record, in which all causes concerning the revenues and rights of the crown are heard and determined, and where the revenues are received. It took its name from the colour of the cloth which covered the tables of the court, which are party-coloured or chequered. This court is said to have been erected by William the Conqueror, its model being taken from a like court established in Normandy long before that time. Anciently its authority was so great, that it was held in the king's palace, and the acts thereof were not to be examined or controlled in any other of the king's courts; but at present it is the last of the four courts of Westminster. Exchequer bills, are bills issued by the authority of parliament, made payable to the bearer, and so can pass like bank notes from hand to hand, without the expense and formality of such a transfer as is required for the stock of the funded debt. They form the greater part of what is called the unfunded or floating debt. They bear interest, at present 24, per cent. per diem, and being issued for sums varying from £100 to £1000, are exceedingly convenient to bankers and merchants, and persons desirous of investing money for short periods, without risk of such fluctuations as are always occurring in the funded stocks. Exchequer tallies, were sticks of wood, issued by our early kings as symbols of real money to aid in the payment of taxes, on which were cut notches of different breadths indicating the amount it represented; which, being split in half, one part was retained as a check against the other, at the time it was returned to the Exchequer, or recalled.

EXCISE, (excise) s. [accijs, Belg.] a certain duty or impost charged upon liquors, as beer, ale, cider, &c., also on several other commodities, within the kingdom of Great Britain; and is one of the most considerable branches of the revenue. Many articles, formerly excisable, are now exempted; for such taxes are not only difficult to collect, but are great provocatives to fraud and crime, especially when the tax is very disproportionate to the actual value; and operate as a great check on manufacturing and mercantile skill and enterprise.

To EXCISE, (excise) v. a. to levy a tax on a person or thing. EXCISEMAN, (excizeman) s. an officer who is employed in the inspection of goods which are excisable.

EXCISION, s. [excisio, from excido, Lat.] the act of cutting off or entirely destroying a nation, or the inhabitants of some place.

EXCITATION, s. [excitatio, Lat.] the act of putting into motion; the act of rousing or awakening.

To EXCITE, v. a. [ex and cito, Lat.] to rouse from a state of inactivity and indolence to one of action, or from a state of dejection and despair to one of courage and vigour; to put into motion; to awaken; to rouse.

EXCITEMENT, s. the motion by which a person is roused from a state of indolent inactivity to one of vigorous action.

EXCITER, s. one who stirs up to action; the cause by which any dormant virtue is put in action, or any thing is put into motion.

To EXCLAIM, v. a. [ex and clamo, Lat.] to cry out with vehemence and an exalted voice, sometimes occasioned by sudden grief or excessive pain; to speak against or decry.

EXCLAIMER, s. one that makes use of frequent exclamations; one that runs down, raises objections, and rails against a person or thing with vehemence and passion.

EXCLAMATION, s. a vehement outcry; a railing, or outrageous reproach of a person or thing; an emphatical utterance. In Printing and Grammar, a point placed after an exclamation, and marked thus (!).

EXCLAMATORY, a. practising or consisting of exclamations.

To EXCLUDE, v. a. [ex and claudo, Lat.] to shut out, or hinder from entrance; to debar of any privilege, or hinder a person from partaking with another; to except to any doctrine.

EXCLUSION, s. [excludo, Lat.] the act of shutting out, or denying admission; rejection, or not admitting a principal; an exception.

EXCLUSIVE, (exklusive) a. having the power to deny or hinder the entrance or admission; debarbing from the enjoyment of a right, privilege, or grant; not taking into an account, computation, or calculation.

EXCLUSIVELY, ad. without admission of another to participation; without comprehension in an account or number; not inclusively.

To EXCOCUT, v. a. [ex and coguo, Lat.] to boil up; to make by boiling.

To EXCOGITATE, v. a. [ex and cogito, Lat.] to find out or discover by thought or intense thinking; to invent.

EXCOMMUNICABLE, a. liable or deserving to be excommunicated.

To EXCOMMUNICATE, v. a. [excommunico, from ex and communio, Lat.] to exclude a person church-union or fellowship.

EXCOMMUNICATION, s. an ecclesiastical penalty, or censure, whereby persons are separated from the communion of the church, and deprived of its privileges. In the ancient church, the power of excommunication was lodged in the hands of the clergy, who distinguished it into the greater and less. The less consisted in excluding persons from the participation of the eucharist and prayers of the faithful; but they were not expelled the church. The greater excommunication consisted in absolute and entire exclusion from the church, and the participation of all its rites; notice of which was given by circular letters to the most eminent churches all over the world, that they might all confirm this act of discipline, by refusing to admit the delinquent to their communion. The consequences were, that the person so excommunicated was avoided in all civil commerce and outward conversation; no one was to receive him into his house, nor eat at the same table with him; and when dead, he was denied the solemn rite of burial. The papal excommunications were very frequent in the middle ages, and were not without their terrors. Excommunication in this country has come to be a mere dead letter, as was natural, from the state having assumed supremacy over the church. According to the statements of the expounders of ecclesiastical law, it disables a person from doing any judicial act; as suing in an action at law, being a witness, &c. According to the same writers, all who separate from the church established, are ipso facto under the greater excommunication. But the Act of Toleration has rendered this ridiculous, although it is not repealed.

To EXCORIATE, v. a. [ex and corium, Lat.] to flay, or strip off the skin.

EXCORIATION, s. loss of skin; the act of flaying, or stripping off the skin.

EXCORTICATION, s. [ex and cortex, Lat.] in Botany, the pulling or peeling off the bark of trees.

To EXCREATE, v. a. [ex and creo, Lat.] to eject at the mouth by a forced cough.

EXCREMENT, s. [excrementum, Lat.] that which is discharged at the natural passage of the body.

EXCREMENTAL, a. that is of the nature of, or voided as, excrement.

EXCREMENTITIOUS, (excrementitious) a. containing excrement; offensive or useless to the body.

EXCRESCENCE, EXCRESCENCY, s. [excreresco, Lat.] a superfluous part growing out of another, contrary to the original form of a thing, or the common production of nature. In Surgery, superfluous and luxuriant flesh growing on the parts of bodies or animals.

EXCRESCENT, a. superfluously or luxuriously growing out of a thing.

EXCRETION, s. [excretio, Lat.] in Medicine, the act of separating excrements from the aliments or blood, and expelling or ejecting them from the body.

EXCRETIVE, a. [ex and cerno, Lat.] having the power of separating or ejecting excrements from the body.

EXCRETORY, a. in Anatomy, a term applied to certain little ducts or vessels, destined for the reception of a fluid, secreted in certain glands, and other viscera, for the excretion of it in the appropriated place.

EXCRUCIBLE, a. liable to torment.

To EXCRUCIATE, (excruciate) v. a. [ex and crucio, from crux, Lat.] to torture or torment.

To EXCULATE, v. a. [ex and culpā, Lat.] to clear from any accusation, or from a charge of a crime or fault.

EXCURSION, s. [excursio, Lat.] an attempt to leave a settled path; a ramble; an expedition into distant parts; a progress beyond the common limits and boundaries. Applied to the mind, a digression or departure from the subject a person is treating of. SYNON. Excursion supposes a pleasurable expedition to some distant place, determined on some time before. Ramble implies an irregular roving in places unthought of till the time we arrive there. By junct is understood a walk or journey agreeable to the person who takes it, but which may appear to others undignified or trifling.

EXCURSIVE, a. rambling; wandering or deviating.

EXCUSABLE, (excusable) a. that for which any apology may be made and admitted.

EXCUSABLENESS, (excusableness) s. the quality which renders a thing a fit object of being pardoned.

EXCUSATORY, (excusatory) a. pleading in excuse; assigning a motive which may remove blame, and vindicate a person's conduct.

To EXCUSE, (exhūse) v. a. [excuſo, Lat.] to lessen guilt, by assigning some circumstance which may render the commission of a fault less blamable; to discharge a person from a duty or obligation; to pass by without blame; to make an apology, defence, or vindication, in order to wipe off any aspersion, or clear from any imputation. SYNON. We may excuse for an apparent fault, or slight offence. We ask pardon for a real fault, or when the offence is greater. We implore forgiveness of our sins.

EXCUSE, s. an apology or plea offered in a person's vindication; a reason or motive assigned to justify from accusation or guilt.

EXCU/SELESS, (exhūseless) a. without any motive or reason to free from blame or punishment.

EXCUSER, (exhūser) s. one who pleads for, or one who forgives or passes by, the faults of another.

To EXCU/SS, v. a. [excuſſo, Lat.] in Law, to seize and detain a person's property.

EXCU/SSION, s. seizure by law.

EXECRABLE, a. [execrator, Lat.] so detestable, abominable, or wicked, as to deserve to be accused. Figuratively, very bad.

EXECRABLY, ad. in such a manner as to deserve to be accused. Figuratively, abominably; in a very bad manner.

To EXECRATE, v. a. to curse as an object containing the most abominable, detestable, and wicked qualities. Figuratively, to detest; to abominate.

EXECRATION, s. a curse; an imprecation, or wishing some evil to a person or thing.

To EXECUTE, v. a. [exsequor, from ex and sequor, Lat.] to discharge or perform a commission or duty; to put a law or any thing planned in practice; to put to death, according to the sentence of the law.

EXECUTER, s. he that performs any thing planned; he that executes a design; a person who inflicts the punishment sentenced by the law.

EXECUTION, s. the performance or practice of a thing; action. In Law, the last act in causes of debt, wherein power is given to the plaintiff to seize the defendant's goods and body; death inflicted according to law. Figuratively, death; slaughter.

EXECUTIONER, (exekūshoner) s. he that puts in act; he that inflicts punishment on an offender; he that kills according to law.

EXECUTIVE, a. having the quality of executing or performing. Active, or putting into execution, opposed to legislative, in respect of national authorities, &c.

EXECUTOR, s. [executor, Lat.] a person who is nominated by a testator to perform the articles contained in his will.

EXECUTORSHIP, s. the office of a person appointed executor by a testator.

EXECUTRIX, s. a woman intrusted with the performance of the will of a testator.

EXEGESIS, s. [exegomai, Gr.] a word used as an explication of another; thus, in the words "Abba, Father," used in Scripture, the word father is the exegesis, or explanation, to the Syriac word abba. Also, the application of the science of interpretation, or hermeneutics, to the Sacred Scriptures.

EXEGETICAL, a. explaining; by way of explanation.

EXEMPLAR, s. [Lat.] a model, pattern, or original, to be imitated.

EXEMPLARILY, ad. in such a manner as deserves imitation; in such a manner as may warn others.

EXEMPLARINESS, s. the state of being proposed as a pattern, and worthy of imitation.

EXEMPLARY, a. worthy of being proposed as a pattern for the imitation of others, applied to both persons and things. Such as may deter and give warning to others, applied to punishments. Remarkable.

EXEMPLIFICATION, s. a giving an example. In Law, the giving a copy or draught of an original record.

To EXEMPLIFY, v. a. [exemplum and fio, Lat.] to illustrate or enforce by an example or instance. In Law, to transcribe or copy.

To EXEMPT, v. a. [eximo, Lat.] to free from any obligation or duty; to privilege.

EXEMPT, a. [exemptus, Lat.] freed from service, office, obligation, duty, or tax, by privilege.

EXEMPTION, s. [exemptio, Lat.] freedom from any service, obligation, tax, burdensome employment, or law. Thus, barons and peers of the realm are, on account of their dignity, exempted from being sworn upon inquests; and knights, clergymen, and others, from appearing at the sheriff's court. Persons of seventy years of age, apothecaries, &c. are also by law exempted from serving on juries; and justices of the peace, attorneys, &c. from parish offices.

To EXENTERATE, v. a. [ek and enteron, Gr.] to embowel; to deprive of the entrails.

EXENTERATION, s. the act of taking out the bowels; embowelling.

EXEQUIAL, a. [ezequie, Lat.] belonging to a funeral or burial.

EXEQUIES, s. it has no singular; [ezequie, from ezequor, Lat.] funeral rites or ceremonies.

EXERCENT, a. [exerceo, Lat.] practising; following any trade, employment, or vocation.

EXERCISE, (exercise) s. a motion of the limbs, or action of the body, considered as conducive and necessary to health; something done by way of amusement; an action by which the body is formed to gracefulness and strength; any practice by which a person is rendered skilful in the performance of a duty or discipline; use or actual application and practice of a thing; employment; any thing required to be performed as a task; an application of the mind to study.

To EXERCISE, (exercise) v. a. [exerceo, Lat.] to employ the mind in considering an object; to use such action of the body as is necessary to keep the fluids in motion, and preserve health; to train or teach a person any discipline by frequent practice; to task, employ, or keep busy; to practise; to exert, or put in practice. To practise the different evolutions of an army, in order to obtain skill in military discipline.

EXERCISER, (exercizer) s. one who acts, performs, or practises.

EXERCITATION, s. exercise; practice; a frequent repetition of the same action.

EXERGUE, s. among antiquarians, a little space around or without the figures of a medal, left for the inscription, cipher, device, date, &c.

To EXERT, v. n. [exero, Lat.] to use with an application of force, vehemence, or vigour; to put forth or perform. To apply strength, force, or vigour, used with a reciprocal pronoun.

EXERTION, s. the act of bringing into action, including the idea of force, vehemence, strength, or vigour.

EXESION, s. [exesus, from ex and edo, Lat.] the act of eating out, or eating a way through. "Theophrastus denied the exesio of vipers through the belly of the dam," Brown.

EXESTUATION, s. [ex and estuo, Lat.] a fermentation or violent internal commotion of the particles of a body.

EXETER, the Isca of Ptolemy and Antoninus, Devonshire. The environs of the city are billies, and afford a variety of delightful prospects. Its port is properly at Topsham, 5 miles below, but vessels of 150 tons come up to the quay here. Here is a noble cathedral, (for it is one of the sees of the bishops of the Church of England,) court-houses, public institutions for charity and education, &c. It is the seat of an extensive foreign and domestic commerce, and particularly it had a share in the fisheries of Newfoundland and Greenland. Here are flourishing manufactories of serges and other woollen goods. It is seated on the river Exe, over which it has a long stone bridge. It is 173 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Friday. Pop. 31,312.

EXETER, a town of New Hampshire, United States. It stands on a river of the same name, the falls in which afford a great water power. It is also navigable for vessels of 500 tons burden. There is a well-endowed academy here. Round it the country is fertile and in excellent cultivation. It is 480 miles from Washington. Pop. 2925. Seven other places in the States bear this name.

EXETER COLLEGE, one of the institutions at Oxford, founded in the 14th century, by a bishop of Exeter, and well endowed. Its buildings are good, and it has a good library. This was the college at which the two Wesleys studied.

To EXFOLIATE, v. a. [ex and folium, Lat.] in Surgery, to scale a bone.

EXFOLIATION, s. the act of scaling a bone; or the state of a bone which breaks off in scales.

EXFOLIATIVE, a. that has the power of scaling a bone, or of producing exfoliation.

EXHALABLE, a. that may be raised, consumed, or dispersed in fumes or exhalations.

EXHALATION, s. [exhalatio, Lat.] a fume, or effluvia, raised by heat or some other cause, ascending by the laws of hydrostatics, and mixing with the atmosphere; the act of exhaling, or sending forth effluvia or exhalations.

To EXHALE, v. a. [exhalo, Lat.] to draw forth or emit effluvia or exhalations.

EXHALEMENT, s. an effluvia; a vapour; an exhalation.

To EXHAUST, v. a. [ex hauro, Lat.] to drain any fluid or liquor; to draw out till nothing remains. In Pneumatics, by means of the air-pump, to draw the air out of any vessel, for the purpose of making experiments in vacuo.

EXHAUSTION, s. the act of draining or drawing dry. Figuratively, an entire waste, or consumption.

EXHAUSTLESS, a. not to be emptied, drained, drawn dry, or totally consumed.

To EXHIBIT, v. a. [exhibeo, Lat.] to offer to view or use; to propose in a full assembly or public manner.

EXHIBIT, s. [Lat.] in Law, is where a deed or other writing being produced in a chancery suit, to be proved by witnesses, the examiner, after examination, certifies on the back of the deed, or writing, that the same was shown to the witness at the time of his examination, and by him sworn.

EXHIBITER, s. he that offers any thing as a charge or accusation in a public manner; he that exposes any curiosity, natural or artificial, to public view.

EXHIBITION, s. [exhibitio, Lat.] the act of displaying, explaining, or rendering visible and sensible; the act of exposing to public view. In Law, the bringing a charge or accusation against a person in a public or open court. A benefaction settled for the maintenance of scholars in universities, who are not upon the foundation.

EXHIBITIVE, a. containing a representation or display.

To EXHILARATE, v. a. [exhilaro, Lat.] to cheer, comfort, and inspire with gaiety.

EXHILARATION, s. the act of inspiring with cheerfulness or joy; the state of a person inspired with joy or gaiety, applied to sensation or pleasure which is less than joy, but of some affinity with it.

To EXHORT, (commonly, with its derivatives, pronounced egzort), v. a. [ex et hort, Lat.] to induce a person to the performance of a thing or duty, by laying the motive of it, and its consequences, before a person; to call upon a person to perform, or remind him of his duty.

EXHORTATION, s. the motive which can induce a person to perform his duty; the act of laying such motives before a person as may excite him to perform a duty.

EXHORTATORY, a. containing motives to incite a person to perform a duty.

EXHORTER, s. one who endeavours to persuade or incite a person to perform a duty.

EXHUMATION, s. [exhumatio, Lat.] the digging up of a body that has been duly buried by the authority of a judge for some particular reason.

EXIGENCE, EXIGENCY, s. [exigo, Lat.] a want, necessity, or distress, which demands immediate assistance and relief; any pressing want, or sudden occasion.

EXIGENT, a. a pressing business; or an affair which requires immediate assistance and relief. In Law, it is a writ which lies where a defendant in a personal action cannot be found, nor any of his effects within the country, by which he may be attached or distrained.

EXIGENTERS, s. four officers in the court of Common Pleas, who make all exigents and proclamations in all actions where process of outlawry lies.

EXIGUITY, s. [exiguitas, Lat.] smallness; littleness; slenderness.

EXIGUOUS, a. [exiguus, Lat.] small, minute, applied to size. Not in use.

EXILE, a. [exilis, Lat.] small, thin, slender. Not in use, except in philosophical writings.

EXILE, s. [exilium, from exul, Lat.] the state of a person who is driven from his country not to return; also the person banished.

To EXILE, v. a. to expel or drive a person from a country, with a strict prohibition not to return during life, or within a certain time. Figuratively, to expel or banish any bad or good quality from the mind.

EXILEMENT, s. the state of a person banished his country.

EXILIATION, s. [ex et salio, Lat.] the act of springing and stretching out with vehemence and suddenness; explosion.

EXILITY, s. [exilis, Lat.] slenderness; smallness.

EXIMIOUS, a. [eximius, Lat.] famous, eminent, curious, rare.

EXINATION, s. [exinatio, Lat.] privation; loss.

To EXIST, v. n. [ex et sisto, Lat.] to be; to have actual being or existence.

EXISTENCE, EXISTENCY, s. [existo, Lat.] that whereby any thing has an actual essence, or is said to be.

EXISTENT, a. in being; in actual fruition of being.

EXISTIMATION, s. [existimo, Lat.] opinion, esteem, reputation, or the opinion the public has of a man's abilities and virtues.

EXIT, s. [Lat.] in theatrical writing, implies that a person is gone out of sight, or off the stage. Figuratively, a departure from life; death, or passage out of any place.

EXITIAL, EXITIOUS, (exishal, exishious) a. [exitium, Lat.] destructive; fatal; mortal.

EXMOUTH, Devonshire, a town enclosed and sheltered from the N. E., between cliffs, on the E. side of the bay which forms the mouth of the river Exe. It is a much frequented watering-place, and the walks around it are delightfully pleasant. It is 180 miles from London. Pop. 4356.

EXMOUTH, EDWARD PELLEW, LORD, a famous British admiral, who served with great distinction throughout the American, and continental revolutionary wars; and in 1816, bombarded Algiers, and procured the abolition of Christian slavery, &c. He was enthusiastically loved in the fleet; and died in 1833, aged 76 years.

EXODUS, [ex et nodos, Gr.] the name given in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament, to the 2nd Book of the Pentateuch, or Law; and adopted in our English Version. It was written by Moses, the Jewish lawgiver, and contains an account of the miserable state of bondage to which the children of Israel were reduced by the cruel fears of the kings of Egypt; the birth and wonderful preservation and bringing up of Moses; the steps he took under the direction of God for the deliverance of the Israelites, and the terrible inflictions on Egypt, for refusing to let the people go; their exode, or departure from that land of slavery, and deliverance from the king by the crowning miracle at the Red Sea; the marches, difficulties, and encounters of the people till they arrived at the plain before Mount Sinai, in the peninsula lying between the branches of the Red Sea; and the solemn enunciation of God's law from that mountain, when he assumed the immediate sovereignty over them, and they agreed to be his people; with the setting up of the tabernacle (representing the palace of their Great King); the idolatry of Aaron and the people, under the very mount, and in face of all those terrible wonders; and such general precepts as related to those points of the divinely appointed constitution and government. It is worthy of close study, not only as containing such singular instances of God's providential government of this world, but also as displaying so much of the peculiar characteristics of the law of Moses, without a knowledge of which the subsequent history of the Israelites cannot be understood.

EXOLETE, a. [ex et soleo, Lat.] out of use; obsolete.

EXOMPHALOS, s. [ek et omphalos, Gr.] in Surgery, a rupture in the navel.

To EXONERATE, v. a. [exonero, Lat.] to disburden; to free from any thing which is troublesome on account of its weight.

EXONERATION, s. the act of disburdening, or getting rid of a thing which oppresses by its weight.

EXORABLE, a. [ex et oro, Lat.] to be moved by prayer or entreaty.

EXORBITANCE, EXORBITANCY, s. [exorbitant, Fr.] the act of going out of the common track or road; a gross or enormous deviation from the rules of virtue; boundless depravity.

EXORBITANT, a. leaving or quitting any rules prescribed, but more especially those of virtue and morality; not comprehended in any law; enormous; immoderate; excessive; beyond bounds.

To EXORBITATE, v. n. [ex and orbita, Lat.] to deviate; to go out of the track or road prescribed.

To EXORCISE, v. a. [exorcizo, Gr.] to adjure by some holy name; to drive away evil spirits by using some holy name.

EXORCISER, EXORCIST, s. one who practises to drive away evil spirits.

EXORCISM, s. the form of adjuration, or religious ceremonies, made use of to drive away evil spirits.

EXORDIUM, s. [Lat.] in Rhetoric, the beginning or opening of a speech, in which the audience is prepared to hear with attention what follows.

EXOSESIOUS, a. [ex and ossa, Lat.] wanting bones; boneless; formed without bones.

EXOSTOSIS, s. [ex and osteon, Gr.] the unnatural protuberance of a bone.

EXOTERIC, and ESOTERIC, a. [exoterikos, and esoterikos, Gr.] terms denoting external and internal, and applied to the double doctrine of the ancient philosophers; the one was public or exoteric, the other secret or esoteric.

EXOTIC, a. [exotikos, Gr.] foreign; not produced in our own country.

EXÓTIC, s. a foreign plant, or a plant growing or imported from abroad.

To EXPAND, v. a. [ex and pando, Lat.] to spread or lay open like a net or cloth; to dilate.

EXPANSE, s. a body widely extended, and having no inequalities on its surface; a surface; extent.

EXPANSIBILITY, s. capableness of being expanded or stretched out to greater dimensions.

EXPANSIBLE, a. capable to be stretched to a large extent.

EXPANSION, s. in Metaphysics, distance or space abstractedly considered, and distinguished from extension, which implies, according to Locke, "distance only when applied to the solid parts of matter." In Physics, the act of dilating, stretching, or spreading out a body, whereby its bulk and dimension is increased, whether by heat, elasticity, or rarefaction. Figuratively, the state of a thing which takes up more space than it used to do; the act of spreading out a thing; extent; or space to which any thing is spread or extended.

EXPANSIVE, a. having the power to spread or extend to a large space.

To EXPATRIATE, (expatriate) v. n. [ex and spatior, Lat.] to rove or range without confinement or regard to prescribed limits; to enlarge, or treat of in a copious manner.

To EXPECT, v. a. [ex and specto, Lat.] to look out after; to have an apprehension of future good or evil; to wait for a person's coming.

EXPECTABLE, a. that may be imagined to be produced by, or to come from.

EXPECTANCE, EXPECTANCY, s. [expectant, Fr.] the act or state of a person who waits for the coming of another; something waited for; hope; or that which people had formed vast hopes from.

EXPECTANT, a. [expectant, Fr.] waiting in hopes of the arrival of a person, time, or thing, or of succeeding another in any office.

EXPECTANT, s. one who waits for the arrival of a period of time, person, or thing, or the succession to any place; or is dependent on the promises and favours of another.

EXPECTATION, s. the state of a person who waits for the arrival of any person, period, or thing; dependence on the promises and favours of another for future good; the object which people form great hopes of. In Life Insurance, &c., the probable duration of life at any age.

EXPECETER, s. one who waits for, or has hopes of, preferment in a state; one who waits for the arrival of a person, thing, or period.

EXPECTORANTS, s. in Medicine, preparations which aid expectoration.

To EXPECTORATE, v. a. [ex and pectus, Lat.] to void phlegm, or other matter which obstructs the vessels of the lungs, by coughing, &c.

EXPECTORATION, s. the act of discharging phlegm, &c. by coughing.

EXPECTORATIVE, a. having the quality to promote expectoration.

EXPEDIENCE, EXPEDIENCY, s. the fitness or propriety of a means to the attainment of an end. Also, shiftiness, or the habit of resorting to expedients in a course of action instead of acting on principle, and from the idea of duty.

EXPEDIENT, a. [expedient, Fr.] proper to attain any particular end.

EXPEDIENT, s. a means proper to promote or forward an end; a shift, or means hit upon on a sudden to ward off any calamity or distress, or elude any punishment.

EXPEDIENTLY, ad. in a manner proper to attain any end. Not used.

EXPEDITATION, s. in the Forest Laws, signifies a cutting out the balls of a dog's fore-feet, for the preservation of the king's game. Every one that keeps any great dog, not expedited, forfeits 3s. 4d. to the king.

To EXPEDITE, v. a. [expedio, Lat.] to free from any obstruction or impediment; to hasten or quicken, to despatch or issue from a public office.

EXPEDITE, a. quick, performed soon; nimble or active.

EXPEDITELY, ad. with quickness, readiness, or haste.

EXPEDITION, s. quickness, applied to time or motion. A march or voyage, with intent to attack an enemy.

EXPEDITIOUS, a. speedy, quick; nimble, swift; acting with celerity.

EXPEDITIOUSLY, ad. speedily; nimbly.

To EXPEL, v. a. [ex and pello, Lat.] to drive out, or make a person quit a place by force. To eject, to throw out, applied to the animal functions.

EXPELLER, s. one that expels or drives away.

EXPENCE, EXPENSE, s. [ex and pendo, Lat.] cost; charges; money laid out for any use.

To EXPEND, v. a. to lay out or spend money.

EXPENSELESS, a. without cost or charge; without spending money.

EXPENSIVE, a. given to spend money; prodigal; extravagant, applied to a person. Costly; requiring money, applied to things.

EXPENSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as requires the spending much money.

EXPENSIVENESS, s. the act of profuseness, or spending money immoderately; dearness, or standing a person in a great sum.

EXPERIENCE, s. [experior, Lat.] knowledge gained by actual use, or practice, and not from books or hearsay.

To EXPERIENCE, v. a. to try or practise; to know by practice.

EXPERIENCED, part. skilful or wise by frequent practice or experience.

EXPERIENCER, s. one who makes frequent trials or experiments.

EXPERIMENT, s. [experior, Lat.] trial of any thing; the trial made of the result of certain applications and motions of bodies, in order to discover their effects, their laws and relations, or to be able to arrive at the true cause of the phenomena occasioned thereby.

To EXPERIMENT, v. a. to try; to discover by trial.

EXPERIMENTAL, a. pertaining to, or built upon, experiments; known by trial and experiment. Experimental philosophy, is that which deduces the laws of nature, the properties and powers of bodies, and their actions on each other, from experiments and trials made with that view.

EXPERIMENTALLY, ad. by experience; by trial; by experiments.

EXPERIMENTER, s. one who makes philosophical experiments.

EXPERT, a. [expertus, Lat.] skilful, ready, or knowing, in any particular office, art, or business; dexterous.

EXPERTLY, ad. in such a manner as discovers skill.

EXPERTNESS, s. skill, or knowledge, in any affair or undertaking.

EXPIABLE, a. capable of being atoned, rendered kind or propitious, by suffering or punishment.

To EXPIATE, v. a. [expio, Lat.] to make satisfaction or atonement for sins, by suffering the punishments due to them, or by substituting something equivalent to or instead of them; to avert the threats of an omen or prodigy.

EXPIATION, s. any suffering endured, or equivalent made, or sacrifice offered, to avert the punishment due to sin, and render the Deity propitious to the offender.

EXPIATORY, a. having the power to avert the Divine wrath from punishing sins.

EXPIATION, s. [expiō, Lat.] robbery. In Law, the act of committing waste upon lands to the loss and prejudice of the heir.

EXPIRATION, s. [ex and spiro, Lat.] in Medicine, the act by which the breath is forced out of the lungs; the last gasp of breath; vapour, breath, or the matter expired; the cessation or end of any period of time.

To EXPIRE, v. a. to breathe out; to send out fumes, vapours, or exhalations; to close, conclude, or bring to an end; to perish; to fly out with a blast—v. n. to conclude, finish, or terminate, applied to time or any period.

To EXPLAIN, v. a. [explano, Lat.] to clear up any difficulty in a book or expression; to illustrate.

EXPLAINABLE, a. that may be rendered more easy or plain to the understanding.

EXPLAINER, s. one who clears up any difficulty, or renders a thing more easy to be understood.

EXPLANATION, s. an illustration or comment, whereby a passage is rendered more easy to be understood.

EXPLANATORY, a. containing an illustration, or such remarks as render a thing easy to be understood.

EXPLETIVE, s. [expleo, Lat.] a word which is used merely to fill up a vacancy, or make up the number of feet in a verse.

EXPLICABLE, a. [explico, Lat.] that may be explained, understood, or rendered intelligible.

To EXPLICATE, v. a. to unfold. Figuratively, to explain, or render any difficulty more easy to be understood.

EXPLICATION, s. the act of opening or unfolding. Figuratively, the act of explaining, or rendering any difficult passage or doctrine plainer, or more easy to be understood; the sense given by an explainer; an interpretation.

EXPLICATIVE, a. having a tendency to explain, or render a thing more easy to be understood.

EXPLICATOR, s. one who renders any difficulty more easy to be understood.

EXPLICIT, a. unfolded. Figuratively, plain, easy, obvious, expressed, opposed to obscure or implicit.

EXPLICITLY, ad. plainly; directly; without implication or inference.

To EXPLODE, v. a. [ex and plaudo, Lat.] to drive out with contempt, clamour, and disgrace. Figuratively, to reject with scorn,—v. n. to burst asunder, with a loud and sudden report.

EXPLODER, s. a person who rejects an opinion with detestation or contempt.

EXPLOIT, s. [Fr.] a design accomplished; a successful and remarkable action in war.

EXPLORATION, s. [ex and ploro, Lat.] search; disquisition; examination.

EXPLORATORY, a. searching; examining.

To EXPLORE, v. a. to make trial of; to search into, by trials; to discover by examination; to try in order to make discoveries.

EXPLOSION, s. [ex and plaudo, Lat.] the act of driving out any thing with noise and violence; the noise made by the bursting or firing of gunpowder, or any like substance.

EXPLOSIVE, a. driving out with noise and violence.

EXPONENT, s. [ex and pono, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the number which expresses how often a given power is to be divided by its root, before it be brought to unity.

EXPONENTIAL, (exponentish) a. in Geometry, applied to curves which partake both of the nature of algebraic curves, and of transcendental ones.

To EXPORT, v. a. [ex and porto, Lat.] to send goods to foreign countries for sale.

EXPORT, s. a commodity sent out of the kingdom to foreign parts for sale.

EXPORTATION, s. the act or practice of sending goods to foreign markets for sale.

EXPORTER, s. he that sends commodities to foreign countries.

To EXPOSE, (expōse) v. a. [ex and pono, Lat.] to lay open, subject, or make liable, applied to ridicule, censure, examination, punishment, calamity, or danger.

EXPOSITION, (expōsition) s. the situation in which a thing is placed with respect to the sun or air; an interpretation, comment, or treatise, to render the sense of a writer more plain and intelligible.

EXPOSITOR, s. an explainer; an interpreter.

To EXPOSTULATE, v. n. [ex and postulo, Lat.] to debate, reason, or argue with a person by way of complaint against something.

EXPOSTULATION, s. the act of reasoning, or representing a thing to another by way of complaint.

EXPOSTULATOR, s. a person who argues with, or brings a complaint to, another.

EXPOSTULATORY, a. containing the representation of a complaint.

EXPOSURE, (expōsure) s. the act of laying open to public view and observation; the state of being subject or liable to blame, punishment, ridicule, or danger; a situation in which a thing lies open to the sun and air.

To EXPOUND, v. a. [expono, Lat.] to interpret or explain any difficult passage.

EXPOUNDER, s. one who explains.

To EXPRESS, v. a. [ex and primo, Lat.] to represent in words, or by any of the imitative arts of poetry, sculpture, or painting. To utter, applied solely to language. To declare one's sentiments; to squeeze out; to force out by pressure. To extort by violence; a Latinism.

EXPRESS, a. copied, or bearing a near resemblance, applied to the imitative arts of painting, drawing, sculpture, and poetry. In direct terms, applied to language. Clear, or without any ambiguity; on purpose; for a particular end.

EXPRESS, s. a messenger sent with expedition, on purpose to deliver a particular message; a message; a declaration in plain and direct terms.

EXPRESSIBLE, a. that may be uttered, or communicated by words; that may be forced out by squeezing.

EXPRESSION, (expōsion) s. the act of communicating an idea by language; the particular form, manner, or style, used in communicating one's thoughts; a phrase; the squeezing or forcing out any thing by pressure.

EXPRESSIVE, a. having the power of uttering or representing.

EXPRESSIVELY, ad. in a clear and direct manner, applied to language.

EXPRESSIVENESS, s. the power of representing, or conveying ideas to the mind.

EXPRESSLY, ad. in direct terms; plainly; positively.

EXPRESSURE, s. expression, or the conveying ideas by language; the form or likeness described.

To EXPROBATE, v. a. [exprobro, Lat.] to charge with a thing by way of reproach.

EXPROBATION, s. a reproachful accusation.

To EXPROPRIATE, v. a. [ex and proprius, Lat.] to make a thing no longer one's own. Not in use.

To EXPUGN, (expūn) v. a. [ex and pugno, Lat.] to take by assault.

EXPUGNATION, s. conquest; the taking a town by assault.

EXPULSION, s. [ex and pello, Lat.] the act of driving out; the state of a person driven from a place.

EXPULSIVE, a. having the power of driving out.

To EXPUNGE, v. a. [ex and pungo, Lat.] to blot or rub out. Figuratively, to efface or annihilate.

EXPURGATION, s. [ex and purgo, Lat.] the act of purging or cleaning. Figuratively, purification from bad mixtures, or from error and falsehood.

EXPURGATORY, s. one who corrects by expunging.

EXPURGATORY, a. employed in clearing away what is noxious, erroneous, or amiss.

EXQUISITE, a. [exquisitus, from ex and quero, Lat.] searched out with care; so excellent, perfect, or completely bad, as to show great care in the search, or great exactness and labour in the production. Also, consummately bad.

EXQUISITELY, ad. perfectly; accurately; completely; in such a manner as shows no small pains in the discovery or production.

EXQUISITENESS, s. nicety; perfection; owing to great care and pains.

EXSCRIPT, s. [ex and scribo, Lat.] a writing copied from some other.

EXSICCANT, Exsiccative, a. drying.
EXSICCATION, s. [ex and siccō, Lat.] the act of drying.
EXSICCATIVE, a. having the power of drying.
EXSUCTION, s. [ex and sugo, Lat.] the act of draining or drawing out by sucking.

EXSUDATION, s. [ex and sudo, Lat.] the act of discharging by sweat.

TO EXSUDE, v. a. to discharge by sweat; to distil or exhale.
EXSUFFLATION, s. [ex and sufflo, Lat.] a blast working underneath.

TO EXSUFFFLATE, v. a. [ex, Lat. and sufflō, Ital.] to whisper or buzz in the ear. This word is peculiar to Shakespeare.

TO EXSUSCITATE, v. a. [ex and suscito, Lat.] to rouse or stir up.

EXTACY, s. See ECSTASY.
EXTANT, a. [extans, Lat.] standing out, or above the other parts of the surface. Public; not suppressed; still to be met with, applied to books.

EXTATIC, EXTATICAL, a. [ekstasis, Gr.] See ECSTATIC.
EXTEMPORAL, a. [ex and tempus, Lat.] sudden; without any premeditation.

EXTEMPORALLY, ad. quickly; without any preceding study or preparation.

EXTEMPORANEOUS, a. sudden; not allowing or giving any time for preparation or premeditation.

EXTEMPORARY, a. sudden; quick; formed without study, preparation, or premeditation.

EXTEMPORE, ad. [Lat.] suddenly; without thought or study.

TO EXTENSORIZE, v. n. to speak without premeditation.
TO EXTEND, v. a. [ex and tendo, Lat.] to stretch out towards any part; to spread; to enlarge the surface of a thing. To increase, applied to force, strength, or duration. To communicate or impart, used with to. In Law, to seize.

EXTENDER, s. the person or means by which any thing is stretched.

EXTENDIBLE, a. capable of being made wider or longer.

EXTENDLESSNESS, s. an unlimited or unbounded extension.

EXTENSIBILITY, s. the quality of being made wider or longer.

EXTENSIBLE, a. capable of being stretched wider and longer; capable of including or comprehending more ideas.

EXTENSIBLENESS, s. the quality of being stretched wider or longer.

EXTENSION, s. the act of increasing the length or breadth of a thing; the state of a thing where length or breadth is increased. In Physics, the distance between the extremes of a solid body. In Metaphysics, space in concreto.

EXTENSIONAL, a. long, drawn out; having great extent.

EXTENSIVE, a. wide; large.

EXTENSIVELY, ad. widely; largely.

EXTENSIVENESS, s. largeness; wideness; diffusiveness.

EXTENSOR, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, a muscle by which any limb is extended.

EXTENT, s. the distance between the extremities of a thing; the space filled; communication; distribution. In Law, an execution or seizure of a person's goods.

TO EXTENUATE, v. a. [extenuo, from tenuis, Lat.] to make small, narrow, or slender; to make lean. Figuratively, to speak of a fault so as to make a partial excuse for it.

EXTENUATION, s. the act of representing things less ill than they are. Mitigation, or alleviation, applied to punishment. In Medicine, a loss of flesh, or decay of the body.

EXTERIOR, a. [Lat.] outward; external; not essential.

TO EXTERMINATE, v. a. [ex and termino, Lat.] to root out; to destroy utterly.

EXTERMINATION, s. total destruction.

EXTERMINATOR, s. [Lat.] the instrument by which any thing is destroyed.

TO EXTERMINE, v. a. to destroy; to put an end to.

EXTERNAL, a. [exterius, Lat.] outward; from without; outward appearance; or that which appears to the sight.

EXTERNALLY, ad. outwardly.

EXTILLATION, s. [ex and stillo, Lat.] the act of falling in drops.

TO EXTIMULATE, v. a. [ex and stimulo, Lat.] to prick or incite.

EXTIMULATION, s. pungency; or the power of exciting motion, sensation, or action.

EXTINCT, a. [extinguo, Lat.] quenched or put out, applied to fire. At a stop, without any survivors, applied to succession. Abolished, or out of force, applied to law. Figuratively, dead.

EXTINGUCTION, s. the act of quenching or putting out, applied to fire. The state of a thing quenched; utter destruction; suppression.

TO EXTINGUISH, v. a. [extinguo, Lat.] to put out or quench, applied to fire. To suppress or destroy, applied to the passions. To cloud or obscure by superior splendour.

EXTINGUISHABLE, a. that may be put out, quenched, suppressed, or destroyed.

EXTINGUISHER, s. a hollow cone, which is put on a candle to quench it.

EXTINGUISHMENT, s. the act of suppressing or putting an end to a thing. Abolition, applied to laws. The act of taking away all the descendants or survivors of a family.

TO EXTERPATE, v. a. [extirpo, from stirps, Lat.] to root out; to destroy utterly.

EXTERPATION, s. the act of rooting out, or utterly destroying.

EXTERPATOR, s. [Lat.] one who roots out; a destroyer.

EXTISPICIOUS, a. [extispicius, Lat.] augural; relating to the inspection of entrails in order to prognostication.

TO EXTOL, v. a. [ex and tollō, Lat.] to praise; to magnify with praise.

EXTOLLER, s. one who praises, or magnifies with praise.

EXTORTIVE, a. drawing by violence.

EXTORTIVELY, ad. by violence.

TO EXTORT, v. a. [ex and torqueo, Lat.] to draw by force, to wring from one; to gain by violence or oppression.

EXTORTER, s. a person who makes use of oppression, or violent or indirect means.

EXTORTION, s. the act or practice of gaining or acquiring by force; the force or violence made use of to gain a thing.

EXTORTIONER, (extirshoner) s. one who grows rich by violence.

TO EXTRACT, v. a. [ex and traho, Lat.] to draw any thing out by any means. In Arithmetic, to find the root of any number. To abridge or transcribe any passage from a book or writing.

EXTRACT, s. in Pharmacy, the purest and finest of any substance; separated by the proper means, and afterwards made into a thick consistence, by evaporation over fire. In Literature, an abridgment of a book, or a transcript of some passage.

EXTRACTION, s. [Lat.] in Chemistry and Pharmacy, an operation whereby essences, tinctures, &c. are drawn from natural bodies. In Surgery, an operation by which any foreign matter lodged in the body is taken out. In Genealogy, the stock or family from which a person is descended. In Arithmetic, extraction of root is the method of finding the roots of given numbers or quantities.

EXTRACTOR, s. a person or instrument by which any thing is taken out.

EXTRAJUDICIAL, (extrajudicial) a. [extra and judicium, Lat.] out of the regular course of proceeding in law.

EXTRAJUDICIALLY, (extrajudicially) ad. in a manner different from the common or stated course of procedure at law.

EXTRAMISSIION, s. [extra and mitto, Lat.] the act of emitting outward, opposite to intromission.

EXTRAMUNDANE, a. [extra and mundanus, Lat.] beyond the bounds of this material system.

EXTRANEOUS, a. [extra, Lat.] not intrinsic or essential to a thing; foreign, or of a different substance.

EXTRAORDINARILY, ad. in a manner out of the common method and order; uncommonly; eminently; remarkably.

EXTRAORDINARY, a. [extra and ordo, Lat.] different from, or out of the common course or order.

EXTRAPARACHIAL, (extraparochial) a. [extra and parochia, Lat.] not included or comprehended in any parish.

EXTRAPROVINCIAL, (extraprovincial) a. [extra and pro-

vincia, Lat.] not within the same province; or not within the jurisdiction of the same person.

EXTRAREGULAR, a. not comprehended within a rule.

EXTRA/VAGANCE, EXTRA/VAGANCY, s. [extra and vagor, Lat.] an excursion or sally beyond prescribed bounds; irregularity; wildness; bombast; waste; or superfluous expense. An immoderate heat or violence, applied to the passions.

EXTRA/VAGANT, a. wandering out of, or beyond, the prescribed bounds; roving beyond any prescribed forms, or the bounds of moderation; immoderate; irregular; not reduced to rule; prodigal; or profusely expensive.

EXTRA/VAGANT, s. one who is included or comprehended in no general rule or definition.

EXTRA/VAGANTLY, ad. contrary to all rule; in an unreasonable or immoderate degree; profusely expensive.

To EXTRA/VAGATE, v. n. to wander up and down; also to talk idly and impertinently.

EXTRA/VASATED, a. [extra and vas, Lat.] forced out of the vessels.

EXTRAVASATION, s. the act of forcing, or the state of being forced, out of its proper vessels.

EXTRA/VENATE, a. [extra and vena, Lat.] let out of the veins.

EXTRA/VGHT, (extraït) an obsolete participle of EXTRACT.

EXTR/ME, a. [extremus, Lat.] greatest, applied to degree. Utmost, or farthestmost; last, or that has nothing beyond it; applied to situation or time. Pressing, applied to danger.

EXTR/ME, s. the utmost point or highest degree of any thing; points at the greatest distance from each other.

EXTR/MELY, ad. in the utmost degree. Very much, or greatly, in familiar language.

EXTREME/FUNCTION, one of the sacraments of the Romish Church, the fifth in order, administered to people dangerously sick, by anointing them with holy oils, and pronouncing several prayers over them.

EXTRE/MITY, s. [extremitas, Lat.] the utmost parts, or those farthest from the centre or middle; those points which are most opposite to each other; the remotest or farthest part of a country; the utmost degree of violence, distress, or poverty.

To EXTRICATE, v. a. [ex and trica, Lat.] to free a person from any difficulty or perplexity.

EXTRICATION, s. the act of freeing from perplexity, difficulty, or danger.

EXTR/NSIC, a. [extrinsecus, Lat.] outward; external; not in the substance or subject itself.

EXTR/NSICAL, a. external; outward; from without.

To EXTRU/DE, v. a. [ex and trudo, Lat.] to thrust out; to drive off or away by violence.

EXTRUSION, s. the act of thrusting or driving out.

EXTU/BERANCE, s. [ex and tuber, Lat.] a knob, or part which rises above the rest of a surface.

EXTU/BERANCE, s. [exuberans, from ex and uber, Lat.] overgrowth; superfluous shoots; useless abundance; luxuriance.

EXTU/BERANT, a. growing with superfluous shoots, applied to plants. Luxuriant; superfluously plentiful; abounding in the utmost degree.

EXTU/BERANTLY, ad. abundantly, even to the highest or superfluous degree.

To EXU/BERATE, v. n. to abound in the highest degree.

EXU/CIOUS, a. [ex and succus, Lat.] without juice; dry.

EXUDATION, s. See EXUDATION.

To EXU/LCERATE, v. a. [exulcero, Lat.] to make sore with an ulcer; to afflict with a running or corroding humour. Figuratively, to afflict, enrage, or corrode.

EXULCERATION, s. the beginning of an erosion which wears away the substance, and forms an ulcer. The act of inflaming or enraging, applied to the mind.

EXU/LCERATORY, a. having a tendency to produce ulcers.

To EXU/LT, v. n. [exult, Lat.] to be affected with a high degree of gladness or joy.

EXULTANCE, s. a transport of joy or gladness.

EXULTATION, s. rapturous delight.

EXUNDATION, s. [exundo, Lat.] an overflowing. Figuratively, a great abundance.

EXU/PERANCE, s. [ex and supero, Lat.] a surplus, or greater quantity.

EXU/STION, s. [exustio, Lat.] consumption by fire.

EXU/VIE, s. [Lat.] the skins or shells which are cast by an animal.

EYAS, s. [niais, Fr.] in Falconry, or Natural History, a young hawk just taken from the nest, not able to prey for itself.

EY/ASMUSKET, s. in Falconry, a young unfledged male hawk of the musket kind.

EYCK, VAN, the name of two brothers who occupied a very distinguished place in the Flemish school of painters. They were the inventors of painting in oil, and were good colourists, but not so able in design. Hubert, the elder, died in 1423, aged 60 years. John, sometimes called John of Bruges, the most famous, died in 1441, aged 71 years.

EYE, Suffolk. It is surrounded with a brook, and is a mere country market town, though it has a corporation, and returns a member to parliament, and had once some interest in manufactures. It is 91 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2493.

EYE, s. formerly eyne in the plural, at present eyes; [oag, Sax. ee, Scot. een, plural:] the organ of sight. The eye is globular in figure, generally, and is lodged in a cavity in the skull, of the same figure, to which are attached the muscles which move it, and the eyelids, and through which are several small perforations for the passage of the necessary nerves, the whole being lined with fat, so that the motions of the eye are effected without friction, and no injury results to it from pressure or contact with the bony structure. The eye-ball consists of transparent fluids, contained in membranous integuments, the outer of which is called the sclerotic, and is tough and non-elastic; it does not invest the whole ball; in front it makes way for the membrane called the cornea, which is horny and transparent; it also projects globularly beyond the outline of the globe of the eye itself; this cornea, and the fore-part of the sclerotic, are invested with a delicately sensitive membrane, evidently serving, as guard or watcher against injuries which might otherwise occur to the insensitive eye-ball;—the second membrane is named the choroid, which is of a loose structure, most abundantly supplied with blood-vessels, and coloured either dark-brown or black; in the front of the eye, behind the cornea, it gives place to the iris, which is perforated in the centre by the pupil, and is so sensitive and delicately muscular, that it contracts or expands this orifice almost simultaneously with any change in the degree of light; between the iris, which is the coloured part of the eye-ball, and the cornea, is the aqueous humour, which keeps the cornea in its proper state of convexity, and fills up the spaces without impeding vision;—the interior of the ball is lined with a close and most fine nervous net-work, called the retina, communicating with the optic nerve, at the back of the eye-ball, upon which the images of external objects are pictured as in a camera obscura; it is filled with a thickish fluid called the vitreous humour; in the fore-part of which, connected with the choroid membrane, is the lens, called the crystalline humour, of a double convex form, contained in a thin transparent case;—by means of the optic nerve there is a direct communication with the brain, which is the actual seer, the eye being but the instrument. The difference between the pupil in man and some animals, such as the cat, is well known. Externally the ball is defended by the eyelids, and the surface is lubricated by the secretions of the lachrymal gland. In animals and birds that live in jungles and thickets, or which need a defence to the eye that will not obstruct vision, a third eyelid, called the nictitating membrane, is supplied, which is capable of being drawn from the inner corner of the eye across the cornea, like a curtain. The organs of vision in the inferior animals are very wonderfully varied, and in every case exactly adapted to the needs of each creature. They will abundantly repay observation and study; but can only be thus hinted at here. Sight; the countenance; aspect; regard; notice; attention; perception; view; a small catch into which a hook goes. In Botany, the bud of a plant; that part of the seed whence the radicle proceeds; that point in a tuber whence a new root grows.

To EYE, v. a. to watch; to keep in view.—v. n. to appear, or seem.

EYEBALL, s. the apple of the eye.

EYEBRIGHT, s. See EUPHRASY.

EYEBROW, s. the hairy arch over the eye, which serves to defend it from any moisture which would otherwise run into it from the forehead.

EY/EDROP, s. a tear.

EYEGLASS, s. spectacles; glass to assist the sight.
 EYELASHES, s. the row or fringe of hairs on the eyelids.
 EYELESS, a. without eyes; blind.
 EYELET, s. [oeillet, Fr.] a hole through which light may enter; a small hole wrought in linen, usually termed by sempstresses an eyelet-hole.
 EYELID, s. the membrane or skin which closes the eye.
 EYESERVANT, s. one who works only while watched, or while his master is present.
 EYESERVICE, s. service performed only while the master is present.
 EYESHOT, s. glance; sight; view.
 EYESIGHT, s. the sight of the eye.
 EYESORE, s. something offensive to the sight.
 EYESPOTTED, a. marked with spots like eyes.
 EYESTRING, s. the tendon, or nerve, by which the eye is held in its place.
 EYESUCKER, s. a small worm found adhering to the eye of a sprat.
 EYETOOTH, s. the tooth on the upper jaw, on each side, next to the grinders, called by anatomists, dog's teeth, or dentes canini.
 EYEWINK, s. a quick shutting and opening of the eye, intended as a sign or token.
 EYEWITNESS, s. one who gives testimony to facts which he has seen.
 EYRE, s. [eyre, Fr. iter, Lat.] in Law, the court of justices itinerant.

EYRY, s. [ey, Teut.] the place where birds of prey build their nests, or hatch.

EZEKIEL, a Hebrew prophet during the Babylonish captivity, for 20 years, and is said to have been put to death for his zeal in denouncing idolatry. In his writings are found the most solemn warnings against the irreligion, hypocrisy, idolatry, and practical sin of the Israelitish people, mingled with the most terrible denunciations of deserved punishment. He distinctly predicts many events relating to the Jewish nation, and also relating to Tyre, Egypt, and the other tribes of the immediate vicinity of Canaan. There also are found, particularly amongst the latter chapters, predictions calculated to raise the hope and reanimate the faith and courage of those that did yet fear God. The style of this writer is marked by force, to which every thing else is subordinated: his imagery, his illustrations, his visions, his threats, even his consolations, all bear this character; but the purity and grandeur of his object are so manifest throughout, that even the most revolting pictures lose their coarseness, and seem to be the best suited to attain the purposed end. He has been deservedly called the Æschylus of the Hebrews. Commentators, intent on finding literal accomplishments to his sublimely figurative predictions, both in old time, and in the present days, have missed the prophet's meaning, and degradingly perplexed their theme. He might be studied with no small advantage in these days.

EZRA, a Jewish high priest, who was amongst the first of the captives that returned from Babylon to the Holy City, after the edict of Cyrus. He was a man deeply versed in God's law, and as profoundly a servant of God; and his constant care was, in company with the prophets sent just at this time, to keep the people well taught in their duty, and alive in their faith towards their God. The book of the Old Testament bearing his name contains an affecting narrative of those events in which he was concerned. The compilation of the Books of Chronicles, and the arranging and collecting of the books of the Old Testament, is by tradition ascribed in good part to him. In the Greek Septuagint version he is called Esdras, and two books are ascribed to him, one of which is only an interpolated and falsified copy of the other. In the Latin version, the Book of Nehemiah is also ascribed to Esdras, and a fourth book, palpably false, beside.

F, THE sixth letter of the alphabet, and fourth consonant, is a mute, formed by a compression of the upper teeth against the under lip; it has much the same sound as the Greek φ, or ph, which supplied the digamma, a letter having the same place, form, and power, as our F. As a numeral, F denotes 40, and with a dash over it thus, F, 40,000. In Music, it represents the note in the lowest space in the treble clef, and the top line but one in the bass, whence this clef is commonly called the F clef; and frequently for forte, as ff does for fortissimo. In Medical prescriptions, f stands for fiat, let it be done; thus, f, s. stand for fiat secundum artem, let it be done according to art. As an abbreviation, F stands for Fellow, as F. R. S. for Fellow of the Royal Society.

FA, in Music, the fourth note in the scale or gamut; as ut, re, mi, fa.

FABA'CEOUS, a. [faba, Lat.] having the nature of a bean.
 FAB'BUS, the name of one of the patrician families of ancient Rome, which produced many men of great eminence; and particularly Quintus Fabius Maximus, who obtained some celebrity as a general in the wars in Italy against Hannibal, whose movements he impeded, and plans he confounded, by the almost singular scheme of hanging about his army, without ever giving him an opportunity of engaging in a general battle; and obtained the epithet of Cunctator, or delayer. Another Fabius, surnamed Pictor, was the first writer of Roman history, but his work is lost. Fabius Maximus died in 203 B. C., and Fabius Pictor, in 223 B. C.

FABLE, s. [fabula, Lat.] a tale or fictitious story, intended to enforce some moral precept; a fiction; a series of events which compose a moral, epic, or dramatic poem. Fables are almost peculiarly the literature of people scarcely removed from barbarism.

To FABLE, v. n. to feign, or write fiction; to tell falsehoods, with an intent to deceive; to lie.—v. a. to feign; to deliver in fables and fictions.

FABLED, part. mentioned or celebrated in fables.
 FABLER, s. a writer of feigned stories or fictions; a softer or more genteel word to express a person guilty of lying.

FABRIC, s. [faber, Lat.] a building; a thing composed of different or dissimilar parts; the texture of a silk or stuff.

To FABRICATE, v. a. to build, form, or construct.

FABRICATION, s. the act of building; construction. Figuratively, a statement or narrative invented for the purpose of deception.

FABRICIUS, C., a Roman general, one of the patterns of stern virtue in the early days of that state. He it was who revealed to Pyrrhus, the Epirot king, against whom he was fighting, the treacherous proposal of his physician to poison him. He died in about 250 B. C.

FABRICIUS, the Latinized name of several eminent scientific men and writers of Europe. John Albert, was a theologian and critic of Leipzig and Hainburg, and wrote many works relating to ancient authors, &c. He died in 1736, aged 69 years. John Christian, was a naturalist, and friend of Linnaeus, who travelled in pursuit of his favourite study through many countries of Europe, and published works on entomology. He resided latterly at Copenhagen, as a college professor, and royal councillor; and died in 1807, aged 65 years. Jerome, was a physician of Padua, whose anatomical studies were of great service in physiological science. He died in 1619. William, was a surgeon of Berne, Switzerland, whose recorded observations are still valuable. He died in 1682. David and John, were astronomers; the first, somewhat speculative, attempted to harmonize Kepler's discoveries with the old Ptolemaic system; the other, his son, was practical, and discovered the spots of the sun. David died in 1579; John, in 1624.

FABRONI, ANGELO, an Italian writer, whose biographies of the literary men of Italy, of the Medici, and Leo X., are well known through our English writers, who have abundantly used them. He was connected with the university of Pisa, and died in 1802, aged 70 years.

FABULIST, s. [fabuliste, Fr.] a writer or composer of fables.

FABULOSITY, s. [fabula, Lat.] the quality of dealing in falsehood, or telling lies.

FABULOUS, a. dealing in, or belonging to fables, fiction, or falsehood.

FABULOUSLY, ad. in a feigned or fabulous manner.
 FACCIO'LATI, JAMES, the prince of Latin lexicographers, who spent forty years, in conjunction with his pupil Forcellini, in compiling a lexicon that embraces the whole range of Latin literature. This has been methodized by Scheller, and is an invaluable work. He wrote some other works. Padua was the scene of his patient labours; and there he died in 1769, aged 87 years.

FACIES, s. [facies, Lat.] the visage; the countenance, or forepart of the head; the surface of a thing; the front or fore-part of a building or thing; the state or appearance of an affair; appearance, look, or countenance; presence, or sight; confidence; boldness. To make faces, means, to distort the face.

TO FACE, v. n. to carry a false appearance, or play the hypocrite; to come in front.—v. a. to march against or oppose an enemy or danger with boldness and courage. Followed by down, to deny or oppose, or put to silence by mere impudence.

FACE-PAINTING, s. the art of drawing portraits.

FACE, s. [facette, Fr.] a small surface; a superficies cut into several angles.

FACE-TIOUS, (faeshious) a. [facetus, Lat.] wittily gay; used both of persons and things.

FACE-TIOUSLY, (faeshiously) ad. in a merry, witty, and jocose manner.

FACE-TIOUSNESS, (faeshiousness) s. the quality of diverting by cheerful wit, or pleasant and jocose expressions or stories.

FACE, a. [facilis, Lat.] to be attained or performed with ease or little labour; easily conquered or surmounted; easy of access or converse; not haughty; pliant; flexible.

TO FACILITATE, v. a. [facilis, Lat.] to make easy, or to clear from difficulty or impediments.

FACILITY, s. easiness of performing, or to be performed; freedom from difficulty; readiness in performing; easiness to be persuaded either to good or bad; flexibility, or credulity; easiness of access; condescension, or compliance.

FACINEROUS, a. [corrupted from facinorous] wicked.

FACING, part. opposite to.

FACING, s. an ornamental covering put upon the outside or edge of any thing.

FACINOROUS, a. [facinus, Lat.] wicked; bad.

FACINOROUSNESS, s. wickedness in a high degree.

FACT, s. [factum, Lat.] a thing done; an effect produced; an actual event or thing, opposed to a mere supposition or speculation; an action.

FACTION, (fakshon) s. [factio, Lat.] a party in a state; a tumult, discord, or dissension.

FACTIOUS, (fakshious) a. [factieux, Fr.] given to faction, or public dissension; loud and vehement in supporting any party; proceeding from, or tending to, public discord.

FACTIOUSLY, (fakshiously) ad. in a manner criminally discontented; tumultuous; or forming parties in a government.

FACTIOUSNESS, (fakshiousness) s. inclination to public dissension; violent clamorousness in support of a party.

FACTITIOUS, (fakshious) a. [factitious, Lat.] made by art, opposed to what is produced by nature; counterfeited.

FACTOR, s. [Lat.] an agent; or one who transacts business for another. In Arithmetic, and Algebra, either of the quantities by which the product of a process of multiplication is obtained.

FACTORY, s. a house or district inhabited by traders in a foreign country; several traders associated or embodied in a place. Also, in England, a large building where textile manufactory is carried on, on a large scale, by the help of steam power and machinery, both in silk, worsted, and cotton, and in all departments, from the spinning of the thread to the weaving of the most costly fabrics. Factories are commonly called mills. It is greatly to be regretted that in this country, owing in part to the influence of laws of feudal spirit, and in part to the unbridled lust of gain, the factory system is one of the sources of the most prodigious evils, both to individuals, families, and towns, that can be conceived. Women and children are employed instead of men, for such lengths of time together, that life is shortened; at such insufficient remuneration, that prostitution and crime are almost necessarily the consequence;—whilst at any change in the aspect of the markets, the hours of labour (and the pay of course) are abridged, and often, part or all the hands turned off. In America it has been proved by repeated experiments, and these are confirmed by a few examples in England, that there is no need for such a state of things. The legislature is idly attempting to correct it now. But little hope of permanent good can be entertained from any change not originating with those whose very being is bound up in the system. When capital recognises labour as its fellow-worker, instead of tasking it as its slave, then a new system will rise, and commerce will be in these days, as she was of old, one of the grand agents in the advancement of the race.

FACTOTUM, s. [facio and totus, Lat.] ornamented great letters, set at the beginning of a book, chapter, &c. Also one who is employed alike in all kinds of business; a word of contempt.

FA'CULTY, s. [facultas, Lat.] the power of doing any thing; a bodily or mental power; authority; a disposition, either good or bad; knack, skill, dexterity, gained by habit. In Physic, a power or ability of performing any thing or action, whether natural, vital, or animal. In Law, it is a privilege granted to a person by favour and indulgence, of doing what by law he ought not to do. For granting these privileges, there is a court under the archbishop of Canterbury, called the Court of Faculties; the chief officer is styled Master of the Faculties, who has a power of granting dispensations in divers cases; as, to marry without the bans being first published; to ordain a deacon under age; for a son to succeed his father in a benefice; a clerk to hold two or more livings. Also, the masters and professors of any science; peculiarly applied to physicians, or other practitioners in medicine.

FACUND, a. [facundus, Lat.] eloquent.

TO FADE, v. n. [Fr.] to decline from a greater to a less vigour or strength; to grow weak, or languish; to decay from a stronger or brighter to a weaker or paler colour; to die away, vanish, or wear out gradually. To wither, applied to plants or other vegetables.

FE'CES, s. [Lat. plural.] in Medicine, excrements, or the dregs left after their distillation and infusion.

TO FAG, v. n. [fatigo, Lat.] to make weary or tired; to be fatigued.—v. a. to beat.

FAG, s. a name given, in the great chartered grammar schools, to those of the younger scholars who are employed by the seniors as lackeys and slaves. The fagging system, as it is called, has called forth the indignant reprobation of many, and has had resolute defenders; but it is already much mitigated, and may soon, it is hoped, be wholly abolished.

FA'G-END, s. [fegan, Sax.] the end of a piece of cloth, which is made of coarser materials than the other part. Figuratively, the refuse or meaner part of any thing.

FAGOT, s. [Fr.] a bundle of sticks, or brushwood, bound together for fuel, or any other purpose.

TO FAGOT, v. n. to tie up, or bundle together.

FAHLUN, sometimes called COPPERBERG, a town of Dalecarlia, in Sweden. It contains two churches roofed with copper, and the houses are generally of wood, two stories high. It is situated in the midst of rocks and hills, between two large lakes, near some celebrated copper mines. It is the capital of the province, and is about 120 miles from Stockholm. Population, about 6000. Lat. 60. 52. N. Long. 15. 32. E.

FÄTRENREIT, GABRIEL, an eminent natural philosopher, of Dantzic, chiefly known to us by a scale of degrees for the thermometer generally used now, and called by his name. He died in 1736, aged 50 years.

TO FAIL, v. n. [faillir, Fr.] to grow deficient from a former plenty; to become unequal to the demand or use; to be extinct; to cease, or be lost; to sink; to languish through fatigue; to decay; to miss producing its effect; to disappoint a person's expectations; to be deficient in keeping an assignation, or in performing a duty.—v. a. to desert; to omit the discharge of a duty; to be wanting to.

FAIL, s. a miscarriage, miss, or unsuccessful attempt; omission, neglect, or non-performance of a promise or duty; deficiency; want; death.

FAILING, s. a deficiency, imperfection, or slight fault, owing to the infirmity of our natures.

FAILURE, s. deficiency, or cessation. An omission, or slip, applied to duty; a slight fault.

FAIN, a. [feyan, Sax.] glad; joyful; forced, compelled, or obliged. Though this last sense is now the only one in use, as Johnson observes, it seems to have arisen from a mistake of the original signification, or some ambiguous expressions; as, "I was fain to do this;" which would equally suit with the rest of the sentence, whether it was supposed to mean, "I was compelled, or I was glad, to do this."

FAIN, ad. gladly; very desirously; willingly.

TO FAINT, v. n. [faime, Fr.] to decay, fade, or waste away quickly; to grow languid, or fall into a fit; to sink down through dejection.—v. a. to deject; to depress; to make a person languid.

FAINT, a. [fane, Fr.] void of strength, vigour, or spirit. Pale, dead, or void of brightness, applied to colour. Slow; not loud, scarcely audible, applied to sound.

FAINTHEARTED, a. cowardly; timorous; dejected.

FAINTHEARTEDLY, ad. timorously; cowardly.

FAINTHEARTEDNESS, s. cowardice; want of courage.

FAINTING, s. a fit, a swoon, wherein a person is senseless for a short time; in medicine, called syncope.

FAINTLY, ad. in a feeble or languid manner. Dead, or just visible, applied to colour. Without force, applied to description. Scarcely audible, applied to sound. Timorously, or without courage, activity, or vigour, applied to the manner of action.

FAINTNESS, s. languor, or want of spirits or strength through fatigue; fear; want of vigour; want of force; timorousness; dejection.

FAINTY, a. weak; languid; void of vigour or strength.

FAIR, a. [feger, Sax.] beautiful; handsome; of a white complexion, opposed to black or brown. Clear, pure, or without any foulness, applied to water. Not cloudy, nor tempestuous, applied to the weather. Favourable, prosperous, applied to the wind. Not effected by any unlawful methods, as a "fair death." Equal, or just, applied to morals; not practising any unjust or indirect methods; open; direct; pleasing; civil; gentle; mild; commodious; easy; or successful.

FAIR, ad. gently, without violence, joined to softly. In a civil and complaisant manner, joined to speech. Happily; successfully.

FAIR, s. a beauty; the female sex generally.

FAIR, s. [foire, Fr.] a public place where merchants or traders resort, at stated times, to dispose of their goods, and enjoy some diversions, which are usually exhibited at such times. They arose at a time when there were few shops, and few regular markets; and were suited to such a state of things exactly. But in the present day, when every country village has a shop, and market towns, with markets once or twice a week, are scattered all over the country, they are not only not wanted for purposes of trade, but are positively injurious. And the diversions have assumed so prominent a feature in them, that they are often nothing more than seasons of the most brutal debauchery. It is high time for them to be abolished.

FAIRFAX, THOMAS, LORD, one of the most distinguished leaders in the Puritan revolution of the 17th century. He received the usual training in arms, learning, and religion of the times; and sympathized most deeply with the patriots of the Long Parliament. At the time of Charles I.'s attempt to raise forces against the parliament, he, even at the peril of his life, presented a petition to the monarch against them. Afterwards he served under his father in the army of the north with distinction. He fought at Marston Moor; and afterwards continued in the north, doing useful service to the parliamentary cause. He was appointed governor of Hull, on the discovery of Itham's treachery; and after the Self-denying Ordinance, was made lord-general of all the parliament's forces. He won Naseby fight, took Bristol, dispersed the royalists in Cornwall, and ended the war. The part that he took in the movements of the army, after the capture of the king, though not wholly decided, yet secured the triumph of the Independents, and the execution of Charles. He was made constable of the Tower, and honoured as the general who had not only beaten the chief malignant, but also crushed two attempted risings in his favour, at Maidstone and Colchester, and secured religious liberty to England, deserved. He did not sit at the king's trial; and the same influence which kept him back, kept him in almost complete retirement during all the splendid reign of his former lieutenant, Cromwell. He aided in the Restoration of Charles II., and had his reward. He died in 1671, aged 55 years. He was the Lafayette of the period, but unhappily not so steadfast in his principles, though equally so in his hereditary-monarchical formula, as Lafayette. He was also somewhat unduly influenced by his wife, a vehement Presbyterian, and not subject to any doubts of the Divine origin of her system, or any common womanly timidity. Edward Fairfax, a nearly related kinsman of the preceding, was the first and best translator of Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered; and died in 1632, aged about 60 years.

FAIRFORD, Gloucestershire. It is celebrated for the glass windows, in its spacious and beautiful church, curiously painted with Scripture history, done from the designs of Albert Durer. The colours are so lively, especially in the drapery, and the figures are in general so well drawn, that Vandyke affirmed, the pencil could not exceed them. The glass was taken in a ship going to Rome. It is situated on the Coln, a little above its influx into the Thames, 80 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1672.

FAIRING, s. something bought for a present at a fair.

FAIR ISLE, an island of the Northern Ocean, nearly midway between Shetland and Orkney, from both which its towering rocks are plainly discovered. On the E. side, the duke of Medina Sidonia, admiral of the Spanish Armada, was wrecked in 1588.

FAIRLY, ad. pleasantly, applied to situation. Honestly, or without fraud, applied to the manner of action; ingeniously; openly. Candidly, or without wresting the sense, applied to criticism. Without blots, applied to writings. Completely; entirely; perfectly.

FAIRNESS, s. beauty; elegance of form, applied to the make of a person. Honesty, or freedom from fraud, applied to the manner of a person's dealings.

FAIRSPOKEN, a. using civil and complaisant expressions.

FAIRY, s. [farlith, Sax.] in both Celtic and Teutonic Mythology, a kind of spirit, supposed to appear in a diminutive form, dance in meadows, and to reward cleanliness, &c. An enchantress.

FAIRY, a. belonging to, or supposed to be given by, fairies.

FAIRY-RINGS, s. circles of rank grass in meadows and pastures, attributed in olden time to the midnight, moonlight dances of the fays; now known to be caused by one or two species of agaric or toad-stool, which growing first in a little cluster, and exhausting the soil there of all that they can assimilate, shed their seed or spores on the fresh ground outside them, and thus, year after year, grow in a constantly expanding ring; while the grass which grows where they have rotted, grows rank and strong from the abundance of nutriment supplied by them as manure to it. Fairy-stones, or fairy-loaves, the casts of the interior of a fossil species of echinus or sea-urchin, found originally in the chalk, but also abundantly in the wreck of the chalk, which is discovered in gravel-bed.

FAITH, s. [fides, Lat.] belief in a proposition; trust or confidence in a person, or a plan of working; fidelity or steadfast adherence to principles and promises; sincerity. In Metaphysics, it is used by some writers to express the exercise of the mind in reference to spiritual, immaterial objects, as truths, ideas, &c., just as perception does in reference to sensations. In Theology, it means, belief of a dogma or creed; trust in the Saviour; and also that higher and spiritual life which by the Spirit of God is led when we look not on things which are seen and temporal, but on those which are unseen and eternal. In this last sense it is opposed to sight. In the second sense it has become the watchword of the evangelical school of divines and preachers, as opposed to works, whether ritual or merely moral. In the first it is employed by the shallow and sensuous schools, which are only just beginning to lose ground amongst us. In the New Testament, it often signifies only faithfulness. It was to fidelity or honesty, manful maintenance of one's ground, under the name of Faith, or Fides, that temples were dedicated by the Romans. A worship this which, without the temples, would not be the worst that could be adopted by some men now.

FATTHFUL, a. firm in adhering to truth, or principle, or religion; honest or upright in the discharge of any duty.

FATTHFULLY, ad. with full confidence in the promises of God; with strict adherence to duty and loyalty.

FATTHFULNESS, s. any principle which a person may confide in; truth or veracity; firm adherence to duty or principle.

FATTHLESS, a. without trust in God; without confidence in another; perfidious; not true to duty, promise, or truth.

FATTHLESSNESS, s. treachery; perfidy.

FAKE, s. among seamen, a coil of rope.

FAKENHAM, Norfolk. It is situated on a hill, and has a fine church. The streets are irregular and ill paved. In 1110 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2158. There is another Fakenham, in Suffolk, not far from Thetford, where Bloomfield's Fakenham ghost was heard and seen. Pop. 213.

FAKIR, s. a kind of Indian monks, who even outdo the mortifications and severities of the ancient Anchorets; some of them mangle their bodies with scourges and knives; others never lie down; and others remain all their lives in one posture.

FALCATED, a. [falc, Lat.] hooked; bent like a reapinghook or scythe. Applied by astronomers to the appearance which the moon makes while moving from the conjunction to the opposition.

«FALCATION, s. crookedness; in a crooked form, resembling that of a scythe or reaping-hook.

FALCHION, (falshion) s. [falcon, Fr.] a short crooked sword or cimeter.

FALCON, (falkon) s. [faucon, Fr.] in Natural History, a genus of birds of prey, one or two species of which are highly valued for their docility, and service in hawking. In ancient Gunnery, a sort of cannon, whose diameter at the bore is five inches and a quarter, weight seven hundred and fifty pounds, length seven feet, load two pounds and a quarter, shot two inches and a half diameter and two pounds and a half weight.

FALCONER, (falkoner) s. [fauconnier, Fr.] a person who breeds, brings up, tames, and tutors birds of prey, such as falcons, hawks, &c.

FALCONER, WILLIAM, an English naval poet and writer. His Shipwreck is not so vastly admired as it was; but, as the only poem of the kind, unless the grand passage in Byron's Don Juan be esteemed one, is likely to continue to enjoy the franchise of the library. It introduced the poet from the merchant service to the navy; where another shipwreck ended his life, in 1769, aged about 40 years.

FALCONET, (falkonet) s. [falconneau, Fr.] anciently a kind of ordnance, whose diameter at the bore is four inches and a quarter, weight four hundred pounds, length six feet, load one pound and a quarter, shot something more than two inches diameter and one pound and a quarter weight.

FALCONRY, (falkonery) v. the art of taming and teaching birds of prey to pursue and take game.

FALDAGE, (faldage) s. [faldagium, barb. Lat.] a privilege, which several lords anciently reserved to themselves of setting up folds for sheep in any field within their manors, and this not for their own, but likewise for their tenants' sheep.

FALDFEE, (faldfee) s. a composition paid anciently by tenants for the privilege of foldage.

FALDING, (falding) s. a kind of coarse cloth.

FALDSTOOL, (faldstool) s. a kind of stool placed at the altar in churches, for the priests to kneel on during the prayers at the Communion Service.

FALKINGHAM, Lincolnshire. It is 110 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 820.

FALKIRK, Sirlingshire, Scotland. It is a somewhat fine town, and has a noble church. In its neighbourhood the great markets for Highland cattle, called trysts, are held thrice a year; 15,000 head of cattle are sometimes sold at one tryst; which are, for the most part, sent to England. It is 25 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 8209.

FALKLAND, Fifeshire, Scotland. It is situated at the foot of one of the beautiful green hills called the Lomonds. The inhabitants are mostly employed in agriculture. It is 18 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1313.

FALKLAND ISLANDS, N. E. of the Straits of Magellan. They consist of two large, with a number of smaller islands surrounding them. The soil is said to be nothing but bogs and barren mountains, beaten by storms almost perpetual. Some settlements have been made on them by the English. Lat. from 51. 5. to 52. 46. S. Long. from 57. 40. to 61. 10. W.

To FALL, (fall) v. n. preter. I fell, or have fallen or fall; past part. fallen; [fallen, Sax.] to descend by accident from a higher to a lower place; to drop; to move down any descent; to die, or come to a sudden end; to be degraded from a high station to a lower one; to decrease or diminish in value, weight, or quality; to enter into any state of the body or mind. "Fall asleep," Shak. "Fell into such a rage," Knolles. To sink below a thing in comparison, used with short. To happen; to befall; to light on; to come upon, as a punishment. To be born, or yeaned, applied to cattle. To fall away, to languish, or grow faint; to grow lean, or decrease in bulk; to revolt; to apostatize; to perish, or be lost. To fall back, to fail of a promise or resolution; to recede or give way. Used with down, to bow or bend as a suppliant; to sink or tumble prostrate on the ground. To fall from, to revolt. To fall in, to coincide, or concur; to comply. To fall off, to separate; to perish; to forsake. To fall on, to begin to do a thing eagerly; to assault; or make an attack; to handle, or treat of a subject in discourse. To fall over, to revolt. To fall out, to quarrel; to happen; to drop. To fall to, to begin eagerly to eat; to apply himself to. To fall under, to be subject to; to be ranged with.

FALL, (fall) s. the act of dropping from a higher place; the act of tumbling prostrate upon the ground; the violence suffered from dropping accidentally from a higher place; death; overthrow; ruin; loss of greatness; decrease in price or value. Lessening of sound or cadence, applied to music. A cataract, cascade, or descent of water from a high place; the outlet of a current into any other water; autumn, or the time when the leaves drop or fall from the trees. In Evangelical Theology, the fall, is the name given to that primal sin, which procured the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden, to which is attributed the sinfulness of the race.

FALLACIOUS, (faldshious) a. [falla, Lat.] producing mistakes; full of sophistry; raising false expectations; deceitful.

FALLACIOUSLY, (faldshiously) ad. in such a manner as to deceive by false appearances; or tending to lead into mistakes by sophistry.

FALLACIOUSNESS, s. tendency to deceive; inconclusiveness.

FALLACY, s. [fallacia, Lat.] an argument made use of to lead a person into an error; an argument seemingly correct in form, but in reality not; a sophism.

FALLIBILITY, s. liability or possibility of being deceived, or of being in an error.

FALLIBLE, a. liable to error, or mistake.

FALLING, (falding) s. an indenting, or hollow in a surface, opposed to prominence.

FALLING-SICKNESS, (falding-sickness) s. See EPILEPSY.

FALLING-STARS, s. See METEORS.

FALLOW, (falla) s. [faleve, Sax.] a pale red, or yellow, applied to colour. In Husbandry, unsowed, or left to rest after certain years of tillage; ploughed, but not sowed or prepared for a second ploughing. Figuratively, unploughed, uncultivated, applied to ground. Uncoccupied, or neglected.

FALLOW, (falla) s. [faleve, Sax.] ground ploughed in order for a second ploughing; or land untillied, and suffered to rest, after bearing a certain number of years.

To FALLOW, (falla) v. n. to plough in order to a second ploughing, or an interval of rest before seed be sown a second time.

FALLOWNESS, s. barrenness; an exemption from bearing fruit.

FALMOUTH, Cornwall. The harbour here is so very commodious, that ships of the greatest burden can come up to its quay; and it has, besides, so many deep and well-sheltered creeks belonging to it, that the whole British navy may ride safe here in any wind. It is defended by the castles of St. Mawes and Pendennis, each on high rocks at the entrance. There are some handsome buildings in the town, which is not a very large one, though of some importance as a packet-station for the Peninsula, the Mediterranean, and America. It is 268 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 7695.

FALSE, (falsie) a. [falsus, Lat.] representing a thing to be what it is not; fictitious, or counterfeit; treacherous, or unjust; hypocritical, or feigned.

FALSEHOOD, (faldshood) s. [falsus, Lat.] a lie, or the saying or doing a thing for the purpose of deceiving.

FALSELY, (faldshely) ad. contrary to truth; erroneously; perditionally.

FALSENESS, (faldshness) s. contrariety to truth, honesty, or faithfulness.

FALSETTO, s. [Ital.] the voice in which adult males sing the treble; and which is to be distinguished from the natural voice, which proceeds (apparently) from the chest; this proceeding only from the throat.

FALSIFICATION, (falsifiktshion) s. the act of altering the words of a sentence so as to make it signify something contrary to the opinion of the author; contradiction, or confutation.

FALSIFIER, (falsifier) s. one who alters the words or sentences of an author, so as to make the sense contrary to what it was originally; one who counterfeits, or makes a thing appear to be what it is not; a liar, or inventor of falsehoods.

To FALSIFY, (falsify) v. a. [falsifier, Fr.] to counterfeit, or forge; to alter the sense of a book. Figuratively, to confute, or prove false; to violate by treachery.—v. n. to lie, or tell an untruth.

FA'LSITY, (falsity) s. [falsitas, Lat.] the representing a thing to be what it is not; a falsehood, or lie. Figuratively, an error.

To FA'LTER, (failler) v. n. [falter, Span.] applied to pronunciation, to hesitate or stammer in speaking. To fail in any act of the body or mind.—v. a. to sift, or cleanse.

FA'LT'ERINGLY, (failleringly) ad. with hesitation and stammering, applied to utterance of words. With languor, feebleness, or weakness, applied to any act of the body or mind.

FAME, s. [fama, Lat.] honourable report. Figuratively, rumour, or report.

FAMED, part. spoken of with honour and esteem.

FA'MELESS, a. inglorious; not known for any production of the understanding, invention, or action; of no repute.

FAM'ILIAR, a. [familiaris, from familia, Lat.] belonging to a family; affable, or easy in conversation; with freedom; accustomed; common; frequent; easy; too free.

FAM'ILIAR, a. one long and intimately acquainted. In superannuated superstitions, a demon, supposed to be at the devotion, or to attend the call, of any person.

FAM'ILIARITY, s. an easiness and freedom of access and discourse, generally observed between persons long and intimately acquainted, being free from constraint, formality, and ceremony. Figuratively, habit.

To FAM'ILIARIZE, v. a. [familiariser, Fr.] to wear away the impression of awe, or distant respect, occasioned by novelty; to bring down from a state of distant superiority to that of a person long known and joined in the bands of friendship.

FAM'ILIARLY, ad. unceremoniously; commonly; easily.

FAM'ILY, s. [familia, Lat.] those who live in the same house, or descend from the same progenitor.

FAM'INE, s. [Fr.] general want of necessary food in a country. To FAM'ISH, v. a. [fames, Lat.] to kill with hunger, or want of food; to kill with want of something necessary to support life.

FAMOUS, a. [fama, Lat.] much talked of and praised for remarkable virtue, great exploits, useful inventions, or ingenious compositions. Sometimes applied to bad as well as good actions, but with impropriety.

FAMOUSLY, ad. spoken of with esteem, and generally known for something extraordinary.

FAMOUSNESS, s. great renown or fame.

FAN, s. [annus, Lat.] an instrument formerly much used by ladies to cool themselves with, by exciting a gentle motion in the air. Figuratively, any thing spread out in a triangular form, with a broad base, resembling a lady's fan; any thing by which the air is moved; wings.—[ven, Fr.] an instrument by which chaff is cleaned or winnowed from the corn.

To FAN, v. a. to cool by the motion of a fan; to put the air into motion; to raise a fire. To separate, or winnow.

FANA'TIC, a. [fanaticus, Lat.] entertaining wild, imaginary, and enthusiastic notions in religion, combined with hatred against such as do not hold them.

FANA'TIC, s. a person who has wild notions in religion; a malignant enthusiast.

FANA'TICISM, s. religious madness; malignant enthusiasm.

FAN'CIFUL, a. entertaining odd and chimerical notions; changing or taking up an opinion, without consulting reason.

FAN'CIFULLY, ad. whimsically.

FAN'CIFULNESS, s. the habit of following the wild notions of the fancy or imagination, rather than those of reason.

FANCY, s. [contracted from fantasy, from phantasia, Gr.] a power or faculty of the mind which combines conceptions, and by that means forms objects, persons, representations, and other ideas which have no existence without us; a mere image, or conception of the mind; a liking, inclination, or fondness; mere humour, whim, or caprice; some thing or invention which pleases.

To FANCY, v. a. to conceive or form an idea of in the mind; to like or grow fond of.

FANDA'NGO, s. [Span.] the name of a favourite dance in Spain. It is brisk, and very voluptuous.

FANE, s. [fanum, Lat.] a temple, or place devoted to religious worship.

FANFARON, s. [Fr.] a bully; a hector; one who makes a great parade or ostentatious boast of his abilities, and promises more than he can perform.

FANFARONA'DE, s. [fanfaron, Fr.] a bluster; an ostentatious show or boast of a person's abilities and virtues.

To FANG, v. a. [fangan, Sax.] to seize; to gripe.

FANG, s. the long tusk of a boar; the nails or claws of a bird or beast. In Botany, any shoot or tendril, by means of which one plant takes hold of another.

FANGLE, s. [fengan, Sax.] a silly attempt; frivolous or trifling scheme. At present rarely used, unless joined with the word new: as, new-fangled, new-fangledness.

FANGLED, part. or a. gaudy; ridiculously or ostentatiously showy and ornamented.

FANGLESS, a. without fangs or teeth.

FANGOT, s. a quantity of wares, as raw silk, &c., containing from one to two hundred weight three quarters.

FAN'IONS, s. in the military art, small flags carried along with the baggage.

FAN'NEL, s. [fanon, Fr.] an ornament like a scarf, worn by a priest round his arm when he says mass.

FAN'NER, s. one who makes use of a fan.

FANSHAWE, SIR RICHARD, a steadfast royalist of the time of the civil war in the 17th century, was a prisoner to the victorious Commonwealth's army at Worcester, but was permitted to ransom himself, and join Charles at Breda. After the Restoration, he went as ambassador to Spain and Portugal. His common reputation rests on his translation of the Pastor Fido; which is not wholly unsuccessful. He died in 1666, aged 58 years.

FANTASIE, part. or a. troubled with odd imaginations or fancies.

FANTA'STIC, FANTA'STICAL, a. [fantastique, Fr.] imaginary; irrational; capricious; governed by whim and fancy; conceited; affected.

FANTA'STICALLY, ad. in a manner which can only exist in imagination; capriciously; with great unsteadiness.

FANTA'STICALNESS, FANTA'STICNESS, s. whimsicalness; capriciousness.

FAN'TIN, formerly a populous kingdom on the Gold Coast of Guinea, extending about 30 miles along the sea-shore. The soil fertile, producing fruits, maize, and palm wine. The small towns very numerous, and the capital, which is of the same name, situated about four leagues up the country. It is now under the power of the Ashantees, and is comprehended in their dominion.

FAR, ad. [feor, Sax.] to a great distance, considered either in length, or as extending on all sides; almost; in a great measure. "The day is far spent." This word is often used in composition; as far-seeing, far-looking.

FAR, a. distant from any place mentioned or implied. Used with off, both as an adverb and as an adjective. From far is used for a far or remote place.

FAR, s. [contracted from farrot,] the offspring of a sow.

To FARCE, v. a. [fareio, Lat.] to stuff with other ingredients.

FARCE, s. [farceur, Fr.] a dramatic entertainment of the comic kind, never exceeding three acts, but confined to the established laws of the drama; sometimes applied to a piece stuffed with wild and ludicrous conceits, capable of raising laughter. Figuratively, any incident or circumstance which is rather diverting than serious, and rather ridiculous than rational.

FAR'ICIAL, a. belonging or suitable to a farce.

FAR'ICY, s. [farina, Ital.] in Veterinary Surgery, a disease in horses or oxen, which vitiates all their blood.

FARDEL, s. [ardello, Ital.] a bundle, burden, or little pack.

To FARE, v. n. [faran, Sax.] to go; to walk or move from one place to another. "So on he fares," Par. Lost. To be in any state or condition, either good or bad. To live, applied to the manner of eating.

FARE, s. the price paid by a person for his passage in any carriage, whether by land or by water; food, or provision for eating.

FA'REHAM, Hants. A considerable trade in coals, corn, &c., and a manufacture of sacks and cordage, are carried on here. Bricks and tiles also, of a superior excellence, are made here. It is pleasantly situated at the N. W. neck of Portsmouth Harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 200 tons can unload. It is 74 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 6168.

FA'REL, WILLIAM, one of Calvin's associates in the Genevan Reformation. He began his task at Paris with more courage and zeal than prudence; and fled to Germany, where his ability as a pulpit orator made him a man of some notoriety. He died in 1565, aged about 45 years.

FAREWELL, ad. a compliment used at parting, whereby we wish the person well whom we take leave of.

FAREWELL, s. leave; the act of parting.

FAREFETCH, s. a stratagem or artifice.

FAREFETCHED, a. brought from places at a great distance off; sought with care and pains; not naturally introduced.

FARIA-Y-SOUSA, MANUEL DE, a Portuguese author of the 17th century, of the most prolific kind; and whose life seems to have been as extempore as his composition. He was once secretary to the Spanish embassy at Rome, and for some reason got imprisoned on his return. He died a prisoner on parole at Madrid in 1649, aged about 55 years.

FARINACEOUS, a. [farina, Lat.] mealy; resembling meal.

FARINELLI, a famous singer of the last century; who at Naples, Rome, Vienna, and in this country, gained both praise and presents, and a name associated with Handel. He died in about 1746, aged about 45 years.

FARM, s. [ferm, Sax.] ground occupied in tillage, whether it be a person's own, or hired; the state of lands let out at a certain annual sum; a certain sum of money paid to government for the right to its customs or taxes.

To FARM, v. a. to cultivate lands; to rent the customs or taxes of a state at a certain rate.

FARMER, s. one who cultivates land; one who advances money for, or rents the taxes of, a state.

FARMER, HUGH, a theological writer of the last century. His works on the Miracles, Demoniacs, &c. are worthy of attention. He was a preacher at Walhamstown, and was trained by Dr. Doddridge. He died in 1787, aged 73 years.

FARMER, DR. RICHARD, a critic and divine of some name. His preferences indicate the influence he possessed; but his Essay on Shakespeare's Learning, has placed him high above the routine expositors of the great dramatist. He died in 1797, aged 62 years.

FARMING, s. the art of cultivating land or breeding cattle.

FARNESE, the family name of one of the great houses of Italy. It has produced some names that figure in the history of Europe; but their place at Rome, with its paintings and sculpture, has made their name more illustrious and wider known than all their deeds.

FARNESS, s. distance; remoteness.

FARNHAM, Surrey. It is seated on the river Wye, and is a pretty good town, with a castle seated on an eminence, where the bishops of Winchester usually reside; but it is now much decayed. The houses are handsome; and the market large for wheat, oats, and barley. It is 38 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 6615.

FARN ISLANDS, on the coast of Northumberland, 17 in number; the principal, Farn Island, is about a mile in circumference, has a light-house on it, and contains six or seven acres of rich pasture.

FAROE ISLES, a cluster lying between Great Britain and Iceland; which are very rocky, yet afford some pasture, and even grow a little corn. Some veins of metal, and other sources of mineral wealth, including coal, are found amongst them. They have a good trade by means of their fisheries, &c. There are settlements on about fifteen of them. Thorshaven, on Stromoe, is the chief place. Population, about 8000. They belong to Denmark.

FARQUHAR, GEORGE, a comic writer of what is called the Augustan age of English literature. There is more of real dramatic ability in his plays than in those of the writers who preceded him, but the grossness and licentiousness are not at all less. He died in 1707, aged but 29 years.

FARRAGINOUS, a. [farrago, Lat.] composed of different things or persons; huddled.

FARRAGO, s. [Lat.] a mixed mass; a medley.

FARRANT, RICHARD, an English composer, and organist. He held the Chapel Royal and St. George's Chapel, Windsor, organs. His anthems are particularly esteemed; and are unequalled in their kind. He died about 1580.

FARRIER, s. [farriarius, from ferum, Lat.] one who makes shoes for, and puts them on, horses; one who professes to cure the diseases incident to horses.

To FARRIER, v. a. to practise physic and surgery on horses.

FARRIERY, s. the art of curing, palliating, or preventing the diseases of horses, called of late years, and since the subject has employed the attention of scientific persons, Veterinary Surgery.

FARRINGTON, Berks. It is situated on the side of a hill, near the Thames. It is 68 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 3593.

To FARRROW, (farrò) v. a. to bring forth pigs, applied to swine.

FARROW, (farrò) s. [fearth, Sax.] a little pig.

FARSI STAN, or FARs, a fertile province of Persia, lying on the Persian Gulf; and bounded by Laristan, Kirman, the Desert, Irak, and Khustan. Shiraz is the chief city. See PERSIA.

FARTHER, a. [comp. of forth, but used as comp. of far,] at a greater distance, applied to situation; longer.—adv. at or to a greater distance. Used as a connective particle in a discourse, it implies moreover, again, besides.

FARTHEST, a. most distant.—adv. at or to the greatest distance.

FARTHING, s. [feortha and ling, Sax.] an English coin, in value the fourth part of a penny.

FARTHINGALE, s. [voerdegarde, Belg.] in ancient costume, a hoop, or petticoat, used to make the ethers stand out, by means of circles of whalebone, or cane, which are sewed upon it.

FASCES, s. [Lat.] axes tied up in a bundle with rods, or staves, and borne before the Roman magistrates, as an ensign or badge of authority.

FASCETS, s. in the art of making glass, are the irons thrust into the mouths of bottles, in order to convey them to the annealing tower.

FASCIA, s. [Lat.] in Architecture, a broad list, fillet, or band, used in architraves and pedestals. In brick buildings, the jutting out of the bricks over the windows.

To FASCINATE, v. a. [fascino, Lat.] to bewitch, or influence by enchantment or witchcraft.

FASCINATION, s. [fascinum, Lat.] the act of bewitching, generally applied to that of the eye or tongue.

FASCINE, (fâsseen) s. [Fr.] in Fortification, faggots, or small branches of trees, or bays, bound up in bundles, which are mixed with earth, and serve to fill the trenches, to screen the men, make parapets of trenches, &c.

FASHION, (in this word and its derivatives the f is generally omitted in pronunciation—fashion), s. [facon, Fr.] the form, make, or cut of any thing; the manner in which any thing is performed; custom, or the form which is most commonly made use of. Men of fashion are such as either lead or most diligently follow fashion; sometimes the name is used politely for profligates. Prov. As good be out of the world as out of the fashion.

To FASHION, v. a. [faconner, Fr.] to make in a particular form or shape; to fit, to adapt; to make according to the general taste.

FASHIONABLE, a. established by custom or mode; made according to the general taste or mode; observant of the mode; of a rank or dignity superior to the vulgar.

FASHIONABLENESS, s. conformity to the reigning taste, applied to building, plate, or any production either of the hand or head.

FASHIONABLY, ad. in a manner conformable to the reigning taste or custom.

To FAST, v. n. [fasten, Sax.] to abstain from eating or drinking; to mortify the body by abstaining from food, for a certain time, on a religious account.

FAST, s. the taking of little or no food, from religious considerations.

FAST, a. [fast, Sax.] firm; fixed; deep or sound, applied to sleep; strong; impregnable; firm in adherence; closed, or shut close; with a quick motion.

FAST, ad. firmly; immovably; swiftly, applied to motion. Frequently, applied to repetition.

To FASTEN, v. a. to make firm or immovable; to cement, tie, or link together; to affix.—v. n. to stick or adhere.

FASTENER, s. a person that makes firm, ties, or binds.

FASTEN, s. one who abstains from food.

FASTHANDED, a. covetous; avaricious; not given to generosity.

FASTIDIOSITY, s. disdainfulness; contemptuousness.

FASTIDIOUS, a. [fastidiosus, Lat.] disdainful; nice to a fault; squeamish.

FASTIDIOUSLY, ad. in a contemptuous, disdainful, or squeamish manner.

FASTING, s. abstinence from food on religious grounds. This has ever been much esteemed amongst those religionists who set much store by outward forms and ceremonies; and also by those who are much tinged by enthusiasm. It doubtless has its worth; but if it be looked on as a substitute, or composition, for habitual practical holiness, it is a sad delusion. National fasts are nothing more now than national holidays.

FASTNESS, s. [fastnesse, Sax.] firmness, or firm adherence to a cause or party; a strong hold; a fortress.

FAT, a. [fæt, Sax.] full-fed; fleshy; plump; or covered with an oily or unctuous substance; gross; dull. Figuratively, wealthy; rich. "A fat benefice."

FAT, s. a concrete, oily, animal substance, composed of oil, sebaceous acid, and carbon. The fat is to be found immediately under the skin, in most parts of the body. There are two sorts of fat: one yellow, soft, and lax, easily melted; another firm, white, brittle, and not so easily melted, containing much stearine. It has many important uses in the animal frame.

FATAL, a. [fatalis, Lat.] causing inevitable death or destruction; caused by fate, destiny, or necessity.

FATALISM, s. the doctrine of fate, or opinion that the occurrences of life and products of nature are established by an unalterable necessity. This is the rudest theory of the universe, and is adopted by many uncivilized nations in the dreary climates of S. Asia, as well as by would-be philosophers of our colder regions.

FATALIST, s. one who believes and maintains that all things happen by invincible necessity.

FATALITY, s. [fatalité, Fr.] a predetermined and invincibly necessary order or series of things and events; a decree of fate; an invincible influence or bias; a tendency to danger, destruction, or death.

FATALITY, ad. mortally; in such a manner as to occasion death; by the decree of fate, or by an inevitable and invincible necessity.

FATA-MORGA'NA, an atmospheric phenomenon, of rare occurrence in this country, but often seen in the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, and in the Polar regions. In it, by some unusual refractive power in the atmosphere, objects completely below the horizon appear with great distinctness at some elevation above it; sometimes a double image, one reversed above the other, appears.

FATE, s. [fatum, Lat.] an inevitable necessity, depending on some fixed or superior cause. Figuratively, a necessary or predetermined event; death; destruction; the cause of death.

FATED, a. decreed, or determined by fate; invested with any quality by fate.

FATHER, (the a is pronounced broad, like the German, or a in ah.) s. [fæther, Sax.] one who has begotten a son or a daughter. Figuratively, the first ancestor; the title generally given to a person in years, because old enough, and on account of his age deserving to be revered as one's father; an inventor; the title of a popish confessor, particularly that of a Jesuit; the title given to a senator in ancient Rome.

To FATHER, v. a. to adopt a person for one's son or daughter; to adopt, or pretend to be the author of, a composition; to ascribe to any one as his offspring, used with on.

FATHERHOOD, s. the state or condition of a parent or father.

FATHER-IN-LAW, s. husband's or wife's father.

FATHERLESS, a. without a father.

FATHERLY, a. like a father; tender.

FATHERLY, ad. in the manner of a father.

FATHERS OF THE CHURCH, or THE FATHERS, the general name given to the Christian writers from the times of the apostles to the 5th or 6th century; the latter boundary being variously fixed by different authors. Their writings are very important, as the only genuine sources of the history of the Church in all its branches; but great care is needed in the use of them; for most of them had some peculiar notions of their own, in which the rest of the Christians and theologians of the age did not share. The opinion entertained of them in the Romanist and Anglican Churches, which attributes to them the function of interpreting Scripture authoritatively, either alone or coordinately with the existing ecclesiastical authorities, is so utterly unfounded, that it is needless to discuss it. Many of their treatises are valuable contributions to theological science; but the means they had of forming correct notions of the meaning of Scripture, were very few compared with those enjoyed at the present day.

FATHOM, s. [fæthm, Sax.] a long measure containing six feet, or two yards, being taken from the space a man can reach with both his arms extended, and chiefly used at sea. Figuratively, reach; penetration; depth of entrance.

To FATHOM, v. a. to encompass with the arms extended; to sound, or find the depth of water at sea. Figuratively, to reach, or comprehend; to try the depth of a difficult subject; to penetrate, sound, or go to the bottom of a design.

FATHOMLESS, a. that has no bottom, or is so deep as not to be measured. Not to be comprehended, applied to mysteries, or difficulties in writings.

FATIDICAL, a. [fatum and dico, Lat.] prophetic.

FATIGUE, (fatigé) s. [Fr.] languor, faintness, or weariness, caused by labour. Figuratively, the cause of weariness. SYNON. It is the continuation of the same thing that either wearies or tires; with this difference, that weary implies a less degree, tired a greater; but it is labour that fatigues. We are weary or tired with standing; we are fatigued with work.

To FATIGUE, (fatigé) v. a. to tire, exhaust, or make faint and languid with labour.

FATIMITES, the caliphs of N. Africa, for about 260 years after the usurpation of the supreme power in those parts, by Obeidollah, in 910. They claimed to be descended from Mohammed himself, through Fatima, the wife of Ali; and therefore to be the lawful successors of the prophet. There were fourteen caliphs of this dynasty, which always appears in history as the rival of the Abbassides, who were reigning in lawful and regular succession in Syria and Arabia, at the same time. Of these, the most celebrated was Moez. Mostali, another, had possession of Jerusalem at the time of the first crusade. The dynasty was overthrown, when weakened by internal division, by the famous Nouredin and Saladin, in the days of our Richard I.

FATLING, s. a young animal fattened for slaughter.

FATNESS, s. the quality of being fleshy, plump, or fat; grease, slimness. Fertility, or fruitfulness, applied to ground.

To FATTEN, v. a. to make fat by feeding. To make fruitful, applied to ground.

FATTY, a. oily; greasy.

FATUITY, s. [fatuité, Fr.] foolishness; weakness of understanding; a low degree of madness or phrensy.

FATUOUS, a. [fatuus, Lat.] stupid; foolish; applied to the understanding. Illusory; deceitful.

FATWITTED, a. heavy, dull, or stupid.

FAUCET, s. [fauçet, Fr.] a wooden pipe generally forced into a barrel or cask to give passage to the liquor, and stopped with a peg or spigot.

FAVEL, (faivel) s. [Fr.] the fruit of a species of the palm-tree.

FAVILLOUS, a. [favilla, Lat.] consisting of ashes.

FAULT, s. [faute, Fr.] a slight defect or crime, which subjects a person to blame, but not to punishment; a deviation from, or transgression of, a rule, in some trifling circumstances.

FAULTLESS, a. without any defect; perfect; blameless.

FAULTY, a. slightly transgressing any rule; blamable; defective, or not fit for the use it is intended for.

FAUNS, in Mythology, a species of demi-gods, supposed to inhabit the forests.

To FAVOUR, v. a. [faveo, Lat.] to support, encourage, promote, or advance an undertaking; to assist, support, countenance, or encourage a person.

FA'VOUR, (fåvur) s. [favor, Lat.] countenance, support, or encouragement; defence, or vindication; a kindness granted; leave, permission, or pardon; a riband formed into a rose, and worn as a cockade.

FAVOURABLE, a. kind; encouraging; affectionate; conducive to; tender; averse from censure; convenient; suited or adapted to a particular design.

FAVOURABLENESS, s. a kindness showed in pardoning a person's defects, in supporting his endeavours, and in encouraging his undertakings.

FA'VOURABLY, ad. kindly; with encouragement, tenderness, or affection.

FA'VOURED, part. looked upon or regarded with kindness.

FA'VOURER, s. one who encourages or countenances any person or thing.

FA'VOURITE, s. the most proper spelling seems to be favorite, [faorite, Fr.] one regarded with particular kindness, and distinguished from others by the familiarities shown him either by a private person or prince. Used very much as an adjective also.

FAT'KEN, s. a sort of large eel.

FAUSSE-BRAY, (faise-bray) s. [Fr.] in Fortification, a small mount of earth, four fathoms wide, erected on the level round the foot of the rampart, to fire upon the enemy, when he is so far advanced that you cannot force him back; and also to receive the ruins which the cannons make in the body of the place.

FAUSTUS, DR. JOHN, a famous astrologer, physician, &c. of the 16th century; whom the general ignorance converted into a magician, who had sold himself to the prince of darkness. There were many ballads, &c. composed respecting this affair. But Goethe's poem has, like Aaron's rod, swallowed up all the rods of the lesser wonder-workers.

FAUTOR, s. [Lat.] a favourer, defender, or encourager.

FAUTRESS, s. a woman that favours, or shows countenance.

FAUVETTE, s. [Fr.] in Natural History, the name of several of the common migratory warblers, as the blackcap, the white-throats, &c.

FAWKES, GUY, one of the conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot; who having to play a minor, but unexpectedly prominent part, has obtained a ludicrous immortality. See GUNPOWDER PLOT.

FAWN, s. [faon, Fr.] in Natural History, a young deer.

TO FAWN, v. a. [faonner, Fr.] in its primary signification, to bring forth a fawn. To make use of insinuating and alluring gestures, applied to a dog. Figuratively, to endeavour to gain a person's favour by mean and servile compliances.

FAWNER, s. one who endeavours to gain favour by mean and servile compliances.

FAWNINGLY, ad. in a cringing, servile manner.

FAY, s. [fee, Fr.] a fairy; an elf.

FAYAL, the name of one of the Azores. It is hilly, and not much fit for cultivation, but yields good wine, and in abundance. Its chief place is Horta, or Fayal.

TO FE'AGUE, (foeg) v. a. [fegen, Teut.] to whip, chastise, to beat.

FEAL, s. sod or turf.

FEALTY, s. [faulté, Fr.] duty due from a subject to a king, or from any person to his superior.

FEAR, s. [fearan, Sax.] dread, or painful apprehension of danger; or dejection of mind at the presence of any person; anxiety or solicitude; the object of fear.

TO FEAR, v. a. [fearan, Sax.] to apprehend evil, applied both to persons and things.

FEARFUL, a. timorous, or easily affected with fear; afraid; awful; commanding reverence; terrible; frightful.

FEARFULLY, ad. in a manner which frights or causes fear.

FEARFULNESS, s. an habitual dread or fear; timorousness. FEARLESS, a. free from fear; not regarding danger, either present or future.

FEARLESSLY, ad. with exemption from fear.

FEASIBLE, (feasible) a. [faissable, Fr.] practicable; such as may be done.

FEASIBLY, (feasibly) ad. in such a manner as to be practicable, or possible to be done.

FEAST, (feest) s. [festum, Lat.] a sumptuous entertainment; something nice or delicious to the palate.

TO FEAST, (feest) v. n. to eat sumptuously; to live on costly and delicious eatables.

FEASTFUL, (feestful) a. festival or rejoicing. Luxurious; riotous.

FEAT, (feet) s. [fait, Fr.] a thing done; an act, action, or exploit; a trick; an odd or extraordinary motion of the limbs.

FEATHER, (pron. fether, with e short,) s. [feder, Teut.] the covering of birds, and that by which they are enabled to fly. The mechanism of feathers, especially of those of the wing, is one of the most striking and easily observed arguments of Natural Theology. The simplicity of its structure, combining lightness with rigidity, is admirable; but most admirable is the contrivance for making the vane part of it serve as a continuous broad surface in flight; this is secured by each separate filament being fringed with minute hooks, which catching in one another, hold so firmly, as to require some force to part them. Figuratively, kind, nature, or species. "I am not of that feather" Shak. An ornament; a mere empty title; a mere plaything, or something only fit to divert or cause laughter. "A wit's a feather," Pope. In Farriery, a turning or parting of the hair on the forehead, resembling an ear of barley, or an eyelash-hole.

TO FEATHER, (fether) v. a. to dress in, or fit with feathers. To feather one's nest, is to grow rich. To feather an oar, is to turn it half round when it is raised out of the water, so that its feather-edge cuts the air in the movement necessary for another stroke.

FEATHERED, (fethered) a. clothed, fitted with, or carrying feathers.

FEATHERFOLL, s. in Botany, a plant growing in ditches in some parts of England, called also the water-violet. The leaves lie concealed under water, the spikes of flowers only appearing above, which grow in whorls at the joints of the hollow stalks. It flowers in June.

FEATHERGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass with long woolly awns, found on mountains.

FEATHERLESS, a. destitute of feathers.

FEATHERMOSS, s. in Botany, a kind of moss of which there are forty-seven kinds found in England.

FEATLY, (feetly) ad. in a neat, skilful, or dexterous manner.

FEATURE, (febble) s. [faicure, old Fr.] the cast or make of the face, or any part or lineament of it.

TO FEAZE, (feze) v. a. to untwist the end of a rope, and reduce it again to flax.

FE'BRIFUGE, s. [febris and fugo, Lat.] in Medicine, a remedy to drive away or cure a fever.

FE'BRIFUGE, a. having the power of driving away or curing a fever.

FE'BRILE, a. [febris, Lat.] constituting or proceeding from a fever.

FE'BRUARY, s. the name of the second month of the year. In a common year it consists of only 28 days; but in the bissextile, or leap year, it has 29, on account of the intercalary day added to that year. Its name is derived from the feast held during this month in honour of the dead.

FE'CULENCE, FE'CULENCY, s. [feculentia, from feces, Lat.] foulness, arising from dregs or sediments, applied to liquors.

FE'CULENT, a. [feculentus, Lat.] foul, not clear, applied to liquors.

FE'COND, a. [fecundus, Lat.] fruitful; abounding in children.

FE'CONDATION, s. [fecundo, Lat.] the act of making fruitful.

FE'CONDITY, s. the quality of producing or bringing forth in great abundance.

FE'DERAL, a. [fedus, Lat.] relating to, and having the nature of, a contract.

FEDERATION, s. a union of independent states under one common government, for mutual advantage, protection, &c., as in the United States of N. America.

FEE, s. [feoh, Sax.] in Law, lands and tenements held in perpetual right, on condition of an acknowledgment paid to the lord of the manor; a property; a reward, or money given to a physician or lawyer; a perquisite due to a person in an office.

TO FEE, v. a. to pay a counsellor or physician; to bribe; to keep in hire.

FE'EBLE, a. [foible, Fr.] wanting strength; or weak in body and mind.

FE'EBLEMINDED, a. weak, or wanting resolution; timorous.

FE'EBLENESS, s. want of strength.

FE'EBLY, ad. in a weak manner; without strength.

TO FEED, v. a. pret. and past part. fed; [fedan, Sax.] to supply with food. Figuratively, to supply; to nourish, cherish, or keep alive; to keep in hope or expectation; to delight or entertain.—v. n. to take food; to prey; to place cattle to feed.

FEEDER, one who supplies with food; one that eats. Figuratively, a nourisher, supporter, or encourager.

FEET'FARM, s. in Law, lands holden by a man and his heirs for ever, under a yearly rent or acknowledgment paid to another.

TO FEEL, v. n. pret. and past part. felt; [felan, Sax.] to perceive by the touch. Figuratively, to have a quick sensibility of good or evil which happens to others; to perceive by touching; to have the sense of pain or pleasure; to be affected by.

FEEL, s. the sense of feeling; the touch.

FEELER, s. one who can distinguish by the touch. In Natural History, the horns or antennae of insects, whereby they are supposed to hear, and do assist their vision respecting obstacles in their way.

FEELING, part. of To FEEL, that which expresses great sensibility, or affects strongly.

FEELING, s. the sense whereby we perceive things to be hard, soft, dry, wet, smooth, rough, hot, cold, &c. It is both the grossest and most extensive of all the senses, if not that which includes all the rest. Figuratively, sensibility; tenderness. The feelings, in Metaphysics, are those mental faculties which furnish motives for action, and are not dependent on the existence of actually corresponding outward circumstances for their activity. They are often called desires, affections, emotions, and passions.

FEELINGLY, ad. in such a manner as if sensible of or feeling any thing oneself; so as to affect others deeply.

FEESIMPLE, s. in Law, that whereof we are possessed and our heirs for ever.

FEETAIL, s. in Law, is when lands are given to a man, and the heirs of his body, so that if he have children by a third venter, and not of the first, they shall inherit.

FEE, s. the plural of Foot.

To FEIGN, (feyne) v. a. [feindre, Fr.] to invent; to assert a thing which is not; to counterfeit, or put on the appearance of a thing.

FEIGNEDLY, (feignedly) ad. in a fictitious or fabulous manner; counterfeitedly.

FEIGNER, (feigner) s. an inventor; the author of a fable or fiction.

FEINT, part. [instead of feigned,] invented; not true or real. "Any feint appearance," Locke.

FEINT, s. [Fr.] a mere show; a false appearance or attempt; an offer at something not intended to be; a disguise.

To FELICITATE, v. a. [felicito, from felix, Lat.] to make happy; to congratulate; to wish a person joy.

FELICITATION, s. [Fr.] the act of wishing joy, or rejoicing with a person on account of some happy event.

FELICITY, s. [felicitas, Lat.] a state wherein a person has no wants to satisfy, no wishes to fulfil, no evils to remove; but is easy without pain, and joyful without any dash or mixture of sorrow.

FELINE, a. [felinus, from felis, Lat.] resembling a cat.

FELIX, the name assumed by five Roman pontiffs on their elevation to the papal throne. The second and the fifth were anti-popes, that is, elected in opposition to previously elected popes, who still continued to hold their titles and dignities.

FELL, a. [felle, Sax.] void of mercy or humanity; cruel; barbarous; savage. Seldom used.

FELL, s. [felle, Sax.] the skin; the hide.

To FELL, v. a. [fellen, Teut.] to knock down; to make a person tumble on the ground by the force of a blow; to hew or cut down.

FELL, preter. of To FALL.

FELLER, s. one who hews or cuts down.

FELLMONGER, s. [fel and monger, Sax.] one that deals in, and sells, peltrey or skins.

FELLOE, FE'LLY, s. [felge, Dan.] the pieces of wood which make the circumference of a wheel.

FELLOW, (fello) s. [fallow, Scot.] a companion, or one often in one's company; one united in the same undertaking; an equal; one thing suited to another, or one of a pair; one like to or resembling another; an appellation used in familiar discourse for a man or person, sometimes with fondness, sometimes with esteem, but generally with some degree of contempt, when it implies a mean wretch, a sorry rascal; also, a member of a society; a member of a college, who partakes in its government and revenues. Fellow, in Composition, generally denotes community or equality of nature, station, or employment.

To FELLOW, (fello) v. a. to suit or match one thing with another; to pair or produce one thing resembling another in size, colour, &c.

FELLOW-COMMONER, s. one who has a right of common with another. In Cambridge, a commoner of the higher order, who sits at table, and eats his commons with the fellows of the college.

FELLOW-CREATURE, s. one that has the same creator, generally applied to animals of the same species.

FELLOW-FEELING, s. sympathy; or the being as much affected with the sufferings of another as if they were our own; a combination in order to defraud or cheat.

FELLOW-HEIR, s. one who has a right to the same inheritance with another; a co-heir.

FELLOW-LABOURER, s. one who labours to promote the same design.

FELLOW-SERVANT, s. one who has the same master.

FELLOWSHIP, (fellowship) s. company; society; the state of persons who are frequently together and jointly take part in any design; association; a confederacy or union of several persons by some contract, bond, or obligation; a partnership or joint interest; equality; fondness for feasting or entertainments of drinking; an establishment at a university, with a share in the revenues of a college. In Arithmetic, a rule by which the stock of any company is divided in proportion to the several sums each partner brought in; it is divided into single or double.

FELLTHAM, OWEN, the author of the Resolves, Divine, Political, and Moral, a work of great excellence, and well known. He held some station in the Earl of Thomond's family; but his book is the only clearly established fact of his life. He died about 1680, aged about 40 years.

FELLY, ad. in such a manner as shows want of all the kind and benevolent affections; in a cruel, barbarous, and savage manner. Seldom used.

FELO-DE-SE, [law Lat.] in Law, one who willingly and deliberately kills himself.

FELON, s. [felo, law Lat.] a person who is guilty of some crime, which will subject him to death by the law; a whittow, or tumour, formed between the bone and its investing membrane.

FELON, a. [felle, Sax.] cruel; barbarous; savage.

FELONIOUS, a. belonging to a felon; subject to death by the law. Figuratively, wicked; barbarous.

FELONIOUSLY, ad. after the manner of a felon; or with an intent to rob or murder.

FELONY, s. [felonia, law Lat.] any crime which subjects a person to death by the law.

FELSPAR, FE'LSPAR, s. [Germ.] in Mineralogy, a very common mineral, best known as one of the components of granite, to which it imparts the pink tinge of some varieties. It is used in the manufacture of porcelain.

FELT, s. [fell, Sax.] a kind of stuff or cloth, made either of wool alone, or of castor's, camel's, or cony's hair, and lamb's wool; neither spun, crossed, nor woven, but wrought and filled with leys and size, and afterwards shaped into the form of a hat upon a block—[from felle, Sax.] a hide or skin of animals.

To FELT, v. a. to make cloth or stuff only by fulling, and working with leys and size, without weaving or crossing.

FELU'CCA, s. [feluca, It.] a light vessel with from 10 to 16 benches of oars, which is not covered over, and may have the rudder applied either to head or stern. It is used in the Mediterranean as a passage boat, and by the natives of Barbary as a cruiser.

FELWORT, s. in Botany, called also marsh gentian, a plant found in Wales, with oval radical leaves; flowers in August.

FEMALE, s. [femelle, Fr.] that sex which bears or brings forth young.

FE'MALE, a. belonging to the female sex.

FEME-COVERT, s. [Fr.] in Law, a married woman.

FEME-SOLE, s. [femina] in law, an unmarried woman.

FEMININE, a. [femina, Lat.] of the female sex. Figuratively, soft, delicate; like a woman, or wanting that natural hardness which distinguishes the male sex. In Grammar, that gender which denotes a word to belong to a female.

FEMININE, s. a female.

FEMORAL, a. [femur, Lat.] belonging to the thigh.

FEN, s. [fenn, Sax.] a wet, moist, or boggy place on land, overflowed with water.

FEN'BERRY, s. in Botany, a kind of blackberry.

FENCE, [a contraction of defence,] any thing or means made use of to guard from danger; an enclosure, hedge, or paling, serving to keep persons from entering any spot of ground; the art of fencing.

TO FENCE, v. a. to enclose or secure a place by a hedge or paling; to defend or guard, used against.—v. n. to practise the art of fencing, or that which teaches the use of the sword; to guard against; to use such methods as to hinder the progress of any vice or evil, used with against.

FENCELESS, a. open, or without any enclosure.

FENCIBLE, a. a person who makes use of the sword according to the rules of fencing; one who teaches the art of using the sword.

FENCIBLE, a. capable of defence.

FENCING, s. the art of defence, or of using the sword. Fencing likewise signifies the hedge or pales used to enclose ground.

FENCERICKET, s. in Natural History, an insect that digs itself holes in the ground.

TO FEND, v. a. [from defend,] to keep off.—v. n. to dispute; to shift off a charge.

FENDER, s. a plate of iron or brass laid before a fire, to prevent the coals that fall from rolling upon, and injuring, the floor.

FENELON, FRANCIS DE SALIGNAC, DE LA MOTTE, the pious and learned Archbishop of Cambray, author of Telemaachus, and other works read in schools. He was a friend of the well-known Madame Guion, and adopted her mystic quietism. It was through this that he fell into disgrace at court, and was subjected to a most injurious controversy with the celebrated Bossuet, who had been his friend. His political notions also had somewhat shaken him in the good opinions of Louis XIV. The pope at last interfered, and Fenelon was defeated. He was a preacher of great power and eloquence; and in private life, adorned with all the most charming virtues. Yet, it is strange, as an exemplification of the spirit of France at his age, that he showed even in his mysticism unbounded devotion to Madame de Maintenon. He died, through an overturn of his carriage, in 1717, aged 66 years. His works are very numerous and interesting, but the rhetorician and the mystic appear in every page. Profundity, or even originality, was not amongst Fenelon's gifts.

FENERATION, s. [fenero, Lat.] usury; or an allowance made or taken for the use of money.

FENNEC, s. in Natural History, a beautiful little animal resembling the dog, which inhabits Africa; otherwise called the Zerd.

FENNEL, s. [fenol, Sax.] in Botany, a plant whose leaves, seeds, and roots, are used in medicine and cookery.

FENNY, a. soft by the settling of rain or overflowing of water, liable to ground. Marshy; moorish; dwelling in a marsh.

FENNY-STRAFTFORD, Buckinghamshire. It is 45 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1033.

FEODAL, (féodal) a. [feodal, Fr.] held from another.

FEODARY, (féodary) a. [feodum, low Lat.] one who holds his estate under the tenure of suit and service to a superior lord.

TO FEOFF, (feoff) v. a. [feoffare, law Lat.] to put in possession; to give a right to a possession.

FEOFFEE, (feoffe) s. [feoffatus, law Lat.] one put in possession.

FEOFFER, (feoffer) s. one who gives possession; distinguished in law from a donor, because the feoffer grants in fee simple, and a donor in fee tail. Litt. lib. i. c. 6.

FEOFFMENT, (feoffment) s. [feoffamentum, law Lat.] in Law, a gift or grant of any manors, messuages, lands, or tenements, to another in fee, i. e. to him and his heirs for ever, by the delivery of seisin, and possession of the estate granted.

FÉRAL, a. [feralis, Lat.] mournful; funeral.

FERDINAND, the name of three emperors of Germany. The first was the successor of Charles V., and was esteemed an excellent prince. He endeavoured to compose the distractions which the Reformation had originated in Germany; but as he could not enter into the spirit of the Reformers, nor yet acquiesce in the views of the council of Trent, which concluded its sittings in his reign, his efforts were ineffectual. He died in 1554. The second, who was grandson to the former, and was the fourth after him on the imperial throne, was a bigot of the highest class, and plunged Europe into the horrors of the thirty years' war. His troubles began with Bohemia, and were fermented by that incapable, James I. of England. The elector-palatine, and Bethlem Gabor, were defeated by the Imperialists under Tilly, and the Palatinate was ravaged, to the sorrow and indignation of all Protestants. Tilly and Wallenstein speedily put down a league to recover the Palatinate, at the head of which was Christian IV. of Denmark. And now Ferdinand began his persecution of the Protestants, and brought against him the famous Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, aided by France and England. This able general fell, prematurely for the peace of Europe, at Lützen; and victory, which had been always against the emperor, now returned to his banner, although, on suspicion of treachery, he had caused Wallenstein to be assassinated. At Nordlingen, the Swedes were totally routed, but they soon gained, under Baner, the battle of Wislock. Ferdinand died in 1637. The third, his son and successor, inherited his father's wars, and suffered defeat after defeat from the Swedish and French armies under Baner, Torstenson, Wrangel, Guebriant, Turenne, and many other noted leaders, till at length Europe was exhausted, and the peace of Westphalia was signed. This prince, in the subsequent part of his reign, gained a happier fame, and died in 1657.

FERDINAND. One king of this name reigned in Arragon, and four in Castile, before their union as the kingdom of Spain. The first, in Castile, was called The Great, from his victories over the Moors. The second of this name, in Arragon, married Isabella of Castile, and is known now as Ferdinand V. Their reign was rendered illustrious, not only by this union, but by the expulsion of the Moors, and conquest of Granada; the acquisition of Naples, and Navarre; which raised Ferdinand's name to the highest pitch of renown, and the Spanish monarchy to the climax of its splendor. For Columbus, under the patronage of this court, discovered the Western World, and gave to this country what riveted its chains, and ultimately brought it to its present miserable condition. Ferdinand has the infamous renown of establishing the Inquisition, and using it against the hapless Jews, and all whom he suspected of difference from Rome; but he did not so succumb to Rome as that there was not a lower step of degradation of soul left for Philip II. to take. Ferdinand's bigotry, and his crooked policy, prevented Spain from deriving all the advantages it might have gained from the many movements during his reign, and have tarnished his name, so that not even his genuine greatness can outshine it. He died in 1516. Ferdinand VI. passed a quiet reign, and obtained a favourable report from history. He died in 1759. Ferdinand VII. commenced his reign on his father's abdication, at the advance of the French army under Napoleon, and promised fairly to the people; but he was unable to cope with such an array of opposition as was presented in his father, Godoy, (both of whom had held secret conferences with the French,) and Napoleon, whose army possessed Madrid. At the outbreak of the war he was removed as a prisoner to France, and did not return for six years, when the defeat of Napoleon in Russia made him relinquish the hope of recovering Spain. Ferdinand now appeared in his proper character; and in spite of attempts at revolution, aided by France under the restored Bourbons, he ruled as absolute monarch, or tyrant, aided by the re-established Inquisition. He died in 1834, bequeathing the horrors of civil war, and ceaseless intestine trouble, to his successors.

FERDINAND, the name of four monarchs of Naples and Sicily, or, as that state is now entitled, the Two Sicilies. The third, was Ferdinand V. of Spain. The fourth, after many years of peace, was involved in the difficulties which arose in most of the European states on the French Revolution; and at last, on the advance of Napoleon, retired to Sicily, leaving Naples in his hands. On the final overthrow of Buonaparte, and the fall of Murat, whom he had raised to the throne of Naples, Ferdinand returned, and peace seemed restored. But soon after the revolt of the Carbonari broke out, and jealousies between Sicily and Naples, which were ended only by the establishment of absolutism, by the Austrian army. Ferdinand died in 1825.

FERDINAND, the name of a feeble king of Portugal in the 14th century.

FERDUSI, the famous Persian poet, whose great work, called Shah-Kameh, contains a rhapsodical history of the Persian kings, and was rewarded by the gift of small silver coins to the number of lines it contains, instead of gold ones, according to promise. The indignant poet narrowly escaped a more summary reward for his rash speeches and deeds when he received the money, and led a wandering life ever after. He died about 1020, aged about 90 years.

FERGUSON, JAMES, an eminent natural philosopher; one of those self-taught men, whose attainments show what patience can enable natural ability to acquire, in face of all difficulties that can thwart it. He commenced his career as a farming boy, and used all his leisure time in mechanical and astronomical experiments and observations. Afterwards he gained a living as a designer and draughtsman; and finally, as a public lecturer at Edinburgh and London, where he was introduced to the highest scientific society, and received one of those annual doles by which English royalty manifests its feeling for men of genius and ability. As a popular lecturer and writer on science, he stands pre-eminent, although later discoveries have thrown his works into the shade. He died in 1776, aged 66 years.

FERGUSON, ADAM, a writer on morals and history of the last century. He was successively professor of natural and moral philosophy at Edinburgh. He visited N. America, during the struggle for independence by the United States, as secretary to the English commission sent to attempt a reconciliation. His philosophical works are not known much now; but his work on Roman History is widely circulated. He died in 1816, aged 92 years.

FERIATION, s. [feria, Lat.] the act of celebrating or keeping holiday by ceasing from labour; a cessation from work.

FERINE, a. [ferinus, from fera, Lat.] wild; untamed.

FERINENESS, s. wildness; the quality of uncultivated and untamed wildness.

FERITY, s. [feritas, Lat.] barbarity; cruelty; wildness.

FERRANAGH, a county of Ulster in Ireland, 43 miles in length, and about 33 in breadth, containing 18 parishes. It is bounded by Leitrim, Donegal, Tyrone, Monaghan, and Cavan. It is navigable throughout its whole length, by means of the lakes of Lough Erne; but travelling in it is difficult, in many places, by reason of the hilly, rugged, and uneven surface of the country, and the boggy grounds. Some of the hills exceed 1200 feet in height. The Woodford and some smaller streams water it. The linen manufacture, and raising cattle, form the chief trade of this county. There is only one linen market in it, but the county abounds with spinners and good flax. Pop. 156,481. Enniskillen is the capital. It returns 3 members to parliament.

FERRAT, PETER DE, an eminent French mathematician of the 17th century. His diligence was great, but the branch of the science he specially devoted himself to is rather curious than productive. His name has lived by a particular theorem, still found in mathematical works. In natural philosophy he did not shine. His poetry is not much esteemed, being of a polyglot rather than of an imaginative description. He enjoyed also a reputation as a scholar; and he thought better of himself than his warmest admirers did. Yet he belongs to no mean rank in science. He died in 1664, aged 69 years.

To FERMENT, v. a. [fermento, Lat.] to cause to undergo the process of fermentation.

FERMENT, s. [fermentum, Lat.] that which causes fermentation. Also, yeast, which is a substance in a state of putrefaction, or fermentation, the atoms of which are in continual motion. A commotion, or tumult, applied to government.

FERMENTABLE, a. capable of being fermented.

FERMENTATION, s. [fermentatio, Lat.] In Chemistry, is a peculiar kind of putrefaction, or the change by which the elements of a substance, containing no nitrogen, group themselves so as to form more intimate and more stable compounds, according to the special attractions of these elements. The presence of a nitrogenized substance already in a state of fermentation is necessary. But in nitrogenized substance, of a very complex constitution, fermentation spontaneously commences when water is present, and the temperature is sufficiently high. When the juice of beet-root, carrots, onions, or other saccharine vegetables is exposed to a high temperature, the sugar gradually disappears, and the chief part of the residuum is a substance which is precipitated by alcohol in the shape of a syrupy mullage; whence this process is termed viscous fermentation. When a saccharine solution is placed in contact with substances in a state of putrefaction or fermentation, after a time, in a moderate temperature, the taste of the sugar disappears, and the liquor has acquired intoxicating properties. Alcohol may be obtained from it by distillation, and the process is termed vinous or alcoholic fermentation. The acetous fermentation, is the term by which the oxidation of the products of vinous fermentation was formerly known. The saccharine fermentation, is the process by which starch or woody fibre, by the action of diastase or sulphuric acid, is converted into sugar. Panary fermentation, is that peculiar form of vinous fermentation which takes place in common bread-making.

FERMENTATIVE, a. causing fermentation.

FERN, s. [fern, Sax.] in Botany, an order of cryptogamous plants, or plants producing spores, but not flowers and seeds, containing many genera, the chief of which are found in this country will be described under their various common names.

FERNANDO PO, a small island of the Bight of Benin, in the Gulf of Guinea, Africa.

FERN, Wexford, in Leinster, Ireland. It is a small place now, and only of note as a bishop's see, held in conjunction with Ossory and Leighlin. It is about 60 miles from Dublin. Pop. 682.

FERNY, a. overgrown with fern.

FEROCIOUS, (ferocious) a. [feroce, Fr.] wild, untamed, savage; resembling a savage.

FEROACITY, s. [ferax, Lat.] fierceness of disposition or look.

FERRARA, the capital of a province of the same name in the Papal States, Italy. It has a number of fine buildings, which evince its former opulence; the churches are very fine, and adorned with many illustrious monuments. It stands on a branch of the Po, and is fortified. It is a university and has a good library. Population, about 35,000. Lat. 44. 49. N. Long. 11. 40. E.

FERRAR, NICHOLAS, a man of great note for a singular rubrical devotion in the early part of the 17th century; and whose memory, by a certain party in the Church of England, has been much lauded lately. Early in childhood his habits won him the title of Saint Nicholas, and his subsequent life, perhaps in no small degree owing to this epithet, confirmed it to him. Indeed he may well be placed beside the most eminent of those who by general repute have from ancient days been so designated. He and his household, in number above fourscore persons, formed a kind of Protestant monastery. They were rigid celibates; observed all feasts, fasts, vigils, &c. ordained by the Anglican Church; kept up night and day an unceasing repetition of the Liturgy; maintained liberal almsgiving; and filled up their spare time in making embroidery, &c. for church ornaments. He was the friend of George Herbert; and has been embalmed in Izaak Walton's Life of the Poet. His scheme was a poor one for those days, and though much praised, was never imitated. Admiration of it now seems somewhat fatuous. He died in 1639.

FERREROUS, a. [ferreus, Lat.] of the nature of iron.

FERRRET, s. [ferret, Brit.] in Natural History, an animal of the weasel kind, with red eyes, employed in catching rabbits and rats. It was originally introduced into Spain from Africa, and probably from Spain through the medium of the Romans into England.

To FERRRET, v. a. to drive out of a lurking-place, alluding to the manner in which ferrets drive rabbits out of their holes.

FERRETER, s. one who hunts another, and discovers him in his hiding-places.

FERRIAGE, s. the sum paid for a passage at a ferry.

FERRO, or HIERO, the most westerly of the Canary Islands. It is a small island, and though not very fertile, produces corn, sugar, fruit, and legumes, and feeds a great number of cattle. Population, about 5000. Lat. 27. 45. N. Long. 17. 46. W.

FERROL, a strong, fortified town of Galicia in Spain; with one of the best harbours in Spain, vessels lying secure here from all winds. It is now a marine arsenal, and the principal station for the Spanish navy. It is seated on a bay of the Atlantic Ocean. Population, about 15,000. Lat. 43. 30. N. Long. 8. 11. W.

FERRUGINOUS, a. [ferrugineus, Lat.] partaking of the particles or qualities of iron.

FERRULE, s. [ferrea, Lat.] an iron or brass cap or ring; put round, or at the end of, a thing, to hinder it from splitting or wearing.

To FERRY, v. a. [feran, Sax.] to row a boat or vessel across a river; to cross a river in a boat or vessel.

FERRY, Fe'rryboat, s. a vessel or boat in which persons cross the water. Figuratively, the place where boats ply which cross the water; the common passage for a vessel or boat across a river.

FERRYMAN, s. one who keeps a ferry, or rows a boat across the water.

FERTH, FORTH, s. common terminations, are the same as, in English, an arm of the sea.

FERTILE, a. [fertilis, Lat.] producing a great quantity; fruitful.

FERTILENESS, s. the quality of producing abundance; fruitfulness.

TO FERTILIZE, v. a. [fertiliser, Fr.] to make fruitful.

FERTILITY, s. [fertilitas, Lat.] the quality of producing plenty or abundance.

TO FERTILIZE, v. a. [fertiliser, Fr.] to make fruitful.

FERTILY, ad. in great quantities, or abundance.

FERVENCY, s. [ferveo, Lat.] eagerness; warmth of application. Applied to the mind, zeal, or warmth of devotion.

FERVENT, a. hot, opposed to cold. Vehement, or warm; zealous, or flaming with devotion.

FERVENTLY, ad. in an eager, vehement, earnest, ardent, or zealous manner.

FERVID, a. hot. Figuratively, ardent, zealous, vehement.

FERVIDITY, s. heat, opposed to cold. Figuratively, warmth of temper.

FERVIDNESS, s. the quality of being warm of temper, earnest in application, or zealous in devotion.

FERULA, s. [Lat.] in Botany, the fennel giant. Also a flat wooden instrument for chastising boys at school.

TO FERULE, v. a. to chastise with the ferula.

FERVOUR, s. [ferveo, Lat.] heat or warmth, opposed to cold. Eagerness, or earnestness of application; warmth or heat of temper; ardour or zeal in devotion.

FESCUE, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, of which there are found nine species in England, distinguished from all others by having an oblong blossom, with two sharp-pointed valves.

FESSELS, s. a kind of base grain.

FESSE, s. [fascia, Lat.] in Heraldry, is one of the nine honourable ordinaries, consisting of a band drawn directly across the shield from side to side, and containing the third part of it, between the honour-point and the nimbil. It represents a broad girdle or belt of honour, which knights at arms were anciently girded with.

TO FESTER, v. n. [fesseo, Bavarian.] to rankle; to grow inflamed.

FESTINATE, a. [festino, Lat.] hasty; expeditious, opposed to delay. Not much in use.

FESTIVAL, a. [festum, Lat.] belonging to feasts or public entertainments.

FESTIVAL, s. a time of public feasting; a day of religious or public joy.

FESTIVE, a. gay; joyous.

FESTIVITY, s. a feast, or the time of public rejoicing; gaiety; joyfulness.

FESTOON, s. [feston, Fr.] in Architecture, an ornament of carved work, in the form of a wreath, or garland of flowers, or leaves twisted together, thickest in the middle, and suspended at the ends.

FESTUCINE, a. [festuca, Lat.] straw-colour, between green and yellow.

TO FETCH, v. a. preter, fetched; [fecan, Sax.] to go in order to bring something to a person; to take or make an excursion; to equal in value; to produce by some kind of force; to reach; to arrive at.

FETCH, s. a stratagem in which a design is attained indirectly, or in which one thing seems to be intended, and another is done; a trick, or artifice.

FETID, a. [fetido, Lat.] stinking; having an offensive smell.

FETIDNESS, s. the quality of having a strong and offensive smell.

FETLOCK, s. in Farriery, a tuft of hair growing behind the pastern joint of many horses; horses of a low size have scarcely any such tuft.

FETOR, s. a stench.

FETTER, s. it is commonly used in the plural, fetters; [fet- tere, Sax.] chains for the feet, put on prisoners to prevent their escape. Figuratively, any restraint.

TO FETTER, v. a. to put chains or shackles on the legs. Figuratively, to enchain; to bind; to deprive of liberty.

TO FETTER, v. a. [an old word from feet,] to bustle or make an appearance of being busy; to do trifling business.

FETUS, s. [fetus, Lat.] the full-grown young while in the womb.

FEUD, s. [foedus, Sax.] quarrel; opposition; war.

FEUDAL, a. [feudalis, Lat.] pertaining to fees, feus, or tenures, by which lands are held of a superior lord. Feudal System, or Feudalism, that state of society which arose in Europe on the ruins of the Roman empire, and is existing now in most states, only modified by that stage which may without hazard be predicted as its successor, Civism. It originated in certain customs which prevailed before the extinction of the Western empire; and varied in its details in different countries, according to the circumstances of its introduction. On the continent, generally, its form was this: each prince, duke, or baron, granted lands to his inferior lords and knights, on condition of homage and military service, with occasional fines; and in time the estates so held came to be hereditary, except under certain conditions. The sovereigns of states received the homage of these feudal lords, and were aided by them, as they were by their vassals; but only in particular cases did these lords hold their lands from the king. In England, some rude imitation of this arose in the reigns of the later Saxon monarchs. But on the conquest of the country by the duke of Normandy, all the property fell into the hands of the crown, and all the lords of manors held their estates directly from the king, just as their vassals did theirs from them, and on similar terms. Thus the king of England was lord paramount, and truly monarch of England, whilst the kings of many of the continental states were only chief peers. In England, also, hereditary lordship formed an essential part of the system. Commerce, which gave rise to the imperial free towns of Germany, and to the corporate towns of England, began early to sap the strength of feudalism. But the admirable prudence of admitting commoners into the aristocracy, although such new men are despised by the old families as parvenus, has preserved it in somewhat vigorous existence to this day. Many very slightly altered relics of its most odious features yet remain. The Puritan Revolution of England in the 17th century, and the French Revolution of the last century, though they at first operated against it, were brought round by constitutionalists and lawyers to keep it alive, and the return to the old state of things, by the restoration of the exiled royal families, in each case, brought back all the elements of its power.

FEUDATORY, s. [feudataire, Fr.] one who holds by some conditional tenure from a superior.

FEUDS, s. plural; [feodum, low Lat.] in Law, lands that are hereditary.

FEVER, s. [febris, Lat.] in Medicine, a class of diseases arising from the admission into the system of the subtle poison arising from putrid vegetable or animal matter, (but chiefly the former,) by the atmosphere. They are divided into intermittent fevers, or agues, which operate by fits or paroxysms at different but regular intervals; continued, or chronic fevers, which go on to a crisis, at which the cause of the disease is spent, or the system is destroyed by it; and those in which the influence of the cause seems to diminish gradually. The symptoms are too well known.

TO FEVER, v. a. to put into, or affect with, a fever.

FEVERFEW, s. in Botany, a British herb with compound flowers, of which there are four sorts.

FEVERISH, a. troubled with, or tending to, a fever.

FEVERISHNESS, s. a slight disorder or affection of a fever.

FEVEROUS, a. [feverens, Fr.] troubled with, or having the nature of, a fever; having a tendency to produce fevers.

FEVERSHAM, Kent. It has a large manufacture of gunpowder, and a considerable oyster fishery, employs a number of vessels in the coasting trade, and even sends some to Prussia, Norway, and Sweden, for fir, timber, and iron. It is seated on a creek, which is navigable for vessels of 130 tons, and which communicates with E. Swale. It is 48 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 4621.

FEUILLAGE, (feuilleage) s. [Fr.] a bunch, row, or circle of leaves.

FEUILLE-MORT, s. [Fr.] the colour of a faded leaf. Corruptly pronounced, and sometimes written, phénol.
 FEUTERER, s. a dog-keeper; perhaps the cleaner of the kennel.

FEW, a. [few, Sax.] not many; not great in number.

FEWEL, Fr./El., s. [few, Fr.] materials for making and keeping up a fire.

To FEWEL, v. n. to keep up a fire by supplying it with fuel.

FEWNESS, s. smallness, applied to number.

To FEY, v. a. [ceyhen, Belg.] to cleanse a ditch of mud.

FEZ, a province of Morocco, in Africa, lying on the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea; and bounded on the E. and S. by Algiers, and other provinces of Morocco. It is near 400 miles in length, and about 100 in breadth. The air is temperate and wholesome, and the country is mountainous, particularly to the W. and S. near Mount Atlas. The forests abound with wild beasts, and lions. The soil is fertile, producing citrons, oranges, dates, almonds, olives, figs, raisins, sugar, honey, and corn, in abundance. Here are fine breeds of camels, beeves, sheep, and other cattle; and the horses are the finest in Barbary. It is watered by several rivers and streams, and the chief town is Fez.

FEZZAN, a country of Africa, bounded on the north by Tripoli; on the E. and W. by the deserts of Sahara; and on the S. by the countries bordering on Lake Tchad. It is an extensive plain, encompassed by mountains, except to the W. The soil is not very productive. Among their tame animals are the sheep, cow, goat, camel, and a species of the domestic fowl of Europe. The wild animals are those common to tropical Africa. The natives belong rather to the negro than the Arab race. Agriculture and pasturage are their chief occupations. In religion they are strict but not intolerant Mahometans, and seem tolerably comfortable under their government, which is monarchical. The sovereign, who is believed to be descended from their prophet, is tributary to the bey of Tripoli. Gold dust constitutes their chief medium of payment; and value in that medium is always expressed by weight. Along this country is the great caravan route from the Barbary states to the coast of Guinea. Mourzouk is the capital. Population, about 70,000.

FIAT, s. [Lat.] in Law, a short order or warrant, signed by a judge, for making out and allowing certain processes. Literally it signifies let it be, from the Latin fac, and is applied to the commands of supreme persons.

FIB, s. [a corruption of fibule,] an untruth.

To FIB, v. n. to tell lies or falsehoods.

FIBBER, s. a person that speaks falsehoods.

FIBRE, s. [fibra, Lat.] a small thread or string. In Animal and Vegetable Physiology, it is the most simple and elementary form of the various tissues which make up the frames of animals and plants. In animals there is also what is distinctively called the fibrous tissue; and in vegetables, the tissue forming wood, and the peculiar and useful stalks of the hemp plant, is, in like manner, called woody fibre.

FIBRIL, s. [fibrille, Fr.] a small fibre, which being joined to others compose one of the larger.

FIBRINE, s. in Organic Chemistry, one of the modifications of proteins, occurring both in the animal and vegetable frames. In fresh-drawn blood and vegetable juices, it occurs in its dissolved form. It coagulates in both if left undisturbed, and in muscular fibre, and the gluten of the seeds of the cereal grasses. It is, in both animal and vegetable, a most important element of nutrition.

FIBROUS, a. [fibreux, Fr.] consisting of small threads or fibres.

FIBULA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the outer and lesser bone of the leg, much smaller than the tibia; it lies on the outside of the leg; and its upper end, which is not so high as the knee, receives the lateral knob of the upper end of the tibia into a small sinus, which it has in its inner side. Its lower end is received into the small sinus of the tibia, and then it extends into a large process, which forms the outer ankle.

FICHTE, JOHANN GOTTLIEB, a distinguished German philosopher of the last generation. His life was a nobly-fought battle. After a school time in which the elements of his character had often shone forth, being disappointed in his hopes of church patronage, he undertook a private tutorship, but he made it too much a conscientious task, and failed. At Leipzig, he next sought to gain bread by teaching, and fell in with Kant's great work, which brought him a new life. We find him next at Königsberg, a pilgrim to the presence of his teacher. There he wrote a work which introduced him at once to Kant and to the literary world. After a sore trial from absolute want, he was installed as Philosophical Professor at Jena. A malignant charge of atheism, which he would not undertake to rebut, led to his resignation; but at Erlangen, and afterwards at Berlin, he found new fields for the display of his lofty manliness, and for teaching his spiritual philosophy, which was, in fact, nothing but the theory of his own glorious life. His wife died from fever caught in attending the military hospitals during the last German campaign of Napoleon; and Fichte, taking the disease from her in his constant watch beside her, died in 1814, aged 52 years. He was the first and only one of Kant's pupils who differed from the founder of the critical philosophy. Fichte's system has been entitled that of Subjective Idealism; a popular treatise on which, from his numerous works, has at length been published in English. Schelling, one of his pupils, has superseded him in popularity.

FICINUS, MARSILIUS, a scholar and Platonist of the 15th century; one of the constellation that adorned Florence, under the patronage of the Medici family. Being a theologian by profession, he bent all his endeavours to the interpretation of his science by the aid of his favourite philosophy; but his success was not equal to his zeal, nor was his skill in the attempt. He wrote many works, and died in 1490, aged 66 years.

FICKLE, a. [fickel, Sax.] not of the same sentiments or opinions long; inconstant; not fixed.

FICKLENESS, s. a disposition of mind liable to frequent change; a state of inconstancy.

FICKLY, ad. in a manner liable to change; not settled or fixed.

FICHTLE, a. [fingo, Lat.] moulded into form; manufactured by the potter.

FICTION, (fikshon) s. the act of forming a fable or story by the help of the imagination; the thing feigned; a falsehood, or lie.

FICTITIOUS, (fiktishious) a. [fictitious, Lat.] counterfeit, opposite to genuine; made in order to resemble or pass for something else; imaginary, opposed to real.

FICTITIOUSLY, (fiktishiously) ad. in a false, imaginary, or chimerical manner.

FID, s. [fitta, Ital.] a pointed iron with which seamen twist their cords.

FIDDLE, s. [fidel, Teut.] in Music, the common name for the violin.

To FIDDLE, v. n. [fidlen, Teut.] to play on a violin, or fiddle. Figuratively, to trifle; to spend a great deal of time in seeming industrious, without doing any thing to the purpose.

FIDDLE FADDLE, s. and a. trifling; making a bustle, or giving trouble about nothing.

FIDDLER, s. one who plays on the violin.

FIDDLER'S ECK, s. the bow furnished with hair, which the musician draws over the strings of the fiddle.

FIDDLESTRING, s. the string of a fiddle; that which makes the noise.

FIDELITY, s. [fidelitas, from fides, Lat.] honesty in dealing; veracity or truth in testimony; firmness in adherence, or in loyalty.

To FIDGE, Fy/GET, v. n. [a cant word.] to move restlessly and nervously, or only for the sake of moving.

FIDUCIAL, (fidushial) a. [fiducia, from fides, Lat.] confident; without any degree of doubt.

FIDUCIARY, (fidushary) s. [fiduciarius, Lat.] one that has any thing in trust.

FIDUCIARY, (fidushary) a. without any degree of doubt.

FIE. See Fy.

FIEF, (feef) s. [feif, Fr.] in Law, a fee, manor, or possession, held by some tenant of a superior.

FIELD, (fielld) s. [feld, Sax. and Teut.] ground not inhabited; a space of ground which is cultivated. Figuratively, the ground where a battle is fought; a battle or campaign; a wide extent or expanse. In Painting, or Heraldry, the ground or surface on which figures or bearings are drawn.

FIELD, DR. RICHARD, a learned divine of the English Church, who enjoyed the favour of both the hero-queen, and her successor James I. His chief work of the Church is deserving of study in these days of ecclesiastical disputes. He died in 1616, aged 55 years.

FIE/LDED, (felded) part. being in field of battle.

FIE/LDFARE, (feldfare) s. [feld and feran, Sax.] in Natural History, a bird of passage, which comes to us from the northern countries.

FIE/LDING, HENRY, one of the eminent early novelists of England. He was a spendthrift, and in his first essays at authorship did not attain any marked success. Whilst studying for the bar he left dramatic for narrative literature, and his success was complete. Literary service done to the government during the rebellion of 1745, procured him a place on the magistrates' bench of Middlesex. He wrote on law questions, but also produced some of his happiest tales. He died at Lisbon, whilst seeking the benefit of the warmer climate, in 1754, aged 47 years. His writings are full of racy humour and manly feeling, but have not escaped the coarseness of the day. Some of the characters are most graphically drawn.

FIE/LDMARSHAL, (feldsmarshāl) s. the commander of an army in the field.

FIE/LDMOUSE, s. in Natural History, the vulgar name of several species of mice which do not frequent houses.

FIE/LDOFFICER, (feld-officer) s. an officer whose command, in the field, extends to a whole regiment; as the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.

FIE/LDPIECE, (feld-piece) s. in Gunnery, small cannon used only in battles, not in sieges.

FIE/ND, (feend) s. [Sax.] the devil; any infernal being.

FIE/NNES, the name of a father and son who figure conspicuously in the history of the English Revolution of 1649. The father, who was Lord Say and Sele, after having occupied various posts under Cromwell, concurred in the Restoration, and was taken into favour. He died in 1662, aged 80 years. The son, Nathaniel Fiennes, comes first into prominence as yielding Bristol to Prince Rupert; but afterwards he held the great seal under Cromwell. He died in 1669, aged 61 years.

FIERCE, (ferce) a. [ferox, Lat.] wild; furious; not easily tamed; violent; passionate; strong; terrible, or causing terror.

FIERCELY, (ferceely, or ferceely) ad. in a furious, wild, or outrageous manner.

FIERCENESS, (ferceness, or ferceness) s. wildness; eagerness after slaughter; quickness to attack; outrageousness; violence, with respect to passion.

FIERI-FACIAS, (feri-facias) s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ that lies where a person has recovered judgment for debts or damages, in the king's court, against any one, by which the sheriff is commanded to levy the debt and damages on the defendant's goods and chattels.

FIERINESS, s. hot qualities; heat of temper.

FIERY, a. consisting of hot particles, or such as burn. Figuratively, vehement; ardent; passionate; fierce; easily provoked.

FIFE, s. [ffire, Fr.] a shrill pipe blown like a German flute, used to accompany the drum in the army.

FIFE/SHIRE, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth and the German Ocean, bounded by the river Tay, Perthshire, and the counties of Kinross and Clackmannan. It is about 38 miles in length, and from 7 to 16 in breadth. This county supplies coals, iron, lime, and freestone; it is highly cultivated and productive, abundant in cattle, and has a number of flourishing manufactures. The fisheries are valuable. The Leven and the Eden are its principal rivers. Cupar, Dumfries, and St. Andrews are its chief places. Pop. 140,310. It sends three members to parliament.

FIFTEEN, a. [fiifteen, Sax.] five and ten.

FIFTEENTH, a. [fiiftoetha, Sax.] the fifth after the tenth.

FIFTH, a. [fiif, Sax.] the ordinal of five.—s. in Music, an interval equal to two-thirds; with the third and octave it forms the common chord.

FIFTHLY, ad. in the fifth place.

FIFTH-MONARCHISTS, s. in English History, a sect of religious enthusiasts, who expected a very reign of Christ, as the fifth and last great monarchy prefigured in Daniel, as the result of the civil war in the 17th century. They gave great trouble at one time to Cromwell, including (as they did) some of his best and most tried soldiers. After the Restoration they got quite extinguished, there appearing no chance for a kingdom of Christ under Charles II.

FIFTIETH, a. the ordinal of fifty.

FIFTY, a. [fiifig, Sax.] five tens.

FIG, s. [figus, Lat. figo, Span.] in Botany, and Commerce, the fruit of a tree growing in the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, and often, but in less perfection, cultivated here. When dried it is exported very abundantly to England, where it is an old standard dessert dish in the early part of the year.

FIGAPPLE, s. in Horticulture, a species of apple that has no core or kernel.

TO FIGHT, (fiht) v. a. pret. and past part. fought: [fohtan, Sax.] to contend with another, either with arms, sticks, or the fist; to endeavour by blows, or other forcible means, to get the better of, or to conquer, an enemy; used both of war and single combat.

FIGHT, (fiht) s. [fight, Sax.] a violent attack or struggle for conquest between enemies, applied both to armies and single persons.

FIGHTER, (fihter) s. a person engaged in war, or single combat; a person fond of fighting.

FIGHTING, (fihting) part. qualified or fit for battle.

FIGMARGOLD, s. in Botany, a plant resembling house-leek.

FIGMENT, s. [figmentum, Lat.] a fabulous story; a mere fiction.

FIGPECKER, s. in Natural History, the name of a common English bird.

FIGULATE, a. [figulus, Lat.] made of potter's clay.

FIGURABLE, a. [figura, Lat.] capable of being moulded in a certain form and retaining it.

FIGURABILITY, s. the quality of being capable of a certain and permanent form.

FIGURAL, a. represented by delineation. Figural numbers are such as may, or do, represent some geometrical figure, in relation to which they are always considered.

FIGURATE, a. of a certain and determinate form; resembling any thing of a determinate form. Figurate counterpoint, in Music, is that wherein there is a mixture of discord with the concords. Figurate descent, in Music, is that wherein discords are concerned as well, though not so much, as concords. See DESCANT.

FIGURATION, s. determination to a certain form; the act of giving a certain form.

FIGURATIVE, a. [figuratif, Fr.] in Rhetoric, a style of discourse or writing abounding in figures of speech.

FIGURATIVELY, ad. by a figure; in a sense different from the literal meaning.

FIGURE, s. [figura, Lat.] the form of any thing as terminated by the outline; shape, person, or external form; distinguished appearance; eminence; a statue; any thing represented by drawing or painting; arrangement; disposition; a character denoting a number. In Logic, the figure of a syllogism, is the class to which it belongs, according to the relation of the middle term to the terms of the premises. In Rhetoric, any mode of speaking, by which words are used in a sense different from their primary and literal meaning. In Dancing, the steps of any particular dance.

TO FIGURE, v. a. to form or mould into any particular shape; to form a resemblance in painting, drawing, or statutory; to weave in flowers, or other resemblances of natural objects; to diversify; to variegate; to represent by types, or hieroglyphics; to form a picture of any thing in the mind; to foreshow by some sign or token.

FIGURED, a. in general, is something marked with figures; but is chiefly applied to stuffs whereon the figures of flowers, &c. are either wrought or stamped.

FIGWORT, s. in Botany, a British herb, of which there are four species; three of which blossom in August, and the fourth (with yellow flowers) in April and May. This is also called the littlecelandine.

FILACEOUS, a. [filum, Lat.] consisting or composed of threads.

FILACER, FULAZER, s. [filarius, law Lat.] an officer in the Common Pleas, so called, because he files those writs whereon he makes process. There are fourteen of them in their several divisions and counties; they make out all original process, as well real as personal and mixed.

FILAMENT, s. [filamentum, Lat.] a fine slender thread, whereof natural bodies are composed. The same as FIBRE.

FILBERT, s. [corrupted from full beard.] in Botany, a species of nut, the kernel of which is much finer than that of the hazelnut; the shape and husk also are different.

To FILCH, v. n. [of uncertain etymology.] to take away the property of another privately; generally applied to stealing or taking away trifles.

FILCHER, s. one who privately defrauds another of something of small value.

FILE, s. [filum, Lat.] a thread, or series; a line on which papers are strung to keep them; a roll, or catalogue; a line of soldiers ranged behind one another.—[foel, Sax.] an instrument of steel, used to wear protuberances, or smooth iron or steel by rubbing.

To FILE, v. a. to string upon a thread, or hang upon a wire. To cut or wear away any roughness with a file.—v. n. to march, like soldiers, in a line, one after another.

FILCUTTER, s. one who makes files.

FILER, s. one who uses a file in smoothing or shaping metals.

In Law, one who offers a bill to the notice of a judge.

FILIAL, a. [filius, Lat.] with the affection of a son; bearing the character, or standing in the relation of a son.

FILIATION, s. the relation of a son to a father.

FILINGS, s. [without singular.] the particles worn off by the rubbing of a file.

To FILL, v. a. [fillan, Sax.] to pour or put in, till a thing or vessel can contain no more; to store abundantly, or plenteously; to glut, or surfeit; to satisfy or content the appetite, wish, or desire. To fill out, to pour liquor out of one vessel till it fills another. To fill up, to make full; to supply; to occupy by bulk; to engage or employ.

FILL, s. as much as a thing can contain; as much as may satisfy or content.

FILLAGREE, FILIGREE, FILIGRANE, s. a kind of enrichment on gold and silver, wrought delicately in the manner of little threads or grains, or both intermixed. The word is compounded of fil or filum, thread, and granum, grain. The best of this work comes from Sumatra. The work usually executed by young ladies in this country, under the title of FILLAGREE, and of which tea-caddies, &c., are constructed, is formed of narrow slips of coloured paper, gilt at the edges, and curiously rolled up and glued in various fanciful forms, with the gilt edges outward.

FILLER, s. any thing that fills up room without use; one who is employed to fill vessels or carriages.

FILLET, s. [filum, Lat.] a band to tie round the head, or any other part. The fleshy part of the thigh, applied to the joint of veal cut from that part of a calf. In Cookery, any meat rolled together, and tied round. In Architecture, a little member which appears in ornaments and mouldings, called likewise a listel.

To FILLET, v. a. to bind with a fillet or bandage. In Architecture, to adorn with an astragal or listel.

To FILLIP, v. a. [of uncertain etymology.] to strike with the nail by a sudden jerk or motion of the finger.

FILLIP, s. a jerk of the finger let go from the thumb; a blow given with the nail by a jerk of the finger.

FILLY, s. [filly, Brit.] a young horse or mare.

FILM, s. [fylmeuca, Sax.] a thin skin or membrane.

To FILM, v. a. to cover with a skin or pellicle.

FILMER, ROBERT, KNT., a writer in favour of absolute monarchy, who has been immortalized by being refuted by John Locke in his Treatise of Governments. He died in 1747.

To FILMY, v. a. consisting of membranes, skins, or pellicles.

To FILTHER, v. a. [filbro, low Lat.] to clarify or purify liquors by means of threads; to strain through paper, flannel, &c.

FILTER, s. [filtrum, low Lat.] a twist of thread, one end of which is dipped in some fluid to be cleaned, and the other hangs down on the outside of the vessel, the liquor by that means dropping from it. Figuratively, a strainer, or vessel used to clear liquors by percolation.

FILTH, s. [filth, Sax.] dirt, or any thing which fouls, or makes a thing foul; any thing which pollutes the soul.

FILTHILY, ad. in such a manner as to render a thing nasty, or to pollute the mind.

FILTHINESS, s. dirtiness; any thing soiled or daubed; corruption; pollution.

FILTHY, a. made foul, nasty, or dirty. Gross, or polluted, as to the mind.

To FILTRATE, v. a. [See FILTER.] to pass or strain liquor through a cloth, linen bag, brown paper, &c. to clear it from dregs.

FILTRATION, s. the art of making liquor fine and clear by straining.

FIMBLE-HEMP, s. light summer hemp which bears no seed. FIMBRIATED, a. in Heraldry, and Natural History, bordered with something of a different colour.

FIN, s. [fin, Sax.] the wing or limb of a fish, by which he balances his body; it consists of a membrane supported by rays, or little bony or cartilaginous ossicles.

FINABLE, a. that admits a fine; that deserves a fine.

FINAL, a. [finis, Lat.] last, or that has nothing beyond it; at the end; conclusive; decisive; complete; mortal; destructive. Final cause, in Natural Theology, is the purpose answered by any construction, instinct, property, &c.

FINALLY, ad. lastly; to conclude; perfectly; decisively; or without recovery.

FINANCE, s. most frequently used in the plural, [Fr.] the amount of the taxes of a government, or that of the profits or income of a private person.

FINANCIER, s. [financier, Fr.] one who collects or forms the taxes or public revenue.

FINARY, s. in the iron works, the second forge at the iron mills.

FINCH, s. [fin, Sax.] in Natural History, a small singing-bird, of which we have three species, viz. the gold-finch, chaffinch, and bull-finch.

FINCH, HENEAGE, EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, one of Charles II.'s lord chancellors. He was judicious, eloquent, industrious, a good lawyer, an able statesman for those times, and, more surprising, one of veracity and integrity. He died in 1682, aged 61 years.

To FIND, v. a. preter. I have found, past part. found. [findan, Sax.] to discover any thing lost, mislaid, or out of sight before, by means of searching; to meet with; to fall upon; to know by experience; to discover a thing by study; to hit on by chance; to remark; to observe; to reach; to attain; to settle on one's own opinion; to determine by judicial verdict; to supply; to furnish. In Law, to approve; as, "to find a bill." To find himself, means to fare with regard to ease or pain, health or sickness. To find out, to solve a difficulty; to invent; to obtain the knowledge of.

FINDER, s. a person who discovers something lost, mislaid, or not in sight.

FINDY, a. [findig, Sax.] weighty; plump; solid.

FINE, a. [fin, Fr.] thin; subtle; keen; tenuous; nice; exquisite; delicate; artful; sly; fraudulent; made of very slender threads, applied to linens or cloth, and opposed to coarse. Refined, or pure from dross, applied to metals. Clear and free from sediments or foulness, applied to liquors. Refined, too subtle, or too high, applied to sentiments. Elegant, applied to style or expression in composition. Handsome and majestic, applied to personal charms. Accomplished; elegant; applied to manners. Splendid, applied to dress. Ironically used as an expression of something rather spurious than real, or rather deserving contempt than approbation. "A fine exchange for liberty!" Philips.

FINE, s. [fin, Cimbri.] in Law, an agreement made before justices, and entered upon record, for the settling or assuring of lands or tenements, in order to cut off all controversies, to secure the title a person has in his estate against all others, or to cut off entails, so that lands may, with the greater certainty, be conveyed either in fee-tail for life, or years; a sum of money paid and advanced for the income of lands; a certain sum paid to excuse a person from the discharge of an office; a sum of money, or forfeit, paid as an amends, or by way of punishment, for an offence committed.

In FINE, ad. [fin, Fr.] to conclude; in conclusion.

To FINE, v. a. to refine, to purify; to make a person pay money as a punishment.—v. n. to pay a sum of money to be excused from serving an office.

To FINEDRAW, v. a. to sew up a rent, or one piece of cloth to another, in such a manner as the seam shall not be visible.

FINDRAWER, s. a person who professes to sew up the rents of cloth.

FINELY, ad. with elegance of thought and expression, applied to the style of an author. With a thin edge or point. Splendidly, richly, applied to dress. In very small particles, applied to powder. Used ironically, it means wretchedly.

FINESS, s. show, splendour, or gaiety, applied to dress. Subtlety; ingenuity; freedom from dress, or impure mixtures.

FINERY, s. gaiety of dress. In the iron works, one of the two forges at which they hammer the sow or pig iron.

FINESSE, (finés) s. [Fr.] a sly, artful stratagem; subtlety and tact in the management of affairs, as opposed to the manful conduct of them by constant reference to principles.

FINER, s. one that purifies metals.

FINER, a. the comparative degree of fine, made by adding r or er to the positive, after the manner of the Saxons.

FINFISH, s. in Ichthyology, a slender kind of whale.

FINFOOTED, a. [from fin and foot,] palmipedous; having feet with membranes between the toes.

FINGER, s. [finger, Sax.] one of the five members at the extreme part of the hand, by which we catch and hold any thing; a small measure of extension. Figuratively, the hand; manufacture; art.

To FINGER, v. a. to touch lightly, or toy with. Figuratively, to take by stealth. In Music, to touch or sound an instrument.

FINICAL, a. [from fine,] nice; foppish; too much affecting elegance of dress and behaviour.

FINICALLY, ad. foppishly.

FINICALNESS, s. too great an affectation of niceness and elegance.

To FINISH, v. a. [finis, Lat.] to cease from working; to accomplish, perfect, or complete an undertaking; to polish, or bring to the utmost perfection; to put an end to.

FINISHER, s. a performer; an accomplisher; one who puts an end to, or completes, an undertaking.

FINISTERRE, a department of the N. W. of France, forming the extremity of a considerable promontory jutting out into the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded by Côtes du Nord and Morbihan, two departments which form the remainder of the same promontory. It is mountainous, but the height of its loftiest hills is under 1000 feet. The coast is rocky, and there are many islands and insulated rocks lying near it; those named Isle de Bas, and Ushant, are the most important. The rivers are small, but the Aulne at its mouth forms the celebrated harbour of Brest. Agriculture is pursued only partially here. Coal, iron, lead, with many kinds of building-stone, &c., are the natural wealth of the department. It has also fisheries of some value, and some small manufactures. It is also most favourably circumstanced for trade, both home and foreign. Quimper is its chief town. Pop. about 550,000.

FINITE, a. [finis, Lat.] that is limited with respect to bulk or other qualities or perfections.

FINITELESS, a. without bounds; unlimited.

FINITELY, ad. within certain limits.

FINITENESS, s. limitation.

FINITUDE, s. a confinement within certain limits and degrees.

FINLAND, a province of Russia, lying on the Gulfs of Finland and Bothnia, and bounded by Lapland, and other governments of the empire, on the N and W. There are a great many lakes and marshes, and yet it produces a good deal of corn, and pastures which feed numbers of cattle. On the W. of it lie the mountains named Olonetz. It has no considerable rivers. Its inhabitants are of Tatar origin, in number about 1,250,000. Abo is the chief town. The Gulf of Finland is an arm of the Baltic Sea, running westerly.

FINMARK, a province of Norway, comprising the most northerly tract of Europe. It is a rocky, barren tract, and the coast deeply indented and surrounded by islands, on one of which is N. Cape.

FINNED, a. having fins; having broad edges spreading out on either side.

FINNY, a. furnished with, or having fins.

FINTOED, a. palmipedous; having a membrane between the toes.

FIPPLE, s. [fibula, Lat.] a stopple, or stopper.

FIR, s. [Sax.] in Botany and Commerce, a genus of timber trees, the commonest of which is the Scotch fir. See LARCH, PINE, &c.

FIRE, s. [fur, Sax.] in Natural Philosophy, heat in such activity as to destroy any ordinarily combustible substances, by combustion, or by ignition. Generally, it is a collection of combustibles purposely ignited for culinary and similar ends; or a conflagration. Figuratively, heat of temper or passion; liveliness of imagination; love; any violent emotion. Fire was anciently regarded as one of the four primary elements of all things.

To FIRE, v. a. to burn, or destroy by fire.—v. n. to burn; to take fire. Figuratively, to be inflamed with passion. In War, to discharge a gun, or any fire-arms.

FIREARMS, s. those which are charged with powder and ball.

FIREARROW, s. a small iron dart furnished with springs, bars, and a match impregnated with powder and sulphur; used by privateers and pirates to fire the sails of the enemy.

FIREBALL, s. a ball filled with combustibles, bursting where it is thrown, and used in war; a grenade.

FIREBRAND, s. a piece of wood kindled, or burning. Figuratively, a public incendiary; or one who causes factions or commotions in a state.

FIRECOCK, s. in the London water-works, a contrivance for drawing water out of the pipe in any part of the city where a fire may happen.

FIRECROSS, s. a signal used in Scotland for the nation to take arms.

FIRE-ENGINE, s. a machine for extinguishing accidental fires by means of a stream or jet of water.

FIRE-ESCAPE, s. a contrivance for escaping from the upper rooms of a burning house, in safety.

FIREFLIES, s. in Entomology, certain luminous flies which are found in Guiana, and other tropical countries.

FIRELOCK, s. that part of a gun which holds the prime, and by means of a trigger sets fire to it. Figuratively, a gun.

FIREMAN, s. one employed in extinguishing burning houses.

FIRENEW, a. perfectly new, or never used, alluding to those metals which are forged or melted by means of fire.

FIREPAN, s. a pan of metal used in holding fire; a shovel; that part of a gun which holds the prime.

FIREPLACE, s. a contrivance for communicating heat to rooms, and for answering various purposes of art and manufacture.

FIRESHIP, s. a ship or vessel filled with combustibles, and let to drive in an engagement among the fleet of an enemy, to set it on fire.

FIRESHOVEL, s. an instrument with which coals are thrown on fires.

FIRESIDE, s. the hearth, chimney, or place near a grate or fire-stove. Figuratively, a family.

FIRESTONE, s. in Geology, one of the peculiarly intercalated beds, or varied forms of beds, found immediately below the chalk in the S. E. of England. It is known by the name of the upper green sand.

FIREWOOD, s. wood to burn; fuel.

FIREWORK, s. a preparation made of gunpowder, sulphur, and other inflammable substances, used on public rejoicings, or other occasions.

FIRING, s. combustibles made use of to kindle and supply fires with; the act of discharging fire-arms.

To FIRK, v. a. [ferio, Lat.] to whip; to beat; to chastise by way of punishment.

FIRKIN, s. [feather, Sax.] a measure containing the fourth part of a barrel. The firkin of ale, soap, and butter, contains eight gallons; and that of beer, nine.

FIRM, a. [firmitas, Lat.] strong; not easily pierced, shaken, or moved; stedfast, or fixed.

To FIRM, v. a. [firmitas, Lat.] to fix; settle; establish; or confirm.

FIRAMENT, s. [firamentum, Lat.] the sky; the heavens.

FIRAME/NTAL, a. celestial, or belonging to the sky.

FIRMAN, s. in Turkey, an edict, a passport, a permit, or any state letter issued by the sultan himself.

FIRMLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be moved, or penetrated easily; steadily.

FIRMINESS, s. stability; compactness; solidity; durability; certainty; soundness; constancy; resolution.

FIRST, a. [first, Sax.] the ordinal of one; that which is in order before any other; earliest in time, opposed to last; foremost in place; highest in dignity; great, excellent.

FIRST, ad., in the first place. Following at, beginning of existence, action, &c.

FIRST-BORN, s., the first by the order of nativity.

FIRST-FRUIT, s., (not used in the singular,) that which is first produced by any vegetable, or which is soonest ripe in the season; the first profits, or first year's income of a benefice; the earliest effect of any thing. In Ecclesiastical History, the income of a benefice for a year, claimed by the pope, and afterwards, at the English Reformation, by the king, of all clergymen when presented to livings.

FIRSTLING, s., the first produce or offspring of animals. Figuratively, the first thing done or performed.

FISCAL, a., [fiscus, Lat.] a public revenue; exchequer.—a. relating to the revenue.

FISH, s., fishes, plural; but fish is generally used in conversation; [isc, Sax.] in Natural History, the name of one of the great classes of the animal kingdom, consisting of creatures having a vertebral column, but a single heart, breathing by means of gills, and fitted by all contrivances for living in the water, alone.

To FISH, v. n. to be employed in catching fish. Figuratively, to endeavour to discover any secret by craft or subtlety.

FISHER, s., one employed in catching fish.

FISHER, DR. JOHN, a bishop of Rochester, who was one of the first victims of Henry VIII. at his revolt from the pope. In all the affairs of that trying time, he remained steadfast in standing by his faith, whilst others sought to follow the varying humours of the king. He opposed Henry's divorce, denied his supremacy, did not impeach the poor silly imposture of the holy maid of Kent; and was beheaded in 1535, aged 76 years.

FISHERMAN, s., one who gets his livelihood by catching fish.

FISHERY, s., the action of catching fish; the place where fish abound, and are generally sought for.

FISHHOOK, s., a hook to catch fishes.

To FISHIFY, v. a. to turn to fish.

FISHING, s., convenience of taking fish.

FISHKARD, Pembrokeshire. It carries on a considerable trade in herrings, this town, with Newport, curing above 1000 barrels annually. It is situated on a steep cliff, at the influx of the river Gwaive, in which here forms a spacious bay, where vessels may lie safely in 5 or 6 fathoms water, 242 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2013.

FISHKETTLE, s., a caldron made long for the fish to be boiled without bending.

FISHMONGER, s., a dealer in fish.

FISHPOND, s., a small pool for fish.

FISHY, a., consisting or having the qualities of fish; tasting like fish.

FISSE, a., [findo, Lat.] that may be cleft.

FISSILITY, s., the quality of being fit to be cloven.

FISURE, s., a cleft; a narrow chasm.

To FISURE, v. a. to cleave; to make a cleft.

FIST, s., [fest, Sax.] the hand clenched with the thumb or fingers doubled over each other, in order to give a blow, or hold a thing fast.

To FIST, v. a. to strike with the fist.

FISTICUFFS, s. (not used in the singular,) battle or blows with the fists. Figuratively, the action of fighting.

FISTULA, s., [Lat.] in Surgery, a deep, winding, callous, cavernous ulcer, with a narrow entrance, opening into a spacious bottom, and generally secreting acrid pus. Fistula in ano, is a fistula formed in the fundament. Fistula lachrymalis, a disorder of the canals leading from the eye to the nose.

FISTULAR, a., [fistularis, Lat.] hollow like a pipe.

FISTULOUS, a. having the nature of, or resembling, a fistula.

FIT, s., [viit, Flem.] in Medicine, the paroxysm of a disorder; any short return after cessation or intermission; any violent affection of the mind. Used vulgarly for the hysterics in women; the convulsions in children; the epilepsy in men, or that state wherein all the animal functions seem on a sudden suspended, and the person is for a short time like one who is dead.

FIT, a., [fiht, Sax.] proper or suited to any purpose, with for before a noun, and to before a verb. Right, or the duty of a person.

To FIT, v. a., [vitten, Flem.] to make one thing suit another; to match; to adapt; to suit; to equip; to make proper for the reception of a person.

FITCH, s., [a corruption of veteh.] in Botany, a small kind of wild pea, or pulse, cultivated as green food for cattle.

FITCHAT, Fr/cheu, s., [fisse, Belg.] in Natural History, a stinking animal of a small size, which robs warrens or hen-roosts; a polecat.

FITCHEE, a., [fiche, Fr.] in Heraldry, sharp-pointed at the bottom, generally applied to a cross.

FITFUL, a. subject to fits, faintings, paroxysms, or intermissions.

FITLY, ad. in a proper manner; reasonably; commodiously.

FITNESS, s. reasonableness; justness; suitability.

FITTER, s. the person who renders a thing proper and suitable to any particular design or purpose; a small piece, from fella, Ital. felzen, Teut. as, "To cut into filters."

FITZ, s. a French word for son; as Fitzroy is the son of a king. It is commonly used of illegitimate children of the aristocracy.

FITZGERALD, LORD EDWARD, one of the association of noble-minded, but misguided men, called United Irishmen, who attempted, in the latter part of the last century, to deliver their unhappy country from the miserable misgovernment under which it has sunk to the lowest grade of national existence. He was highly connected, and therefore selected for signal vengeance. Being betrayed by a spy, he was shot in an attempt at capture, in 1798, aged 35 years. He had married a few years before Madame Genlis's Pamela, about whom such absurd mystery hung. This lady was brought up as if a child of the Duc d'Orleans, and after the assassination of Lord Edward, was married to an American merchant, from whom she was afterwards divorced. She returned to Paris after the enthronement of the King of the Barriades; but he suffered his playmate and schoolfellow to die in 1831, aged about 56 years.

FITZSTEPHEN, WILLIAM, a monastic friend of Thomas à Becket, whose Life he wrote, and also, the earliest account of the metropolis of England ever written. This last is a very valuable and curious document. He died in 1191.

FIVE, a., [fi, Sax.] four and one.

FIVES, s. a kind of play, consisting of striking a ball, &c. a particular height against a wall, the person who misses a stroke losing one each time he misses. In Farriery, a disease in horses.

To FIX, v. a., [fixum, from figo, Lat.] to fasten a thing so as it shall not be easily shaken or moved; to establish without changing; to direct without variation; to make any thing of a volatile nature capable of bearing fire without evaporating, or the hammer without breaking or flying.—v. n. to settle the opinion; or determine the resolution; to rest; to cease from wandering.

FIXATION, s., [Fr.] a disposition of mind not given to change; residence in a certain place; confinement. In Chemistry, the act of reducing a volatile and fluid substance to a hard one.

FIXED, part. not moved. The fixed stars, in Astronomy, are those which retain the same relative positions to the earth, and to each other, and do not move as the planets do. They are believed to be suns to systems of planets, too distant to be visible, even by the aid of the most powerful telescopes: the distance of most of them is too great to be ascertained, but an attempt has been made on some of them, and the nearest is reckoned to be not less than 19 millions of millions of miles. Some of them appear double, and some triple, when examined by proper telescopes; some also vary in their brightness, appearing sometimes almost as brilliant as the great stars, and sometimes so faint as hardly to be seen. Some others have been ascertained, by long-continued observation, to have a proper motion, and to change their position, but very slowly indeed. The whole of them are regarded as forming a cluster in infinite space, like some of those which are described under NEBULA; and this, it has recently been shown, moves on an axis, or common centre, just as the earth does. Fixed idea, in Metaphysics, an unrealizable fancy which has fully taken possession of any one's mind.

FIXEDLY, ad. certainly; firmly; invariably; unchangeably.

FIXEDNESS, s. stability, firmness, resolution, or a disposition of mind not given to change; a power to remain in fire unconsumed, or to bear the hammer without flying.

FIXITY, s. [fixité, Fr.] a strong cohesion of parts, which renders bodies capable of bearing a great heat, without being volatilized.

FIXTURE, s. [a corruption of figure] things which are fixed to the premises.

FIXURE, s. a position; a strong pressure; firmness, or state of fixedness.

FIZGIG, s. a kind of dart or harpoon used to strike fish with.

FLABBY, a. wanting firmness; easily shaking and yielding to the touch.

FLACCID, (flacid) a. [flaccidus, Lat.] weak; wanting stiffness or tension.

FLACCIDITY, (flacidity) s. want of stiffness.

FLADA, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, between Sky and Lewis. It is about three miles in circumference, and remarkable for its fishery. Pop. 53.

TO FLAG, v. n. [flaggeren, Belg.] to hang down limber, or without stiffness. Figuratively, to grow faint, spiritless, or dejected; to lose vigour, or grow feeble.—v. a. to let fall, or suffer to droop. Also, to lay with broad stone.

FLAG, v. n. in Botany, a water plant, with a broad-bladed leaf, bearing yellow flowers, commonly called iris. In military and naval affairs, a general name for colours, standards, banners, ancient, ensigns, &c., which are frequently confounded with each other. Flag is now particularly used at sea for the colours, ancient, standards, &c., borne on the top of the masts of vessels, to notify the person who commands the ship, of what nation it is, and whether it be equipped for war or trade. The principal British flag is called the Union Jack. To lower or strike the flag, is to pull it down upon the cap, or to take it in, out of respect or submission to those that are their superiors. In an engagement, it is a sign of yielding. To hang out the white flag, is to ask quarter; the red flag is a sign of defiance and battle.—[flache, old Fr.] a species of broad stone used for pavements.

FLAGELLANTES, in Church History, certain enthusiasts in the 13th century, who maintained that there was no remission of sins without flagellation, or whipping. Accordingly, they walked in procession, preceded by priests carrying the cross, and publicly lashed themselves till the blood dropped from their naked backs.

FLAGELLATION, s. [flagellatio, Lat.] the act of whipping or striking with a scourge.

FLAGGEOLET, s. [Fr.] in Music, a small and feeble wind instrument, similar to the English flute and oboe.

FLAGGINESS, s. the state of a thing which hangs or droops for want of stiffness.

FLAGGY, a. weak; limber; drooping for want of stiffness; insipid.

FLAGITIOUS, (flagitious) a. [flagitiosus, Lat.] committed with deliberation and obstinate wickedness, applied to things. Ostensibly and excessively wicked and villainous, applied to persons.

FLAGITIOUSNESS, (flagitiouness) s. obstinate and wilful villainy or wickedness.

FLAG-OFFICER, s. the commander of a squadron.

FLAGON, s. [flaccid, Brit.] a large drinking-pot with a narrow mouth.

FLAGRANCY, s. [flagro, Lat.] a burning, flaming, glittering, or heat; ardour of affection; notoriety of a crime.

FLAGRANT, a. ardent; hot; or vehement; glowing; flushed; red; inflamed. Notorious, or universally known, applied to crimes.

FLAG-SHIP, s. a ship which carries the officer who commands a fleet.

FLAG-STAFF, s. the staff on which the flag is fixed.

FLAIL, s. [flagellum, Lat.] an instrument with which corn is beaten out of the ear.

FLAKE, s. [flocus, Lat.] any thing which appears loosely held together like a flock of wool; any thing which breaks in thin pieces or lamina; a layer or stratum.

TO FLAKE, v. a. to form in flakes, or thin pieces loosely joined together.

FLAKY, a. breaking in small pieces, like scales; lying in layers, or strata.

FLAM, s. [a cant word of uncertain etymology,] a lie, or false report; a mere deceit, or illusory pretext; a sham.

TO FLAM, v. a. to deceive with a feigned story; to put off with an idle tale.

FLAMBEAU, (flambo) s. [Fr.] a kind of large taper, made of hempen wicks, covered with bee's-wax, to give a large light in the night.

FLAMBOROUGH HEAD, a remarkable promontory of Yorkshire, the white cliffs of which are seen at a considerable distance at sea, and serve for a direction to mariners. Great multitudes of sea-fowls build their nests among the rocks. It is the most northerly point at which the chalk appears in England. Lat. 54. 9. N. Long. 0. 19. E.

FLAME, s. [flamma, Lat.] in Chemistry, gas heated to a state of combustion. Figuratively, fire; brightness of imagination or fancy; the passion of love; the object of love. Flame colour is a bright yellow colour.

TO FLAME, v. n. to burn so as to emit a shining or bright light; to shine like flame; to be in an excess of passion.

FLAMEN, s. [Lat.] a priest among the ancient Romans, who officiated in their religious rites, and offered up sacrifices, &c.

FLAMINGO, in Ornithology, a very beautiful bird with scarlet wings. There are several species, one of which belongs to the American continent, the others to Africa.

FLAMMABILITY, s. [flamma, Lat.] quality of admitting to be set on fire so as to blaze.

FLAMMATION, s. the act of setting on flame.

FLAMMOUS, a. consisting of, or resembling, flame.

FLAMSTEED JOHN, an eminent practical astronomer in the end of the 17th and beginning of the following century. He was the first astronomer royal, and obtained that post in consequence of the notice he had attracted by treatises on the Equation of Time, and the Lunar Theory, which he had published at the time he was prosecuting his astronomical observations and studies in his country rectory. He filed that post for many years with great credit, devoting himself to incessant observations, and the most careful tabulation of all the results. The Historia Cælestis Britannica contains the sun of his labours; which however, owing to the imperfection of the instruments then in use, is of little value now. His quarrel with Sir Isaac Newton, who was as petulant as himself, was an unhappy affair; and apparently arose from Flamsteed's excessive opinion of the value of mere observations, compared with such labours as Newton was engaged on. Halley, who sided with Newton, added fuel to the fire; and a spice of political partisanship entering, made the matter complete. Flamsteed died in 1719, aged 73 years.

FLAMY, a. burning so as to emit flames or brightness; inflamed.

FLANDERS, EAST and WEST, two provinces of Belgium, adjoining each other; W. Flanders lying on the N. Sea, and the two being bounded by France, the provinces of Hainault, S. Brabant, Antwerp, and Zealand. The land is flat, but has a rich soil, and abounds in corn and all agricultural produce. Peat, and clay both for bricks and pipes, are plentiful. The manufactures are chiefly of linen, lace, tapestry, &c. It is a very healthy district. The chief towns are, Ghent in E. Flanders, and Bruges in W. Flanders; and the population of the two provinces is about 1,500,000. The name of Flanders formerly belonged to a much wider tract of country; and it was from that part that the ingenious artisans and weavers came, who first made England a manufacturing country.

FLANK, s. [flanc, Fr.] that part of an animal below the loins; the side of an army or fleet opposed either to front or rear. In Fortification, that part of a bastion which reaches from the curtain to the face.

TO FLANK, v. a. to attack the side of a battalion or fleet; to be placed so as to be opposite to the side of a bastion, fleet, or place.

FLANKER, s. a fortification jutting out so as to command the side of a body marching to an assault.

TO FLANKER, v. a. [flanquer, Fr.] to defend by lateral fortifications.

FLANNEL, s. [guelanen, Brit.] a kind of slight, loose, woolen stuff, very warm.

FLAP, s. [lappe, Sax.] any thing which hangs down broad and loose; the motion of any thing broad and loose, or moving on hinges; a blow given by the palm of the hand, &c. In Farriery, a disease in horses, wherein the lips swell on both sides their mouths, and are covered with blisters like the white of an egg. Fly flap, a piece of leather fastened to the end of a stick, used to kill flies with.

To FLAP, v. a. to beat with the palm of the hand, or some broad thin substance which hangs loose; to move with a noise made by any thing broad; to ply the wings up and down with a noise.

FLA'DRAGON, s. a play in which they catch raisins out of burning brandy, and extinguishing them by closing the mouth, eat them; the thing eaten at flapdragon.

FLA'PEARED, a. having loose and broad ears.

To FLARE, v. n. [onomatopoeic.] to glitter; to flutter with ostentatious and splendid show; to glitter offensively; to be overpowered with, or be in too much light; to waste away lavishly, applied to the consuming of a candle or taper.

FLASH, s. [onomatopoeic.] a sudden, quick, transitory, or short blaze, or burst of light; a sudden blaze, or burst of wit; a short, transient state.

To FLASH, v. n. to glitter; to shine with a quick and transient flame or light; to burst out into any irregularity or violence; to break out into wit, meritment, or bright thought.

FLA'SHERY, s. a man of more appearance of wit than reality.

FLASHILY, ad. in an ostentatious or showy manner.

FLA'SHY, a. empty; vain; ostentatious; showy; without reality or substance.

FLASK, s. [flaskus, Fr.] a thin bottle with a long and narrow neck, generally covered with wicker or withes; a small horn used to carry gunpowder in; the bed in the carriage of a piece of ordnance; a narrow and deep wicker basket.

FLASKET, s. [a diminutive of flask.] a wicker basket in which clothes are generally put by washerwomen after washing, and applied to other uses.

FLAT, a. [plat, Fr.] horizontal, or level; without any slope. Smooth, applied to surface. Level with the ground; lying along, or prostrate; thin and broad, or more broad than thick. In Painting, without relief, or swelling of the figures. Ininsipid, or unsavoury, applied to taste. Dull; without spirit; frigid, applied to writings. Figuratively, depressed; dejected; tasteless, or affording no pleasure; downright; plain.

FLAT, s. an even, level, smooth, and extended plain; a shallow; the broad part or side of a weapon; a surface without relief, protuberances, or prominences. Depression; sinking, applied to thought or language. In Music, a particular mark (b), implying that the notes which it stands against are to be played or sung half a note lower than they would be, if the mark of the flat were not there.

To FLAT, v. a. to make broad, smooth, and level. To make tasteless, or vapid; to make insipid, unpleasant, and disagreeable, applied to liquor, &c. To deprive of its vigour, spirit, or pleasure, applied to thought or language.—v. n. to grow smooth or flat, opposed to swell. To obstruct; or deprive of ardour, spirit, or zeal.

FLATLY, ad. horizontally, or without sloping, applied to situation. Smoothly, or without prominences, applied to surface. Without spirit, dully; plainly; in a downright manner.

FLATNESS, s. evenness; without sloping, applied to situation. Smoothness; without prominences, applied to surface. Deadness, or want of strength and taste, applied to liquors or food. Dejection, or languor, applied to the mind. Want of force, vigour, or spirit; dullness; frigidity, applied to sentiments or writings. The contrary of shrillness, or acuteness, applied to sound.

To FLATTEN, v. a. [flatin, Fr.] to beat down, or remove any prominences or protuberances in a surface; to make smooth; to beat level with the ground; to make tasteless, or spiritless; to deject; to dispirit.

FLATTER, a. the comparative degree of flat, formed after the manner of the Saxons, by adding er to the positive.

FLATTER, s. the person or instrument by which any unequal surface is made plain and level.

To FLATTER, v. a. [flatter, Fr.] to compliment with false praises; to please or soothe; to excite or raise false hopes and expectations.

FLATTERER, s. a person who endeavours to gain the favour of another by praising him for virtues he has not, by applauding his vices, and by servile and mean compliances with all his humours.

FLATTERY, s. a servile and fawning behaviour, attended with servile compliances and obsequiousness, in order to gain a person's favour.

FLATTISH, a. somewhat level, smooth, or more broad than thick.

FLATULENCE, FLATULENCY, s. windiness; fullness of wind; a swelling or uneasy sensation, occasioned by wind lodged in the intestines. Figuratively, emptiness; vanity; airiness; want of solidity, applied to sentiments.

FLATULENT, a. [flatulentus, Lat.] swelling with air; windy. Flatulent tumours, in Medicine, are such as easily yield to the touch, and readily return, by elasticity, to their first form. Figuratively, empty; vain; tumid; or swelling without solidity or substance.

FLATUOSITY, s. [flatus, Lat.] windiness; a swelling occasioned by an expansion of air included in any part of the body.

FLATUOUS, a. abounding with included air or wind; windy. FLATUS, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, wind gathered or included in any part of the body, generally caused by indigestion, or the rarefaction of the air included in the food we swallow.

FLATWISE, a. of a flat shape; with the broad or flat part downwards.

FLAVEL, JOHN, an eminent divine of the 17th century, who was one of the ejected ministers on St. Bartholomew's day, 1662. He returned to his flock at Dartmouth, on the declaration of tolerance by James II. and died in 1691, aged about 65 years. His works are yet much esteemed; and are the source of many popular illustrations and vindications of Calvinism.

To FLAUNT, v. n. to make an ostentatious, vain, or fluttering show in dress. Figuratively, to behave with pride.

FLAUNT, s. any thing loose and airy.

FLAVOUR, s. a relish, or a power of exciting an agreeable sensation on the organs of taste. Figuratively, sweetness, or agreeable and fragrant odour, applied to the smell.

FLAV'OROUS, a. agreeable to the taste; fragrant; odorous; or pleasing to the smell.

FLAW, s. [floh, Sax.] a crack, breach, fault, or defect, in any thing.

To FLAW, v. a. to crack. Figuratively, to break, or violate.

FLAWLESS, a. without crack or defect.

FLAWN, s. [flena, Sax.] a sort of custard, a pie baked in a dish.

To FLAWTER, v. a. to scrape or pare a skin.

FLAWY, a. full of cracks, flaws, or defects.

FLAX, s. [flax, Sax.] in Botany, a plant bearing a somewhat handsome blue flower; and having a very fibrous stem, which yields, by maceration and other processes, the fine white threads whence linen goods, lace, &c. are made. It is an important article in Russia, Holland, and Ireland; and used to be more so than it is now in England. Attempts are being made to introduce its more general cultivation here.

FLAX'DRESSER, s. he that prepares flax for the spinner.

FLAX'EN, a. made of flax; resembling flax in its colour and fineness.

FLAXMAN, JOHN, a very eminent modern sculptor, who rose by the force of his surprising genius from a mere modeller for the potteries, to be the regenerator of that branch of art in England. His great works are to be found in Westminster Abbey, and other museums of the distinguished and wealthy dead: but the productions most instinct with his own spirit, are his outline illustrations to Homer, Dante, Eschylus, &c.; the Shield of Achilles, and some bas-reliefs, and statues, or groups, now in private galleries. He has not lacked opponents and satirists, who could see nothing but the severely simple style of his compositions, and could not reach to the height of his conceptions. His fame has not yet reached its zenith. He travelled in Italy, and received great honour from various academies; and was appointed professor of sculpture to the Royal Academy in England. He died in 1826, aged 71 years.

To FLAY, v. a. [flaen, Belg.] to strip off the skin; to take off the pellicle, membrane, or skiu which covers any thing.

FLAYER, s. he that strips off the skin.

FLEA, (flee) s. [Sax.] in Entomology, a genus or family of parasitical insects, one species of which is somewhat too well known.

To FLEA, (flee) v. a. to cleanse or free from fleas.

FLEABANE, s. in Botany, an herb with compound flowers, of which one kind, common in marshy places, was formerly esteemed as a medicine for dysentery, and is one of the most regularly flowering plants at the beginning of autumn.

FLE/ABITE, (Aëbite), s. the red mark caused by a flea. Figuratively, a small or trifling hurt.

FLE/ABITTEN, (Aëbitten), a. stung or bitten by fleas.

FLEAK, (fleck), s. [flocus, Lat. see FLAKE,] a small thread, lock, or twist.

FLEAM, s. a small instrument used in bleeding cattle, by placing one of the lancets on the vein, and driving it in with a blow.

FLE/AWORT, s. in Botany, an herb, with compound flowers.

To FLECK, v. a. [flech, Teut.] to stop; to mark with a different colour.

To FLE/CKER, v. a. [see To FLECK,] to streak or mark with different colours.

FLED, the preter. and participle of To FLEE, to run away; not properly used for that of To FLY, to make use of wings.

To FLEDGE, v. a. [flederen, Belg.] to furnish with wings; to cover with feathers.

FLEDGED, part. or a. full feathered, able or qualified to fly.

To FLEE, pret. and part. fled, v. n. to run away from danger; to endeavour to avoid danger by flight. This word is now almost universally written fly; though, properly, to fly is to move with wings; to flee, to run away.

FLEECE, (flus, Sax.) the woolly covering shorn off the bodies of sheep; as much wool as is shorn off one sheep.

To FLEECE, v. a. to shear the wool off a sheep. Figuratively, to strip, plunder, to deprive of any thing valuable.

FLEE/CED, a. having or wearing fleeces; stripped or plundered.

FLEE/CY, a. woolly; covered with wool.

To FLEET, v. n. [fleidian, Sax.] to turn a thing to mockery or ridicule; to mock; to deride with insolence or impudence; to leer; to address with a deceitful grin of civility.

FLEER, s. mockery expressed either in word or look.

FLEER/ER, s. a mocker.

FLEET, FLEOT, FLOR, s. [fleet, Sax.] in the names of places, a bay or gulf.

FLEET, s. [flota, Sax.] denotes a company of ships of war belonging to any prince or state, also any number of trading ships sailing together, and destined to the same port or part of the world. The Fleet was formerly a prison in London, which is now dissolved.

FLEET, a. [flotior, Isl.] swift, applied to pace or motion.

To FLEET, v. n. [flotan, Sax.] to fly swiftly; to vanish; to be transitory, or of short duration.—v. a. to skim the water; to live merrily, or pass away with pleasure, applied to time. “Fleet the time carelessly,” Shakespeare.

FLEET/INGDISH, s. a thin dish used in dairies, to skim or take the cream off milk.

FLEET/LY, ad. swiftly; nimbly; with a quick motion.

FLEET/NESS, s. swiftness of motion.

FLEET/WOOD, CHARLES, one of the military leaders in the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century; who, sprung from an old family, entered the ranks in the beginning of the Parliamentary revolt, and rose to be lieutenant-general at the last battle, that at Worcester. On Irenaut's death, he married his widow, and so became Cromwell's son-in-law, and shortly after was sent as lord-deputy to Ireland, but recalled in the time when more vigorous dealing was needful than he seemed willing to exercise, and made one of the chief among the major-generals. During Richard Cromwell's feeble protectorate, Fleetwood, who equally with him needed a guide and counsellor, gave trouble enough. He escaped at the Restoration, but died soon after, in 1661, aged about 45 years.

FLESH, s. [fleo, Sax.] in Anatomy, the muscular part of an animal body, opposed to the skin, bones, or other parts. Animal food, opposed to that of fishes. Animal nature, opposed to spiritual nature. Mankind.

To FLESH, v. a. to initiate; to establish in any practice; to glut; to satiate.

FLE/SHHOOK, s. a hook or fork, used to take meat out of a pot or caldron.

FLE/SHLESS, a. without flesh.

FLE/SHLINESS, s. carnal or sensual passions and appetites; carnality.

FLE/SHLY, a. corporeal; human; opposed to spiritual; carnal.

FLE/SHMEAT, s. animal food; the flesh of animals prepared for food.

FLE/SHMONGER, s. one who deals in flesh.

FLE/SHY, a. plump; full of flesh; fat. Pulpous and plump, applied to fruits.

FLEET, past part. of To FLEET. Skimmed.

FLETA, is the name by which, among lawyers, is known an ancient work on English law, written in Latin, in about the beginning of the 14th century. The name is not that of the writer, who is unknown; but is a latinization of the Fleet, in which he was imprisoned when he wrote it.

FLE/TCHE, s. [fleche, Fr.] a person who makes bows and arrows.

FLETCHER, JOHN, the associate of Francis Beaumont in a collection of dramatic writings. He died in 1625, aged 49 years. See BEAUMONT.

FLETCHER, GILES and PHINEAS, two brothers, clergymen and poets of the first part of the 17th century. The first wrote Christ's Victory and Triumph, in Heaven and Earth, over and after Death, which if not a fine poem, contains many fine passages. The other wrote a most astounding metrical and rhymed Allegory on Man, called the Purple Island; and some other equally wonderful things; which some persons have been known to admire. Giles died in 1623, aged about 40 years; and Phineas in 1630, aged 75 years.

FLETCHER, ANDREW, of Saltoun, a political writer of Scotland, of the later Stuart reigns. He was engaged in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth; and afterwards fought in the Turkish wars on the side of Austria. He returned to Scotland in 1688, and wrote on that side of public questions which he had learned of his tutor, Bishop Burnet. He died in 1716, aged 63 years.

FLEURY, CARDINAL, the celebrated prime minister of France, under Louis XV. He obtained by his administration an honourable fame; and he left, in the royal library, a worthy monument. He died in 1743, aged 90 years.

FLEURY, ANNE, a French historian and divine of the reign of Louis XV. He commenced with the study of law, but afterwards entered the church. He had such a reputation for learning that he was appointed a coadjutor of Fenelon in the task of educating the young Dukes of Burgundy, Berri, and Anjou. Subsequently he became prior of Argenteuil, and royal confessor; the latter being no enviable post. His greatest work is an Ecclesiastical History, which is much esteemed. He died in 1723, aged 83 years.

FLEW, the preter. of To FLY.

FLEW, s. the large chaps of a deep-mouthed hound.

FLEW/ED, a. chapped; mouthed.

FLEX/ANIMOUS, a. [flecto and animus, Lat.] having power to change the disposition of the mind.

FLEXIB/ILITY, s. [flezibilité, Fr.] the quality of admitting to be bent; easiness of being persuaded.

FLEX/IBLE, a. [flecto, Lat.] possible or easy to be bent; pliant; obsequious; easily complying with; ductile, or manageable; to be formed by discipline and instruction.

FLEX/IBLNESS, s. a possibility or easiness to be bent, opposed to brittleness or stiffness; compliance; tractableness; easiness to be moved by advice, persuasion, or instruction.

FLE/XILE, a. pliant; easy to be bent, or turned out of its course.

FLEX/ION, s. the act of bending, or changing from a straight to a crooked line; a double; a bending; the state of a thing bent; a turn or motion towards any quarter or direction.

FLE/XOR, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, applied to the muscles which contract or bend the joints.

FLEX/OUOUS, a. winding; full of turnings and meanders; bending; crooked; variable; unstable.

FLEX/URE, s. the form or direction in which any thing is bent; the act of bending; the part bent; a joint; obsequious or servile cringing.

To FLICK/ER, v. a. [flicerian, Sax.] to flutter; to have a fluttering motion; to move the wings up and down with a quick motion.

FLIE, s. See FLY.

FLIER, s. one who runs from danger; that part of a machine which, being put into a swifter motion than the other part, equalizes, regulates, and continues the motion of the rest. “The fier of a jack.”

FLIGHT, (flit), s. [flight, Sax.] the act of running away, in order to avoid danger; the act of moving from one place to another, to escape danger; the act of moving by means of wings; a flock of birds moving in the air together; the birds produced in the same season; a volley or shower of weapons discharged at the same time. Figuratively, heat or soaring of imagination.

FLIGHTY, (flity) a. fleeting; swift in motion; wild; or fanciful.

FLIMSY, (flimzy) a. weak; feeble; mean; spiritless. Without strength, body, or stiffness, applied to manufactures.

To FLINCH, v. n. to shrink from any suffering, pain, or danger; to withdraw from pain or danger. In Shakespeare it signifies to fail. "If I break time, or flinch in property."

FLINCHER, s. he who shrinks or fails in any affair.

FLINDERS, MATTHEW, an eminent English navigator of the last generation. His first attempts were made in New Holland, where, with a companion of similar disposition, he discovered Bass's Straits, and afterwards explored other unvisited parts of that great island. He was in the navy, and was appointed the commander of a government exploring expedition, with which he revisited those parts, and completed his survey. His adventures on this voyage subsequently are most exciting and romantic; and they wore his life completely out. He was wrecked, but effected the deliverance of his crew with admirable skill. Returning home, he was seized by the French governor of the Mauritius, and kept a prisoner by him for three years. He died soon after his return, after having prepared a narrative of his voyages and discoveries, in 1814, aged about 45 years.

To FLING, v. a. preter. and part. flang; to cast or throw from the hand; to dart or throw with violence; to scatter; to move forcibly; to cast reproach; to eject or cast away as useless or hurtful. To fling down, to throw upon the ground with force; to demolish or destroy. To fling off, to baffle in the chase; to defeat of a prey.—v. n. to flounce; to wince.

FLING, s. the act of throwing or casting; the space or distance to which any thing is thrown or cast; a gibe; a contemptuous sneer or remark.

FLINGER, s. one who throws a thing; one who casts a contemptuous sneer at a person or thing.

FLINT, s. [Sax.] in Geology, a kind of stone found in the form of seams, nodules, and layers, in the chalk formation, the layers being found at very regular intervals in the upper beds. In its native state it is of a deep black colour, and consists chiefly of silicon. It contains numerous fossils enclosed in it, and exhibits distinct traces of spongy structure under a powerful microscope; whence modern geologists assign it a spongy origin. Gravel-beds are chiefly composed of flint boulders, which have been washed out of the chalk, as those forming the shingle-beaches on some of our eastern coasts have been. A gun-flint, is a small piece of this stone, broken in a flat square form, with one bevelled edge, and fitted into the cock of a gun, for the purpose of striking a spark into the pan from the steel flap covering it. The use of these flints are superseded now by the percussion caps. Figuratively, any thing remarkably hard, impenetrable, or obdurate.

FLINT, Flintshire, the chief town of the county. It is seated on the Dee, and is 193 miles from London. Pop. 2860.

FLINTSHIRE, a county of North Wales, lying on the Irish Sea, and the large bay at the mouth of the river Dee, which divides it from Cheshire; and bounded by Cheshire and Denbighshire. It is about 33 miles in length, and from 7 to 10 in breadth. Part of Flintshire stretches E. of the Dee, a tract about 9 miles in length, and from 5 to 8 across, insulated by Cheshire, Shropshire, and Denbighshire. It is divided into 5 hundreds. The northern part produces wheat; there is also much wood. The cows, though small, yield a great quantity of milk, and are excellent beef. They have also honey, of which they make mead, a liquor much used in those parts. The principal rivers are the Dee, Clwyd, Wheler, Sevon, Elwy, and Alun. The valleys contain coal and freestone, and the hills lead and calamine, with vast quantities of limestone, but no flint. The principal trade is mining and smelting. The detached part is mostly a level country. Pop. 66,910. Flint is its chief town. It returns 2 members to parliament.

FLINTY, a. made of flint; abounding in flints or stones. Figuratively, strong; hard of heart; cruel; not to be penetrated or moved by entreaties, or the view of misery.

FLIPP, s. [a cant word,] a drink used in ships, made of spirits, beer, and sugar.

FLIPPANT, a. [from flap,] nimble; moving quickly, applied to the tongue. Pert; talkative.

FLIPPANTLY, ad. in a pert, talkative, or fluent manner.

To FLIRT, v. a. to throw any thing with a jerk, or quick elastic motion; to move with quickness.—v. n. to jeer or gibe at one; to turn about perpetually; to be unsteady and fluttering.

FLIRT, s. a quick, sudden, elastic motion; a sudden trick; a young, fluttering, gadding lass.

FLIRTATION, s. a quick, sprightly motion; empty attention to the female sex.

To FLIT, v. n. [flitter, Dan. see To FLEET,] to fly away; to remove or migrate; to flutter or rove on the wing; to be transient, flux, or unstable.

FLITCH, s. [Ayke, Dan.] the side of a bog, without the head, salted and cured.

FLUTTERMOUSE, s. in Natural History, a bat, or fluttering mouse.

FLUTTING, s. [flit, Sax.] a reproachful accusation; an offence, or fault.

FLUX, v. coarroued from flax, Sax.] down; far; soft hair.

FLUXWEED, s. in Botany, a kind of watercress.

To FLOAT, (flot) v. n. [flotter, Fr.] to swim on the surface of the water; to move easily in the air; to pass in a light and swimming manner.

FLOAT, (flot) s. the act of flowing, opposed to the ebb or reflux of the tide. Any thing contrived so as to swim and sustain a burden on the water; the cork, or quill, by which the bite of a fish is discovered.

FLOATY, a. buoyant and swimming on the surface.

FLOCK, s. [floc, Sax.] a company of birds or sheep, distinguished from herds, which are of oxen. Figuratively, a multitude of men. Also a lock of wool.

To FLOCK, v. n. to gather in crowds or great numbers.

To FLOG, v. a. [flagrum, Lat.] to whip with a rod.

FLOOD, (flud) s. [flod, Sax.] a body of water; a sea or river; a deluge, inundation, or overflowing of water; a flow of tide.

To FLOOD, (flud) v. a. to cover with waters.

FLOODGATE, (fludgate) s. a gate or shutter, by which any water-course is stopped, or let loose again, at pleasure.

FLOOK, s. [flup, Teut.] the broad or bearded part of an anchor, which takes hold of the ground. In Natural History, a flounder; a flat river fish.

FLOOR, (flor, Sax.) that part of a house on which a person treads.

To FLOOR, v. a. to cover that part of a room a person walks on with planks.

FLOORING, s. the matter with which that part of a room is laid on which a person walks; the bottom.

To FLOP, v. a. [from flap,] to clap the wings with a noise; to play with a noisy motion of a broad body; to let down the broad parts or flap of a hat.

FLORAL, a. [flor, Lat.] relating to Flora, or to flowers.

FLORENCE, the capital of Tuscany in Italy, is situated in the middle of the valley of the Arno, which divides it into two unequal parts, and over which it has four bridges. The surrounding country forms an amphitheatre of fertile hills, adorned with villages, country-houses, and gardens. It is handsomely built in general; and the squares and public edifices are particularly fine: amongst these may be specified, the cathedral; the palazzo Pitti, which was the residence of the Medici family, and contains great numbers of magnificent works of art, and curiosities, and other articles of vertu, and which is the grand-ducal residence; the Ponte di Trinita, built of white marble, and adorned with statues representing the four seasons; and other churches, and official buildings. The whole city is adorned with fountains, statues, &c. It has numerous schools of art, science, and literature. It is about 150 miles from Rome. Population, about 50,000. Lat. 43. 46. N. Long. 11. 17. E.

FLORES, the name of one of the Azores. And also of a large island of the Indian Ocean, lying immediately S. of Celebes, in the chain of islands stretching from Sumatra towards the N. part of New Holland. It is about 200 miles long, and 40 broad. A range of mountains, with several volcanoes in it, passes through the island. The Portuguese have a settlement on it.

FLORET, s. [a diminutive of flower,] one of the small flowers composing a compound or incorporated flower.

FLORIAN, JEAN PIERRE CLARIS DE, a French writer of some notoriety, in the latter half of the last century. He was in the army before the Revolution, and after some time spent in exile, during the earlier stages, he returned and was imprisoned, but soon set at liberty. He wrote some good fables, dramas, &c., but his Nana Pompinus, being used in schools, has given him his name. He died in 1794, aged 39 years.

FLORID, a. [flor, Lat.] productive of, or covered with, flowers. Bright or lively, applied to colours. Flushed with red, applied to the complexion. Embellished with rhetorical figures, applied to style.

FLORIDA, one of the United States, N. America. It forms that peculiar promontory at the S. of the States, which projects towards Cuba, and closes in the Gulf of Mexico; and it is bounded by Alabama and Georgia. It is 380 miles in length, 250 miles in width at the N. part, and 50 in the S. It is divided into 20 counties. The face of the country is uneven, but it has no mountains. It has extensive pine forests, and barren tracts, but some parts of the table lands have a very fertile soil. The chief river is St. John's. On the W. coast of the promontory are many good harbours; and along the shores are many islands, the chief group being the Florida Keys. Timber, cotton, some corn, and fruits, are its chief productions. It has but few manufactures, but there are five banks. Tallahassee is the seat of government. Pop. 54,477, of which 25,717 are slaves. This State was admitted to the Union in 1845.

FLORIDITY, s. freshness or redness of colour.

FLORIDNESS, s. freshness of colour. A rhetorical embellishment, applied to style.

FLORIFEROUS, a. [flor and fero, Lat.] producing flowers.

FLORIN, s. [Fr.] a coin, so called because first struck by the Florentines. That of Germany is valued at 2s. 4d., that of Spain at 2s. 4½d., that of Palermo and Sicily at 2s. 6d., and that of Holland at 2s.

FLORIST, s. [fleuriste, Fr.] a person curious and skilled in the names, nature, and culture of flowers.

FLORULENT, a. [flor, Lat.] flowery; blossoming.

FLORUS, L. ANNEUS, a Roman historian, who lived in the reigns of Trajan and Adrian. His work is a mere epitome, yet has some value, as completing some portions of the history, though in no very satisfactory manner. He lived in the 2nd century A. D.

FLOSCULOUS, a. [flosculus, Lat.] composed, or having the nature or form, of flowers.

To FLOTE, v. a. to skim.

FLOTSON, s. in Law, goods that float, without an owner, on the sea.

To FLOUNCE, v. n. [plossen, Belg.] to move with violence in water or mire; to struggle or dash in the water. To move with passion or anger, applied to persons. To adorn with flourishes, applied to dress.

FLOUNCE, s. any thing sewed to a garment by way of ornament, and hanging loose so as to swell and shake.

FLOUNDER, s. [flynder, Dan.] in Natural History, a small flat fish.

To FLOUNDER, v. n. [from flounce,] to struggle with violent and irregular motions, like a horse that strives to disengage himself from mire.

FLOWR, s. the fine white powder of wheat, of which bread is made.

To FLOWRISH, (florish) v. n. [floreo, Lat.] to bloom, or be in blossom; to be in vigour; to be in a prosperous state; to move in eddies, circles, or wanton and irregular motions. To make use of rhetorical figures; to display with vanity or ostentation, applied to language. In Music, to play an overture. In Writing, to form the decorations or ornaments of penmanship. In Fencing, to move a weapon in circles or quick vibrations.

FLOWRISH, (florish) s. any embellishment. Figuratively, beauty; an ostentatious display of wit or intellectual abilities. In Penmanship, figures or ornaments formed by lines curiously interwoven.

FLOWRISHER, (florisher) s. a mere boaster; one who is in the height of prosperity.

FLOWRY, a. covered with the fine dust or meal of corn.

To FLOWT, v. a. [flyuten, Belg.] to mock, deride, or insult with contemptuous mockery.—v. n. to behave with contempt; to sneer.

FLOWT, s. a mock; a jeer; a contemptuous and insulting expression or action.

FLOWTER, s. a person who derides, mocks, or jeers another.

To FLOW, (flō) v. a. [flouan, Sax.] to run or spread, applied to water. To move or be in motion, opposed to standing water. To rise or swell, applied to the tide. To melt, applied to the effect of heat on metals, wax, &c. To be full of liquor, applied to drinking vessels. Figuratively, to proceed from as an effect; to write smoothly, or speak eloquently.

FLOW, (flō) s. the rise or swell of water; a sudden plenty or abundance. "A flow of spirits," Pope. An uninterrupted stream, or continuation of words.

FLOWER, s. [fleur, Fr.] in Botany, that part of plants containing the organs by which the species is propagated. It consists of an outward covering, which assumes very various forms, and is known by the general name of calyx; the many-formed and many-hued corolla; the nectaries; the stamens, in which the fertilizing powder, or pollen, is secreted; the pistilla, which convey the life to the seed-vessel and its contents. In some plants the stamens are in one flower, and the pistilla and seed-vessel in another; and these flowers are sometimes, also, on separate plants. Composite flowers are groups of distinct florets, surrounded by a common involucre, or calyx. Figuratively, an ornament or embellishment; the prime or most beautiful part of life; the most excellent part of any thing. In Chemistry, substances sublimated to a dry powder.

To FLOWER, v. n. [fleurir, Fr.] to put forth flowers or blossoms; to bloom, or be in blossom; to flourish, or be in a prosperous state. To froth, ferment, or mantle, applied to liquor.

FLOWER DE LUCE, s. [fleur de lys, Fr.] in Heraldry, a bearing representing the lily, called the queen of flowers, and the true hieroglyphic of royal majesty; but of late it has been borne in several coats. In Botany, the flag, of which there are very many species.

FLOWERET, s. [fleuriet, Fr.] a small or imperfect flower.

FLOWER-GARDEN, s. a garden in which flowers are principally cultivated.

FLOWERINESS, s. the state of abounding in flowers or ornaments.

FLOWERY, a. abounding with, adorned with, or full of, flowers.

FLOWINGLY, (flōingly) ad. with readiness, quickness, or volubility of speech; with abundance.

FLOWN, (flōn) part. of To FLEE or FLY; gone away; run away; puffed up, or elated.

FLUATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with fluoric acid.

FLUCTUANT, part. [fluctus, Lat.] wavering; uncertain; doubting.

To FLUCTUATE, v. n. to roll to and fro like waves; to float backwards and forwards; to move with uncertainty and hasty motion; to hesitate; to be irresolute, undetermined, or in doubt.

FLUCTUATION, s. the motion of waves and water backwards and forwards; a state of suspense, irresolution, or uncertainty.

FLUE, s. a small pipe or chimney to convey air, heat, or smoke; soft down, or fur, easily wafted by the wind.

FLUELLIN, s. in Botany, an herb, with strap-shaped leaves and white blossoms, found in high pastures. Also a sort of speedwell.

FLUENCY, s. the quality of flowing, or continuing in motion without interruption or intermission; smoothness of style or numbers; readiness, copiousness, or volubility of speech.

FLUENT, a. [fluō, Lat.] liquid; flowing; in motion; ready; easy flowing; copious, applied to speech.

FLUENT, s. a stream, torrent, or running water.

FLUENTLY, ad. readily; without obstruction or difficulty.

FLUID, a. having the parts easily separable; flowing like water.

FLUID, s. that form of matter whose parts yield to the smallest force impressed, and, by yielding, are easily moved among each other.

FLUIDITY, s. [fluidité, Fr.] a quality of a body, whereby the parts are so disposed as to slide over each other all manner of ways, and give way to the least pressure.

FLUIDNESS, s. that quality in bodies opposed to firmness, by which they change their form, or yield to the least pressure.

FLUKE, s. that part of an anchor which fastens in the ground.

FLUMMERY, s. a kind of food made of oatmeal and water, boiled or evaporated to a consistence. Figuratively, mere pretence; flattery.

FLUNG, particip. and preter. of TO FLING; thrown or cast, followed by in, into, down, from, and to.

FLUOR, s. [Lat.] In Mineralogy, a transparent spar, called also fluote of lime.

FLUORIC, a. belonging to fluor. Fluoric acid, in Chemistry, is an acid of a very peculiar nature, formed in the fluor spar. It has a remarkable power of corroding glass. It is now known as hydro-fluoric acid.

FLUORINE, s. in Chemistry, a substance evolved from fluorides, and fluates, in the form of a gas, which is of a yellowish brown colour, and in odour resembles chlorine and burnt sugar. It bleaches. It does not act on glass, but combines directly with gold.

FLURRY, s. a gust; a hasty, sudden blast, or storm of wind; hurry; a violent commotion or emotion of mind.

TO FLUSH, v. n. [fluyzen, Belg.] to flow with violence; to come in haste; to produce a reddish colour in the face, by a sudden flow or flux of blood.—v. a. to elate, or elevate.

FLUSH, a. fresh; full of vigour.

FLUSH, s. an efflux; a sudden impulse; a violent flow. In Gaming, a certain number of cards of the same sort.

FLUSHER, s. in Ornithology, the butcher-bird, a small bird of prey.

FLUSHING, a fortified sea-port of Holland. It is situated on the island of Walcheren, and has an admirable harbour, the entrance of which is protected by two moles. It has a good foreign trade. Population, under 10,000. Lat. 51. 29. N. Long. 3. 35. E.

FLUSHING, a town of New York, United States, standing at the head of a bay of the same name, on Long Island. Here is St. Paul's College, an episcopal seminary. It is 235 miles from Washington. Pop. 4124.

TO FLUSTER, v. a. [from To Flush,] to make hot and red with drinking.

FLUTE, s. [Fr.] a wind instrument, divided into the common and German. The common flute is played by putting one end into the mouth, and breathing into it. The German flute, the most melodious of the two, and most resembling the human voice, is not put into the mouth, but sounded by a hole a little distant from the upper end, the end itself being stopped with a stopper or plug. In Architecture, perpendicular channels or cavities cut along the shaft of a column or pilaster, and resembling the inside of a flute when cut in half.

TO FLUTE, v. a. to cut channels in columns or pilasters.

FLUTED, a. having channels or hollows.

TO FLUTTER, v. n. [floteran, Sax.] to move the wings with a quick and trembling motion; to move about with great show and bustle, but with no consequence; to be in agitation; to be in a state of uncertainty; to beat quick and irregularly. To palpitate, applied to the heart. To hurry the mind, or put into confusion, or a violent commotion.

FLUTTER, s. vibration; undulation, or a quick and irregular motion; confusion; an irregular or disordered position.

FLUVIATIC, a. [fluvaticus, Lat.] belonging to, or inhabiting rivers.

FLUX, s. [Fr.] the act of flowing; the state of passing away, and giving place to others. In Medicine, an extraordinary issue or evacuation; one form is the dysentery. In Hydrography, a regular periodical motion of the sea, happening twice in twenty-four hours, whereby the water is raised, and driven violently against the shores. Figuratively, a concourse or confluence; the state of being melted; that which facilitates the melting of a body when mixed with it.

FLUX, a. [fluxus, Lat.] inconstant; not durable; flowing; maintained by a constant succession of parts.

TO FLUX, v. a. to melt. In Medicine, to salivate; to evacuate by spitting.

FLUXION, s. [fluxio, Lat.] the act of flowing; the matter that flows. Fluxions, in Arithmetic, is the name given by Sir Isaac Newton to the differential calculus.

TO FLY, v. n. pret. flew, or fled; part. fled, or flown; [fliegen, Sax.] to move through the air by means of wings; to ascend in the air; to pass or perform a journey with great expedition; to burst asunder; to break, or shiver; to attack or spring with violence; to fall on suddenly. To fly in the face of a person, is to insult him with opprobrious language, or any act of outrage; to act in defiance. To fly out, to burst into passion; to start violently from any direction. To let fly, to discharge a gun or other fire-arms.—v. a. to run away, or attempt to escape any danger; to avoid, to shun.

FLY, [fliege, Sax.] in Natural History, a very numerous genus of small two-winged insects. In Mechanics, that part of a machine which, when put into motion, continues it with great swiftness, and thereby regulates and preserves the motion of the other parts. In Magnetism, that part of a mariner's compass on which the thirty-two winds are drawn, over which the needle is placed, and fastened underneath.

TO FLYBLOW, v. a. to taunt with flies; to fill with maggots. FLYBOAT, s. a kind of nimble, light vessel for sailing. FLYER, s. one that runs away from battle, or endeavours to escape danger by flight; any thing that cuts its passage through the air by means of wings; that part of a jack which moves round on a pivot horizontally, and thereby keeps the other parts in motion.

FLYING-FISH, s. in Ichthyology, a species of fish, about the size of a herring, with membranaceous wings, found between the tropics. FOAL, (föhl) s. [föla, Sax.] the offspring or young of a mare, or other beast of burden. The word colt is now applied to a young horse.

TO FOAL, (föhl) v. a. to bring forth young, applied to a mare, or other beast of burden. FOAM, (förm) s. [foam, Sax.] the white spittle which appears in the mouth of a high-mettled horse.

TO FOAM, (förm) v. n. to have the mouth covered with white frothy spittle; to froth; to gather foam. To be in violent emotions of passion, alluding to a high-mettled horse, who foams at the mouth when checked, or under unwilling restraint.

FOAMY, (föngy) a. covered with froth, or white frothy spittle. FOB, s. [fuppe, Teut.] a small pocket made in the inside of the waistband of a pair of breeches, wherein the watch is usually carried.

TO FOB, v. a. [fippen, Teut.] to cheat; to trick; to defraud by some low stratagem; to shift off.

FOCAL, a. belonging to a focus.

FOCIL, s. [focile, Fr.] the greater or less bone between the knee and ankle, or elbow and wrist.

FOCUS, s. in Geometry and conic sections, is applied to certain points in the parabola, ellipsis, and hyperbola, where the rays reflected from all parts of these curves concur and meet. In Optics, it is the point wherein rays are collected, after they have undergone reflection or refraction.

FODDER, s. [föthre, Sax.] dry food stored for cattle against winter.

TO FODDER, v. a. to feed or supply with dry food.

FODDERER, s. the person who supplies cattle with dry food. FOE, s. [fah, Sax. fæc, Scot.] an enemy or person who is bent to hurt one, either in war or private life. An adversary; an opponent, applied to opinions.

FÖTUS, (fétus) s. [Lat.] a child in the womb after it is perfectly formed.

FOG, s. [Dan.] a thick cloud of watery vapour floating near the surface of the earth.

FOGGINESS, s. the state of being dark or misty by a low cloud consisting of watery vapours, floating near the surface of the earth or water.

FOGGY, a. full of dark, cloudy, and moist vapours.

FOH, interject. an interjection used to express abhorrence, or offence received by some object, meaning that it gives great offence, and is excessively disagreeable.

FOH, in Chinese Theology, a name by which the supreme deity is worshipped. In other parts of Asia, the name is Boodh, or Buddha. See that name.

FOIBLE, s. [Fr.] a weak or blind side; a natural infirmity or failing.

TO FOIL, v. a. [affoller, old Fr.] to defeat or get the better of an enemy, but not a complete victory.

FOIL, s. a defeat or miscarriage; an advantage gained over an enemy, not amounting to a complete victory. Something of another colour, used by jewellers to augment the lustre, or heighten the colour, of a stone or diamond.—[fouiller, Fr.] a blunt sword used in fencing.

FOILER, s. one who has gained an advantage over an enemy.

TO FOIN, v. n. [foindre, Fr.] to push or make a thrust with a weapon.

FOIN, s. a thrust or push with a weapon.

FOININGLY, ad. in a pushing manner.

TO FOIST, v. a. [fousser, Fr.] to insert something not in an original; to interpolate.

FOISTY, a. See FUSRY.

FOIX, the capital of the depart. of Arriège, France; situated on a river of the same name, over which is a bridge, at the foot of the Pyrenees. There are the ruins of the castle of the former Counts of Foix. It is not a large nor handsome town, but it carries on very useful manufactures in iron and woollen goods. It is 450 miles from Paris. Population, about 4000.

FOIX, GASTON DE, the name of several celebrated persons in French history. One, in the 14th century, is described as the very mirror of knighthood, who fought against Edward III. of England when he invaded France, and aided subsequently to suppress the revolt of the Jacquerie. Another, in the end of the 15th century, was a very famous general, who commanded for Louis XII. in Italy, and fell at Ravenna, in 1512.

FOKINGHAM, Lincolnshire. It stands on a rising ground, in a wholesome air, with abundance of springs about it. It is 107 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 820.

FOLD, s. [fald, Sax.] the ground where sheep are confined. Figuratively, a flock of sheep.—[fild, Sax.] a boundary or limit; a double; one part turned over and lying upon another; the plait or doubling of a garment. Hence fild, in composition, signifies the doubling the same number twice, or the same quantity added; thus, two-fold is twice the quantity; twenty-fold, twenty times repeated.

TO FOLD, v. a. [faldan, Sax.] to pen or enclose sheep in a fold; to double; to plait or turn back a piece of cloth, so as to double over and cover another part. Figuratively, to enclose, to include, to shut; to embrace with the arms clasped round a person.

FOLIAECEOUS, a. [folium, Lat.] consisting of thin pieces, laminae, or leaves.

FOLIAGE, s. [feuillage, Fr.] an assemblage of flowers, branches, leaves, &c. In Architecture, the representation of such flowers, branches, leaves, &c. as are used for embellishments, on capitals, friezes, or pediments.

TO FOLIATE, v. a. to beat gold into thin plates, laminae, or leaves.

FOLIATING, applied to looking-glasses, is the spreading a composition that will firmly adhere to the back of the glass, and reflect images. The composition is called foil, and made of quicksilver, mixed with tin, and other ingredients.

FOLIATION, s. the act of beating into thin leaves. In Botany, a collection of those transitory or fugacious coloured leaves, called petals, which constitute the compass or body of a flower, and sometimes guard the fruit which succeeds the foliation, as in apples and pears, and sometimes stand within it, as in cherries and apricots; for these being tender and pulposus, and coming forth in the spring, would be injured by the weather if they were not lodged up within their flowers.

FOLIO, s. [Lat.] a large book whose pages are formed by a sheet once doubled. In Commerce, a page or leaf in an account or book.

FOLIOMORT, s. See FEUILLEMORT.

FOLK, s. [folc, Sax.] people, used only in familiar discourse; mankind in general; any kind of persons.

FOLKMOIE, s. in ancient English History, a general assembly of the people.

FOLKSTONE, Kent. It stands on hilly ground, and the streets are narrow and incommodious. A multitude of fishing-smacks belong to the harbour, and some vessels are built here. It is 72 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 4413.

FOLLICLE, s. [folliculus, Lat.] in Anatomy, a cavity, bag, or vesicle in a body, with strong coats. In Botany, the seed-vessel case, husk, or cover wherein several kinds of seeds are enclosed.

TO FOLLOW, (full) v. a. [folgian, Sax.] to go after or be-bind a person; to pursue as an enemy; to attend on as a servant; to succeed or happen after in order of time; to proceed from, as a consequence or effect; to imitate, or copy; to observe, to assent, or give credit to; to attend to; to be busied with; to confirm by new endeavours.

FOLLOWER, (fuller) s. one who comes or goes after another; a dependant; attendant; associate; companion; a scholar; imitator; or copier.

FOLLY, s. [folie, Fr.] the act of drawing false conclusions from just principles; a weakness or want of understanding; an act of negligence or passion, unbecoming the gravity of wisdom, or the dictates of cool and unbiassed reflection.

TO FOMENT, v. a. [fomentor, Lat.] to cherish with heat; to bathe with warm lotions or liquors. Figuratively, to encourage; to support; to cherish.

FOMENTATION, s. [fomentation, Fr.] in Medicine, a partial bathing, or applying hot fannels to any part dipped in medicated decoctions; the liquor of decoctions formed from boiling medicinal ingredients, with which any part is to be fomented or bathed.

FOMENTER, s. an encourager or supporter.

FOND, a. [a, [a word of uncertain etymology,] foolish; silly; indiscreet; trifling; or valued by folly; foolishly tender and indulgent; loving to an excess; taking too much delight in, and too eagerly coveting, a thing.

TO FOND, FONDLE, v. a. to treat with great indulgence, or with an indiscreet excess of love.

FONDLING, s. a person used with too much indulgence, and beloved to an excess.

FONDLY, ad. foolishly, indiscreetly, injudiciously; with an excess of tenderness, indulgence, or love.

FONDNESS, s. foolishness; weakness; want of judgment; an excess of love, indulgence, and tenderness.

FONT, s. [font, Lat.] a stone or marble vessel, in which the water used in baptism is contained in a church.

FONTAINEBLEAU, a town in the department of Seine et Marne, France. It is remarkable for its magnificent palace, formerly a hunting seat of the kings of France. It stands in the midst of a forest, 42 miles from Paris. Pop. 8500.

FONTAINE, JOHN DE LA, the famous French fable-writer. His life was passed in the families of a succession of wealthy ladies who admired his talents, and perhaps also his laziness. He had the friendship of Racine, Bouteau, Molière, and the other eminent men of his day. He wrote other poems and tales beside his Fables; and died in 1695, aged 74 years.

FONTANA, the name of two brothers, architects, of the end of the 16th century, in Italy. John was the eldest, but Dominic by far the most celebrated. He was employed by some of the popes and by the king of Naples. He built various parts of the papal palaces, and erected the obelisk that stands in front of St. Peter's at Rome. He died in 1607, aged 64 years. Several other eminent men have borne this name, and amongst them, the maker of the splendid anatomical models in wax at Florence.

FONTANEL, s. [fontanelle, Fr.] in Surgery, an issue, or artificial ulcer formed to discharge humours.

FONTENELLE, BERNARD LE BOVIER DE, a distinguished French writer of the 17th and 18th centuries. He held the post of secretary to the Academy of Sciences for 42 years. His works embrace a wide field; but his philosophy and his science was far from profound; whilst his poems, and essays on various subjects, display both reading and elegance of style. He was essentially a popular writer, aiming to diffuse the knowledge which was the result of the efforts of greater and more original minds. He died in 1757, aged nearly 100 years.

FOOD, s. [foed, Sax.] whatever can be used for the purpose of supporting animal life, by undergoing the processes connected with digestion. Figuratively, any thing which cherishes.

FOODFUL, a. fruitful; or plentifully producing things proper for the nourishment of animals.

FOODY, a. eatable; fit for food. "Into well-sew'd sacks pour'd foody meal," Chapman.

FOOL, s. [fol, Brit. fol, Isl. and Fr.] one who has not the use of reason or judgment. Figuratively, one who counterfeits folly; a buffoon, or jester. In Scripture, an idolater; a wicked person. In common conversation, used as a word of extreme contempt and stinging reproach. To play the fool, is to trifle, or play pranks, or act like one void of understanding. To make a fool, is to raise a person's expectations, and disappoint them.

To FOOL, v. n. to trifle; to toy; to idle.—v. a. to deceive; to cheat, used with out of; to infatuate.

FOOLERY, s. habitual folly; an act of folly or indiscretion; an object of folly.

FOOLHARDINESS, s. indiscreet courage or boldness.

FOOLHARDY, a. daring, bold, or adventurous, without discretion or prudence.

FOOLISH, a. void of understanding; indiscreet; ridiculous; unreasonable.

FOOLISHLY, ad. weakly; without understanding; indiscreetly.

FOOLISHNESS, s. folly; a foolish practice.

FOOT, (commonly, with its derivatives and compounds, pron. fit, fitball, fitting, fitman, &c.) s. plural feet; [fit, Sax.] that part of an animal whereon it stands or walks. In Anatomy, the extremity of the leg. Figuratively, that part with which any thing is supported, in the same manner as the foot supports the body of an animal; the lower part or base. The infantry of an army, opposed to cavalry. In poetry, a certain number of long and short syllables constituting a distinct part of a line. A measure consisting of 12 inches. On foot means walking, opposed to travelling on horseback, or in a carriage. To set on foot is to begin, to give rise to.

To FOOT, v. a. to spurn, kick, or strike with the foot; to settle; to plan. In Dancing, to make a noise with the foot resembling the tune played by the music; to tread.

FOOTBALL, s. a ball made of leather, and filled with wool, by means of a bladder included in the inside, and driven by the foot.

FOOTBOY, s. an attendant in livery.

FOOTCLOTH, s. a sumpter cloth.

FOOTE, SAMUEL, a comic writer and actor of the last century, who gained great renown for his satiric wit. His celebrity was of a very low order; and his proceedings were far from being marked by correct principle. Some of his bon-mots serve to preserve his name from being forgotten. He died in 1777, aged 56 years.

FOOTED, a. shaped in the foot.

FOOTTHOLD, s. a space to hold the foot; space on which one may tread surely.

FOOTING, s. ground for the foot or any thing to rest on; foundation; basis; support; root; place; tread; walk; or the sound of a person's feet in walking; a particular manner of moving the feet in dancing, so as to echo the sound of the tune.

FOOTMAN, s. a soldier that marches and fights on ground, opposed to a horseman. A menial servant in livery.

FOOTMANSHIP, s. the art or office of a runner.

FOOTPACE, s. a slow manner of walking.

FOOTPAD, s. a highwayman that robs on foot.

FOOTPATH, s. a narrow way which will admit only foot-passengers, not being wide enough for horses or carriages.

FOOTPOST, s. a post or messenger that travels on foot.

FOOTSTALL, [fitstall], s. a woman's stirrup.

FOOTSTEP, s. an impression left by the foot in treading. Figuratively, any trace, mark, token, or sign.

FOOTSTOOL, s. a stool whereon a person places his feet.

FOP, s. [a word probably made by chance, and therefore without etymology,] a person of weak understanding, and great pretence to knowledge and wisdom; or rather a person affecting delicacy too much both in dress and behaviour.

FOPDOODLE, s. a fool.

FOPFLING, s. a petty fop; a coxcomb of the second order.

FOPPERY, s. impertinence, or folly; affectation of show in dress, and importance without solidity; foolery; affectation; or affected trifling.

FOPPISH, a. foolish; idle; vain; vain in show; gaudy; attended with too great an affectation of ceremony in behaviour.

FOPPISHLY, ad. after the manner of a fop; vainly; ostentatiously.

FOPPISHNESS, s. showy, ostentatious, and affected vanity. FOR, prep. [for, Sax.] because, or on account of. "That which we, for our unworthiness, are unworthy to crave," Hooker. With respect or regard to; concerning. "For bulk, more insects," Tate. Used often with as before it in this sense; instead of; in the character or likeness of. "Embrace for truth," Locke.

"Lay for dead," Dryd. "He refused not to die for those who killed him," Boyle. Conducive or tending to. "It is for the general good," Tillot. Towards, or with intention of going to, a certain place. "We sailed directly for Genoa," Addis. In confirmation or establishment, applied to proofs. "There is a natural, immutable, and eternal reason for that which we call virtue," Tillot. Against, or as a remedy for. "Good for the tooth-ache," Garrets. Ready, fit, prepared, or proper. "If you be an undertaker, I am for you," Shak. In favour of; on the side of. "Aristotle is for poetical justice," Dennis. Fit; becoming. "Is it for you to ravage sea and land!" Dryd. Followed by all, it implies nothwithstanding; considered; or in proportion to. "He is not very tall, yet for his years he's tall," Shak.

FOR, conjunction, used to introduce and give reasons for something advanced before; because. Forasmuch as, implies since, or because. For why, because; for this reason that.

FORAGE, s. [fourage, Fr. and Tent.] in War, provisions for the horses and cattle.

To FORAGE, v. n. to go in search of forage.

FORAMINOUS, a. [foramen, Lat.] full of holes.

To FORBEAR, (forbare) v. n. pret. I forbore, part. forborne; [forbaran, Sax.] to cease from action; to pause, or delay; to decline; to omit, or abstain from voluntarily; to endure with patience.—v. a. to spare; to treat with clemency; to withhold.

FORBEARANCE, (forbrance) s. the act of patiently enduring provocation or offence; command of temper; intermission; suspension; lenity; delay of punishment.

FORBEARER, s. an intermitter; an interceptor of any thing.

FORBES, DUNCAN, a Scottish judge of the last century, who, having studied law at Edinburgh and on the continent, became president of the Court of Session. When the rebellion of 1745 occurred, he exerted himself strenuously to keep all he could from joining the Pretender; and received an ample return of neglect from the government he had served. He wrote several works of a religious character, which were highly esteemed; and died in 1747, aged 62 years.

To FORBID, v. a. pret. I forbade, part. forbidden, or forbid; [forbieden, Sax.] to prohibit any thing; to command a person not to perform a thing; to oppose; to hinder.

FORBIDNANCE, s. a prohibition; or command to abstain from any thing.

FORBIDDENLY, ad. in such a manner as is prohibited; in an unlawful manner.

FORBIDDING, part. raising abhorrence, aversion, or awe; obliging to keep a respectful distance.

FORBIN, CHEVALIER CLAUDE, an eminent French naval commander, who was engaged in the Siamese service, during the attempt made in the end of the 17th century to cultivate amicable relations with that Eastern kingdom, by Louis XIV. He was afterwards employed in services of distinction at home; and made the first effort to land the Pretender in this country. He died in 1733, aged 77 years.

FORCE, s. [force, Fr.] power; vigour; active power; strength of body; violence; validity; an armament; or a company of men or ships intended for war; warlike preparations, used generally in the plural; virtue, or efficacy; destiny; necessity; stress or emphasis of a sentence. In Horticulture, to obtain by the application of warmth, flowers, fruit, &c., before the natural time, and of a larger size.

To FORCE, v. a. [forcer, Fr.] to compel a person to do a thing against his will; to overpower by strength; to drive by violence; to draw or push by main strength; to get from by violence. In War, to take or enter a city by violence; to storm. In Natural Philosophy, it is the name of whatever causes motion or rest in bodies; the amount of which can be measured and brought within the compass of mathematics. Used with out, to extort a thing which should be concealed.

FORCED, part. obliged to do a thing involuntarily, and by compulsion. Wrested; unnatural, applied to the use of words.

FORCEFULLY, ad. violently; constrainedly; unaturally.

FORCEFUL, a. violent; strong; driven with great violence.

FORCEFULLY, ad. in a violent, impetuous, and rapid manner.

FORCELESS, a. without strength or force.

FORCEPS, s. [Lat.] in Surgery, an instrument opening like a pair of tongs, used to extract any thing out of wounds.

FORCER, s. that which drives, compels, or constrains by strength, power, or violence. In Mechanics, the embolus or piston of a pump working by pulsion or force, opposed to a sucker, which works by attraction.

FORCIBLE, a. strong; powerful; violent; or efficacious; of great influence or power; caused by force, violence, or compulsion, opposed to voluntary: valid; binding in law or conscience; obligatory.

FORCIBLENESS, s. the quality of effecting any end by compulsion, or violence.

FORCIBLY, ad. strongly; powerfully; so as to make some impression, or produce some effect, by irresistible power or force.

FORCIPATED, a. [forceps, Lat.] formed like a pair of pincers, so as to open and shut.

FORD, s. [Sax.] a shallow part of a river, where it may be crossed on foot.

To FORD, v. a. to pass a river without swimming, or on foot.

FORD, JOHN, one of the earlier English dramatists. He was a member of the Inner Temple, but his fame rests on his plays, which, though thrown into the shade by the mightier masters of the art, are yet worthy of being known. He died in 1640, aged about 35 years.

FORDABLE, a. passable on foot.

FORDINGBRIDGE, Hampshire. It has a manufacture of tickings, in which a great number of looms are employed. It was formerly much larger than it is now, having often suffered by fire. It is situated on the Avon, and is 87 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3073.

FORDUN, JOHN DE, the first writer of Scottish history, who lived in the 14th century. His book is valuable, though needing to be read with due regard to the easy belief in the marvelous, especially when flattering to national vanity, which characterizes early days.

FORDWICH, Kent. It belongs to the town and port of Sandwich, but is situated on the river Stour, at 8 miles distance. It has one small church, built with stone and brick. The streets are narrow, dirty, and not paved. It is noted for its excellent trout. It is 60 miles from London. Pop. 231.

FORE, a. [Sax.] that part which comes first when a body moves, opposed to hind.

FORE, ad. the part which appears first to those who meet it, opposed to aft.

FORE, [Sax.] in Composition, implies priority of time, or before any certain period. See BEFORE.

To FOREADVISE, (foreadvise) v. n. to give counsel betimes; to advise before a thing happens.

To FOREARM, v. a. to provide for an attack before it happens.

To FOREBODE, v. n. to predict or foretell; to presage, generally applied to some future calamity.

FOREBODER, s. a prognosticator; soothsayer; fortune-teller; or foreknower.

To FORECAST, v. a. to plan, or prepare for execution; to contrive, to foresee, or provide against.

FORECAST, s. contrivance beforehand; a scheme; a plan; provision against any future emergency; foresight.

FORECASTER, s. one who foresees and provides against any future event.

FORECASTLE, s. in a ship, is that part where the foremast stands, and is divided from the rest of the floor by a bulkhead; that part of the forecable which is aloft, and not in the hold, is called the prow.

FORECHOSEN, part. pre-elected.

FORECITED, part. quoted before, or in a preceding part of a work.

To FORECLOSE, (foreclose) v. a. to shut up; to preclude; to prevent; to put a stop to. In Law, to foreclose a mortgage is to cut off the power of redemption.

FOREDECK, s. the deck of that part of a ship which is foremost when she sails.

To FOREDOO, v. a. to undo, to ruin; to weary, outdo, or almost kill.

To FOREDOOM, v. a. to predestinate; to determine beforehand by an inevitable necessity.

FORE-END, s. the foremost part; the first part, applied to time.

FOREFATHER, s. an ancestor; or one who is born before another, and belongs to his family, or country.

To FOREFE, v. a. to forbid; to avert; to provide for; to secure beforehand.

FOREFINGER, s. the finger next to the thumb.

FOREFOOT, s. plural forefeet; that foot of a beast which is nearest the head.

To FOREGO, v. a. to quit, resign, give up, or let go; to go before; to be past; to outgo.

FOREGOER, s. an ancestor, progenitor, or predecessor.

FOREGROUND, s. that part of the ground or surface of a picture which seem to be before the figures.

FOREHAND, s. that part of a horse which is before the rider; the chief or most excellent part.

FOREHANDED, a. early; timely; before an event comes to pass.

FOREHEAD, (firrid) s. the part of the face from the eyebrows to the hair. Figuratively, impudence; assurance.

FOREHOODINGS, s. predictions; omens; forebodings; silly and superstitious prognostications.

FOREIGN, (förrin) a. [forain, Fr.] of another kingdom or country; remote; not allied; opposite; inconsistent with; irreconcilable with; excluded; distant; or not admitted to one's acquaintance, or company.

FOREIGNER, (förrin) s. a man who is born in, and comes from, another country; the produce of another country; exotic.

FOREIGNNESS, (förrin) s. remoteness; strangeness; want of relation to something.

To FOREIMAGINE, v. a. to conceive or fancy before proof.

To FOREJUDGE, v. a. to judge beforehand; to judge without proof; to be prepossessed or prejudiced against.

FOREJUDGED the Court, in Law, is when an officer is banished or expelled a court for some offence, or for not appearing to an action by bill filed against him, in which case he cannot officiate till he appear to the bill.

FOREJUDGE, s. in Law, a judgment whereby a person is deprived of, or put by, the v. a. in question.

To FOREKNOW, (foreno) v. a. to have knowledge of a thing before it happens; to foresee.

FOREKNOWABLE, (forenoable) a. possible to be known before it happens.

FOREKNOWLEDGE, (forenoledge) s. knowledge of a thing before it happens. In Theology, a word used to express one aspect presented to us of God's omniscience; and which being derived from mere human experience, has misled many polemical writers. In the New Testament it often means approval testified beforehand.

FORELAND, s. in Navigation, a point of land jutting out into the sea, a promontory.

FORELAND, North, is the N. E. point of the island of Thanet, in Kent. It is also the most southern part of the port of London; the Naze, in Essex, on the opposite side of what is accounted the mouth of the Thames, is about 40 miles over. Here is a round brick tower, near 80 feet high, erected as a sea mark.

FORELAND, South, a headland on the E. coast of Kent, between Dover and Deal. Between the two Forelands is the noted road called the Downs, to which those promontories afford a great security.

To FORELAY, v. a. to lay wait for; to take in a snare or ambush.

FORELOCK, s. the hair which grows on the forehead of the head. In a ship, a little flat wedge, like a piece of iron, used at the ends of bolts, to keep them from starting, or flying out of the holes.

FOREMAN, s. the first or chief person in any assembly, or among any workmen.

FOREMAST, s. in a ship, the mast on which is borne the foresail.

FOREMENTIONED, FORENAMED, part. or a. mentioned, quoted, or cited before.

FOREMOST, a. first, or before others in place or situation; chief, or before others in dignity.

FORENOON, s. the first part of the day, measuring from sunrise to the noon, or 12 o'clock.

FORENOTICE, s. a token or information of a thing or event before it happens.

FORENSIC, a. [forum, Lat.] belonging to a court of law or judicature.

To FOREORDAIN, v. a. to determine or order an event before it happens.

FOREPART, s. the first part or beginning, applied to time. That part which is first when a thing or person moves.

FOREPART, part. that which has happened or past before a certain period.

FORERANK, s. first rank; front.

To FORERUN, v. a. to precede, or go before; to introduce as a messenger.

FORERUNNER, s. a harbinger, or messenger sent before to prepare the way, or give notice of the approach of some person who is to follow; a sign or omen, foreshowing the approach of some future event.

To FORESA'Y, v. a. to predict, or give notice of some future event.

To FORESEE, v. a. pret. foresaw, particip. foreseen; to see a thing beforehand; to have knowledge of something which is to happen.

FORESHIP, s. the anterior part of the ship.

To FORESHORTEN, v. a. to draw figures, or parts of figures, so as to exhibit them presented, as it were, endwise to the spectator, and thus, of course, much shorter than they would be if shown in any other direction.

FORESHORTENING, s. in Drawing and Painting, that mode of exhibiting figures, or parts of them, by which they are foreshortened.

To FORESHO'W, (foresho) v. a. to predict; to prognosticate; to represent before it comes.

FORESIGHT, (foresit) s. the act of seeing or perceiving a thing before it happens; the act of providing against any future event.

FORESIGHTFUL, (foresightful) a. having the knowledge of, and preparing against, any future event.

To FORESIGNIFY, v. a. to give notice or token of an event before it happens.

FORESKIN, s. in Anatomy, the prepuce. The part which was separated in the rite of circumcision.

FORESKIRT, s. the pendulous or loose part of the coat before.

To FORESLA'CK, v. a. to neglect by idleness.

To FORESLO'W, (foreslo) v. a. to delay, impede, or obstruct; to loiter.

FOREST, s. [forest, Brit.] a large uncultivated tract of ground overgrown with trees. In Law, a certain territory of woods, grounds, and fruitful pastures, privileged for wild beasts, fowls of the forest, chase, and warren, to rest and abide in, in the safe protection of the king, and for his pleasure.

FORESTAFF, s. an instrument used at sea for taking the altitudes of heavenly bodies.

To FORESTA'LL, (forestaill) v. a. [forestaillan, Sax.] to anticipate; to prevent; or to be troubled on account of some calamity before it happens; to prevent a person from doing a thing by doing it before him; to buy commodities before another in order to raise their price.

FORESTA'LLER, (forestailler) s. one who intercepts commodities as they go to market.

FORESTER, s. [forester, Fr.] a person who has the charge of a forest; one who inhabits a forest.

To FORETASTE, v. a. to have a strong idea and earnest of a thing before it exists; to anticipate; to taste before another.

FORETASTE, s. anticipation of.

To FORETELL, v. a. preter. and part. foretold; to prophesy; to give notice of a thing or event before it happens.

FORETELLER, s. one who gives notice of things future before they happen.

To FORETHINK, v. a. preter. and part. forethought; to have an idea or conception of a thing in the mind before it happens or exists; to plan or contrive beforehand.

FORETHOUGHT, (forethout) s. anticipation, or foresight; a prudent care against some future event.

FORETOOTH, s. a broad flat tooth in the front of a person's mouth; named the incisor.

FORETOP, s. that part of a head-dress, or of the hair, immediately above the forehead.

FOREVOUCHED, part. affirmed before; formerly told.

FOREWARD, s. the van and front of an army.

To FOREWA'RN, (forewaarn) v. a. to give a person advice beforehand; to caution a person from doing a thing beforehand.

FORFAR, chief town of Forfarshire, Scotland. It stands on a small stream, which runs into the sea near the mouth of the Tay. It is in a flourishing condition as to manufactures and general improvements. It is about 50 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1258.

FORFARSHIRE, called also Angus, a county of Scotland, lying on the German Ocean, and bounded by the shires of Fife, Perth, Aberdeen, and Kineardine. It is about 40 miles long, and 25 wide. It is very mountainous, being crossed by the Grampian Hills, which rise to nearly 1500 feet in height; and having other hills beside. But next the sea it is more even. The Isla, the N. and S. Esk, and the Tay, which is its S. boundary, are its greatest rivers. The mountains yield iron, lead, and other metals; granite, limestone, slate, and many very useful building-stones. Coal and peat are found, but the former in no great quantity. The pastures are very fine, and agriculture is attended to on the more level part of the county with some success. The coast is admirably adapted to fisheries. Pop. 170,520. Forfar is its chief town. It sends 3 members to parliament.

FORFEIT, (forfit) s. [forfed, Brit.] something lost or paid by way of punishment for a crime; a person liable to punishment, or one who is condemned to death for a crime.

To FORFEIT, (forfit) v. a. to lose a privilege enjoyed before, or pay a sum of money as a punishment for some crime.

FORFEIT, (forfit) part. liable to be seized or lost, either as to right or possession, on account of the commission of a crime, or the breach of the conditions in a contract.

FORFEITABLE, (forfitable) a. liable to be lost on non-performance of certain conditions, or on being guilty of any particular action.

FORFEITURE, (forfiture) s. [forfaiture, Fr.] in Law, the act of losing or paying on account of some omission or crime; the punishment suffered by loss of something in a person's possession; the thing paid or lost as a punishment; a fine.

FORGE, (forj, Fr.) the furnace where iron is properly tempered, or the place where it is beaten into any particular form.

To FORGE, v. a. [forj, old Fr.] to form by the hammer, or beat into shape; to make by any means; to counterfeit or falsify.

FORGER, s. one who makes, or one who forms by beating; one who counterfeits a thing.

FORGERY, s. the crime of counterfeiting in order to defraud or impose upon; the act of fabrication; smith's work made by forging.

To FORGET, v. a. preter. forgot, part. forgotten, or forgotten; [forgetten, Belg.] to lose the memory or remembrance of; to neglect.

FORGETFUL, a. not retaining a thing in the memory; causing oblivion or forgetfulness; negligent; neglectful; careless.

FORGETFULNESS, s. the habit of losing the memory or remembrance of a thing; negligence, or neglect.

FORGETTER, s. one that forgets; a careless person.

To FORGIVE, v. a. pret. forgave, part. forgiven; [forgifan, Sax.] to pass by a crime without punishment; to pardon a crime or a criminal; to remit; to forego; or not to insist upon a right.

FORGIVENESS, s. [forgifennisse, Sax.] pardon of an offence or an offender; willingness to pardon; remission of a fine; or the forgiving a person a sum of money which he owes.

FORGIVER, s. one who foregoes his right to a debt, or passes by an offence without punishment or anger.

FORGOT, FORGOTTEN, part. of forget; not remembered.

FORK, s. [forch, Brit.] an instrument made with two or more prongs, sharp at the point, and used in eating; when it has a very long handle, and three prongs, it is called a trident; the point or forked part of an arrow.

To FORK, v. n. to shoot into blades, prongs, or divisions, like those of corn when it appears above-ground, or the heads and horns of cattle.

FORKED, a. formed with two or more parts, resembling the prongs of a fork.

FORKEDLY, ad. in the form of a fork.

FORKEDNESS, s. the quality of opening into two parts, resembling the prongs of a fork.

FORKHEAD, s. the point of an arrow.

FORKY, a. opening in two parts, and pointed like the prongs of a fork, or the head of an arrow.

FORLORN, a. [forlorn, Sax.] destitute; forsaken; wretched; lost; desperate. Forlorn hope, those soldiers who are sent on any desperate enterprise, or make the first onset in the storming of a breach; being, as the term imports, destitute of all hopes, and, as it were, doomed to perish.

FORLORN, a. lost, forsaken, friendless, or helpless person.

FORLORNNESS, s. a state wherein a person is void of hopes, destitute of friends, and involved in sorrow or misery.

FORM, s. [forma, Lat.] the external appearance, shape, or particular model of any thing; beauty, elegance of appearance; external appearance, or mere show, when opposed to substance; ceremony; external rites; any stated method, or established practice; method in discourse. Figuratively, a long seat or bench; whence, in Schools, a class or division of scholars.—[formth, Sax.] in Hunting, the seat or bed of a hare. In Metaphysics, that which is the very essence of a thing, and without which it is not what it is.

To FORM, v. a. [forma, Lat.] to make out of materials; to model to any particular shape; to modify; to scheme; to plan; to arrange in any particular manner; as, "He formed his troops;" to adjust; to settle.

FORMA PAUPERIS, s. [Lat.] in Law, is applied when a person has cause of suit, but is so poor as not to be able to pay the charges; in which case, he makes oath that he is not worth five pounds, his debts being paid, and bringing a certificate from some lawyer that his cause is a just one, the judge admits him to sue in forma pauperis, i. e. without paying fees to the counsel, attorney, clerk, or the stamp duty. This custom has its beginning from stat. 11. Hen. VII. c. 12.

FORMAL, a. [forma, Lat.] ceremonies; solemn; precise; exact to affection; done according to certain rules or methods; regular; methodical; merely external.

FORMALIST, s. [formaliste, Fr.] one who practises external rites and ceremonies with great strictness; one who prefers appearance to reality, or affects to seem what he is not.

FORMALITY, s. ceremonious exactness to excess or to affectation; solemn order, habit, or dress. In Law, the rules prescribed or customs observed in carrying on any cause.

FORMALLY, ad. according to established rules, customs, ceremonies, and rites; in a precise manner; with too great affectation of ceremony; externally, or openly.

FORMATION, s. [formo, Lat.] the act of forming, making, or producing a thing; the manner in which a thing is made.

FORMATIVE, a. having the power to make.

FORMER, s. one that gives form to a thing; a maker.

FORMER, a. [forma, Sax.] Hence former and formost, commonly written foremost. Foremost is generally applied to place, rank, or degree, and former only to time; before in time; mentioned before another; past. "Former times."

FORMERLY, ad. in times past.

FORMIC, a. [formica, Lat.] belonging to, or obtained from ants. Formic acid, in Chemistry, is a peculiar acid obtained by distillation from bruised ants, and from all vegetable substances properly prepared. It is secreted in the abdomen of the ant, in conjunction with another acid, and is ejected by them when irritated. It produces considerable inflammation on the skin.

FORMIDABLE, a. [formido, Lat.] terrible; dreadful; occasioning great fear, or apprehension of trouble and danger; to be feared.

FORMIDABLENESS, s. the quality of exciting terror or the apprehension of danger; the thing exciting the passion of fear.

FORMIDABLY, ad. in such a manner as to excite fear.

FORMLESS, a. shapeless, or without any regular form.

FORMOSA, or TAIOUAN, an island off the coast of China, separated from the mainland by a strait, about 60 miles over where narrowest. It is about 240 miles in length, and 60 where broadest, and is subject to the emperor of China, although the eastern part is mostly held by the natives. The plains are fertilized by numberless rivulets. A chain of mountains runs nearly through its whole extent from N. to S. Its air is pure and wholesome, and the land produces oranges, bananas, and other Indian and European fruits. Tobacco, sugar, pepper, camphire, and cinnamon, are also common here.

FORMOSA, an island of the Atlantic, near the coast of Africa, about 6 miles long and 3 wide. The soil is fertile and well covered with trees, but it wants springs of good water. Lat. 11. 29. N. Long. 14. 20. W.

FORMOSUS, a pope of Rome near the close of the 9th century. He had sharp contests with the people of Rome; for he lived during troublous times, and when the pontiffs were asserting their supremacy over the emperors of Germany, and aiming at the lordship of the world. After his death, in 896, his successor dug up his remains, and dishonoured them; but he has been received as a legitimate occupier of the papal chair.

FORMULA, s. [Lat.] a set rule, or prescribed form or model.

FORMULARY, s. [formulaire, Fr.] a book containing the prescribed rules or manner of performing any thing.

FORNICATION, s. [fornicatio, Lat.] the act of incontinence between unmarried persons.

FORNICATOR, s. [Lat.] a single man who is guilty of an act of incontinence with an unmarried woman.

FORNICATRESS, s. a single woman guilty of the crime of incontinence with an unmarried man.

FORRES, Elgin, Scotland. It contains some manufactures of linen and sewing-thread. Near it is an ancient, remarkable column, called King Sueno's Stone, or The Danish Pillar. It is situated on an eminence near a small river, about 100 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2844.

To FORSAKE, v. a. preter. forsook; past part. forsook, or forsoaken; [versaken, Belg.] to leave in resentment, neglect, or dislike; to break off friendship or commerce with; to leave or go away from; to desert, or withdraw any kind of offices or assistance from a person.

FORSAKER, s. one who quits or deserts in resentment, dislike, or neglect.

FORSOOTH, ad. [forsoothe, Sax.] in truth; surely; certainly. It is almost always used in a contemptuous or ironical sense.

FORSTER, JOHN REINHOLD, a distinguished Prussian naturalist of the last century. He studied with great diligence the various branches of practical and natural science, and accompanied Captain Cook on his second voyage. Having given offence by violating an agreement with the English government, he returned to the continent, and taught at Halle. He died in 1798, aged 69 years. He was an accomplished linguist and geographer, in addition to his rare proficiency as a naturalist. His son, John George Adam Forster, accompanied his father on that circumnavigation with Cook, and obtained a post at a continental university afterwards. Having subsequently entered on the book trade at Mentz, he was drawn into the vortex of the French Revolution. But losses occasioned by the re-capture of Mentz by the Prussians, led him to plan an exploratory expedition to Central Asia; and the intense application with which he prepared himself for this undertaking led to his death in 1794, aged 40 years.

To FORSWEAR, (forswäre) v. a. preter. forsovere, part. forsovere; to renounce, quit, or deny upon oath.—v. n. to swear falsely, to be guilty of perjury.

FORSWEARER, (forswärer) s. one who swears a thing to be true, which he knows to be false.

FORT, s. [fort, Fr.] a little castle or fortress; a place of small extent, fortified by art and nature, or both; or a work encompassed with a moat, rampart, or parapet, to secure some high ground or passage.

FORTE, a. [Ital.] in Music, a term used to indicate passages that are to be played or sung loudly, marked f.; signifies fortissimo, and directs very loud or energetic performance.

FORTVENTURA, or FURTEVENTURA, one of the Canary Islands, about 50 miles in length, and from 8 to 24 in breadth, consisting of two peninsulas, joined together by an isthmus, about 12 miles long. The soil is fertile in wheat, barley, roots, and fruits, and beautifully diversified with hills and valleys, well watered, and supplied with a variety of timber. It also produces mastic, orchel for dyeing, and goats'-milk cheese, &c. Cattle are abundant. There are three towns on the eastern coast, Longia, Tarafato, and Pozzo Negro; and there is a good road for shipping between this island and the island of Lobos. Lat. 28. 4. N. Long. 14. 32. W.

FORTH, a river of Scotland, formed by the junction of two streams, flowing from the mountain district, at Aberfeldy, whence it proceeds in a generally easterly direction, dividing the shires of Stirling and Linlithgow from those of Clackmannan and Fife, and empties itself into the N. Sea through the Frith of Forth.

FORTH, ad. [forth, Sax. whence further, farthest,] forward; onward, or in advance, applied to time. Before another; or in advance, applied to place. Abroad, or out of doors, joined with the verbs come or go. Out of, or beyond the boundaries of a place; thoroughly, or from the beginning to the end; to a certain degree; or to the end.

FORTHCOMING, a. ready to appear; not absconding; not lost.

FORTHSSUING, a. coming out; coming forward from a covert.

FORTHRIGHT, ad. straight forward.

FORTHWITH, ad. immediately; without delay.

FORTIETH, a. [quarantesima, Sax.] the fourth tenth, or that which is next in order after the thirty-ninth.

FORTIFIABLE, a. that may be rendered stronger by fortifications.

FORTIFICATION, s. [fortification, Fr.] an art showing how to render a place difficult to be taken by an enemy; a place strengthened with ramparts, &c., in order to defend it from the attacks of an enemy.

FORTIFIER, s. one who erects works to strengthen or defend a place; one who supports, countenances, secures, or upholds.

To FORTIFY, v. a. [fortifier, Fr.] to strengthen a place against attacks by walls or works; to confirm, encourage, or invigorate; to establish or confirm in a resolution. SYNON. We fortify a town in strengthening it against attacks, by walls or works. We garrison it by placing soldiers in it to defend it.

FORTIN, s. [Fr.] a little fort raised to defend a camp.

FORTITUDE, s. [fortitudo, from fortis, Lat.] the act of undertaking dangerous enterprises with calmness and serenity, and pursuing virtuous designs unshaken by menaces, or unmoved by discouragements or temptations.

FORTNIGHT, s. [contracted from fourteen nights,] the space of two weeks.

FORTRESS, s. [fortress, Fr.] a strong hold; a general name for all fortified places, whether made up by nature or art.

FORTUITOUS, a. [fortuitus, from fortis, Lat.] happening without the guidance or production of any rational cause; accidental; casual, or happening by chance.

FORTUITOUSLY, ad. by chance.

FORTUITOUSNESS, s. the quality of having no apparent cause.

FORTUNATE, a. [fortunatus, Lat.] lucky; happy; successful.

FORTUNATELY, ad. successfully.

FORTUNATENESS, s. the quality of gaining the end of our wishes or actions.

FORTUNE, s. [fortuna, Lat.] in Roman Mythology, the goddess who presided over human affairs, and distributed wealth and honour at her pleasure; represented as a naked woman standing on a globe, with a bandage on her eyes. Generally, the good or ill which befalls a person; estate or possessions; the money which a man or woman brings with them on marriage.

FORTUNEBOOK, s. a book consulted to know fortune or future events.

FORTUNED, a. happening successfully; successful; foretold.

FORTUNEHUNTER, s. a person who seeks after women with great portions, in order to enrich himself by marrying one.

To FORTUNTELL, v. n. to reveal, or pretend to reveal, the future events of a person's life.

FORTUNETELLER, s. one who professes to foretell the events which shall happen to a person.

FORTY, a. [quarages, Sax.] four times ten.

FORUM, s. [Lat.] a public place in Roman cities, where public business was transacted, and where lawyers and orators made their speeches in matters of property or in criminal causes.

FORWARD, FORWARDS, ad. [forwards, Sax.] towards a place; straight before a person; to a place which fronts a person.

FORWARD, a. warm; willing or ready to do a thing; premature, or ripe too soon; presumptuous; confident; in the fore part, opposed to behind. Quick; hasty; almost finished; begun and far advanced.

To FORWARD, v. a. to promote or quicken a design; to accelerate, hasten, or advance in growth or improvement; to encourage or patronize an undertaking.

FORWARDER, s. he who quickens or promotes the performance of a thing.

FORWARDLY, ad. eagerly; hastily; rashly; in a hurry.

FORWARDNESS, s. eagerness or readiness to act; quickness or readiness to learn; earliness, or early ripeness; confidence, or less reserve and modesty than becomes a person's age and dignity.

FOSCOLO, UGO, an eminent Italian writer of the last generation, who was actively engaged during most of the struggle between France and Austria for the possession of N. Italy; and who, though serving under Buonaparte, yet so consulted for his country's freedom, as rendered him peculiarly obnoxious to the French emperor, and obliged him at last to escape to England, where he died in 1827, aged 51 years. His writings are numerous and varied. His critical commentary on Dante; his letters and discourses delivered from the chair of eloquence at Pavia; his lyric poems, and some of his political treatises, are highly esteemed for their power and beauty. He was not so successful in all his literary attempts.

FOSSE, (foss) s. [fos, Brit.] in Fortification, a ditch or moat.

FOSSEET, s. See FAUCET.

FOSSEWAY, s. a great Roman road running from Lincoln to a port on the coast of Devonshire.

FOSSIL, a. [fossilis, from fodio, Lat.] dug out of the earth.

FOSILL, s. in Geology, a general name by which the remains of organized beings, which are found in the various strata of the crust of the earth, are known. It is also sometimes, but very rarely now, extended so as to embrace minerals as well as organic remains; but this is plainly incorrect. It was formerly believed that the fossils of different strata exhibited a progressive development of the more complicated and more highly organized, in the later strata, from the simpler and lower orders found in the earlier beds. But this is a mere hypothesis, resting on most insufficient data. The fossils of the different beds agree in every essential particular with the state of things indicated by the nature of the beds themselves; and there is in each bed a uniformity or individuality of character in its fossils, which often identifies it, when other characteristics fail.

To FOSTER, v. a. [fostran, Sax.] to nourish; to feed or cherish with food; to nurse or bring up a young child; to pamper, encourage, train up, or educate; to cherish, or forward.

FOSTER, JOHN, a writer of religious essays of some notoriety, of the last generation. He was of humble origin, and entered on the profession of the ministry amongst the Baptists, with his early manhood. He was distinguished for the simplicity and power of his preaching, and by these characters his essays are strongly marked. They are also characterized by intense and minute self-knowledge, and are valuable for their eminently practical cast. As a man, John Foster was of a noble mould; and though fettered by all the difficulties of his early training, he always aimed at what was most worthy of a man, and of a man of God. He died in 1843, aged 73 years.

FOSTERAGE, s. the office or employ of nursing or bringing up a young child.

FOSTERBROTHER, s. [Sax.] one bred up or nursed by the same woman.

FOSTERCHILD, s. [Sax.] a child nursed by a person who is not its parent.

FOSTERDAM, s. a female beast, who suckles and brings up the young of another.

FOSTEREARTH, s. earth by which the plant is nourished, though it did not grow at first in it.

FOSTERER, s. a nurse; one who gives food in the place of a parent.

FOSTERFATHER, s. [foster-fader, Sax.] one who nurses or gives a child food instead of its father; the husband of a child's nurse.

FOSTERMOTHER, s. [foster-moder, Sax.] a nurse or woman who brings up the child of another.

FOSTERSON, s. a boy nursed by a person not his parent.

FOUCHÉ, JOSEPH, DUKE OF OTRANTO, one of the most remarkable characters produced by the French Revolution. His first appearance was as a member of the Convention, where he joined the hottest party, in whose behalf also he played the terrorist at Lyons. He was sufficiently eminent for the jealousy of Robespierre. He was continually proving to Buonaparte that he was most essential to his power, and as continually that he had private ends which he meant to secure first of all. He was even employed by the restored Bourbon king, and ended his public life only when those who had voted for the death of Louis XVI. were executed. He died at Trieste in 1820, aged 57 years.

FOUGA/DE, s. [Fr.] in War, a little mine, in the manner of a well, dug under some work or fortification, charged with barrels or sacks of gunpowder, in order to blow it up, and covered with earth.

FOUGHT, the preterite and participle of fight.

FOUL, a. [ful, Sax.] dirty, filthy, or covered with mire, opposed to fair, or clean. Impure, polluted; using indelicate, obscene, or reproachful expressions; unclean, wicked, or detestable; not lawful or honest; hateful, ugly, loathsome; disgraceful, shameful. Not bright; cloudy or tempestuous, applied to weather. Muddy, thick, applied to liquors. Among seamen, entangled; as, "a rope is ful of anchor."

To FOUL, v. a. to daub; to blemish.

FOULAHIS, an African tribe of considerable numbers, living in the region W. of that occupied by the Ashantees, who are in many respects different from the negroes, and seem to have been connected with an Arab stock. Foulahadoo is the district or town in the interior where their king resides. They are divided into several clans or branches.

FOULFACED, a. having an ugly or hateful visage.

FOULIS, the name of two brothers, eminent printers at Glasgow, whose editions of the classics still command admiration for their beauty and accuracy of execution. They failed in an unavailing attempt to establish an academy for painting and sculpture. Andrew died in 1774, and Robert in 1776.

FOULLY, adv. filthily; nastily.

FOULNESS, s. the quality which excites in the mind an idea of dirtiness attended with loathing; pollution; hatefulness; or atrociousness of a crime; ugliness, or loathsome deformity; dishonour.

FOUND, the pret. and past part. of TO FIND.

To FOUND, v. a. [fund, Lat.] to lay the bottom or foundation of any building; to establish or erect; to give birth or origin to. "He found an art." To raise upon, as on a principle or ground; to fix firm. "Founded as the rock." Shak. In Law, to set apart or give a sum of money for building or maintaining an hospital, &c. In the Arts, to cast metals into any particular form by melting and pouring them into moulds.

FOUNDATION, s. [fundation, Fr.] the lower parts, or those which support the rest of a house or building; the act of laying the basis or support of any thing; the original, or rise; a revenue settled and established for any purpose, particularly applied to charities.

FOUNDER, s. a builder; one who erects an edifice, or builds a city; one who endows or establishes a revenue for the support and maintenance of any hospital, college, &c.; one who gives rise or origin to any art or manufacture; one who forms figures of metal by melting and pouring it into moulds.

To FOUNDER, v. a. [fondre, Fr.] applied to horses, to make their feet sore by hard riding or working.—v. n. among mariners, to sink to the bottom. Figuratively, to miscarry.

FOUNDERY, s. [fonderie, Fr.] a place where melted metal is cast into various forms.

FOUNDLING, s. a child exposed by its parents.

FOUNDERESS, s. a woman who builds, endows, or begins a thing.

FOUNT, FOUNTAIN, s. [fons, Lat.] a place where the waters of a river first break out of the earth; a small basin of springing water, a jet, or basin which has an artificial spout of water; an original, first cause, or first principle. Fount, among printers, is a set or group of characters or letters of each kind, cast by a letter-founder, and sorted.

FOUNTAINLESS, a. without a fountain or spring.

FOUNTFUL, a. full of springs.

FOUR, (for) a. formerly spelt fourer; [fourer, Sax.] two taken twice, or twice two, marked 4 or IV.

FOURCROÏ, ANTOINE FRANÇOIS DE, an eminent French chemist of the last century, who greatly promoted the progress of his favourite science by his studies and by his writings. He was engaged in the political contests of his day also, being a member of the National Convention, and ultimately of Napoleon's council of state. He devoted his influence to the advancement of education; and died in 1809, aged 54 years.

FOURFOLD, (forfold) a. a thing repeated four times.

FOURFOOTED, a. having four feet.

FOURIER, JOSEPH, an eminent French mathematician, of the latter part of the last century and the commencement of the present. He was engaged in some of the provincial troubles of the Revolution. Having occupied a professorship at the Polytechnic school, he was chosen to accompany the Egyptian expedition, and afterwards was made a departmental prefect. After the restoration he held several distinguished scientific positions. He invented a theorem in the higher mathematics, still known by his name. He died in 1830, aged 62 years.

FOURIER, CHARLES, a French social theorist, who arriving at manhood during the complete disorganization of the Revolution, had his attention drawn most forcibly to the vital question of the subsistence and stability of society. He endeavoured vainly to attract the notice of the leading men of France to his propositions during 30 years, and at last found a few disciples amongst the St. Simonians. In England he also gained a few adherents. But in the United States, where such facilities are offered for social experimenters, and the anomalous constitution drives men of thought to endeavour its correction, he has had, in common with other theorists, considerable attention. He died in 1837, aged 65 years. His scheme is based on a representation of human nature from a sort of mathematical or mechanical point of view; which, being but a figurative one, and being taken for a real one, constitutes his fundamental fallacy. The practical part, which is in the main communarian, shares the imputation of impracticability common to all such schemes; demonstrative as they seem to be on paper, they cannot be put into operation in vacuo, (as mechanicians say,) they have to contend with passions and principles in practice which are not taken into account, and cannot be, in such a representation of man as they start from.

FOURSCORE, (forscore) a. the number eighty.

FOURSCORE, (forquare) a. square. An antiquated form.

FOURTEEN, (forteen) a. four and ten.

FOURTEENTH, (forteenth) a. [fourteenth, Sax.] the fourth in rank or order after the tenth.

FOURTH, (forth) a. [fourth, Sax.] the first in order after the third. In Music, the name of that interval which passes over two notes, and thus varies in its actual amount with its position in the scale.

FOURTHLY, (forthly) adv. in the fourth place.

FOWEY, or FOW, Cornwall. It is seated on an ascent, is fortified, and its haven well secured with block-houses; is at present a good trading place, and its market well supplied with corn. It is 240 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1643.

FWL, (the ow in this word and its derivatives is pronounced as in now.) s. [fuhl, Sax.] a winged animal; a bird.

To FOWL, v. n. [fugolan, Sax.] to shoot birds for food or game.

FWLER, s. [fugolare, Sax.] a person who pursues or shoots birds.

FWLINGPIECE, s. a light, small gun, used for shooting birds.

FOX, s. [Sax.] in Natural History, a genus allied to that of the dog; the common species of which in England is distinguished by its long bushy tail and sharp ears, its great cunning, and its predacious habits. The arctic fox changes the colour of its coat with the seasons, becoming white in winter-time. It is an animal of the chase; its young are called cubs; the female is called a vixen. Figuratively, a sly, cunning, or artful person.

FOX, RICHARD, a distinguished ecclesiastic and statesman at the beginning of the Tudor dynasty. He was created finally bishop of Winchester, and was chief adviser of Henry VIII. till the rise of Wolsey, whom he brought under the king's notice, and by whom he was supplanted. He died in 1528.

FOX, JOHN, the well-known celebrator of the Christian martyrs, early associated himself with the English Reformation, and obtained patronage under Edward VI. He fled to Basle during Mary's reign, but returned to his country and his friends, who were amongst the highest nobility, under her successor. His Acts and Monuments, or Book of Martyrs, is the solid foundation of his deserved fame. He wrote other works, less known now, and died in 1587, aged 60 years.

FOX, GEORGE, the founder of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, was a shoemaker, who, during the profound religious movements preceding the Puritan revolution, felt so deeply the power of those eternal things, which the parochial clergy had all but utterly forgotten, that he left his work and his friends, and, clad in a perennal suit of leather, wandered in solitude, studying the Bible and himself, and seeking some sure light to guide him. He soon after openly renounced all existing religious teaching, and commenced his own public ministry, attracting the notice of those who were like-minded with himself, and of some who were mere crazed enthusiasts. His intercourse with the powers that were, was instructive. Cromwell befriended him. Under Charles II. he was at one time befriended, and at another persecuted; but he kept on his own way steadfast to the end. He once visited America in his itinerancy, and established his doctrines and society there. He died in 1690, aged 66 years. See FRIENDS, SOCIETY OF.

FOX, CHARLES JAMES, the great Whig leader and statesman of the reign of George III. He very early entered parliament, and on his first taking part in public matters, sided with the ministry, and received an appointment under Lord North; but offending him by over-zeal, was soon dismissed, when he joined the opposition, and continued through the whole American War to annoy them, till they were overthrown. He next figured in Lord Rockingham's ministry; but was in the opposition to the succeeding cabinet. In the coalition ministry he held an eminent place, which fell by the defeat of his India Bill, and was succeeded by the Pitt administration, against which Fox appeared a relentless opponent. During the time which elapsed to his withdrawing from the discharge of his parliamentary duties, he appeared as the leader or fervent supporter of all movements which are commonly identified with liberalism—the abolition of slavery; parliamentary reform; repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts; Catholic emancipation; opposition to the war with France, &c. &c. On the fall of the Pitt ministry, Fox appeared a supporter of Addington, at first, but afterwards he opposed him. Pitt again took the helm, with a very feeble staff. In Lord Grenville's cabinet, Fox was included, and he laboured with zeal for his favourite measures, for the short time which remained to him. Before a year's end he died;—in 1806, aged 58 years. It is but quite recently that affairs have so changed in England that Fox can be rightly estimated. The generation whose opinions were formed when Pitt and Fox were the war cries of the two great parties in the state, has but just passed away. The most striking part of such a career as his was the changes of companions in labour which he passed through. We find him now the co-operator, and now the fierce opponent of Pitt, North, Addington, and—but this somewhat differed, inasmuch as private esteem and friendship were sacrificed to political partisanship—Burke. In all his measures, and in his much-admired oratory, we look in vain for any thing which may bear a higher stamp than that of mere party coin. Even where we should think he could not fail of uttering principles as large as mankind's greatest needs, he has kept close to the bounds of constitutional mediocrity. His speeches display eloquence enough, as his measures do finesse. Yet, perhaps, we may owe to such as Fox the advance made by numbers of all parties in England to a ground where only principles are allowed to stand; as well as that general custom of keeping in practice far behind our avowed principles—of utterly divorcing political action from political speculation and study.

To FOX, v. a. to cheat or trick. In brewing, to give liquor a strong disagreeable taste, generally applied to the effects of hot weather; to make a person drunk or fuddled.

FOXBRUSH, s. a fox's tail.

FOXCASE, s. a fox's skin.

FOXCHASE, s. the pursuit of a fox with hounds.

FOXEVIL, s. a kind of disease in which the hair sheds.

FOXGLOVE, s. in Botany, called also digitalis, with a purple blossom, elegantly mottled on the inside, found in gravelly soil.

FOXHOUND, s. in Hunting, a name for that variety of dog, called also the harrier.

FOXTAIL, s. in Botany, a kind of grass distinguished by the shape of its ear.

FOXTRAP, s. a gin or snare to catch foxes.

FRACTION, (frakshon) s. [frango, Lat.] the act of breaking or violating any obligation or treaty; a rent in a piece of cloth, &c. In Arithmetic, a part of an integer or whole number. Vulgar fractions, are such as are formed when an integer is divided into any number of parts, and any number whatever of them is taken; as,  $\frac{3}{4}$ ,  $\frac{8}{11}$ ,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , &c. Decimal fractions are those in which the integer is always supposed to be divided into parts equal to some multiple of 10; which number being the base of our general notation, these fractions are much more easy to manage in computations. They are written thus, to the right of the integers,  $^{64}478$ , which is equivalent to  $\frac{478}{10^{64}}$ .

FRACTIONAL, a. belonging to a fraction or broken number.

FRACTIOUS, (frakshious) a. peevish; quarrelsome.

FRACTIOUSNESS, (frakshiousness) s. peevishness, or a disposition of mind which renders a person uneasy at trifles.

FRACTURE, s. a dissolution or breaking of the parts of a solid body from each other. In Surgery, the breaking or separation of a bone by some accidental violence.

To FRACTURE, v. a. to break a bone.

FRA DIAVOLO, a famous bandit of the kingdom of Naples, at the end of the last century. He was employed on more than one occasion, just as the free companies were in the middle ages, by the Bourbon party against Buonaparte, and his king; but he was captured and executed in 1806, aged about 40 years. All kinds of romantic tales are told respecting his generosity, &c. &c., by those who by some strange inversion of taste, or through mere morbid prurience, take delight in idealizing ruffians, and making heroes of pickpockets and highwaymen.

FRAIGLE, a. [fragilis, Lat.] brittle, or easily broken. Figuratively, weak; uncertain; easily destroyed.

FRAGILITY, s. easiness of being broken. Figuratively, weakness, or the quality of being easily destroyed; frailty.

FRAGMENT, s. a broken or imperfect piece or part.

FRAGMENTARY, a. composed of fragments or broken pieces. Not elegant, nor much in use.

FRAGRANCE, FRAGRANCY, s. [frago, Lat.] sweetness of smell; an agreeable scent or pleasing odour.

FRAGRANT, a. odorous; smelling sweet.

FRAGRANTLY, ad. with a sweet smell.

FRAIL, s. a basket made of rushes; a rush for making baskets.

FRAIL, a. [frango, Lat.] weak; easily decayed; subject to faults or foibles; easily destroyed; liable to error, or to be seduced.

FRAILNESS, s. weakness, or liability to decay, applied to the texture of bodies. Liability to error, applied to the mind.

FRAILTY, s. frailties, plural; weakness of resolution; infirmity; liability to decay; liability to be deceived or to do amiss; a fault proceeding from the weakness and infirmity of our reason, and the condition of our nature.

FRASCHIEUR, s. [Fr.] freshness; refreshing coolness.

FRAISE, s. [Fr.] a pancake intermixed with thin slices of bacon.

To FRAME, v. a. [fremman, Sax.] to shape or form things so that they may match each other, or be easily put together; to regulate; to adjust; to form to any rule; to compose by means of the imagination; to plant; to invent.

FRAME, s. a fabric; any thing formed of various parts or members; the supports of a chair; any thing made so as to enclose, admit, or hold together something else; order; regularity; methodical disposition of parts; shape; projection; scheme, or plan.

FRAMER, s. a maker; a contriver; one who composes or makes a thing consisting of various parts.

FRAMLINGHAM, Suffolk. It is noted for a large, stately church built all of black flint, and a castle of some extent, but no great antiquity, as far as the present building is concerned; and is pleasantly situated in a fruitful soil and healthy air, near the source of the river Ore, by some called Wincklin. It is 88 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2523.

FRAIMPOLD, FRAIMPUL, s. [etymology unknown] peevish; cross-grained; quarrelsome.

FRAIMPTON, Dorsetshire. It is seated on the river Frome, which abounds with excellent trout. It is 120 miles from London. Market, Thursday; but almost disused. Pop. 391.

FRANC, s. [Fr.] a French silver coin, equal in value to about 10*l.* of our money. Other silver coins circulate which are multiples of the franc, and are called the five-franc piece, &c.

FRANCE, a great kingdom of W. Europe, lying immediately opposite to the S. coasts of England, and washed on its W. shore by the Atlantic Ocean. It reaches to the Mediterranean Sea on the S., and is bounded by Spain, Belgium, Prussia, Germany, Switzerland, and the kingdom of Sardinia. It is about 600 miles in length, and of an average breadth of about 500. It is a fine country, and is varied by many chains of mountains. The Pyrenees lie between it and Spain, and some heights exceed 10,000 feet. The Alps cross its S. E. corner, of which one peak exceeds 13,000 feet in height. The mountains of Jura form part of its E. boundary, some of which are 5000 feet high. And it is crossed by the chains of the Cevennes, amongst which a few heights reach 6000 feet; and by the Vosges, which are almost a continuation of the Jurassic chain, the highest of which is about 4000 feet. Other chains and ranges are mere hills. The great rivers are the Loire, the Garonne, the Seine, and the Rhone; the Meuse, the Moselle, and the Rhine, also enter or touch its borders. The coast is very much indented on the N., and is sufficiently rocky, yet it has some good harbours; the same may be said of the upper half of that part washed by the Bay of Biscay, but the lower half is a series of sand hills, which quite at the S. part stretch inland and form the almost desert grazing tract called the Landes. The S. coast is partly low and flat, and partly rocky, but there are some excellent harbours there. Several small islands on both coasts belong to France, the chief of which are Belle-île, Ile d' Yeu, Ré, Oleron, and Iles d' Hieres. Corsica also belongs to this state. France is rich in mineral wealth, which is very widely distributed by means of the numerous chains of hills and mountains. Iron, copper, lead, &c.; silver and gold also, but in smaller quantities; coal, slates, many and excellent varieties of building and limestone, &c., abound. The climate is most favourable, as well as the soil, for the growth of all kinds of corn, and the grazing of all kinds of valuable cattle; and added to these, many kinds of excellent fruit are plentiful; and many choice varieties of the grape are cultivated, yielding excellent and admired wines. In the forests, beside common timber trees, it has some rare and valuable kinds. Here also are yet found the wolf and the boar; whilst in the mountains near Spain bears occur; and in the Alps the chamois abounds. On both coasts are valuable fisheries. And the trade consists in wine and brandy, silk, fruits, seeds, manufactured silk, gloves, boots, hats, watches and jewellery, china and glass in articles of use and ornament, &c., &c. The whole country is divided into 85 departments, including Corsica. The constitution, by the charter, is a monarchy with two chambers of deputies. Up to the time of the Revolution it was an absolute monarchy, for the pretended checks to despotism had no practical influence. After passing through the unsettled period when there was no recognised authority; the reign of terror; the republic; the empire; it became by the charter, on the restoration of the Bourbons, a limited monarchy, and such it has continued since. Romanism is the recognised religion; but there is toleration for others. The franchise is absurdly contracted; the popular discontent ceaseless; and the maintenance of the present order of things seems to depend solely on the superior force which the governments who established it could bring against this nation. The capital is Paris. Pop. not far short of 40,000,000.

FRAÑCE, ISLE OF. See MAURITIUS.

FRAÑCHISE, s. [franchise, Fr.] exemption or excuse from any burdensome duty; a privilege or immunity; a district, or the extent of jurisdiction. Elective franchise, or, popularly, the franchise, is the right to vote at elections for members of parliament; which is usually treated as a privilege and trust, instead of a right.

To FRAÑCHISE, (franchise) v. a. to make or keep free.

FRAÑCIA, DR. JOSEPH G. RODRIGUEZ, the notorious and slandered dictator of Paraguay, S. America. He was a barrister, and considerably advanced beyond the prime of life, when the political movements amongst the Spanish colonies of that quarter of the world began; but he distinguished himself by his ardor, and by the prudence of his proceedings; and being placed at the head of affairs, first as a counsel along with General Yegras, and afterwards as dictator, he made his name a terror to intermeddling visitors from other states, but a protection to his own people. The common tales about him are ridiculously malignant. He died in 1840, aged 82 years.

FRAÑCIS, ST. (of Assisi), a famous personage in the ecclesiastical history of Europe, of the 13th century. He was induced by a voice heard, or imagined, to attend to religion, according to the notions of his times; and, after much opposition, he went forth with the zeal and in the manner of the first preachers of the gospel. At first despised, his perseverance gained him followers, and he established a new order of monks, distinguished from the other orders by their subsisting on alms. He never ceased to extend his reform by itinerating; and even accompanied the crusaders to Damietta, and made an attempt on the sultan's faith. His fame for all monastic graces surpasses that of most saints. He is the centre of a world of miracles, that of the stigmata, or impression of the likeness of the wounds of Christ on his person, wholly through his ceaseless prayers, being about the most astounding. He died in 1220, aged 42 years.

FRAÑCIS, the name of two kings of France, the first of whom is celebrated for his chivalry and courage in war. After gaining renown in Italy, he competed with Charles I. of Spain for the imperial crown, and being defeated, made war on Charles immediately; but almost immediately all things proved adverse, allies turned against him, generals deserted him, fortune herself forsook him, and he was defeated at Pavia, and carried a prisoner to Madrid. After his release he began the war anew, and seemed to gain some advantage by the troubled state of the empire in consequence of the Reformation. Shortly after, the truce of Nice brought on a show of friendship between these monarchs, which was succeeded by war again, till the peace of Crespi gave Francis a year or two of rest before his death. This is all that can be said of his reign; personally he had all that makes a perfect character in chivalry, with all that points out a heart utterly careless of all that is good in man or monarch. He died in 1547, aged 53 years, and in the 32nd year of his reign. The second Francis is known chiefly as the first husband of the beautiful and hapless Mary Queen of Scots. During his brief and nominal reign, the train was preparing for the extinction of growing freedom of thought in France, by the destruction of those who embraced the doctrines of the Reformation. He died in 1560, aged but 17 years, and having had the name of king for about a year and a half.

FRAÑCIS, the name of two emperors of Germany. The first was husband to Maria Theresa. His reign was one of troubles, the most disastrous of which was the Seven Years' war. He died in 1765, aged 57 years, having reigned 20. Francis II. has gained a name through the part forced on him during the French Revolution and the following changes. War with France was a part of his inheritance, and he abode by it. His first war was ended by Buonaparte's first Italian victories, and the peace of Campo Formio. His second, by the defeats at Marengo and Hohenlinden, and the treaty of Lunéville. His third, by Austerlitz, and the peace of Presburg. His fourth, by Wagram, and the peace of Schönbrunn. His fifth, by the victory of the allies at Leipzig, and their march to Paris, followed by the doubtful period ending in Waterloo. Napoleon had married the daughter of Francis, Maria Louisa, before the last campaign. His subsequent government was not distinguished by any thing better than that of an absolute monarchy, aided by ministers of more or less judgment. Austria has advanced in many respects, but not in freedom. He was the last emperor of Germany, that title and its elective character having been superseded in him by the hereditary title of Emperor of Austria. He died in 1835, aged 67 years, having reigned 43.

FRAÑCIS, DR. PHILIP, an Irish clergyman, and dramatic writer of some notoriety in his own day, now known almost solely by his translation of Horace. The preferences he held were all in England. He died in 1773, aged about 60 years.

FRAÑCIS, SIR PHILIP, son of the preceding, a politician of such note as to be one of the parties fixed upon as the author of Junius' Letters. The offices he held were of a subordinate character, but in India he gained the ill-will of Warren Hastings, which he repaid by a duel, which gave him so little satisfaction, that, gaining a seat in parliament, on his return home, he lent all his aid to Hastings' impeachment. He was a stern adherent of the Whig party, and advocated in parliament all their measures. He died in 1818, aged 78 years.

FRAÑCISCANS, in Ecclesiastical History, an order of monks, called also Gray Friars, from the colour of their dress, and Minors or Minorites, for no assignable cause; which was founded by St. Francis of Assisi, and was the first mendicant order established. They wore a gray gown, and a girdle of knotted cord, but no sandals; were vowed to the usual ideal of monkish excellence, and, beside that, to preach every where and any where; and to subsist by alms not receiving bequests of land, &c. They were very numerous, and figure often and conspicuously in the centuries immediately preceding the Reformation.

FRÄNCKE, AUGUSTUS HERMANN, a distinguished divine of Germany, more renowned for his practical piety. He was a man of great learning, and at Halle held successively professorships of Greek and Eastern languages, and of theology. He laboured with ceaseless zeal amongst the population of a poor village near Halle, as pastor, also. The great monument of his goodness is, however, the Orphan House at Halle, which he founded, a noble institution; connected with which were others, all having for their object the noblest good of men; the most remarkable of which is a printing establishment for Bibles. He died in 1727, aged 65 years. His character for beauty and consistency of piety, and fervour without pretence, has seldom been equalled.

FRÄNCKE DE SALES, ST., a zealous Romanist ecclesiastic, who, because of his endeavours to proselyte the Savoyard Protestants, was made bishop of Geneva; and whose name, in connexion with that of Madame de Chantal, has become so well known. He was a pattern for directors, as they are called, whose duty it is to guide the devotions of others. He died in 1622, aged 57 years.

FRÄNCKE, CAPE, the name of two capes in the island of Hayti, or St. Domingo.

FRÄNGIBLE, a. [frango, Lat.] brittle; easily broken.

FRÄNION, s. a paramour; a boon companion.

FRANK, a. [franc, Fr.] liberal; generous, opposed to niggardly. Open and free, opposed to reserved. Without restraint or conditions.

FRANK, s. a place to feed hogs in; a sty, so called from a profusion of food; till the late postage reform, a case of a letter signed by a member of parliament. Frank is also an appellation given by the Turks, and other eastern nations, to any European Christian.

To FRANK, v. a. to shut up in a sty. In Commerce, till lately, to exempt letters from paying postage, a privilege given every member of parliament, who wrote the person's address to whom it was sent with his own hand, and also the day of the month for which the frank was intended.

FRANKALMOIGNE, s. the same which we in Latin call libera elemosyna, or free alms, in English; whence that tenure is commonly known among our English lawyers by the name of a tenure in frank almonne, or frankalmoigne, which, according to Britton, is a tenure by divine service.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAINE, a city of Germany, which, with the small district immediately around it, constitutes a republic, lying in the midst of the states of Hesse, on the Maine, which runs through it, though the chief part of the town lies on the N. bank of the river. It is fortified and regularly built, and has some fine buildings, and a fine library. It is a place of great trade, having two fairs yearly, famed throughout Europe; it has also some manufactures. Population, about 50,000. Lat. 50. 10. N. Long. 8. 37. E. This town was one of the most famous of the imperial free cities.

FRANKFORT ON THE ODER, a town of Prussia, lying on the W. bank of the Oder, is a fortified and well-built place, has a university with a good library, some manufactures, three annual fairs, and a fame rivaling that of the preceding town. It is 48 miles from Berlin. Population, about 25,000. Lat. 52. 20. N. Long. 14. 32. E.

FRANKFORT, capital city of Kentucky, United States. It stands on Kentucky river, over which it has a chain-bridge. It is regularly built, and has a fine state-house, and other public buildings. It has some trade by means of the river, steam-boats of 300 tons being able to come up to it at high water. It is 642 miles from Washington. Pop. 1917. Six other towns in the States bear the same name.

FRANKINCENSE, v. a. dry, resinous, inflammable substance, in pieces or drops, of a pale yellowish or white colour, a strong, but not offensive smell, and a bitter, acid, and resinous taste: it is used in medicine. There is another kind not genuine.

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN, an American citizen celebrated for his discoveries in electrical science, and still more for the part he took in the American Revolution. He was born at Boston, and learnt the art of printing from his brother, with whom it appears he found little sympathy. He attempted to set up a business in England, but had to return to America poorer than he left it. We find him in Philadelphia next, printer and postmaster, newspaper editor, natural philosopher, representative, and militia colonel; and finally, agent in England. This second visit introduced him to the great scientific characters; and honours were thickly and deservedly bestowed on him. His third visit related to the Stamp Act, which first kindled the flame of discontent in the colonies. At the outbreak of the war of independence, he went as ambassador to France. After his return, he was engaged in the congress, and as president of the council of Pennsylvania; and appeared last before the public as an opponent of slavery. He died in 1790, aged 84 years. His character was one of remarkable simplicity and manliness. In all things the clear common-sense and sound feeling, which was his great gift, appeared. The part he took in the liberation of his country, has made his glory deathless there. And that, added to the lustre of his scientific discoveries, has given him a place in the records of the world's heroes, not far behind the very foremost rank.

FRÄNKLY, ad. generously; freely; without constraint or reserve.

FRÄNKNESS, s. plainness; openness, or ingenuousness of speech, opposed to reserve. Liberality, or bounteousness, applied to giving. SYNON. Sincerity prevents our speaking otherwise than we think, and is a virtue. Frankness makes us speak as we think, and is a natural effect. Plainness is speaking freely what we think, and springs sometimes from want of reflection. Ingenuousness makes us declare whatever we know, and is often a folly.

FRÄNKLEDGE, s. [franciplegium, low Lat.] a pledge or surety for a freeman.

FRÄNKWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of heath.

FRÄNTIC, a. [corrupted from phrenetic, phreneticus, Gr.] mad; deprived of the use of understanding by madness. Figuratively, transported by an outrageous violence of passion.

FRÄNTICLY, ad. madly; like one who has lost the use of his reason.

FRÄNTICNESS, s. madness. Figuratively, outrageousness of passion.

FRÄTHERNALLY, a. [frater, Lat.] brotherly; pertaining to or becoming brothers.

FRÄTHERNALLY, ad. brotherly; like brothers.

FRÄTHERNITY, s. the state or quality of a brother; a body of men united or incorporated. Men of the same class or character.

FRÄTRICIDE, s. [frater and cædo, Lat.] the murder of a brother.

FRÄUD, s. [fraus, Lat.] the practice of deceit, in order to deprive another of his property; the act of imposing on a person by artful appearances; a stratagem, artifice, or trick.

FRÄUDFUL, a. treacherous; deceitful; tricky; subtle.

FRÄUDULENCE, s. [fraus, Lat.] deceitfulness; proneness to artifice and dishonest practices.

FRÄUDULENT, a. full of artifice; dishonest; indirect; imposing on by specious and false pretences; treacherous.

FRÄUDULENTLY, ad. in a deceitful, tricky, and dishonest manner.

FRÄUGHT, (fraut) part. of FRAIGHT, now written FREIGHT; full; loaded.

To FRÄUGHT, (fraut) by corruption for FREIGHT; v. a. to freight, load, or crowd.

FRÄUHOFER, JOSEPH, a celebrated optician of Germany. He was of poor origin, and began life as a glass-cutter; being buried by the fall of a house, his remarkable rescue brought him under the notice of the king of Bavaria, which laid the foundation of his subsequent fame. In the making of lenses his practical acquaintance with the art was invaluable to him; and by patient and unremitting study he was able to acquire such mathematical skill, as led him into most recondite researches respecting the laws of optics. His discoveries relate principally to the abstruse question of the diffraction of light. He died in 1826, aged 39 years.

FRÄY, s. [frayer, Fr.] a battle; a broil; a fight; a duel. To FRÄY, v. a. [frayer, Fr.] to fight or terrify.—[frayer, Fr.] to rub or wear out by rubbing.

FREAK, (freak) s. [fræc, Sax.] a sudden and whimsical change of place; a whim, or a capricious, trifling, and mad prank or action.

To FREAK, v. a. to variegate; to checker. "Freak'd with many a mingled hue," Thomson.

FREAKISH, (freakish) a. wanton, humorous, capricious, or whimsical.

FREAKISHLY, ad. capriciously, whimsically.

FREAKISHNESS, (freakishness) s. capriciousness, or a madness and boyish wantonness of behaviour.

FREAM, (freem) s. a name given by farmers to ploughed land worn out of heart, and laid fallow till it recover.

TO FREAM, (freem) v. a. [freemo, Lat.] to growl; to make a noise, as a boar at rutting time.

FRECKLE, s. [fleck, Teut.] a spot raised in the skin by the heat of the sun's rays; any small spot or discolouring.

FRECKLED, FRECKLY, a. having spots on the skin occasioned by the heat of the sun; spotted.

FRED, s. the same with peace; upon which our forefathers called their sanctuaries fredestole, i. e. the seats of peace. So Frederick is powerful or wealthy in peace; Winfred, victorious peace; Reinfred, sincere peace.

FREDERICK, the name of three emperors of Germany. Frederick I.; see BARBAROSSA. Frederick II. has gained a name of questionable credit by his quarrels with the pope and other strange proceedings. He was excommunicated by Gregory for not fulfilling his vow of going on a crusade for the recovery of Jerusalem. Afterwards he went unabsolved, and made a truce with the sultan after a very ineffectual demonstration against him. On his return he engaged warmly against the pope, who was incessantly plotting against him, and by the rapidity and decision of his movements wearied him till he died. But Frederick never found the church his friend. The interests of the empire and of the church in Italy were irreconcilable. Frederick was at last excommunicated as a heretic and enemy of all religion. This 30 years' struggle against the pope at last wore out his robust frame, and hoping vainly for reconciliation with the pontiff, through the kindly offices of St. Louis, he died in 1250, aged 56 years. It is to be regretted that this stout-hearted opponent of the papacy was not worthy of admiration in his private life. Frederick III. was an insignificant prince, but it was his lot to reign for 53 years, during the most interesting part of the 15th century; for during his reign Constantinople fell before the Turkish power, and the modern history of mankind had commenced. He died in 1493, aged 78 years.

FREDERICK, the name of two kings of Prussia, the first of whom changed the designation of that state from the electorate of Brandenburg to that of the kingdom of Prussia. Frederick II. is commonly known as the Great Frederick. He was most strangely treated in his youth by his almost maniac father; but being banished from the court by one of his whims, he returned a different character: he had acquired that resolution and self-confidence which never deserted him, and raised him to his eminence in history. On ascending the throne his first deed was the annexation of Silesia, &c. to his patrimonial states. In the peace that followed he devoted himself with great wisdom to the domestic concerns of his kingdom. But this was broken up by the Seven Years' war, which left him, though weakened in resources, unharmed in his possessions. And these were increased shortly afterwards by a share of Poland. The remainder of his life was spent in almost unbroken peace. Literature appeared to be his business, royalty and government his relaxation. He attracted to his court all the noted men of the time, especially such as were of sceptical and infidel dispositions. His days were passed with the most scrupulous regularity; but with no more state than the life of a private gentleman. His attention to his country led to many great improvements in its productions, &c. But he must be ranked amongst the absolute monarchs, to whom national freedom seems a sheer absurdity. He died in 1789, aged 75 years.

FREDERICK WILLIAM, was elector of Brandenburg during the later part of the Thirty Years' war, to whom the kingdom of Prussia owed its preservation; it being so reduced by the fortunes of that war when he succeeded to the government, and by his wise and strong management its being raised to a much higher rank amongst European states, besides having its injuries repaired. He died in 1688, aged 65 years. It is also the name of three kings of Prussia. The first was the famous military-drill and tall-soldier maniac. He managed affairs of routine very well, but his absolutism overthrew his reason. He died in 1740, aged 52 years. The second lived only to take part in the first wars of the European aristocracies and monarchs against revolutionary France, dying in 1797. The third was engaged in all the long continental struggle against Napoleon, and cannot be separated from the events which belong to European history. After the peace in 1815, he retired to his own kingdom, and devoted himself to the advance of its welfare to the best of his power. He has had the praise accorded him of having been one chief reason for the long peace. He died in 1840, aged 70 years, and having reigned 43.

FREDERICK, Maryland, United States. A town of considerable importance to the trade of the State, being second only to Baltimore. It is handsomely built, and has some elegant public buildings. It is 43 miles from Washington. Pop. 5182.

FREE, a. [freah, Sax.] at liberty; under no constraint, slavery, imprisonment, or necessity; permitted; allowed; licentious; unrestrained; open; ingenuous; expressing one's sentiments without reserve; generous; or liberal; voluntary; guiltless; innocent. Exempt, used with from or of. In Politics, invested with privileges; possessing any thing without vassalage; admitted to the privilege of a corporation. "A free-man." Without charge or expense; hence a free-school.

TO FREE, v. a. to set at liberty, or deliver from slavery; to exempt.

FREEBOOTER, s. a robber, pillager, or plunderer.

FREEBOOTING, s. a robbery; plundering; the act of pillaging.

FREEBORN, a. born under a free government, opposed to a slave.

FREE-CHAPEL, s. such chapels as are of the king's foundation, and by him exempted from the jurisdiction of the ordinary. The king may also license a subject to found such a chapel, and by his charter exempt it from the ordinary's visitation.

FREE CHURCH (or KIRK) OF SCOTLAND, a large and compact body of Presbyterians in Scotland, who in 1843 separated themselves from the Established Church. Their organization differs in no respect from that of other Presbyterian bodies; nor does their creed differ from that of the rest of the Scottish Presbyterians. They hold (as a body) the establishment principle; but do not agree to the patronage and superiority claimed by governments which undertake the protection or the use of churches.

FREE/COST, s. freedom from expense.

FREE/DMAN, s. in ancient Rome, a slave manumitted.

FREE/DOM, s. exemption from slavery or restraint; independence; a state wherein a person has the power of acting as he pleases; the privileges of a corporation; franchises. Ease or facility, applied to action or speaking.

FREEHEARTED, a. liberal; generous.

FREE/HOLD, s. in Law, a free estate which a man holdeth in fee, or feotal, or for a term of life.

FREE/HOLDER, s. one who has a freehold.

FREE/LY, ad. at liberty; without restraint, dependence, reserve, scruple, compulsion, or necessity; liberally; spontaneously.

FREE/MAN, s. one who is neither a slave nor vassal to another; a member of a community or corporation, entitled to and enjoying its privileges.

FREE/NESS, s. absence of constraint or impediment; openness of behaviour; generosity, or liberality.

FREE/SCHOOL, (freeshool) s. a school supported by endowment or subscriptions, wherein children are taught without expense to their parents or relations.

FREESPOKEN, a. accustomed to speak without reserve.

FREE/STONE, s. a kind of stone commonly used in building, and so called because it may be wrought easily in any direction.

FREE/THINKER, s. a term commonly applied to those persons who deny revelation, or the Christian religion.

FREETRADE, s. in Political Economy, the principle of the non-interference of governments with commerce, leaving trade to its own laws, and not impeding the interchange of commodities between different people. Also, the principle opposed to monopoly in trade, by which commodities are obtained better in quality and cheaper in price than when the sale is in the hands of one man, or one party of men.

FREE/WILL, s. the power of directing our own actions; voluntariness. In Theology, a technical but incorrect term used by those who oppose the Necessitarian hypothesis, which, in denying freedom to the will, denies the existence of the will itself.

FREEWOMAN, s. a woman not enslaved.

To FREEZE, v. a. pret. froze; [frigor, Belg.] to grow hard by excess of cold; to be of that degree of cold by which water congeals.—v. a. the participle is frozen or frose; to harden by cold; to chill by loss of power or motion.

FREIBURG, a town of Saxony, fortified, and once a very populous and celebrated place. It is now chiefly known by its mining school, which is greatly aided by its position. It stands amidst the Erzgebirge mountains, at a considerable elevation. Here are some small manufactories, chiefly in metal. Population, under 15,000. Lat. 50. 56. N. Long. 13. 9. E.

To FREIGHT, (frailt) v. a. pret. freighted, part. freighted; but being used as an adjective, freighted is substituted for it; [freter, Fr.] to put goods or a cargo on board a ship, to load as the burden or cargo within a vessel.

FREIGHT, (frailt) s. any thing with which a ship is loaded; the money paid for the carriage of goods in a ship or vessel.

FREJUS, a town in the department of Var. It was the Forum Julii of the Romans; and had then a sea-port on the sea-coast, which is now a mile and a half distant. There still remains an aqueduct, an amphitheatre, statues, inscriptions, &c. It is above 500 miles from Paris. Population, about 3000. Lat. 43. 26. N. Long. 6. 50. E.

FRENCH, a. [franc, Fr.] belonging to France. Used elliptically for the language spoken by the inhabitants of France. French chalk is of a smooth glossy surface, soft and unctuous to the touch, of a grayish colour.

To FRENCHIFY, v. a. to infect with the pronunciation or of a Frenchman; generally used in a contemptuous sense, and including the idea of affected ceremoniousness and excess of politeness.

FRENETIC, a. See PHRENETIC.

FRENZY, s. [phrenitis, Gr.] madness; the loss of reason, attended with raving; any outrageous passion, bordering on and resembling madness.

FREQUENCE, s. [frequens, Lat.] a concourse, crowd, or assembly. Seldom used.

FREQUENCY, s. the condition of a thing often done or seen, a crowded assembly.

FREQUENT, a. [frequens, Lat.] often done, seen, occurring, or practising; full of concourse.

FREQUENT, v. a. to visit often; to be often in any place.

FREQUENTABLE, a. conversable; accessible. Not used.

FREQUENTATIVE, a. [frequentativus, Fr.] a grammatical term applied to verbs, signifying the frequent repetition of an action.

FREQUENTER, s. one who resorts often to a place.

FREQUENTLY, ad. often; commonly. SYNON. We often disguise our thoughts; by doing the same thing often, it becomes habitual. We frequently meet with traitors; we frequently do those things which we repent of afterwards.

FRESCATI, a beautiful village in the pope's territories. This place, with Tivoli and Albano, is the favourite abode of landscape painters, who travel into Italy for improvement, since the scenery is, on all sides, so exquisite. Frescati is 12 miles from Rome. Lat. 41. 48. N. Long. 12. 42. E.

FRESCO, [ital.] s. coolness; shade; duskiness. In Painting, a picture painted with water colours on fresh plaster.

FRESH, a. [frische, Fr.] cool; not stagnating; lately or newly produced or made; not salt; not faded; vigorous; ruddy of countenance. Brisk, applied to a gale of wind. Not sour, nor rapid, applied to liquors. Sweet, opposed to stinking. SYNON. That which has not been used is new; that which is not stale is fresh; that which has just happened is recent. We say of clothes, that they are new; of topics, that they are fresh; of actions, that they are recent.

FRESH, s. water that is without salt.

To FRESHEN, v. a. to recover a thing which is grown stale; to cherish or revive.—v. n. to blow strongly; to free from its salts.

FRESHET, s. a pool of fresh water. "All fish from sea or shore, freshet, or purling brook." Milt.

FRESHLY, ad. coolly; newly; with a ruddy countenance.

FRESHNESS, s. newness; unabated vigour; freedom from fatigue; coolness; ruddiness; freedom from saltiness. Spirit, or briskness, applied to liquors.

FRESNEL, AUGUSTINE JOHN, an eminent optical philosopher of France, whose experiments have done so much to determine the laws of reflexion and polarisation. He died in 1827, aged 39 years.

FRET, s. [probably from freudum, Lat.] a frith or strait of the sea; any fermentation or agitation of liquors. In Music, a stop to regulate the vibrations of the strings. Figuratively, anxiety of mind; peevishness or commotion of the temper. In Architecture, work rising in protuberances or relief. In Heraldry, a bearing consisting of six bars, crossed and interlaced.

To FRET, v. a. to wear by rubbing against; to move violently; to corrode or eat away; to form into raised work or relief; to variegate or diversify; to vex or make angry; to be grieved or uneasy; to ferment.

FRETFUL, a. peevish; angry.

FRETFULLY, ad. in a peevish manner.

FRETFULNESS, s. peevishness.

FRETTY, a. adorned with raised work. In Heraldry, where divers bars are laid across each other.

FRIBILITY, s. capacity of being easily reduced to powder.

FRIBLE, a. [frío, Lat.] easily crumbled or reduced to powder.

FRÍAR, s. [a corruption of frere, Fr.] a brother of a religious order, in the Roman Catholic countries; chiefly applied to the Mendicant orders.

FRÍARLY, a. like a friar.

FRÍAR'S-CROWN, s. in Botany, the woolly-headed thistle.

FRÍARY, s. a convent of friars.

FRÍBBLE, [fríbbler, s. an effeminate coxcomb.

FRÍBOURG, a canton of Switzerland, bounded by the cantons of Berne and Vaud, and by the lake of Neuchâtel. It is about 45 miles in length and 25 in breadth. The Alps extend into this canton, and some of the heights are 6000 and 7000 feet. It is chiefly an agricultural or pastoral district, yet the existence of coal mines has introduced some manufactories. It has a few small streams flowing into Lake Morat and Lake Neuchâtel. Pop. nearly 100,000.

FRÍBOURG, the capital of the foregoing canton of Switzerland, stands on the river Sane, on a hill side, so as to have a very fine appearance, and to command a noble prospect. The streets are wide; the public buildings, especially the cathedral, are very handsome; it has several bridges over the river, and a fine museum. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 46. 50. N. Long. 75. E.

FRÍCASSEE, s. [Fr.] a dish consisting of meat cut into small pieces and fried.

FRÍCATION, [fríctio, (fríctum) s. [frico, Lat.] the act of rubbing two things together; the resistance caused in machines by the rubbing of one part against another. Friction rollers, or friction wheels, are small rollers on wheels placed between surfaces of bodies being moved against or over each other to diminish the friction.

FRÍDAY, s. [fríedag, Sax.] is the sixth day of the week; so named from Fréya, a goddess worshipped by our Saxon ancestors.

FRIEND, (friend) s. [freund, Sax.] one who is joined to another in mutual benevolence and intimacy, opposed to an enemy. One reconciled to another.

To FRIEND, (friend) v. a. to show favour towards a person or undertaking; to countenance, encourage, or support.

FRIENDLESS, (friendless) a. having no friends; without hopes, assistance, or countenance.

FRIENDLINESS, (friendliness) s. a disposition towards friendship; the exertion of benevolence, or performance of kind offices.

FRIENDLY, (friendly) a. kind; disposed to do acts of kindness and affection; having the temper and disposition of a friend.

FRIENDLY, (friendly) ad. in a kind, affectionate, and benevolent manner.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, are institutions for the purpose of affording to members who pay a certain sum weekly, or monthly, relief and assistance in cases of sickness, want of work, old age, &c.

FRIENDLY ISLANDS, a cluster or clusters of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, containing above 100 separate islands, distinguished for their delicious climate, and for the fertility of their soil. The native trees of the greatest value, are the bread-fruit trees; the only quadrupeds known, were such as had escaped from ships that had touched there. This name is sometimes extended so as to include the Navigators' and the Pejee Islands. Captain Cook named them Friendly from the manifestation of kindness to him on the part of the islanders.

FRIENDSHIP, (friendship) s. (friendship, Belg.) the state of minds united together by mutual benevolence; the highest degree of intimacy; favour or personal kindness.

FRIESLAND, a province of the kingdom of Holland, lying between the German Ocean and the Zuyder Zee, and bounded by the provinces of Groningen, Drent, and Overijssel. It is about 40 miles in each direction. The surface is flat and boggy, having all the appearance of being hardly recovered from the sea. Agriculture is carried on to some extent, and in the drier marshes cattle are grazed. There are some manufactures, but the chief trade is in seeds. The drainage is effected chiefly by canals, but there are some rivers, and several lakes. Pop. about 230,000. Leewards is its chief town. This was once called W. Friesland to distinguish it from another province, now belonging to Hanover, which was E. Friesland.

FRIEZE, (freeze) s. [drap de frise, Fr.] a coarse warm cloth, made, perhaps, originally in Friesland. In Architecture, a large flat member, which separates the architrave from the cornice; of which there are as many kinds as there are orders of columns.

FRIEGATE, s. (frigate, Fr.) a small man of war. In Natural History, a sea-bird of prey, which resembles the albatross.

TO FRIGHT, (fright) v. a. [frighten, Sax.] to disturb, shock, or daunt with fear; to raise apprehension of danger in a person.

FRIGHT, (fright) s. a sudden emotion caused by an apprehension of danger.

TO FRIGHTEEN, (frighten) v. a. to shock or disturb with an apprehension of danger.

FRIGHTFUL, (frightful) a. causing fear; exciting terror.

FRIGHTFULLY, (frightfully) ad. in such a manner as to disturb with an apprehension of danger.

FRIGHTFULNESS, (frightfulness) s. the quality of daunting with an apprehension of danger.

FRIGID, a. [frigo, Lat.] cold; wanting zeal or warmth of affection; dull; impotent.

FRIGIDITY, s. coldness, or want of warmth; dullness, or want of the embellishments of rhetoric, or the warmth of imagination.

FRIGIDLY, ad. in a cold, dull, indifferent, or unaffecting manner.

FRIGIDNESS, s. coldness; dullness; want of affection.

FRIGORIFIC, a. [frigus and facio, Lat.] causing cold.

TO FRILL, v. n. [frilleur, Fr.] to quake or shiver with cold.

Used of a hawk; as the hawk frills.

FRILL, s. a narrow border of lace, cambric, or other linen, sewed on the neck of a woman's shift, or on the bosom and slits of the sleeves of a man's shirt.

FRINGE, s. [frange, Fr.] an ornament consisting of threads, which are fastened at one end by weaving, but hang down loose at the other.

TO FRINGE, v. a. to adorn with fringes; to unravel any woollen stuff so as to resemble a fringe.

FRIPPERER, s. [frippier, Fr.] one who deals in old things vamped up.

FRIPPERY, s. [fripperie, Fr.] the place where old clothes or other second-hand goods are sold; old clothes; cast dresses; tattered rags.

TO FRISK, v. n. [frizzare, Ital.] to leap or skip about with nimbleness; to dance in a wanton or gay manner.

FRISK, s. a frolic; a fit of wanton gaiety.

FRISKER, s. a wanton or frolicsome person; one too gay to be constant or settled.

FRISKINESS, s. gaiety; liveliness.

FRIT, s. among chemists, ashes or salt baked or fried together with sand.

FRITH, s. [fretum, Lat.] a strait of the sea; a net.

FRITILLARY, s. in Botany, the common chequered daffodil.

FRITINANCY, s. [fritinio, low Lat.] the scream or screeking of an insect, applied to that of the cricket or grasshopper.

FRITTER, s. [friture, Fr.] a small pancake, or piece fried. Figuratively, a fragment or small piece; a cheese cake, or wig.

TO FRITTER, v. a. to cut meat into small pieces, to be fried; to break into small pieces or fragments.

FRIVOLOUS, a. [frivolus, Lat.] trifling; of no importance or moment.

FRIVOLOUSLY, ad. triflingly; without weight.

FRIVOLOUSNESS, s. want of weight or importance.

TO FRIZZLE, v. a. [friser, Fr.] to turn hair in short or small rings like the wool on a lamb's head, or the nap of frieze.

FRIZZLER, s. one who dresses hair in short curls.

FRO, ad. [fra, Sax.] backward; regressively. It is only used in opposition to to; — To and fro, backward and forward. It is also a contraction of from.

FROBENIUS, JOHN, a learned printer of the 16th century, who lived at Basle, and introduced several improvements into the art. He was the friend and printer of Erasmus, who lived with him. He died in 1527, aged 67 years.

FROBISHER, SIR MARTIN, a gallant admiral of Queen Elizabeth, whose early life was passed in fruitless endeavours to discover the Eldorado in the W. continent, and who only brought back maritime experience, and knowledge of new and fruitful regions, which after all were the true Eldorado, had men but known it. He commanded part of the fleet which attacked and defeated the Spanish Armada; and was honoured with other commands afterwards. He was wounded off Brest in 1594, and died, aged about 60 years.

FROCK, s. [froc, Fr.] a close and untrimmed coat for men; a close gown worn by children.

FRODSHAM, Cheshire. A town situated on the river Weaver, (over which it has a stone bridge,) near its conflux with the Mersey, with a harbour for vessels of good burden, and communicating with all the late inland navigations. Cotton is manufactured, and salt refined here. It is 182 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 5821.

FROG, (s. [frogga, Sax.] in Natural History, the name of a genus of the order Reptiles, distinguished by their having smooth, slimy skins, no tails, and being capable of leaping a considerable distance by the structure of their hind legs. The common frog is usually variegated with brown or green. It is oviparous, and its spawn consists of the thick, spotted, jelly-like substance seen in ditches and ponds in the early spring. The bull-frog, which is a very large American species, and makes a very loud noise in its singing season; the tree-frog, which lives in shrubs and trees instead of marshes; and the green-frog, are other singular foreign species. In Farriery, it is the hollow part of a horse's hoof, or the frush.

FROGBIT, s. in Botany, a water-plant, with thick, smooth, brown-green, kidney-shaped leaves, and white blossoms.

FROGCHIESE, s. in Botany, a kind of fungus, found on rich pastures and dunghills; called also puff-ball.

FROISE, s. [froisser, Fr.] a pancake with bacon fried in it.

FROISSART, JOHN, a French chronicler of the 14th century. He obtained a post in the service of Philip, Edward III.'s queen, and visited England, and became acquainted with the Scotch, and with the Black Prince. He afterwards travelled in various parts of Europe, and was welcomed at the different courts, as was due to a minstrel of such gifts as he. He entered for short periods of time the service of different kings and nobles, and found time to collect a number of songs and other pieces under the guise of a romance, beside writing his Chronicle, which, as a contemporary history, is of a great value. He died about 1400, aged about 60 years.

FROLIC, a. [erolijck, Belg.] joyful; full of levity or wanton pranks.

FROLIC, s. a sally of gaiety or levity.

TO FROLIC, v. n. to divert oneself with sallies of gaiety; to play wild, wanton, and merry pranks.

FROLICHOME, a. full of wild gaiety.

FROLICOMELY, ad. with wild gaiety.

FROLICOMENESS, s. wildness of gaiety; wanton gaiety; pranks.

FROM, prep. [fram, Sax.] away. Out of, noting place. Separation, applied to absence, distance, or deliverance. Since, applied to time. Contrary, or foreign, applied to relation. "From the purpose," Shak. Removal or motion. "Thrice from the ground she leaped," Dryd. It is frequently joined by an ellipsis with adverbs, as, from above, i. e. from the part above; from below; from beneath; from behind; from far; from high; from where; from without. When joined to thence or whence, it is superfluous. And it is sometimes followed by the subsequent prepositions with their proper cases, viz. from amidst, beyond, forth, off, out, out of, under, and within.

FROME, or FROME SELWOOD, Somersetshire. It is noted for its fine beer, and chiefly inhabited by clothiers. It is situated on the river Frome, which abounds with trout, eels, &c., and over which it has a stone bridge. It is 104 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 11,849.

FROND, s. in Descriptive Botany, a term used for such leaves as those of the fern, in which the stem is inseparably connected with the leaf or leaflets.

FRONDE, in French History, a party in the state who opposed Cardinal Mazarin and the queen regent, in the early days of the reign of Louis XIV. There was much bloodshed before this party was finally put down, and the two greatest generals of the day, Turenne and Condé, engaged in a street fight, which ended in the discomfiture of the king and the cardinal. But Mazarin had power to wait, and he finally triumphed. It was a miserable affair when looked at from this distance of time, as all mere party contests always are.

FRONDI FEROUS, a. [frons and fero, Lat.] bearing leaves. FRONT, s. [front, Fr.] the forefront of the face or forehead. Figuratively, the face, countenance, or look, in a sense of censure or dislike; the part or place opposite to the face; the forefront; the van of an army; the most conspicuous part.

To FRONT, v. a. to oppose directly, or face to face; to stand opposite or over-against any place or thing; to cover the forefront of a building with any materials.—v. n. to stand foremost.

FRONTAL, s. [frontal, Fr.] an ornament worn on the forehead. In Architecture, a small pediment over a little door.

FRONTATED, a. [frontatus, from frons, Lat.] in Botany, applied to the leaf of a flower which grows broader and narrower, and at last, perhaps, terminates in a right line; used in opposition to cuspidated, which is, when the leaves of a flower end in a point.

FRONTIER, (frontere) s. [frontiere, Fr.] the marches, utmost limits, or boundaries of a country, by which it is separated from the next adjoining one.

FRONTIER, (frontere) a. bordering; adjacent.

FRONTISPIECE, (frontispiece) s. [frontispiece, Fr.] that part of a building or other thing which directly meets the eye; a cut or picture fronting the title-page of a book.

FRONTLESS, a. without blushes, shame, or diffidence.

FRONTLET, s. [fronteau, Fr.] a bandage worn on the forehead.

FROST, s. [frost, Sax.] an excessive cold state of the weather, whereby the motion and fluidity of liquors are suspended; or that state of the air whereby fluids are converted into ice.

FROSTBITTEN, a. nipped or withered by the frost.

FROSTED, a. resembling the hoar-frost on plants, &c.

FROSTILY, ad. after the manner of frost; with excessive cold. Figuratively, with indifference, or coldness of affection.

FROSTINESS, s. the quality of appearing like frost; cold, or freezing cold.

FROSTNAIL, s. a nail with a prominent head driven into the horse's shoes that may pierce the ice.

FROSTY, a. having the power of freezing; excessively cold. Figuratively, indifferent, or without warmth of affection; hoary; gray-headed; resembling frost in colour.

FROTH, s. [froe, Dan. and Scot.] the white bubbles raised on the top of fermenting liquor; an empty or senseless display of wit, wanting solidity.

To FROTH, v. n. to be covered with light and whitish bubbles, applied to fermenting liquor; to make liquors appear with a whitish head or surface.

FROTHILY, ad. having a white head or surface, applied to liquors. Figuratively, in an empty, vain, and trifling manner.

FROTHY, a. full of foam, or having its surface covered with white bubbles; soft.

To FROUNCE, v. a. to frizzle or curl the hair about the face.

FROUZY, a. dim; musty; of a nasty and disagreeable scent.

FROWARD, a. [froweard, Sax.] peevish; fretful; cross; ungovernable; not easily pleased; perverse.

FROWARDLY, ad. peevishly; perversely.

FROWARDNESS, s. peevishness; perverseness.

To FROWN, v. n. [frowner, old Fr.] to express displeasure by contracting the forehead into wrinkles; to look stern.

FROWN, s. a look wherein a person knits his eye-brows, and contracts his forehead into wrinkles, in token of displeasure.

FROWINGLY, ad. in a stern manner; with a look of displeasure.

FROZEN, part. pass. of To FREEZE. Frozen Ocean, in Geography, a name of the Arctic Ocean.

FRUCTIFICATION, s. the act of causing or of bearing fruit; the power of producing fruit.

To FRUCTIFY, v. a. [fructus and facio, Lat.] to make fruitful; to cause or enable to produce fruit.—v. n. to bear fruit.

FRUCTUOUS, a. [fructueux, Fr.] making fruitful; enabling to produce.

FRUGAL, a. [frugalis, Lat.] thrifty; sparing; not spending in a prodigal manner; not lavish.

FRUGALITY, ad. in a sparing or parsimonious manner.

FRUGALITY, s. [frugalitas, Lat.] the virtue of keeping due bounds in expenses; good husbandry; parsimony. Synon. Frugality implies only discretion of expense; economy includes in its idea some kind of management in order to ek matters out.

FRUGIVOROUS, a. [frux and vor, Lat.] that lives upon fruit. Applied chiefly to birds.

FRUIT, (the i in this word and its derivatives is dropped in pronunciation, and the u sounded long; as frut, frutage, frutful, &c.) s. [fructus, Lat. fruit, Fr.] the produce of a tree or plant which includes the seed, or that part of either which is eaten for food.

FRUITAGE, s. [fruitage, Fr.] fruit, or various products of different vegetables.

FRUITERER, s. [fruitier, Fr.] one who trades in fruit.

FRUTTERY, s. [fruiterie, Fr.] a fruit-loft, or place where fruit is kept.

FRUITFUL, a. fertile; loaded with fruit; productive; plentiful.

FRUITFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to be prolific.

FRUITFULNESS, s. fertility; the act or quality of producing in abundance.

FRUITION, (frutshon) s. [frutor, Lat.] the act of enjoying or possessing; the pleasure given by actual possession and use.

FRUTIVE, a. having the power of enjoyment.

FRUTLESS, (frutless) a. barren. Figuratively, vain; productive of no advantage.

FRUTLESSLY, (frutlessly) ad. in an unprofitable manner.

FRUMENTIUS, ST., the apostle of Ethiopia, who in the 4th century added Abyssinia to the church by his zeal and labours; and was made bishop of Auxuma by St. Athanasius. He died in the latter half of that century.

FRUMENTY, s. [frumentum, Lat.] a food or pottage made of wheat boiled in milk.

To FRUMP, v. a. to mock; to browbeat.

FRUSH, Face, s. in Farriery, a sort of tender horn which arises in the middle of a horse's sole, and divides it into two branches, running towards the heel in the form of a fork.

FRUSTRANEOUS, a. [frustra, Lat.] vain; useless; unprofitable; without advantage.

To FRUSTRATE, v. a. to defeat; disappoint; to render an undertaking or design of no effect; to make null or void.

FRUSTRATE, part. vain; ineffectual; unprofitable; null; defeated; void.

FRUSTRATION, s. disappointment; the act of rendering an undertaking of no effect; defeat.

FRUSTUM, s. [Lat.] in Mathematics, a piece cut off from a regular figure. Frustum of a pyramid, or cone, is a part cut off, usually by a plane parallel to the base.

FRY, ELIZABETH, a member of the Society of Friends, and sister of Joseph John Gurney, who has gained a name in all the world by the patient earnestness with which she cared for the prisoners. In this labour of love she visited almost daily, for many years, Newgate prison, and being a preacher in her society, she addressed the female prisoners, and with the most marked success. Throughout Great Britain and Ireland, in the United States, and in various countries of Europe, either personally or by correspondence, she introduced her humanizing and Christianizing system; and kings and queens have learned at her lips the duties which they are bound to discharge towards such as the arm of the law righteously falls on. In respect of hospitals and lunatic asylums, she was equally interested. No work of faith ever lacked her calm but deep sympathy. She had the rare power of carrying into all she did, in the most public way, the humble beauty of domestic—home-sprung piety. She died as she had lived, in 1845, aged 66 years.

FRY, s. [free, Dan.] the young fish just produced.

To FRY, v. a. [frigo, Lat.] to dress meat in an iron or copper pan over the fire.—v. n. to melt with excessive heat.

FRY, s. a dish of meat or fish fried or designed to be fried; a kind of sieve.

FRYINGPAN, s. the vessel in which meat is roasted on the fire.

To FUB, v. a. See To Fob.

FUB, s. a plump, chubby boy.

FUCHSIA, in Horticulture, a genus of plants indigenous to America, and now very common in our gardens, consisting of several well-marked species and intermediate varieties. It is named after a botanist of Germany who was of some renown in the days of Charles V.

FUCUS, s. [Lat.] in Botany, a large class of proper seaweeds, many various kinds of which are found on our shores.

FUDGE, s. a mere pretence, excuse, colour, or deception; a fiction without truth or reality.

To FUDGLE, v. a. to intoxicate with liquors; to make a person drunk.

FUEGO, Fogo, or St. PHILIP, one of the Cape de Verd Islands, appearing at sea to be one single mountain, though on the sides there are deep valleys. There is a volcano at the top of it, which is in a state of almost uninterrupted eruption. The island is without rivers, and almost without fresh water; yet it is fertile in maize, gourds, water-melons, wild figs, oranges, and apples. A great number of goats run wild upon the mountains, and the profit on their skins is a revenue of the crown. They export also the skins of cattle, horses, asses, and hogs. The island is nearly 5 leagues in length, and is about 330 miles W. of Cape de Verd, and 90 W. of St. Jago. Lat. 15. 10. N. Long. 24. 20. W.

FUEGO, TERRA DEL, an island at the southernmost extremity of the American continent, from which it is divided by Magellan's Strait. It is surrounded by several smaller islands. Cape Horn is on the largest island.

FUEL, s. [feu, Fr.] any thing combustible, used for the purpose of keeping a fire burning. Figuratively, any thing that keeps up a quarrel.

FUGACIOUSNESS, s. [fugio, Lat.] volatility, or the quality of evaporating and flying away.

FUGACITY, s. volatility; the act or quality of evaporating, flying away, or fading; instability; uncertainty.

FUGGER, the name of a German family famous for their wealth. They sprang from a very low origin, but entered, in a time when shrewd men must thrive, on the banking business, and obtained by their immense riches great distinctions in the days of Charles V. They have been equally celebrated for their munificence literature, and for their splendid patronage of the fine arts and literature.

FUGITIVE, a. not tenable; unsteady, unstable, volatile, or apt to fly away; flying from danger or duty; wandering; vagabond.

FUGITIVE, s. one who runs from or deserts his station or duty; one who runs away from punishment, and shelters himself in another country.

FUGITIVENESS, s. volatility; the quality of evaporating; instability; uncertainty.

FUGUE, (fuge, or fug) s. [fuga, Lat.] in Music, a flight, and is when the different parts of composition follow each other, each repeating what the first had performed.

FULCIMENT, s. [fulcio, Lat.] a prop; a support; that on which a body rests.

FULDA, a city, province, and river, in Hesse Cassel in Germany. The city stands on the river it takes its name from, and is a handsome place, the cathedral being particularly admired. It has a little trade. Population, about 10,000. Lat. 50. 34. N. Long. 9. 40.

To FULFIL, v. a. to accomplish, answer, or confirm any prophecy, by performing what is foretold; to answer any purpose or design; to perform exactly; to answer or gratify any desire by compliance.

FULGENCEY, s. [fulgeo, Lat.] splendour; lustre.

FULGENT, a. shining; dazzling; excessively bright.

FULGENTIUS, FAB. CLAUD. GORDIAN, bishop of Ruspe, in Africa, in the 6th century, was a valiant polemic against Pelagianism and Arianism. He has left a host of books, and happily a larger quantity is lost. He died in 533, aged 65 years. His name is honoured by a better fame than that which usually procured canonization. There were two others of this name of some note in ecclesiastical history.

FULGID, a. shining; glittering.

FULGOR, fulgura, s. a dazzling brightness.

FULGURATION, s. the flashing of lightning.

FULGURITES, s. tubes of vitrified sand, found in the low flat dunes or hills of sand at Drigg in Cumberland, and elsewhere. They are with great probability ascribed to the action of lightning.

FULIGINOUS, a. [fuligo, Lat.] sooty; smoky.

FULMART, s. in Natural History, a kind of stinking ferret.

FULL, a. [fulle, Sax.] without any void space; not capable of containing more; abounding in any quality, whether good or bad; saturated; complete. Plump or fat, applied to size. Strong; not faint, applied to the voice. Having every part of its surface illuminated, applied to the moon.

FULL, s. freedom from defect; the highest state or degree; the state of being able to contain no more. The whole, used with at. Applied to the moon, the time in which she makes a perfect orb.

To FULL, v. a. [fullo, Lat.] to cleanse cloth from its oil and grease.

FULL, ad. without abatement; exactly; directly. It is placed above adverbs and adjectives to strengthen their signification. Full is much used in composition, to intimate any thing arrived at its highest or utmost degree.

FULLAGE, s. the money paid for fulling cloth.

FULLER, s. one who cleanses and dresses.

FULLER, DR. THOMAS, the witty and learned divine of the 17th century, one of the really bright ornaments of the English church. He was a devoted royalist, but not sufficiently so for Charles I., yet he became a chaplain in his army. After the taking of Exeter he returned to London, and occupied himself with his pen, till the agitation for restoring Charles II. He was received with favour by this monarch, but enjoyed it for a short time only, dying in 1661, aged 53 years. His works are very numerous, and of them, his Worthies, his History of the Church in Britain, Good Thoughts in Bad Times, &c., are the most famous. He was celebrated for his wit, of which many excellent specimens are known to all.

FULLER, ANDREW, an eminent Baptist minister of the last generation, who was at first a plain farmer's lad, but by diligent study acquired a well-deserved reputation as a divine and preacher, which his published works well maintain. Kettering was the scene of his labours, and the Baptist Missionary Society originated with him and Dr. Carey. His best known works are against Socinianism. He died in 1815, aged 61 years.

FULLER'S EARTH, s. in Geology, a marl of a close texture, extremely soft and unctuous to the touch, formerly used in the woollen manufacture; when dry, it is of a grayish-brown colour in all degrees, from very pale to almost black, and has generally something of a greenish cast in it. A bed of it is formed pretty continuously in the S. half of England, between the great oolite and the inferior oolite beds.

FULLINGMILL, s. a mill wherein cloth is cleansed from its grease and oil, when first taken from the loom.

FULLY, ad. without any empty space, defect, or lack; completely.

FULMAR, in Natural History, a sea-fowl of the petrel kind, that inhabits the island of St. Kilda. It is particularly valuable to the natives of that island, as it supplies them with oil for their lamps, down for their beds, a delicacy for their tables, and medicine for their diseases.

FULMINANT, part. [fulmen, Lat.] thundering; making a noise like thunder.

To FULMINATE, v. n. to thunder; to make a loud noise or explosion like thunder. Figuratively, to denounce threatenings, or issue out ecclesiastical censures.

FULMINATING POWDER, s. in Chemistry, preparations of gold, silver, and mercury, copper, zinc, platinum, with nitric acid and alcohol, of a peculiar character, producing fulminic acid. They are white, green, or yellow, and crystalline, and explode with great force and a very loud noise. Ammonia used with the oxides of some of these metals, produces the same results. Fulminates of copper and zinc are usually prepared from those of mercury or silver.

FULMINATION, s. the act of thundering; the act of denouncing threats or censures.

FULMINATORY, a. thundering; denouncing threats and censures.

FULNESS, s. the state of being incapable to contain more; the state of abounding in any quality; completeness; perfection; freedom from defect; repletion; plenty, or a state of affluence, largeness, or extent. Applied to sound, such as fills the ear.

FULSOME, a. [fulle, Sax.] nauseous, offensive, applied to the objects of sight, taste, or smell. Tending to obscenity; disgraceful; odious.

FULSOMELY, ad. nauseously; rankly; obscenely.

FULSOMENESS, s. nauseousness; obscenity.

FULTON, ROBERT, a celebrated engineer of the United States, who introduced vessels propelled by steam on the American lakes and rivers. He studied painting in England under Benjamin West, where he became acquainted with several famous engineers and mechanicians. Afterwards, he carried on his studies at Paris; and returning to his native country, forsook the fine arts, for projects of various kinds in the useful arts. Amongst them steam-boats must ever rank the highest. His right to be regarded the original inventor of this most valuable application of steam was contested; for people forgot that there might be two independent inventors, as well as two independent discoverers; and he was involved in some law-suits, which occasioned him such anxiety, that he died in 1815, aged 49 years.

To FUMBLE, v. n. [fommelen, Belg.] to attempt any thing in an awkward or clumsy manner.

FUMBLER, a. one who does a thing awkwardly.

FUMBLINGLY, ad. in an awkward manner.

FUME, s. [fumus, Lat.] smoke, vapour, or any volatile substance; an exhalation; any thing unsubstantial; rage; passion; an idle conceit; a chimera; a vain imagination.

To FUME, v. n. [fumus, Lat.] to smoke; to raise or pass over in vapours. Figuratively, to be in a rage.—v. a. to smoke, or dry in smoke, applied to curing of fish or flesh. To perfume or scent by casting odours into the fire.

FUMET, s. the dung of the deer.

FUMETTE, [Fr.] in Cookery, the stink of meat.

FUMID, a. [fumus, Lat.] smoky; vaporous.

FUMIDITY, s. smokiness; tendency to smoke.

To FUMIGATE, v. a. to smoke, scent, or perfume by vapours; to cleanse from contagion by smoking.

FUMIGATION, s. scent raised by fire; the act of smoking any affected part in medicated fumes.

FUMINGLY, ad. angrily; in a rage.

FUMITER, FUMITORY, s. a plant.

FUMOUS, FUMY, a. [fumeux, Fr.] producing fumes, smoke, or vapours.

FUN, s. sport; frolicsome mirth; waggyish meriment.

FUNCTION, [finkshon, s. [fungor, Lat.] discharge, or performance; an employment, office, or trade; a single act of any office; power; faculty; the office of any particular part of the body. In Algebra, any quantity containing an unknown quantity, the value of which cannot be ascertained till the value of this unknown quantity is determined.

FUND, s. [funda, Lat.] stock, or capital; that by which any expense is supported; a stock or bank of money. The funds are the public securities given on the credit of the government to those who lend money to the state; which securities only mean the right to demand certain moneys half-yearly at the Bank of England, in proportion to the amount given or advanced. The funding system, or the system of permanent loans, arose in England soon after the Revolution of 1688, and it has now been carried on to such an extent, that the overturn of it seems perfectly hopeless.

FUNDAMENT, s. [fundo, Lat.] that part of the body on which a person sits.

FUNDAMENTAL, a. serving for the foundation; that on which the rest is built; essential; important.

FUNDAMENTAL, s. a leading, essential, or necessary proposition.

FUNDAMENTALLY, ad. essentially; originally.

FUNDY, BAY OF, a wide bay between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, N. America.

FUNEN, an island of Denmark, near the entrance of the Baltic Sea, about 35 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It is separated from Jutland by a strait, called the Less Belt, and from the island of Zealand by another, called the Great Belt. It is remarkably fertile in pasture and grain, and exports annually great quantities of barley, oats, rye, pease, and honey. Most of the Danish nobility have seats here. Population, about 150,000. Odensee is the capital.

FUNERAL, s. [funus, Lat.] the procession made in carrying a corpse to the grave; the interment or putting a dead person into the grave; the ceremony used at putting a person into the grave.

FUNERAL, FUNERAL, a. used at the burial of the dead; suiting a burial. Dark or dismal, applied to colour.

FUNGOUS, s. [fungus, Lat.] sponginess; porosity.

FUNGUS, a. excrescent; spongy; porous; wanting firmness.

FUNGUS, s. [Lat.] strictly, a mushroom. In Botany, applied generally to those substances that are either species of mushroom, or resemble them with regard to their sponginess or shape. In Surgery, an excrescence of flesh growing on the lips of wounds.

FUNICLE, s. [funis, Lat.] a small cord.

FUNNEL, s. [infundibulum, from infundo, Lat.] an inverted hollow cone with a pipe fastened to it, through which liquors are poured into vessels with narrow mouths; the shafts of a chimney; any pipe or passage of communication.

FUNNELTOP, s. in Botany, a species of fungus, bell-shaped, with round, convex, or flat seeds. The varieties are numerous.

FUR, s. [fourrure, Fr.] skin with soft hair; the soft hair of beasts; the sediments of liquors adhering to the vessels in which they were contained.

To FUR, v. a. to line or cover with skins that have soft hair; to cover with sediments or deposit precipitated from any fluid.

FURACIOUS, [furdshious] a. [fur, Lat.] thievish; inclined to steal.

FURACIOUS, a. an inclination or disposition to theft.

FURBELOW, [fjurbelo] s. [fjurbala, Fr.] an ornament of ruffled or plaited silk, linen, stuffs, &c., sewed on women's garments.

To FURBELOW, [fjurbelo] v. a. to adorn with stripes or borders of fur, silk, linen, &c., sewed on in plaits.

To FURBISH, v. a. [fourbir, Fr.] to burnish, polish, or make any metal bright.

FURBISHER, s. [fourbisseur, Fr.] one who polishes or burnishes any metal so as to make it bright.

FURCATION, s. [furca, Lat.] forkiness; the shooting out two ways like the prongs of a fork.

FURFUR, s. [Lat.] bran; husk; chaff; dandruff.

FURFURACEOUS, a. [furfur, Lat.] husky, branny.

FURIES, in Ancient Mythology, the three daughters of Night and Acheron, namely, Alecto, Megera, and Tisiphone; who had snakes instead of hair, and eyes like lightning, and carried iron chains and whips in one hand, and in the other flaming torches; to discover, and to punish, the guilty with. In Greece they were called Eumenides.

FURIOUS, a. [furor, Lat.] mad, or deprived of the right use of reason; raging; violently transported by passion.

FURIOUSLY, ad. madly; violently; with vehemence and outrage.

FURIOUSNESS, s. fierceness of nature; violence of attack; raging.

To FURL, v. a. [freler, Fr.] to draw up and bind any sail close to the yard.

FURLONG, s. [furlang, Sax.] a measure containing 220 yards, or one eighth of a mile.

FURLOUGH, [fjurløf, Belg.] a permission given by a superior officer to an inferior, or a common soldier, to be absent for a stated time.

FURMENTY, s. See FRUMENTY.

FURNACE, [fornaz, Lat.] a place built like an oven, in which coals and wood are burnt; sometimes applied to the vessel of iron or copper in which ores, metals, &c. are melted.

To FURNISH, v. a. [fournir, Fr.] to supply with what is wanting; to give for use; to provide; to adorn; to embellish.

FURNISHER, s. one who supplies or fits out.

FURNITURE, s. [fourniture, Fr.] any goods, necessities, or materials, proper to render a house, place, or any thing convenient; an appendage; equipage, embellishment, or ornament.

FURRIER, s. one who buys or sells furs.

FURROW, (fúrró) s. [fúrth, Sax.] a small trench made by the plough for the reception of seeds; a narrow channel made in a field for conveying water to dry, or for the draining watery land; any long trench or hollow; the marks or hollows made in the face by age; a wrinkle.

To FURROW, (fúrró) v. a. [fýrran, Sax.] to plough into narrow channels or hollows; to move by cutting like a ploughshare.

FURRY, a. [from fur,] covered with or dressed in fur; consisting of fur; covered with the sediments of any liquor.

FURTHER, a. beyond, or greater than this. See FORTH, and FARTHER.

To FURTHER, v. a. [forthrian, Sax.] to promote, countenance, or encourage.

FURTHERANCE, s. the act of promoting, countenancing, or advancing any undertaking or design.

FURTHERER, s. a promoter; one who contributes to advance the progress of an undertaking.

FURTHERMORE, ad. moreover; more than what has been said or alleged; besides.

FURTIVE, a. [furtivus, from fur, Lat.] stolen; gotten by stealth.

FURY, s. [furor, Lat.] loss of reason; madness; phrensy.

FURZE, s. [firs, Sax.] in Botany, a plant which grows wild on heath and upland commons, generally used for fuel, or making hedges. It is likewise called gorze and whins.

FURZY, a. overgrown with furze or gorze.

To FUSE, (fúse) v. a. [fusum, Lat.] to melt, to liquefy by heat.

FUSEE, (fúse) s. [fuseau, Fr.] in Horology, the cone or spindle round which the chain of a clock or watch is wound. In a bomb, a wooden pipe or tap filled with wildfire, by which the whole powder or composition in the shell takes fire. In Hunting, the track of a buck. A firelock, or small neat musket; but this is more properly written fusil.

FUSELL, HENRY, a famous painter of the Royal Academy of England, who was by birth a Swiss; but being constrained to leave his country, came hither and supported himself by his pen for some time, till attracting the notice of Sir Joshua Reynolds, he was determined to be a painter. He studied for a while in Italy, and on returning to England projected the Boydell Gallery for Shakspeare; entered the Academy; obtained one of their chairs; and gained much celebrity by his works. He died in 1825, aged 84 years. His style is so full of exaggerations that he has no such indiscriminate admiration as once was accorded to him.

FUSIBLE, (fúzible) a. capable of being melted or liquefied by fire.

FUSIBILITY, (fúzibility) s. a capacity of being melted, or becoming liquid by fire.

FUSIL, (fúze) s. [fusil, Fr.] See FUSEE.

FUSILIER, (fúziéer) a soldier armed with a small musket.

FUSION, s. [fusum, Lat.] the act of melting; the state of being melted, or turned liquid, by heat.

FUSS, s. bustle; racket; clamour; much ado about nothing.

FUST, (fúste, Fr.) the body, trunk, or shaft of a column. Also, a strong smell, as that of a mouldy barrel.

FUST, JOHN, one of the inventors of the art of printing with movable type; whose beautiful productions caused such astonishment that he was thought by his fellow-townsmen to have accomplished them by forbidden arts. He printed the Bible both in German and Latin, and many religious works and others of value. He died about 1466.

FUSTIAN, s. [fustine, Fr.] a kind of cloth made of cotton stuff. In Criticism, a high, swelling, and turgid style; bombast.

FUSTIAN, a. made of fustian. Applied to style, ridiculously tumid, or pompous.

FUSTIC, s. a yellow wood used for dyeing.

FUSTINESS, s. stink; the scent of a mouldy cask.

FUSTY, a. stinking; mouldy; smelling like a mouldy cask.

FUTILE, a. [utilis, Lat.] talking much; trifling; worthless; of no weight or import.

FUTILITY, s. [utilité, Fr.] the fault of talking too much, triflingness; want of weight; want of solidity.

FUTTOCKS, s. [corrupted from foot hook;] in Shipbuilding, the lower or upper timbers that give breadth or bearing to a ship, and hold it together.

FUTURE, (fúture) s. [futurus, Lat.] that shall be; that has never existed, but is approaching.

FUTURE, s. time to come; that which may happen hereafter. In Grammar, a tense by which we express an action yet to take place.

FUTURELY, ad. in time to come.

FUTURITY, s. time or events which may come after a certain period of time; the state of being to happen after a certain time.

To FUZZ, v. n. from the sound; to fly out with a hissing noise in small particles, like water from a cock half turned.

FUZZBALL, s. in Botany, a kind of fungus, which, when touched or pressed, bursts, and scatters dust.

FY! or FIE! interj. a word used to express disapprobation and loathing.

FY'AL, or FAY'AL, the most westerly of the Azores, or Western Islands, about 27 miles in length, and 9 in breadth. The climate is remarkably good, and the air always pure and mild. The island produces plenty of pasture for cattle, and abundance of fish are caught on the coast. The most considerable town is Villa de Horta. Lat. 38. 32. N. Long. 28. 45. W.

FYZABAD, a city of Hindustan, in the territory of Oude, of which it was once the capital, and near the ancient city of Agra. It is still populous, although the wealthier inhabitants have retired since the removal of the Nabob to Lucknow. It is seated on the river Gogra, 65 miles E. of Lucknow, and 80 nearly N. of Allahabad. Lat. 26. 45. N. Long. 82. 10. E.

G.

G IS the seventh letter and fifth consonant of the English alphabet. It is a guttural mute, and has two sounds, one of which is called hard, which it retains before a, o, u, l, r; as game, gore, gun, glass, grass. The other sound, which is termed soft, resembles the sound of the j, and is commonly found before e or i, as in gem and gibbet; though not without exception; for in the words get, giddy, gift, give, and many more the reader will see pointed out in order, it retains the hard sound. It is often silent, both in words of Latin origin, borrowed from the French, in which case we seem to have taken their pronunciation too, as condign; and in words of Saxon origin, as night. Or both cases may arise from the fact of g being in the Saxon the representative of the deep guttural sound, represented in Scottish by ch; and that it has preserved this force in a mitigated form. Gh at the end of some words is equivalent to ff, but in others to a mitigated guttural; as laugh, through. G, formerly, in Roman numerals, denoted 4000; or thus, Ġ, 40,000. In Music, it is the name of the note immediately above the top line of the staff in the treble clef, and immediately under it in the bass clef.

GABA-RDINE, (gavardina, Ital.) a coarse frock.

To GABBLE, v. n. [gabbarre, Ital.] to make an inarticulate noise; to prate loudly without sense or meaning.

GABBLE, s. an unintelligible noise; loud talk, without sense or meaning.

GABBLER, s. a prater or talkative person.

GABEL, (gabelle, Fr.) among the French, a duty or tax upon salt; any tax or excise.

GABION, (gabion, Fr.) a wicker basket filled with earth, serving as a defence from the enemy's fire; used in batteries to screen the engineers.

GABLE, (gaval, Brit. gable, Fr.) the sloping roof of a building. The gable-end, in Building, is the upright triangular end of a house from the eaves to the top of the roof.

GABRIEL, the name given to an angel in the Book of Daniel; and to an archangel, by some writers.

GAD, (sax.) a wedge or ingot of steel.

To GAD, (gulae, Brit.) to ramble about without any settled purpose, necessary call, or valuable business.

GADDER, (s. [from gad,]) one who rambles about, or goes much abroad, without any call or business.

GA'DDINGLY, ad. in a rambling or roving manner.

GA'DFLY, s. a troublesome, large, stinging fly; called likewise a breeze, and gad-bee.

GA'DOLINITE, s. in Chemistry, a fossil discovered in Sweden by one Gadolin a chemist.

GAEIL, the name of that branch of the Celtic race, which settled in the Highlands of Scotland.

GÆLIC LANGUAGE, the dialect of the Celtic spoken by the Highlanders.

GAFF, s. a harpoon, or large hook.

GAFFER, s. [gefer, Sax.] a word of respect formerly, but now made use of only as a term of familiarity to an old country fellow.

GAFFLES, s. [gafelus, Sax.] artificial spurs of steel, or silver, put on a cock's legs, in the room of his natural ones, when he is to fight.

To GAG, v. n. [gaghel, Belg.] to force something into the mouth that may keep the jaws distended, and hinder a person from speaking.

GAG, s. something put into the mouth, which hinders a person from speaking.

GAGE, s. [Fr.] something given as a security; a pledge.

To GAGE, v. a. [gager, Fr.] to wager; to give or place in trust as part of a wager; to give as a pledge or security.

GAGE, s. and v. See GUAGE.

To GAGGLE, v. n. [goggen, Belg.] to make a noise like a goose, or like one who is gagged.

GA'IETY, s. [gaieté, Fr.] a cheerful, sprightly, and joyous disposition of mind. Pleasures which are proper for youth, used in the plural. SYNON. Joy is in the heart; gaiety in the manners. The one is a sentiment of the soul; the other the expression of the animal spirits.

GAIN, s. [Fr.] profit or advantage flowing as a consequence from any undertaking; interest, or lucre.

To GAIN, v. a. [gagner, Fr.] to obtain profit or advantage; to receive for a thing above what it costs; to attain, obtain, or acquire; to win; to draw over to an interest or party.—v. n. to encroach; to advance or come forward by degrees. Figuratively, used with on or upon, to obtain an advantage over; to get ground.

GAIN, a. an old word now out of use: handy; ready; dexterous.

GAINER, s. one who receives profit or advantage.

GAINFUL, a. that by which a person may be enriched; profitable; advantageous; lucrative; productive of money.

GAINFULLY, ad. in a profitable or advantageous manner.

GAINLESS, a. unprofitable; producing neither profit nor advantage.

GAINLY, ad. handily; readily; dexterously.

To GAINSA'Y, v. a. (from gain for against, and say.) to contradict; to deny, or speak against a thing.

GAINSA'YER, s. an opponent; an adversary.

GAINSBOROUGH, Lincolnshire. It is situated on the Trent, over which is a handsome stone bridge. Though nearly 40 miles from the Humber by water, it is accessible to vessels of considerable burden (trading to London, Hull, Newcastle, and other places) with the tide, and serves as a place of export and import to the W. and N. W. parts of the county. It is 151 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 7860.

GAINSBOROUGH, THOMAS, a celebrated English painter of the 18th century. He began in very early life to show his taste and genius in landscape painting; and it is in the paintings which he executed in this way, that his great genius is to be seen. The scenes and things amongst which his boyhood was spent, are represented just as they appeared to the careless, but inspired boy, or to the unfulfilled artist. He died in 1788, aged 61 years.

GA'IRISH, GA'IRISH, a. [gearrian, Sax.] gaudy; showy; fine or bright. Excessively gay, or flighty, applied to the mind.

GA'IRISHNESS, s. finery, or flaunting gaudiness, applied to dress. Flighty or extravagant joy or gaiety.

GAIT, s. [gait, Belg.] the manner or air of walking.

GALA'GE, s. a shepherd's clog. An old word. "My galage grown fast to my heel," Spenser.

GALA'NGAL, s. [galange, Fr.] the name of two roots brought from the East Indies, used as stimulants in some common maladies.

GALAPAGOS, a cluster of islands in the Pacific Ocean, lying immediately under the equator, between 500 and 1000 miles from the continent. A settlement has been made on one or two of them, which is in a flourishing state.

GALATIA, a country of ancient Asia Minor, bounded by Bithynia, Phrygia, Cappadocia, and Pontus. It was peopled by a tribe of Gauls, who, in about 250 B.C., found their way thither, and settled on the land given them as military pay. There were a few ranges of hills crossing it, which were connected with the mountain-chains of that region. And it was watered by the Halys and the Sangarius. Ancyra and Tavium were its chief towns.

GALATIANS, EPISTLE TO, written by the apostle Paul, not very long after he had first preached amongst the towns of Galatia; but it is not agreed from what place; Antioch appears as probable as any of the conjectures. It is a somewhat irregular argument, first to establish his independent testimony to, and knowledge of, the gospel, and ultimately to prove the completeness of the revelations of God's relations to mankind contained in it, so as to confute the arguments of the Judaist teachers who had troubled the churches of Galatia; and to show that it was both superfluous and pernicious to attempt to graft even the Mosaic ceremonies on the Christian faith, seeing that the two schemes were in essence inconsistent, the law being the school-master to train men for Christ, and being harmful and not of use after that training is accomplished. It may be advantageously compared with the Epistle to the Romans, written in proof of the same point some years afterwards.

GALAXY, s. [gala, Gr.] the Milky Way, an irregular belt of misty light across the starry heavens, divided into two parts for some way. Under powerful telescopes it presents the appearance of being composed of myriads of stars, and it is thought to point out the direction and the outline of the edge of the group or system of stars in which our solar system has its place.

GALBA, SERVIUS SULPITIUS, a man of honourable birth and advanced age, raised to the throne of the Roman empire, on the suicide of Nero, by the army which he commanded in Spain. He sought to curb the licence assumed by the Pretorian guards, and paid for his boldness with his life, in A.D. 69, after a reign of less than a year. He was not fitted by his age and qualities to hold so great a trust, although no crimes are alleged against him.

GALBANUM, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a gum-resin brought from the countries of Asia, and used as a soothing kind of stimulant.

GALE, s. [galing, Teut.] a current of air, or a gentle blast of wind. In Botany, plants with spear-shaped leaves, called also sweet willow, and Dutch myrtle.

GALEAS, GA'LEASS, s. [galeasse, Fr.] a large low-built vessel, using both sails and oars, being the largest vessel which is towed.

GALEATED, a. [galeatus, Lat.] covered with a helmet, or with something resembling a helmet.

GALEN, CLAUDIUS, the celebrated physician of the 2nd century. He studied in the most noted schools, and for a time practised at Rome; but being the object of the jealousy of the old-established physicians, he retired to his native place, Pergamum, whence he was recalled by the emperor to Rome again, where he died in about 200, aged about 70 years. He was, for his times, a very skilful and learned anatomist; and on this knowledge all his sound and lasting fame rests; but he did not know enough to keep him from framing metaphysical theories of disease, &c.; and as his followers received his dicta as authoritative decisions, he prevented the progress in this most important science, which otherwise he might have commenced.

GALENA, s. in Chemistry, the sulphuret of lead.

GALENIC, GALENICAL, a. a manner of treating diseases founded on the principles of Galen.

GALERIUS, C. VALERIUS MAXIMIANUS, the Caesar under Diocletian, and on his abdication, Augustus, or joint-emperor, in his stead, with Constantius Chlorus first, and afterwards with Maxentius and Constantine. His sole qualification was brute courage, and this was stained with great ferocity. He died in 311, after a reign of 6 years.

GALIANI, FERDINAND, a Neapolitan abbé, of some fame for his works on Political Economy, and for his wit. He was well versed in many sciences, and held some important posts under the government. He died in 1787, aged 59 years.

GALV'CIA, a province of Austria, lying between Russia and Prussia, and bounded by Cracow, Moldavia, Transylvania, Hungary, and Silesia. It is in part covered by the Carpathian mountains, some of which are above 7000 feet high. Its rivers are tributaries of the Danube and the Vistula, &c. The mountainous parts produce fine pasture; the plains are mostly sandy, but abound in forests, and are fertile in corn. The principal articles of traffic are cattle, hides, wax, and honey, copper, lead, iron, and salt. Population, about 5,000,000. Lemberg or Leopold is the capital.

GALICIA, a province of Spain, lying on the Atlantic and the Bay of Biscay, N. of Portugal; bounded by Asturia and Leon. It is about 120 miles each way. It has more harbours than any other province of Spain, and the forests yield wood for ship-building. The principal produce is wine, flax, and citrons; and here are also good pastures. It is hilly, and the chief river is the Minho. The mineral productions are copper and lead. Population, about 1,500,000. Corunna and Ferrol are the principal ports, and St. Jago di Compostella is the capital.

GALLILEO GALLILEI, one of the greatest experimental philosophers that ever lived. His youth was given up to study, and he was appointed Mathematical Professor at his native town, Pisa. In after years he removed to Padua, and finally settled at Florence. His discoveries take in a wide range, the pendulum, the thermometer, specific gravity, the telescope; and with this instrument, the composition of the Milky Way, the moons of Jupiter and Saturn, the phases of Venus, the spots on the sun, &c. The great event of his life, however, was the conflict over his person between ecclesiastical tyranny and science. After his discoveries, and with his mathematical skill, it is not surprising that he should embrace the Copernican theory of the solar system and reject the Ptolemaic. But it seems that he imprudently provoked the anger of the church by covert ridicule of the pope, and as he had before been a marked man by his opposition to the scientific method in vogue, and by the tenets which he avowed, he was brought before the Inquisition, perhaps tortured, compelled to sign a disavowal of some astronomical facts he had maintained, (particularly the rotation of the earth, and its revolution round the sun,) and to undergo penance and imprisonment. This confinement, though not in prison, together with the death of his daughter, broke down his spirit, and he died in 1642, aged 78 years, one of the noblest martyrs of science.

GALLIOT, s. [galiotte, Fr.] a little galley or sort of brigantine, built very slight, and fit for chase. It carries but one mast, and two or three paterrores. It can both sail and row, and has sixteen or twenty seats for the rowers, with one man to each oar.

GALL, ST. a canton of Switzerland, lying between the lakes of Constance, Zurich, and Wallenstadt, and bounded by the cantons of Thurgau, Zurich, Schwick, Glarus, and the Grisons, and by Austria. It is mountainous, though not traversed by the principal chain of the Alps, and some of its heights are not far short of 9000 feet. The Rhine and the Thur are its chief rivers. The produce of the canton is iron, coal, corn, fruits, wine, cattle, and some cotton and other manufactures. Population, about 200,000. St. Gall is its capital, a town of some fame in the middle ages, standing in a narrow barren valley, between two mountains. The inhabitants are uncommonly industrious, and carry on an extensive commerce, arising from the manufacture of linen, muslin, and embroidery. Here is a rich and celebrated abbey, in the library belonging to which were found the famous MSS. of Petronius Arbitr, Silius Italicus, Valerius Flaccus, and Quintilian, in 1413. Population, about 10,000. Lat. 47. 26. N. Long. 9. 20. E.

GALL, DR. FRANCIS JOSEPH, the celebrated father of phrenological science, was a German physician, who from boyhood had marked the difference between the mental habitudes and dispositions of those around him, and the form and shape of their crania, and at length systematized his observations; and by a refined and skilful anatomy of the brain, secured a fair support for his system. He communicated his theory mostly by lectures, which, after he had delivered them at Vienna, he delivered in most of the cities, &c. of Germany, &c. He settled at length at Paris, and continued his observations, studies, and lectures, and died in 1828, aged 61 years. His books are of considerable value independently of Phrenology, in which they have been laid aside for the less substantial but more popular works of his pupils and followers.

GALL, (gauld) s. [gaula, Sax.] a yellow juice, secreted from the blood in the glands of the liver, and lodged in a particular reser- voir, called the gall bladder. Figuratively, any thing extremely bitter. Rancour or malignity, applied to the temper of the mind. Also a sore or hurt, occasioned by fretting or rubbing off the skin. In Natural History, an excrescence on the stem or leaf of plants and trees, caused by the puncture of an insect in depositing its eggs. The larvae live and feed in the inside of the gall, and when they have passed through the pupa state, eat their way out. One species of gall, known in commerce as Aleppo galls, is used in dyeing, ink-making, &c.

To GALL, (gauld) v. a. [galer, Fr.] to hurt or make sore by rubbing off the skin. Figuratively, to impair, or wear away; to vex; to fret; to tease; to harass; to disturb. Prov. Touch a gall'd horse on the back, and he'll kick or wine.

GALLANT, a. [galant, Fr.] gay, showy, or magnificent, applied to dress. Brave, high-spirited, courageous, applied to the mind; also amorous, or inclined to courtship.

GALLANT, s. a gay, sprightly, airy, and courageous person; a person who courts a woman in order to make her his wife; a paramour.

GALLANTLY, ad. in a gay or sprightly manner. In a showy or splendid manner, applied to dress. In a brave, noble, or courageous manner.

GALLANTRY, s. [galanterie, Fr.] splendour; grandeur; finery; bravery; nobleness; courtship; elegant and refined address to women; vicious love; amorousness.

GALLATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with gallic acid.

GALLEON, (galloon) s. [galion, Fr.] a large ship, with four or five decks. Now applied to those ships which the Spaniards employ in the commerce they carry on between Mexico and Peru.

GALLERY, s. [galerie, Fr.] a little aisle or walk in a house above-stairs, serving as a common passage to several rooms placed in a line or row; likewise a covered place in a house much longer than broad, usually placed in the wings of a building, sometimes embellished with pictures, and serving to walk in; the seats in the playhouse above the boxes. In Fortification, a covered walk or passage made across the ditch of a town besieged. In a ship, a balcony on the outside of the stern, to which there is a passage from the great cabin. In a church, it is a kind of balustrade built along the sides or lower end of the church.

GALLEY, s. [galea, Ital. galere, Fr.] a low-built vessel going both with oars and sails, having two masts and two square sails. Figuratively, used to imply a state of extreme misery, alluding to the condition of the slaves by whom these vessels are navigated.

GALLEY-SLAVE, s. a person condemned to row in the galleys.

GALLIA, in Ancient Geography, the name given to that part of the continent of Europe now called France, and to the N. part of Italy. This was called Gallia Citerior, and the former, Gallia Ulterior.

GALLIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to galls, applied principally to the acid which is found in galls, oak-bark, and some other vegetables.

GALLICAN, a. [gallicus, Lat.] belonging to the French church or nation.

GALLICISM, s. [gallicisme, Fr.] a manner of expression peculiar to the French language.

GALLIENUS, P. LICINIUS, one of the later Roman emperors, son of Valerian, at first his Caesar, and on his capture by Shah Poor, his successor. He lived in Italy, and used his power only to procure sensual indulgence. His reign is usually called, the time of the 30 tyrants, because almost every province was made the scene of the appointment of a rival to the emperor. In marching against one of these who invaded Italy, he was murdered, in 268, after a reign of 8 years.

GALLIGASKINS, s. large, open, or trunk hose; a pair of breeches.

GALLIMAT'IA, (gallimashia) s. [gallimathias, Fr.] a dark, perplexed discourse; nonsense.

GALLIMAU'FRY, s. [gallimafree, Fr.] a hotch-potch, hash, or ragout of several sorts of broken meat; any inconsistent and ridiculous medley.

GALLIOT, s. See GALLIOT.

GALLI'POLI, a town of Turkey in Europe, seated on the Hellespont, famous in commerce for the oil which is produced in its vicinity, and used very abundantly in our machinery. Population, about 25,000. Lat. 40. 21. N. Long. 26. 38. E.

GALLIPOT, s. a pot made of clay glazed, sometimes painted, commonly used to put medicines in.

GALLOCHES, s. a sort of leathern clogs, that cover good part of the shoe.

GALLON, s. [gelo, low Lat.] a measure containing four quarts, or nearly 277 cubic inches, used both for liquids and dry goods.

GALLOON, s. [galon, Fr.] a thick narrow kind of ferret, rib-and, or lace.

To GALLOP, v. n. [galoper, Fr.] to move forwards very quick; to move on horseback by reaches and leaps.

GALLOP, s. the motion of a horse when he runs at full speed; in which making a kind of leap forward, he lifts both his fore-legs very near at the same time; and while these are in the air, and just upon the point of touching the ground, he lifts both his hind-legs almost at once.

GALLOPER, s. a horse that gallops, or moves forward by reaches and leaps; a person who rides fast, or makes a horse carry him on a gallop.

To GALLOP, (gállo) v. a. [agahean, Sax.] to terrify; to make afraid.

GALLOWAY, s. a horse not more than 14 hands high, much used in the North, and perhaps is so called because coming originally from Galloway, a shire in Scotland.

GALLOWAY, or GALLWAY, is a district of Scotland, about 170 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. It lies on the sea, and is bounded by Carrick and Kyle, and by Nithsdale. It contains several rivers, and a great number of lakes from half a mile to two miles in length.

GALLS, (gállo) s. a frame of wood on which criminals are hanged.

GALLSWFREE, a. exempt by destiny from being hanged. "Let him be gallswfree, by my consent." Dryden.

GALT, JOHN, an English novelist, whose tales, most of which relate to Scotland, are highly esteemed as correct pictures of Scottish life. He wrote travels, tragedies, biographies, and miscellaneous poems, but these are not much esteemed. He was engaged on the Courier for some time, and his relinquishment of the editorship reflected the greatest credit on his consistency. He was engaged in several unpropitious commercial speculations, and visited various countries, America in particular, in the course of carrying them on. He died in 1839, after a long-continued and severe paralysis, aged 60 years.

GALVANI, LOUIS, an Italian physician, who enjoyed considerable reputation as a lecturer on anatomy, and accidentally discovered that branch of electrical science, called after his name. He devoted himself to the investigation of this new science, and called universal attention to it by the success and singularity of his experiments. Domestic afflictions, and the troubled state of the country, preyed on his health, and he died in 1798, aged 61 years.

GALVANIC, a. in Natural Philosophy, belonging to galvanism. Galvanic Pile, a series of plates of copper or silver, zinc, and cloth or bibulous paper, copiously wetted, capable of giving a shock, in proportion to its extent. Galvanic Trough, or Battery, a trough or vessel filled with diluted acid, and divided into compartments by plates of copper and zinc placed alternately, and connected with copper wires; wires are carried from the last plate at each end, and galvanic experiments of various and interesting kinds are performed by means of them. Batteries are usually made now of single jars, containing one plate of zinc and one of silver or copper; and any increase of power required is obtained by the use of a number of them. There are great varieties of galvanic batteries, and Dr. Wollaston's, in which the copper plate is bent round the zinc plate, is judged to be the best.

GALVANISM, that great branch of electrical science in which the phenomena are produced by chemical, instead of mechanical means. The exciting cause is the simultaneous action of water or diluted acid on two plates of zinc and copper, or zinc and silver. And all the results that had been obtained by the electrical machine, have been obtained, with many more of great beauty and singularity. It is by means of galvanic electricity that this powerful agent has been applied to the investigation of chemical analysis, with fruits, under Sir Humphrey Davy, Faraday, and others, equivalent to the discovery of a new science. By this means, also, an explanation of magnetic phenomena has been obtained. It has furnished a basis, also, for some of the sublimest speculations that have ever been indulged respecting the nature and the laws of matter, and promises yet to give to man the key to all the laws of the material universe. Some of the most surprising effects of galvanism are those which first attracted the attention of its discoverer, those which it produces on the animal frame. By communicating a current of galvanic electricity to the spine of any dead animal, by means of the wires of a battery, all the limbs are thrown into violent action, and the phenomena of life frightfully simulated. If a small current be passed through the eye, a brilliant flash of light is observed; and if such a current is generated, as can be by placing a piece of silver and a piece of zinc on different sides of the tongue, with their edges in contact, a very astringent flavour is perceived. This form of electricity has been applied medically, but without any striking benefits at present.

GALVANOMETER, and GALVANOSCOPE, s. [Galvani, and metro, or scope, Gr.] in Galvanism, an instrument for detecting the presence and measuring the force of feeble currents of galvanic electricity, by means of their action on the magnetic needle.

GALWAY, a county of Connaught, Ireland. It is about 75 miles long, and 46 broad; lies on the Atlantic Ocean, and is bounded by the counties of Mayo, Roscommon, King's County, Tipperary, and Clare. It contains 116 parishes. A great part of it is fertile, being a warm lime-stone soil, which rewards the industry of the husbandman and shepherd; but is very coarse towards the N. and W., and, in those parts, rather thinly inhabited. The western coast contains many well-sheltered harbours, and is mostly bordered with green islands and rugged rocks. Its lakes are Loughs Rea, Corrib, Mask, and Deirgeart; and its rivers, the Suck and the Shannon. Pop. 422,923. It returns 4 members to parliament. Galway, its capital, is advantageously situated for foreign trade on Galway Bay, in the Atlantic; and has some noble buildings, the church being particularly fine. It has tolerably extensive docks. The salmon and herring fisheries are carried on here with great spirit, and employ several hundred boats; the quantity of kelp manufactured and exported is considerable, and the increase of the linen manufacture, though of late introduction, is become very important. It is 96 miles from Dublin. Pop. 17,275.

GAMA, VASCO DE, an illustrious Portuguese navigator, who contributed greatly to the sudden advance made by Europe in civilization at the opening of the 16th century, by the discovery of the passage to the East Indies by the Cape of Good Hope. He made three voyages to India, and established the power of the Portuguese monarch there. He died there, after his third voyage, when he had been appointed viceroy, in 1525, aged about 60 years.

GAMBA'DE, GAMBA'DO, s. [gamba, Ital.] a sort of leather boot fixed to a saddle, instead of stirrups, to put the legs in.

GAMBETTA, s. in Ornithology, a bird resembling the red-shank, which is common in Italy, and occasionally visits England.

GAMBIA, a large river of Africa, which falls into the Atlantic Ocean. The source is not known, but it is navigable for sloops about 600 miles up the country. At the mouth of the river the land is low, but, higher up, the country is rocky and mountainous, and covered with woods. Along its banks are great numbers of towns, inhabited by various nations. The Arabic language and Mohammedan religion generally prevail in the country N. of this river; on the S. the inhabitants are pagans. The Gambia annually overflows its banks, like the Nile. The mouth is in Lat. 16. 28. N. and Long. 13. 20. W.

GAMBIER, a town of Ohio, United States, which has risen round Kenyon College, an Episcopal institution of a promising character. The town is neat, and the collegiate buildings are elegantly built of hewn stone. It is 371 miles from Washington. Pop. 300.

GAMBIER, LORD JAMES, a distinguished British admiral, who gained some celebrity during the American war, took part in the victory of the 1st of June, and in the seizure of the Danish fleet at Copenhagen. He underwent a court-martial about an attack on the French fleet in the Channel, but was acquitted, and rose to the highest naval position. He died in 1833, aged 77 years.

GAMBLER, s. [from game,] one addicted to games of chance, or to deep and unfair play.

GAMBLING, s. the practice of deep and unfair play. Gam-

ling houses, commonly called hells, are now suppressed in England.

GAMBOGE, s. a vegetable resin of a deep yellow colour, used as a paint, and in medicine as an evacuant. It comes from Gambia, in the East Indies.

GA'MBOL, v. n. [gamboller, Fr.] to dance, skip, frisk, or play sportive tricks.

GA'MBOL, s. skip, hop, leap, or tumble for joy. Figuratively, a frolic or wild prank.

GA'MBREL, s. [gambarella, Ital.] the leg of a horse.

GAME, s. [Sax.] sport of any kind; a single match at play; advantage in play; a kind of amusement, depending either on skill and reflection, &c. alone, as chess, billiards, cricket, &c., or on chance with these, as games played with cards and dice. To make game, to ridicule. In Law, game is the name given to certain wild animals, which it is not lawful to shoot except at particular seasons, and which none may shoot without a yearly licence.

TO GAME, v. n. [gaman, Sax.] to play at any sport or diversion; to play extravagantly, or for great sums of money.

GA'MECKOCK, s. a cock of a peculiar species bred for fighting.

GA'ME-EGG, s. an egg from which a fighting cock is bred.

GA'MEKEEPER, s. a person who looks after game.

GA'ME-LAWS, s. in English Law, certain statutes prescribing what wild animals shall be regarded as game, under what conditions they shall be hunted or shot, &c. They are, with all the changes lately introduced, one of the most barbarous relics of the feudal system, and occasion to game-preservers, to tenants, who submit to have their crops damaged by this kind of vermin, and to working men, whom distress often tempts to poaching, a greater amount of real evil than any other set of laws in existence. The absurd and slavish admiration for the set of things of which these game-laws are the type, on the part of those whose corn is eaten by hares, &c., is the real secret of the strength of these infamous statutes.

GA'MESOME, a. frolicsome; merry; gay.

GA'MESOMENESS, s. sportiveness; wantonness.

GA'MESOMELY, ad. in a pleasant, merry, sportive, or wanton manner.

GA'MESTER, s. one who is fond of play to excess, or one who engages in play with a design to cheat; one who is engaged in play, or understands a game; a merry, frolicsome person.

GA'MING, s. the act of gaming; an immoderate love of play.

GA'MMER, s. a familiar word for an old country-woman.

GA'MMON, s. [gambone, Ital.] the buttock or thigh of a hog; the lower end of a flitch of bacon.

GA'MUT, s. [gama, Ital.] in Music, the scale of musical notes, as called by their common names in teaching music.

"GAN, for began, [from gin for begin.] "The noble knight gan feel his vital force to faint," Spenser.

TO GANCH, v. a. [gancio, Ital.] to drop from a high place upon books; a punishment practised in Turkey.

GA'NDER, s. [gander, Sax.] the male of the goose.

GANG, s. a company or crew going together on some exploit, used of a ship's crew, or a company of robbers.

TO GANG, v. n. [gangen, Belg. gangan, Sax.] to go; to walk: an old word, seldom used but in a ludicrous sense.

GANGES, or GU'GA, one of the largest rivers in Asia, and in the world. It rises in Thibet on the N. E. side of the Himalah Mountains, and passing through a cleft in that mighty wall, turns, and with a wide sweep enters at length the Bay of Bengal. It is about 1400 miles in length, and receives the waters of so many tributaries, that its different branches resemble gulfs where it enters the ocean. The delta at its mouth is nearly equal to the extent of Great Britain, and its waters carry down so prodigious a quantity of earthy particles, &c., that 60 miles from the coast the water is rendered turbid by it; wherever a sunken tree or rock checks its course, an island is formed, and then again carried away, and the lateral channels are continually being changed. In the season of its inundations the whole country is covered, and looks like a sea thickly studded with islands. Delhi, Allahabad, Benares, Patna, Moorshebad, &c., stand on its banks. By the Hindus it is regarded as divine, is an object of worship, and its waters are believed to be capable of washing away sin.

GA'NGLION, s. [Gr.] in Surgery, a knot or complexus of nervous substance.

GANGRENE, s. [gangrena, low Lat.] in Surgery, a disorder in any fleshy part of the body tending to a mortification, attended with some sensation of pain and share of natural heat, the flesh it seizes turning black, and spreading itself to the adjacent parts.

TO GANGRENE, v. a. [gangrenere, Fr.] to corrupt to mortification.—v. n. to become mortified.

GANGRENOUS, a. of the nature of a gangrene.

GANGUE, s. in Chemistry, a term made use of to denote the stony matter which fills the cavities, and accompanies the ores, in veins of metal.

GANGWAY, s. in a ship, the several ways or passages from one part of it to another.

GANGWEEK, s. in a ship, the several ways, when processions are made to lustrate the bounds of parishes.

GA'NNET, s. in Natural History, a large kind of sea bird, whose feet are wholly webbed, and whose beak is formed for seizing on its prey, when it has darted down on it from a height.

GA'NTELOPE, GA'NTLET, s. gantlet is only a corruption of gantlope; [gant and loopen, Belg.] a military punishment, wherein the offender is stripped naked to the waist, and obliged to run through a lane of soldiers with green switches in their hands, when each gives him a blow as he passes.

GA'NYMEDE, in Heathen Mythology, a beautiful youth, who was carried off by Jupiter, and made cupbearer to the gods on Olympus, after the disgrace of Hebe.

GAOL, s. [goal, Brit.] a place of confinement for debtors and criminals. This word is always pronounced, and often written, jail, and incorrectly goal.

TO GAOL, v. a. to imprison; to commit to gaol.

GA'OL-DELIVERY, (jail-delivery) s. a judicial process, which either by punishment or pardon empties a prison.

GA'OLER, (jailer) s. [gôlier, Fr.] a keeper of a prison.

GAP, s. an opening in a broken fence; a breach, passage, avenue, open way, hole, interstice, or interval.

TO GAPE, v. n. [geapan, Sax.] to open the mouth wide; to yawn. Figuratively, to covet, crave, or desire earnestly; used for, after, and at. To open in holes or breaches; to behold with ignorant wonder, and with the mouth open.

GAPER, s. one who opens his mouth; one who stares with his mouth open at another person or thing through ignorant admiration.

GAP-TOOTHED, a. having interstices between the teeth.

GAR, in Sax. signifies a weapon: thus Edgar is a happy weapon; Ethelgar, or ethel, Sax. noble, and gar, Sax. a weapon, implies a noble weapon.

GARB, s. [garbe, Fr.] dress; a habit; the fashion of a person's clothes or dress; external appearance.

GARBAGE, s. [garbear, Span.] the bowels, or that part of the intestines which in beasts is separated and thrown away; the entrails. Figuratively, any kind of refuse.

TO GARBLE, v. a. [garbellare, Ital.] to sift; to separate the good from the bad.

GARBLE, s. one who picks out the dirt, filth, or foreign mixtures, from any commodity.

GARBOIL, s. [garbouille, Fr.] tumult; disorder.

GARCILASO, DE LA VEGA, a celebrated Spanish poet of the 16th century. He introduced some kinds of verse new in Spain. He was a soldier as well as a bard, and fell whilst fighting under the imperial banner in 1536, aged 33 years. Another of the same name and century, is distinguished as the Inca, his father having married a Peruvian princess. He died in Spain; and we are indebted to him for a history of his native land, and one of the conquest of Florida. He died in 1616, aged about 80 years.

GARD, s. [garde, Fr.] wardship; care; custody; the charge of a person. Figuratively, an orphan, or person left to the care of another.

GARD, a department of France, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by Hérault, Aveyron, Lozère, Ardèche, Vaucluse, and Bouches du Rhône. It is about 70 miles in each direction. It is in part hilly, and is traversed by several streams, communicating with the Rhône, which forms its E. boundary, or flowing into the sea hard by, amongst which is the Gardon, whence it is named. It has mineral and metallic wealth; and produces corn, fruits, oil, wines, silk, &c. Nîmes is its capital. Population, about 375,000.

GARDEN, s. [jardin, Fr.] a piece of ground enclosed and cultivated with care, planted with herbs, flowers, or fruits.

GARDENER, s. [jardinier, Fr.] one that takes care of a garden.

GARDENING, s. the act of cultivating or taking care of a garden.

GARDINER, STEPHEN, was an aspiring churchman, introduced to Henry VIII.'s notice by Wolsey, whose secretary he was. He aided in the divorce of Catharine of Aragon; and for this and other good service to the Defender of the Faith was made bishop of Winchester. He fell into disgrace, through an attempt to compass the destruction of the monarch's last queen, Catharine Parr; which she discovered, and with great adroitness defeated. He was imprisoned for his opinions under Edward VI., but reinstated and made chancellor by Queen Mary, under whom he proved himself an accomplished persecutor, but happily died in 1555, aged 72 years. His maintenance of honour throughout Henry VIII.'s reign is sufficient proof that the Reformation in England was not a similar movement to that on the continent.

GARDINER, COLONEL JAMES, a brave and loyal officer in the reign of George II., who served with distinction at Ramilies, and fell at Preston Pans. His piety has been recorded by the well-known and highly-esteemed Dr. Doddridge, whose biography of his military friend is a remarkable indication of the way in which loyalty had taken place of principle in that age. He fell in 1745, aged 57 years.

GARE, s. coarse wool growing on the legs of sheep.

GARGANEY, s. in Ornithology, a fresh-water fowl of the duck kind, somewhat larger than the teal, but very like it in shape.

GARGARISM, s. [gargarismo, Gr.] a liquid medicine, used to wash the mouth with.

To GARGARIZE, v. a. [gargarizo, Gr.] to wash the mouth with a liquid medicine.

GARGET, s. [garan, Sax.] a distemper which appears in the head, maw, or hinder parts of cattle.

To GARGLE, v. a. [gargouiller, Fr.] to wash the throat with some liquor, without swallowing it.

GARGLE, s. a liquor with which the throat is washed without swallowing it.

GARGLION, s. an exudation of nervous juice from a bruise, or the like, which indurates into a hard immovable tumour.

GARLAND, s. [garlande, Fr.] a sort of flowers, feathers, and sometimes precious stones, worn on the head, in the manner of a crown. It also denotes ornaments of fruits, flowers, and leaves intermixed, anciently much used at the gates of temples, where feasts and solemn rejoicings were held; or at any other place where marks of public joy or gaiety were required, as at triumphal arches, tournaments, &c.

GARLIC, s. [garlick, in Botany, an herb, with a bulbous root, allied to the onion.

GARMENT, s. [garment, old Fr.] any thing which is worn to cover the body; clothes; dress.

GARNER, s. [grenier, Fr.] a place wherein any sort of grain is kept.

To GARNER, v. a. to store. Figuratively, to keep as in a storehouse. "There, where I have garnered up my heart," Shak. A beautiful metaphor.

GARNET, s. [granatus, low Lat. garnato, Ital.] a gem of a middle degree of hardness between the sapphire and common crystal; the Bohemian is red, with a slight cast of flame colour, and the Syrian red, with a slight cast of purple.

To GARNISH, v. a. [garnir, Fr.] in Cookery, to embellish, set off, or trim.

GARNISH, s. ornament; embellishment; things placed by way of ornament on the brim of a dish; a fee or treat made by a prisoner on his first entrance into goal.

GARNISHMENT, s. ornament; embellishment.

GARNITURE, s. furniture; or something added to a thing to make it appear pleasing to the eye.

GARONNE, a river of the S. W. of France, rising in the Spanish part of the Pyrenees, and pursuing a circuitous course through the wide and fruitful region adjoining to Spain, receiving very many tributaries, till, after flowing about 300 miles, it enters the Atlantic through the Gironde.

GARONNE, HAUTE, a department of France, bordering on Spain, and bounded by Hautes Pyrénées, Gers, Tarn, Aude, and Ariège. It is about 95 miles long, and 65 broad in some parts. It includes some peaks of the Pyrenees which exceed 8000 or 9000 feet in height. The Garonne, and a few other streams which afterwards join it, run through it. Metals and building-stone, timber, wine, with some fruits, and corn, are its products. Toulouse is its capital. Pop. under 500,000.

GAROUS, a. [garum, Lat.] resembling pickle made of fish.

GARRET, s. [garite, Fr.] a room on the highest floor of a house.

GARETEER, s. one who lives in garret.

GARRICK, DAVID, one of the most celebrated actors that ever appeared on the British stage, who was, during a long period, one of the patentees of Drury Lane theatre. He celebrated a jubilee at Stratford on Avon in honour of Shakspeare, and did more to familiarize his countrymen with his magnificent creations than almost any other man. He died in 1779, and was buried with great pomp in Westminster Abbey, aged 63 years. The force of mind with which he seemed to grasp the conception of the various characters he represented, and the skill with which he embodied the conception in action, were consummate. The honours showered upon him are to be ranked amongst the very few that have been extorted from the English nation by dramatic art. His wife, who was an eminent operatic performer, died in 1822, aged 98 years.

GARRISON, s. [garrison, Fr.] soldiers placed in a fortified town or castle to defend it; a fortified place stored with soldiers.

To GARRISON, v. a. to defend with soldiers; to store a place with soldiers for the defence of it.

GARRULITY, s. [garrul, Lat.] the vice of talking too much; inability of keeping a secret.

GARRULOUS, a. talkative; prating; fond of talking.

GARTANG, Lancashire, built in a very irregular manner, with dry streets, and very indifferent houses. It is seated on the river Wyre, (by which it communicates with all the late inland navigations,) on the road between Preston and Lancaster. It is 228 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 6927.

GARTER, s. [gardus, Brit. jartier, Fr.] a string with which the stockings are tied up. A military order of knighthood, the most noble and ancient of any lay order in the world, instituted by King Edward III. This order consists of twenty-six knights-companions, generally princes and peers, whereby the king of England is sovereign or chief. They are a college or corporation, having a great and little seal. Their officers are a prelate, chancellor, register, king-at-arms, and usher of the black rod. They have also a dean and twelve canons, petty canons, vergers, and twenty-six pensioners or poor knights. The habit of the order upon solemn days is the garter, mantles, surcoat, hood, collar, great George, and cap; upon the collar days, they are only obliged to wear the garter, the collar of the order, and the great George; at the middle of the collar hangs the picture of St. George on horseback killing the dragon. The garter, which is blue, is worn a little below the knee of the left leg, having this motto wrought on it, Honi soit qui mal y pense.

GARTER KING-AT-ARMS, s. an officer whose business it is to attend the service of the Garter, for which he is allowed a mantle and badge, a house in Windsor Castle, and pensions both from the sovereigns and knights; also fees. He is the principal officer of the college of arms, and chief herald.

To GARTER, v. a. to bind up the stocking with a band or garter.

GAS, s. [geist, Germ.] in Chemistry, any kind of air. Gases are commonly distinguished from vapours by the difficulty with which they are condensed from their aeriform condition; but vapours are in fact no more than finely separated particles of a substance diffused in air. For the various kinds of gases, see Carbonic acid Gas, Hydrogen, Nitrogen, Oxygen, &c. &c. In common language, it is applied to carburetted hydrogen gas, which is used as a light.

GAS-BURNER, s. that part of a gas lamp from which the jet of gas to be burnt proceeds.

GAS-LAMP, s. [gas-light, s. a lamp in which gas is burnt, instead of oil, &c., to give light.

GAS-WORKS, s. the buildings in which gas is extracted from coals or oil, cctd in reservoirs, to be diffused through pipes to the places where it is required for burning.

GASCOIGNE, SIR WILLIAM, lord chief justice in the reign of Henry IV., notable in history as having committed the young and profligate Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V., to prison, for striking him as he was discharging his judicial office. He died in 1413, aged about 60 years.

GAUSCOINE, GEORGE, an English poet of the 16th century, whose life is comprised in the statement, that he spent his youth at Cambridge, and his manhood in studying law, fighting in the Netherlands, and attending on Elizabeth at court. His poems have recently found admirers. He died in 1577, aged about 40 years.

GAUSCONADE, s. [from Gascogne,] a boast, or vaunt of something improbable.

To GAUSCONADE, v. n. to brag or boast.

GAUSEOUS, a. in Chemistry, having the nature and properties of gas.

To GASH, v. a. to cut deep, so as to cause a wide and gaping wound.

GASH, s. a deep and wide wound; the mark or scar left by a wound.

GASOMETER, s. in Chemistry, a name given to a variety of utensils and apparatus contrived to measure, collect, preserve, or mix the different gases.

To GASP, v. n. [Teut.] to open the mouth wide; to catch or draw breath; to expire, or force out breath with difficulty.

GASP, s. the act of opening the mouth wide for want of breath; the convulsive struggle for breath in the agonies of death.

GASSENDI, PIERRE, a celebrated French mathematician and philosopher of the 17th century. He gave early indications of his ability, and occupied a chair of philosophy and theology shortly after he was 20 years of age. As a scientific philosopher, he appears as an opponent of the old Aristotelian organon, and of Descartes' method also, holding by a half-experimental and half-historical method himself. In astronomy and mathematics he distinguished himself also, advocating the doctrines of Galileo and Copernicus, and prosecuting both experiments and observations in confirmation. He first observed the transit of a planet over the sun's disc, verifying the calculation of Kepler. He died in 1655, aged 63 years, leaving many works behind him to sustain his reputation. The impression he produced was, however, soon lost in the depth and grandeur of the scientific discoveries of the age of Newton, which followed immediately.

GASTON DE FOIX, the celebrated French military commander of the beginning of the 16th century, who gained the battle of Ravenna against the Imperial forces and Spain, in which he fell, in 1512, aged 24 years.

GASTRIC, a. [gaster, Gr.] belonging to, or situated in or on the belly. Gastric juice, in Physiology, is a liquid secretion of the stomach, which has power to dissolve animal and vegetable substances, when properly masticated, into a uniform pulp.

GASTROGRAPHY, s. [gaster and graphein, Gr.] in Surgery, applied to signify that a wound of the belly is complicated with another of the intestines.

GASTROTOMY, s. [gaster and temno, Gr.] the Cæsarean operation, or act of cutting the belly open.

GATE, s. [gat, Sax.] a large door of a city, castle, palace, &c.; a frame of timber on hinges, to stop up, or open, a passage into enclosed grounds. Figuratively, a way, avenue, or introduction.

GATES, GENERAL HORATIO, a distinguished American officer during the war of independence, who compelled the British army under Burgoyne to capitulate at Saratoga; which in effect secured the freedom of the States. He was not in his subsequent movements so successful. He died in 1806, aged 77 years.

GATESHEAD, Durham. It is a suburb of Newcastle, being united to it by a stone bridge over the Tyne. It is situated on ground as uneven and steep as is that of Newcastle. In glass and iron manufactures, and in commerce, it is as distinguished, in proportion to its extent, as Newcastle. It is 280 miles from London. Pop. 19,505.

GATEWAY, s. a way or passage through the gates of enclosed ground.

To GATHER, v. a. [gasteran, Sax.] to collect or bring many things into one place; to pick up; to glean; to crop or pluck a vegetable from the tree or plant on which it grows; to select and take; to assemble; to heap up, or accumulate; to collect charitable contributions; to contract, or reduce to a narrower compass. To gain, used with ground. In Needlwork, to run cloth into very small folds or plaits on a thread. In Rhetoric, to deduce; to collect logically, or by inference.—v. n. in Surgery, to generate or breed matter, applied to wounds.

GATHER, s. cloth drawn together in wrinkles.

GATHERER, s. one who collects; one who gets in a crop of any vegetable produce or fruit.

GATHERING, s. a collection of charitable contributions.

GATTER-TREE, s. a shrub, the same with the dog-berry cornel.

GATTON, Surrey. It was formerly very large, but is now reduced to a village, and has neither market nor fair. It is 19 miles from London. Pop. 219.

GAUDE, s. [gaudeo, Lat.] an ornament; a trinket; any thing worn as a sign of joy.

GAUDEN, JOHN, an English divine and bishop of the 17th century, who during the troubles of the civil war trimmed his course as carefully as he could, so as to avoid collision with the victorious party, and yet deserve to be esteemed a royalist. He was repaid with a bishopric by Charles II.; but he did not get all he expected. He edited the famous Eden Bastille, which has gained for Charles I. his religious reputation; and he claimed to be, and most likely was, the writer of it. He died in 1664, aged 54 years.

GAUDERY, s. finery; showy dress; ostentatious luxury of dress.

GAUDILY, ad. in a showy manner.

GAUDINESS, s. an appearance of splendour without any real value; ostentatious showiness.

GAUDY, a. striking the sight with some splendid appearance and showy colour, including generally the idea of something of small value. Gaudy days, an appellation given to particular festivals observed by the students of courts and colleges.

GAVE, the preterite of To Give.

GAVELKIND, s. [gafol, or gavel, Sax.] in Law, a custom whereby the lands of a father are at his death equally divided among his sons, to the exclusion of the females; or those of a brother are equally divided among brothers, if he dies without issue.

To GAUGE, (gaje) v. a. [Fr.] to find the contents of a vessel by means of a measuring or gauging rod. Figuratively, to measure or proportion the size of one thing to another.

GAUGE, (gaje) s. a measure or standard by which any thing is measured.

GAUGER, (gajer) s. one who measures or finds how much is contained in a cask or vessel.

GAUGING, (gajing) s. the art of measuring or computing how much liquor is, or may be, contained in a cask, &c.

GAUL, s. See GALLIA.

GAULT, a. [perhaps from gevanian, Sax.] thin or meagre, applied to the state or meagre of the body.

GAUNTLY, ad. in a slender, thin, or meagre manner.

GAUNTLET, s. [gantlet, Fr.] an iron glove used for defence, thrown down on the ground in challenges. Appropriated by poets to the cestus or boxing-glove, used in the Circensian and Olympic games.

GAVOT, s. [gavette, Fr.] in Music, a short, brisk, lively air, composed in common time, consisting of two parts or strains, each of which is played over twice, the first strain consisting of 4 or 8 bars, and the last 8, 12, &c.

GAUZE, s. a kind of thin transparent silk or linen.

GAWK, s. [geac, Sax.] a cuckoo; a foolish fellow: used in both senses in Scotland.

GAY, JOHN, an English poet of the beginning of the last century. He enjoyed considerable popularity, and no small share of court favour, during his life; and is well known now by his Fables, by a ballad or two, and by the Beggars' Opera. He died in 1732, aged 44 years; and was interred in Westminster Abbey.

GAY, a. [gai, Fr.] brisk, nimble, cheerful, or merry; fine or showy in dress.

GAYETY, s. See GAIETY.

GAYLY, ad. merrily; cheerfully; finely, or showily.

GAZA, THEODORE, one of the Greek scholars who figured conspicuously in the revival of classic literature in Europe in the 15th century. He was a native Greek, and left his own country for Italy on the invasion of the Turks. He laboured at Rome, Ferrara, &c., and died in 1478, aged 80 years.

TO GAZE, v. n. [gesean, Sax.] to look at a thing with intentness or earnestness, including sometimes the idea of novelty in the object, or admiration in the person.

GAZE, s. a fixed and earnest look, including the idea of wonder; the object of astonishment, admiration, or gazing.

GAZEHOUND, s. a hound that pursues not by the scent, but by the eye.

GAZEL, s. in Zoology, an antelope.

GAZER, s. one who looks at a thing with great earnestness and fixedness.

GAZE/TTE, s. [from gazza, the name of a small Venetian coin.] a paper of news, containing mostly foreign articles, and published by authority.

GAZE/TTE/R, s. a writer or publisher of news. Also, a geographical or topographical dictionary.

GAZINGSTOCK, s. an object of public notice, contempt, and abhorrence.

GAZON, (the o pronounced like that in bone.) s. [Fr.] in Fortification, pieces of fresh earth covered with grass, in the form of a wedge, about a foot long, and half a foot thick, used to line parapets, and the traverses of galleries.

GEAR, (the g has the hard sound,) s. [gyrian, Sax.] accoutrements, habit, furniture; the traces and harness of horses and oxen. To throw into (or out of) gear, in the working of machinery, to connect (or disconnect) any part with the moving power or engine.

GECK, s. [gece, Teut.] a bubble; one easily imposed on.

TO GECK, v. a. to cheat; to trick.

GECKO, s. [Ital.] in Natural History, a genus of lizards, species of which occur in all the warmer parts of the world, and especially in the tropical regions.

GEDDES, DR. ALEXANDER, a learned Roman Catholic of Scotland; chiefly known from a partially executed translation of the sacred Scriptures, from the original sources, corrected by the elaborate collections made by Kennicott, De Rossi, &c. He was acquainted with most of the great biblical scholars of his day; but entertained such low views of religion and the Scriptures, that he was not sympathized with by many. He died in 1802, aged 65 years.

GEE, (jee) interject. a word used by waggoners, or other drivers, to make their horses go faster.

GEENSE, s. the plural of goose.

GE/LABLE, a. [gelu, Lat.] what may be thickened, or formed into a jelly.

GE/LATINE, s. in Chemistry, the jelly of animal bodies, which is chiefly found in the tendons and the skin.

GE/LATINE, GELATINOUS, a. formed into a jelly; stiff or viscous.

TO GELD, (the g has the hard sound,) v. a. preter. and part. pass. gelded or gelt; to castrate, or deprive of the power of generation. Figuratively, to diminish, lessen, or deprive of any essential part.

GELDER-ROSE, s. in Botany, a plant with leaves resembling the maple tree; the flowers are disposed in globular clusters.

GE/LDING, (the g has the hard sound,) s. any animal that is castrated, but more particularly applied to a horse in that condition.

GE/LID, (g soft) a. [gelidus, Lat.] extremely cold.

GELIDITY, GELIDNESS, s. extreme cold.

GELL, SIR WILLIAM, a distinguished classical antiquary, whose works on Pompeii, Rome, Greece, &c. are standard sources of information. He was chamberlain to the unfortunate Queen Caroline, during her residence in Italy, and one of the witnesses at her trial. He died in 1836, aged 59 years.

GE/LLETT, CHRISTIAN FURCHTEGOTT, a popular writer of tales, fables, essays, &c. of Germany. He was educated at Leipzig, and afterwards held a chair, as Professor of Philosophy or Rhetoric there. He died in 1769, aged 54 years.

GE/LLIUS, AULUS, a Roman lawyer, author of a work called Noctes Attice, because he wrote it at Athens, of some value because of the curious information respecting the times to be found in it. It is in form a sort of scrap-book, without any pretence to a high literary character. He flourished between 150 and 200 a. d.

GE/LON, one of the tyrants, or unconstitutional monarchs, of Syracuse. He obtained great fame by his military skill and success, but all his expeditions and undertakings had the advancement and aggrandizement of himself as their supreme object. His government was of the character that wise usurpers have ever adopted, being free from all that could have roused the indignation of the enslaved citizens against him; whilst he effectually conciliated them by the munificence and splendour with which he secured the prosperity of their trade, and ornamented their city. He flourished about 480 b. c.

GEM, s. [gemma, Lat.] a jewel, or precious stone. There are also artificial gems that are made of the paste of Tripoli. Many of the ancient gems were very curiously engraved, and are preserved in the cabinets of antiquarians.

TO GEM, v. a. to produce or put forth the first buds; to adorn as with jewels or buds.

GEME/LLIPAROUS, a. [gemelli and pario, Lat.] bearing twins.

GEMINATION, s. [geminio, Lat.] a repetition or reduplication of a word or sentence, in order to increase its force.

GEMINI, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the Twins, the third constellation or sign in the Zodiac. The ancient Egyptians marked this constellation by the hieroglyphic of two kids, because when the sun is in this sign, the goats in Egypt generally bring forth their young in pairs. The Greeks substituted the twin brothers, Castor and Pollux. The sun enters this sign on May 21st.

GEMINIANI, FRANCESCO, an eminent musical composer, who studied under Corelli. Being introduced to George I., he received considerable notice from him; but costly tastes, conscientious Romanism, and other things, prevented him from realizing the solid rewards his reputation deserved. His compositions have sustained his fame; and his Guide to Harmony and Modulation is yet highly esteemed. He died in 1762, aged 82 years.

GEMMEOUS, a. [gemma, Lat.] tending to, or having the nature of, gems.

GE/NDER, s. [genus, Lat.] a sort; a sex. In Grammar, the distinction of sex by various modifications or changes of words. In the English language, only substantives and pronouns are susceptible of these changes, but in other languages numerals, adjectives, participles, verbs, and articles, which are only numerals or demonstrative pronouns, exhibit them as well.

TO GE/NDER, v. a. [engendrer, Fr.] to beget; to produce as a cause.—v. n. to breed.

GENEALOGICAL, a. [genae and logos, Gr.] pertaining to the descent of families; belonging to the history of the successors in houses.

GENEALOGIST, s. he who traces descents.

GENEALOGY, s. a summary account of the several descendants in a pedigree or family; a series or succession of progenitors; a pedigree. SYNON. Pedigree is our lineal descent from some ancestor ages back pointed out. Genealogy is a history of such pedigree. We trace our pedigree. We write our genealogy.

GENERABLE, a. [genero, Lat.] that may be produced or begetten.

GENERAL, a. [Fr.] comprehending many species or individuals, opposed to special or particular. Not restrained in its signification, applied to words. Extensive, or comprehending a great many, but not universal; common; usual. SYNON. General implies a great number of particulars; universal, every particular. The government of princes has no object in view but the general good. The providence of God is universal.

GENERAL, s. the whole; the main, without insisting on particulars; one who commands an army; a particular march or beat of the drum.

GENERALISSIMO, s. [généralissime, Fr.] a supreme commander in the field.

GENERALITY, s. [généralité, Fr.] the quality of being general, or including several species, opposed to particular. The main body, bulk, or greater part of any number or body of men.

GENERALLY, ad. in such a manner as to include all of the same species without exception.

GENERANT, a. [genero, Lat.] the power of causing, producing, or begetting.

TO GENERATE, v. a. to beget or propagate; to cause or produce.

GENERATION, s. [Fr.] the act of begetting or producing; a family, race, or offspring; a single succession or gradation in the scale of descent. Figuratively, an age.

GENÉRATIVE, a. [génératif, Fr.] having the power of propagating or producing; prolific.

GENERATOR, s. the power which begets or produces.

GENÉRIC, GENÉRICAL, a. [genericus, from genus, Lat.] that comprehends the genus, or distinguishes one genus, but not one species, from another.

GENÉRICALLY, ad. in a general manner; with regard to the genus.

GENÉROSITY, s. [generositas, from generosus, Lat.] the quality of giving money freely, of overlooking faults without censure, of pardoning crimes with good nature, and considering the disagreement of others' opinions with charitable allowances.

GENÉROUS, a. [generosus, Lat.] not of mean birth; noble of mind; open of heart; liberal; strong.

GENÉROUSLY, ad. not meanly with regard to birth; nobly.

GENÉROUSNESS, s. the quality of being generous.

GENESIS, [Gr.] the name of the first book of the Bible, in the Greek (Septuagint) Translation, and in later translations, given to it from the subject of the first chapter the production of the universe; but named in the original Hebrew, from the first word or two, "In the beginning," as we designate poems that have no distinctive title. It is the first of the five books, called the Pentateuch, and, by the Hebrews, the Law, written by Moses, with the manifest exception of a few passages relating to subsequent times. It details with great simplicity, and yet in a most poetic form, the origin of all things from God, and the introduction of sin and spiritual evil into this world by the voluntary transgression of man, God's loftiest work, in obedience to mere sensual appetite. The history of the first inhabitants of our earth is given, in general, concisely, but with occasional enlargements respecting characters and incidents demanding more particular mention, as the murder of Abel, the translation of Enoch, the deluge, the dispersion of the children of Noah, &c. This history becomes more minute when the choice of a particular family, that of Abraham, to be the depositaries of Divine truth, is introduced; and most beautiful and dignified are the narratives of the different occurrences in the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and his sons, particularly Joseph. There has been great controversy respecting its value as a history, and other points, which needed not to be so warmly contested; this book differing so widely in its subjects, and scope, and origin, from the works looked on usually as the models of history. Its evident relation to the spiritual history of mankind, and the undoubted authenticity of its records of the earliest revelations of the will of God to man, with the manifold lessons contained in its narratives, give it a worth which no chronological, nor philological difficulties can at all lessen. Whilst every year's researches are removing these difficulties, and teaching all parties the true point of view, whence this, one of the most ancient books in the world, is to be regarded.

GENET, s. [Fr.] in Natural History, a small-sized, well-proportioned, and swift Spanish horse. A kind of weasel.

GENETHLACAL, a. [genethle, Gr.] in Astrology, belonging to, or calculated from, a person's birth or nativity.

GENETHLACUS, s. the science of calculating nativities.

GENÈVA, the name of a lake, a canton, and an ancient town of Switzerland. The lake, called from its old Roman name, Lake Lemana, is about 50 miles in length, and on the average 6 miles in breadth. It lies in a curved form between Savoy, Geneva, and the cantons of Vaud, Berne, and the Valais. The river Rhone runs quite through it. It is surrounded by the most gorgeous Alpine scenery, and its depth gives to its waters a peculiar hue. But it is much subject to very violent storms, as most lakes hemmed in by high land are. The canton of Geneva borders on France and Savoy, being bounded by the canton of Vaud and the lake. It stretches along the river Rhone and the lake, which divide it into two parts. It is much under 20 miles in length, and is very narrow. Although it is very mountainous, some of its hills approaching 5000 feet in altitude, it has sufficient arable and pasture land to yield a considerable quantity of wine, corn, &c. &c. Its manufactures are its chief source of wealth, watches and bijouterie being its chief articles produced. Its population is about 60,000. The town is seated at the S. W. extremity of the lake of the same name, and is divided by the Rhone, over which is a noble suspension-bridge, into two unequal parts. Lying partly in the plain on the borders of the lake, and partly on a gentle ascent, it is irregularly built; but the houses are lofty, and the public buildings are in many instances very fine. There is a noble library in the college, and the university is one of long-standing celebrity. Population, about 30,000. This town was the cradle of the extra-Lutheran Reformation, and afforded shelter to those who were driven from England by the Romanist and Anglican persecutions. AD. 12, N. Long, 6. 10. E.

GENÈVA, s. [génèvre, Fr.] a spirituous liquor produced from juniper-berries.

GENÈVA, a town of New York, United States. It is beautifully situated on the N. extremity of Seneca Lake, on a bank of a considerable elevation, whence the ground slopes to the landing-place. Here is a college, with two good libraries, and other literary and scientific appliances; and a medical college of good standing. It is 179 miles from Washington. Pop. 3600.

GENGHIS-KHAN, the great Tatar conqueror of the 13th century, was son of the chief of a small Mongol tribe, whose first exploits were in petty warfare against other Tatar tribes, who had attempted his destruction. He used the influence he had gained to organize an expedition against China, which resulted in his gaining some of its fairest provinces, having taken its capital, and had the emperor in his power. Thence he directed his arms westerly, and defeated the kings of the regions N. of Hindustan, so as to have, in time, all central Asia, from the borders of Europe and Arabia to the Great Pacific Ocean, beneath his power. In the endeavour still further to extend his reign, he died, in 1227, aged 64 years. His dominions were divided amongst his four sons, and thus the empire he had raised was dissolved.

GENIAL, a. [genialis, Lat.] that contributes to propagation; that cherishes, supports life, or causes cheerfulness; natural, or native.

GENIALLY, ad. naturally; cheerfully.

GENICULATED, a. [geniculatus, Lat.] in Botany, knotted or jointed.

GENICULATION, s. knottiness; the quality in plants of having knots or joints.

GENIO, s. [Ital.] a person of a particular turn of mind; the turn, disposition, or cast of the mind.

GENITALS, s. not used in the singular; [genitalis, Lat.] the parts contributing to generation.

GENITING, s. [janeton, Fr.] an early apple gathered in June.

GENITIVE, a. [genetivus, from genero, Lat.] in Grammar, one of the six cases, by which origin or possession is chiefly implied.

GENIUS, s. [Lat.] a supposed protecting or ruling power of men, places, or things; a person endowed with faculties superior to another; a perfection of understanding; a disposition by which a person is by nature qualified or inclined to any particular science or employment; nature, or disposition.

GENLIS, STÉPHANIE FÉLICITE, COUNTESS DE, a popular writer of France from the close of the last century. Her history had much that is romantic, and much that is mysterious in it. She was by birth well connected, and was married to the Count de Genlis. She soon undertook the instruction of the children of the famous Philippe, Duke of Orleans, afterwards, Philippe Egalité; and was by all believed to be his mistress. Pamela, who was subsequently married to Lord Edward Fitzgerald, and whom she represented as an adopted child, was regarded as her own. On Philippe's fall, she left France, and lived in Switzerland, Hamburg, and England, till Napoleon's consulship, when she returned, and was treated with great honour. She received like treatment from the Bourbons when they were restored; and she died soon after her former pupil Louis Philippe was placed on the throne as the king of the French, in 1830, aged 84 years. Her works are very numerous, and some contain curious historical information.

GENOA, a city of Italy, capital of a Duchy of the same name, belonging to the kingdom of Sardinia. The city of Genoa is about 10 miles in circumference, and built like an amphitheatre. The houses are well built, and the palaces and public buildings are numerous. The harbour is large and good, and, to preserve it, a mole, 560 paces long, 13 broad, and 15 feet above the level of the water. It is one of the most commercial places in Italy. They have manufactures in velvet, plush, damask, and silk; and the banking business is carried on extensively. It was one of the most celebrated of the Italian republics, in the middle ages, and the only one which could in maritime affairs and commerce cope with Venice; but its glory is past. It is 224 miles from Rome. Population, about 100,000.

GENOVESE, ANTONIO, an Italian philosopher of the last century, who was Professor of Morals and Political Economy at Naples, and author of some works of standard excellence; such as his Logic and Metaphysics. His liberality of thought was a great stumbling-block to many; and his views of economics were both original and profound. He died in 1769, aged 57 years.

GENTEEL, a. [gentil, Fr.] polite or elegant in behaviour or address; graceful or elegant in mien.

GENTEELLY, ad. according to the rules of polite breeding; elegantly; gracefully; handsomely.

GENTEELNESS, s. elegance; gracefulness; politeness.

GENTIAN, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, having elegantly shaped tubular flowers; and yielding a bitter much used in medicine. One kind is remarkable for the intense blue of its blossom.

GENTIANELLA, (gentshiànella) s. a kind of blue colour.

GENTILE, s. [gentilis, Lat.] one who worships idols, or false gods; one who is not a Jew.

GENTILESS, s. [Fr.] complaisance; the ceremony and address of polite behaviour.

GENTILISM, s. [gentilisme, Fr.] the worship of the heathens; idolatry.

GENTILITIOUS, (gentilishious) a. [gens, Lat.] belonging to, or characteristic of, a particular nation. Hereditary; entailed on a family.

GENTILITY, s. [gentilité, Fr.] good extraction; dignity of birth; the class of those who are well born.

GENTLE, a. [gens, Lat.] of an ancient and good family; mild; tame; not easily provoked, applied to the temper; soothing or pacifying. Synon. Gentle animals are naturally so; tame ones are so, partly by the art and industry of men. The dog, the ox, and the horse are gentle animals; the bear and the lion are sometimes tame.

GENTLE, s. a person of a good family; a gentleman. In Natural History, a kind of worm somewhat like a maggot, used for a bait in fishing.

GENTLEFOLK, s. persons distinguished by their birth or riches from the working-classes.

GENTLEMAN, s. [gentilhomme, Fr.] a person of a noble birth, or descended of a family which has long borne arms. It has departed in common usage far from its heraldic signification.

GENTLEMANLIKE, GENTLEMANLY, a. becoming a man of birth.

GENTLENESS, s. softness; mildness; sweetness.

GENTLEWOMAN, s. a woman of birth, or one superior in wealth or position, to women of the working-classes.

GENTLY, ad. softly; slowly; kindly.

GENTOO'S, s. the common name of those natives of Hindustan, who profess Brahminism.

GENTRY, s. [from gentle,] a rank of persons between the nobility and the people, having risen from these by the acquisition of wealth, or fallen from those, through the loss of it.

GENUFLECTION, s. [genu and flecto, Lat.] the act of bending the knee; adoration expressed by bending the knee.

GENUINE, a. [genuinus, Lat.] pure, or without any spurious mixture; natural; true; real.

GENUINELY, ad. without adulteration; naturally.

GENUINENESS, s. freedom from any thing counterfeit, or from any adulteration.

GENUS, s. [Lat.] in Logic, a class of beings, or one common nature agreeing to, and comprehending under it, many species, or several other common natures; thus animal is a genus, because it agrees to, and comprehends under it, the several species of men, horses, whales, lions, &c. In the classificatory sciences, a system or assemblage of several natural objects, agreeing in some one or more common characters, in respect to certain parts, whereby they are distinguished from all others.

GEOCENTRIC, a. [geocentrique, Fr.] in Astronomy, having the same centre with the earth. Geocentric longitude or latitude of a planet is its place as seen from the earth.

GEODESY, s. [ge and daio, Gr.] that part of practical geometry which teaches to measure surfaces, and to find the contents of all plane figures.

GEODETICAL, a. relating to the art of measuring surfaces; comprehending or showing the art of measuring lands.

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, one of the early English historians, who, being a churchman and brought up in a monastery, and not of first-rate power, has gathered together far more of fable than of fact; yet, in the absence of other light, sometimes lends a ray to a dark part of the course of events in these islands. He flourished about, or before, 1150.

GEOGNOSY, s. [ge and gnosis, Gr.] the old word for the science of geology, used by Werner; occasionally employed to designate descriptive geology now.

GEOGRAPHER, (geographer) s. [ge and grapho, Gr.] one who can describe the earth according to the position of its several parts, and is skilled in making maps, the use of the globes, and the situation and extent of the several divisions of the world.

GEOGRAPHICAL, (geográfikal) a. belonging to geography.

GEOGRAPHICALLY, ad. in a geographical manner; according to the rules of geography.

GEOGRAPHY, (geography) s. popularly, a topographical and statistical account of the different nations of the earth; but, more accurately, a description of all the great natural features and physical peculiarities of the earth, embracing not only mountains, plains, lakes, rivers, seas, islands, &c., but climates, seasons, and their effects on man, animals, and plants: this is sometimes called Physical Geography. Mathematical Geography is the art of constructing maps, charts, &c., representing, according to certain scales, the great features of any part of the globe.

GEOLOGICAL, a. relating to the science of geology, as, the Geological Society, formed to advance the science; Geological Maps, which are constructed to show the various portions of the surface of the globe, occupied by different formations.

GEOLOGIST, s. one who studies the science of geology. Two classes of geologists have been described—those who consider it necessary to suppose that stupendous catastrophes, in the shape of deluges, earthquakes, &c., have taken place, in order to account for the ancient phenomena of our world; and those who regard the forces still in operation as sufficient, time being granted, to bring about all these results;—they are called Catastrophists and Uniformitarians.

GEOLOGY, s. [ge and logos, Gr.] the science which investigates the nature and force of the various causes of change yet in action on our earth, such as winds, frosts, tides, floods, currents, earthquakes, &c. &c.; and applies the results in explanation of the phenomena of the strata of which the crust of the earth is composed, both as to mineral composition, fossil contents, position in relation to other strata, and condition as seen now, whether horizontal or inclined, entire or broken, &c. It is of recent birth as a science, dating from the researches of Werner, Hutton, and Smith. Before that was mere cosmogonical speculation,—dreams, parents of dreams.

GEOMANCER, s. [ge and manteia, Gr.] one who pretends to tell future events.

GEOMANCY, s. the art of casting figures; the art of foretelling by figures what shall happen.

GEOMANTIC, a. belonging to geomancy, or formed by a geomancer.

GEOMETER, s. [ge and metreo, Gr.] one skilled in the principles of geometry.

GEOMETRICAL, a. pertaining or relating to geometry.

GEOMETRIC, GEOMETRICAL, a. belonging to, prescribed, laid down by, or disposed according to, the principles of geometry.

GEOMETRICALLY, ad. according to the rules of geometry.

GEOMETRICIAN, s. See GEOMETER.

TO GEOMETRIZE, v. n. to perform or act according to the principles of geometry.

GEOMETRY, s. the art of measuring the earth, or any distances thereon; the science of the various properties and relations of space, which are investigated as they are shown in lines, and figures, both superficial and solid, plane and spherical. Analytical Geometry, is that part of the science by which these properties are investigated, the higher mathematics being employed as the more powerful instrument. Common works on Geometry are synthetical or demonstrative. See EUCLID, MATHEMATICS, &c.

GEOPONICS, s. [ge and ponos, Gr.] the science of cultivating the ground; the doctrine of agriculture.

GEORGE, (Jorje) s. [Georgius, Lat.] the figure of St. George on horseback, worn by the knights of the Garter as an ensign of their order.

GEORGE, ST., the patron saint of England, whose legendary fame has made him the deliverer of the helpless in the matter of slaying the dragon which required (like the monster of classic fable) the yearly sacrifice of a young virgin; and the defender of the true faith, by representing the taking of Jerusalem by the crusaders under Godfrey de Bouillon, as effected by his potent aid; is very little known in history, and has a very doubtful report. April 23rd is dedicated to him.

GEORGE I., king of Great Britain, &c., after the decease of Anne, the last of the Stuarts, by virtue of his descent from James I., through the queen of Bohemia, and Sophia duchess of Brunswick, and of his profession of Protestantism. He was the first wooer of his predecessor, but afterwards most unhappily married the daughter of the duke of Zell. He had served with distinction in the wars against the Turks, and in other campaigns. His accession was of necessity the signal for the overthrow of Tory supremacy, and the placing of the Whigs in the seat of power, of which party Walpole was the head. An attempt was made in behalf of the son of James II., called the Pretender, in Scotland, in the year following George's accession, in which some of the chiefs of the Tory party were implicated. It was crushed in two fights, at Sherriff-Moor and Preston, in one day, and the leaders were executed. Two other projects entertained, by Charles XII. of Sweden and Peter of Russia, because of some increase of the Hanoverian territory, and by Cardinal Alberoni, the famous minister of Spain, were more easily disposed of; the second being beaten at sea by Sir George Byng, and finished in the pass of Glenishel. Another attempt was crushed in the bud, a bishop being one of the arrested conspirators. As with Spain at various times war was carried on in the Mediterranean, and in the W. Indies, but the exploits of the Brag and the defence of Gibraltar were the only events of moment. The South Sea bubble may be regarded as one of the greatest events of this reign. The extension of the duration of a parliament to seven years was the work of the Whigs at the outset of this reign. Theirs too was the feeble attempt to mitigate clamour and opposition, by petty concessions to dissidents from the Church of England. The king's cruel conduct to his wife, and the open profligacy of his court, were themes of comment in his day, and remain as signs of the times. He died in 1727, aged 67 years, having reigned 13.

GEORGE II., his only son, succeeded him. He had been during his father's reign an object of great hatred to his father, partly for his mother's sake, and partly because of his popularity. Walpole had attached himself to the prince, and on the reconciliation he, of course, was doubly strung, and continued so till the death of the queen, and the opposition of George's own son, drove him from his post. Pulteney, Lord Grenville, Pelham, the Duke of Newcastle, Fox, and Pitt, with some of less note, or less ability, successively assumed the reins of government; and most of the internal history is only the idle tale of the struggle of these parties. In this reign a new attempt was made by the son of the Pretender to gain the throne: at first every thing seemed to prosper, and the greatest alarm was felt in London, as Charles had driven back the king's troops, and marched into the heart of England. But his cause was doomed; he retreated, was utterly defeated by the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden, and after wanderings and escapes more romantic than those of Charles II. after Worcester fight, escaped, never to return. This changed the whole aspect of the controversy between the Whigs and the Tories, who have gradually, from that day, when the only real point of difference was removed, grown to be completely alike in every thing but name. On the continent there was a war with Spain, which was, however, chiefly carried on in the W. Indies, where Admiral Vernon gained Porto Bello; and afterwards, a war of succession against the Bavarians and the French, in which George gained the battle of Dettingen, and the Duke of Cumberland lost so many that English fame had been quite tarnished, if the successes of Hawke and Anson at sea had not cleared it. The treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle concluded that war. Some years afterwards another war broke out with France, which increased the English territories in all quarters of the world; Clive raising a new empire in the East; Wolfe gaining Canada by his death; several parts of Africa being acquired; and the continental possessions being assured to George by several victories, of which Minden was the chief. The establishment of the House of Commons as the representative of the landed interests merely to the exclusion of commerce and labour, was effected by the property qualification for members of parliament being insisted on. George II. followed in the steps of his father to some extent, as far as regards the keeping of mistresses, and rewarding them with titles and honours; but he was a better man than his father in other respects; an unassuming, plain common-sense, and integrity in general, marked him, which, if it diminished his splendour and fame, kept him from hatred and infamy. He died in 1760, aged 77 years, having reigned 33 years.

GEORGE III. was grandson to his predecessor. His father, the Prince of Wales, for some years was the animating spirit of the opposition party. He was trained chiefly by his mother, and saw little of society or the world, which yet more narrowed a mind not very ample naturally. Lord Bute, Grenville, Pitt, soon after created Lord Chatham, the younger and greater Pitt, Rockingham, Lord North, Fox, Addington, afterwards created Lord Sidmouth, the Duke of Portland, Percival, and Lord Liverpool, were the great leaders of the various ministries, through this long reign; the most brilliant period of all, being that when William Pitt was at the head of affairs, and Fox and Burke and all their great compeers were in the senate. An end was soon put to the continental war by the treaty of Paris; but shortly after the war of independence in America broke out, which terminated in the loss of the United States. Hardly had the nation recovered from this shock when the French Revolution occurred; and after waiting for a pretext for war, England, in common with other aristocratic governments, undertook to trample out the threatening conflagration. The war began in 1793, and lasted, with the brief intervals of the peace of Amiens, and the retirement of Napoleon to Elba, till the battle of Waterloo, in 1815. During good part of this protracted struggle, England had to stand solitary, and against not France alone, for Spain and other powers at times were leagued with France, and America declared war in 1812. At the height of Napoleon's power, all Europe was closed against England. The Duke of York at first obtained a doubtful fame; Lords Hood and Howe, undoubted glory. Lord St. Vincent, Lord Duncan, and finally Lord Nelson, followed in their train. The 1st of June, Cape St. Vincent, Camperdown, Aboukir Bay, Copenhagen, Trafalgar, and a host of minor victories, raised Great Britain to her loftiest height of warlike fame. The fame of the Duke of Wellington has dwarfed all other military commanders who took part in this contest on land; and the various victories in the Peninsula, and the consummation at Waterloo, have been by all assigned to his iron inflexibility and unparalleled skill. In the mean while, in India, in Egypt, at the Cape of Good Hope, in the W. Indies, and in several other parts, like struggles were proceeding; and other heroes placed on the roll of history, with glory only second to those before-named. The nation, throughout this fearful struggle, blinded by the renown obtained, and thrown off its guard by the complexion of circumstances, continued to consent to burden on burden being laid on its own and its posterity's shoulders, and to despatch army after army to achieve its own enthrallment. Before the French Revolution, men had step forth in advance of the parties who engrossed most attention, and had announced great principles of popular freedom. These and their followers hailed with rapture the struggle in France, but the horrors of the reign of the Convention, and the Committee of Safety, and Robespierre, and the too palpable ambition of Buonaparte to be lord of Europe;—these perplexing their own minds and terrifying their followers, and affording to their opponents such an arsenal of weapons, threw back the mass of the English people far behind the point they had reached before the war began. Yet at the close of it, it was by military force alone that unpopular measures were carried, and popular meetings dispersed. In the latter years of the 18th century a noble but too wild attempt was made by some ardent and patriotic Irishmen to shake off the connexion with Great Britain, which had continued so long to be nought but evil. Treachery, and superior force, brought these men to the scaffold; and Ireland was straightway bound by closer bonds to England, but nothing save the seeds of future evil sown. Amongst other measures of great moment, some relating to the slave trade, which prepared the way for its final abolition; the famous Bank Restriction Act of Pitt, and the Bank Cash Resumption Act of Peel; with the attempt of Lord Sidmouth on the liberties of Dissenters; deserve to be mentioned. George III. was not long after his accession, visited with an attack of mental derangement, and more than once some years afterwards; and for the last ten years of his reign was completely insane. It was his lot to have his life attempted twice at least, by madmen, and once in a popular tumult, because of the war, and the misery inflicted on the working classes through high prices and intense scarcity. The diversion of the national energy towards the arts of peace, at the close of this reign, made a beginning of that astonishing career of practical and mechanical invention and improvement, in the midst of which we live. The character of this king has usually been the subject of great praise; but justice and truth demand the assertion, that though he displayed not the profligacy of the preceding and following Georges, his own conduct in denying his first marriage, and obtaining the Royal Marriage Act to make it ex post facto illegal, was base in the extreme. His intellect never was of a comprehensive order, and popular anecdotes display him in a most undignified light. In money matters he was as careful as a shopkeeper; in his prejudices, most immovable. He died in 1820, aged 82, and having been king for 60 years.

GEORGE IV., son of George III., before his accession had acquired considerable notoriety as a warm, but temporary political partisan of the opposition to his father, and as a confirmed debauchee; he had also several times applied to parliament for the payment of his debts; and, during the mental incapacity of his father, had been declared prince regent. The conduct he had displayed in relation to his wife had been of the most heartless description. On his father's death he acquired only the title of king in addition to the power he had held for about ten years; and the policy he had observed during that time, in direct contradiction to his assumed Whiggism, he continued to maintain. During his reign, Lord Liverpool, Mr. Canning, Viscount Goderich, the Duke of Wellington, Mr. (afterwards Sir Robert) Peel, with Earl Grey, (who before the anti-Gallic and anti-liberal frenzy, gradually excited by the long war against France, had attempted a thorough reform of the representation of England,) Lord Palmerston, Lord Glenelg, (then Mr. C. Grant,) Lord Russell, Mr. O'Connell, and Mr. (now Lord) Brougham, on the other side, were the chief of the royal advisers. Almost immediately after the accession a desperate and insane conspiracy was formed by a band of poor misguided men, for the purpose of assassinating the ministers, Lord Castlereagh especially, and effecting a revolution in the government. A handful of police and soldiers extinguished it, and Thistlewood, the leader, and some others were executed. Catholic Emancipation, the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts, the mitigation of the severity of some of the penal laws, and some improvements in minor yet important matters, were effected during this reign. One of the chief events relating to the sovereign himself, was the queen's trial before the Lords, for the purpose of obtaining a bill of divorce; which did not succeed, to the undisguised joy of the whole nation, as much from dislike to George, as from conviction of her innocence. She died shortly after. George IV. was the first English monarch who visited Ireland with pacific intent; but royal progresses were not the remedy for the ills of that enslaved country. The only wars in which England was engaged were, that against the Birman empire, that against the Turks for the liberation of Greece, an insignificant struggle in W. Africa, and an equally insignificant contest between two factions in Portugal. George IV. died in 1830, aged 68 years, and having reigned more than 10. There is but one verdict respecting him now, and that relates wholly to his personal character; the various contrivances of councils and cabinets having made the sovereignty but a name;—despite of his well-cultivated mind, and good natural powers, which might have given him a proud and noble place in England's history, he preferred a course of baser and more infamous profligacy than ever Charles II. ran; and verily he has his reward.

GEORGETOWN, a city and port of Columbia, United States. It stands on the Potomac, near Rock Creek, over which are two bridges communicating with Washington. It contains many elegant buildings and country-seats. Here are, also, a well conducted and supported Roman Catholic college, containing an excellent library; and a nunnery, called the Convent of the Visitation. It is 2 miles from Washington. Pop. 7312. There are in the States thirteen other places with this name.

GEORGIA, a province of Russia in Asia, called by the Russians Grusia, by the Persians Gurgistan, and by the Turks Gurtshi. It is situated between the Black and Caspian Seas, and comprehends the ancient Iberia and part of Colchis. The hills are covered with forests of beech, oak, ash, chestnuts, walnuts, and elms, encircled with vines, growing spontaneously, and producing vast quantities of grapes. Cotton also grows spontaneously, as well as the finest fruit trees. Rice, wheat, millet, hemp, and flax, are raised on the plains, almost without culture. The valleys afford fine pasturage, the rivers are full of fish, the mountains abound with minerals, and the climate is delicious. The rivers, however, being fed by mountain torrents, are always too rapid or too shallow for the purposes of navigation. The Georgians are skilled in the use of the bow, and are thought to be the best soldiers in Asia. Their dress resembles that of the Cossacks; but those that are wealthy affect the habit of the Persians. They usually dye their hair, beards, and nails red. The women, who are celebrated for their beauty, stain the palms of their hands of the same colour, and paint their eye-brows black, in such a manner as to form one entire line, while the rest of the face is coated with white and red. Being generally educated in convents, they can read and write, qualifications uncommon with the men, even of the highest rank. The inhabitants are Christians, partly of the Greek, and partly of the Armenian church. Here are also Tatars, Ossi, Armenians, and a considerable number of Jews. Teflis is the chief town, and the residence of the governor-general. Population, about 250,000.

GEORGIA, one of the United States, N. America. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by Tennessee, N. and S. Carolina, Florida, and Alabama. It is about 300 miles long and 240 broad, and is divided into 93 counties. Along the coast is a belt of islands about seven miles in depth, consisting of salt marsh, and a soil which produces sea-island cotton of superior quality. The coast of the main land for about five miles resembles these islands; then for about 80 miles, a belt of pine barrens and swamps. Beyond this, the country of sand-hills, interspersed with fertile tracts, reaches to the lower falls; above which is the upper country, composed of varying but fertile soil; and on the N. the surface becomes mountainous. The rivers are the Savannah, the Altamaha, the Ogeechee, &c. Timber trees, corn of all kinds, fruits, wine, &c. are its chief products. Copper, iron, and gold are its most valuable minerals. It has a good export trade, and some considerable manufactures. Athens is the seat of its university. It has nearly 40 banks. This is one of the slave states, and no coloured man is entitled to the privileges of active citizenship. The capital is Milledgeville, and Savannah is its principal seat of commerce. Pop. 691,392, of which 280,944 are slaves.

GEORGIA, SOUTH, the principal of a cluster of islands in the South Atlantic Ocean. It is 31 leagues long, and its greatest breadth is about 10. It abounds in bays and harbours, which the vast quantities of ice render inaccessible the greatest part of the year. Not a stream of fresh water was to be seen on the whole coast. The only birds are penguins, and a species of the lark: no quadrupeds, except bears, are found. Moss and a small plant or two are its only vegetation. These islands lie between 53. 57. and 54. 57. S. Lat., and between 35. 34. and 38. 13. W. Long.

GEORGIC, (jörkik) s. [georgikos, from ge and ergon, Gr.] the science of husbandry put into poetry. Virgil's poem is the chief of this class.

GEORGIUM SIDUS, a name of the most remote planet but one of the solar system, called also Herschel, and Uranus.

GERANIUM, s. in Botany, a genus of plants of great variety, beauty, and odour; the most valuable species are brought from Africa.

GERARDE, JOHN, the famous English herbalist, was a surgeon at Nantwich, and afterwards was curator of Lord Burghley's botanical garden. His book, which is a curiosity now, was for a long time the only English botanical work of any authority. He died in 1607, aged 62 years.

GERALCON, s. in Zoology, a bird of prey, in size between a vulture and a hawk, and of the greatest strength next to the eagle.

GERMAIN, ST., a town in the department Seine et Oise, France, formerly of great consequence as containing royal chateaux and residences, and still containing one of the royal parks.

It is of little importance now. It is 16 miles from Paris. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 48. 53. N. Long. 2. 4. E.

GERMAN, s. [germanus, from germen, Lat.] a brother; one approaching to a brother in nearness of blood; generally applied to the children of brothers and sisters, who are called cousins german.

GERMAN, a. belonging to Germany. The German language is called in Germany High-Dutch, and was formed by Luther and his confederates out of the various provincial dialects. Low-Dutch is the dialect of the northern states.

GERMANDER, s. [germandrie, Fr.] in Botany, a plant with yellow blossoms, called also the ground-pine; likewise a kind of speedwell.

GERMANS, ST., Cornwall. It was once the largest town in the county, but is at present a small place. It was formerly a bishop's see, had a cathedral, and what is left of it is used as the parish church, and near it is the priory yet standing. It is 224 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2843.

GERMANICUS, CESAR, the brother of the Roman emperor Claudius, who gained great renown for his victories over various barbarous tribes inhabiting Germany; and for the skill with which he controlled and subdued his mutinous army. He was, as is usual in such cases, an object of great jealousy to Tiberius the emperor, who removed him to Syria, where he was poisoned, in 19 A. D., aged but 34 years.

GERMANY, the general name for the central part of Europe, reaching from Denmark and the Baltic to Switzerland, and from Prussia and Austria to Holland, Belgium, and France; occupied by part of the kingdom of Prussia, the kingdoms of Bavaria, Württemberg, Hanover, and Saxony; the grand-duchies of Baden, Hesse-Darmstadt, Hesse-Cassel, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Oldenburg, Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, and Mecklenburg-Strelitz; the duchies of Nassau, Brunswick, Saxe-Meiningen, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Saxe-Altenburg, Anhalt-Dessau, Anhalt-Bernburg, and Anhalt-Köthen; the principalities of Lippe-Deimold, the two branches of Reuss, Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, Waldeck, Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, Hohenzollern-Heckingen, Schaumburg-Lippe, Hesse-Homburg, and Lichtenstein; and the territories belonging to the free cities of Hamburg, Bremen, and Lubeck;—which states, with Austria, Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Holstein, Lauenburg, and Luxemburg, form the German Confederation. The mountains are the Erzgebirge, the Böhmen-Wald, the Oden-Wald, the Eichel-Gebirge, the Rhenish-Gebirge, the Schwarz-Wald, the Hartz, &c. The rivers are the Danube, the Rhine, the Elbe, the Weser, the Maine, the Moselle, and their tributaries, &c. The productions are treated of under the separate states. All this region was under the sway of the emperor of Germany till 1806, when that title was abolished; and after various changes, by the Congress of Vienna, in 1815, each state was declared independent, but for all common interests were united in the German Confederation. The part taken by the people of this vast country in literature, philosophy, and theology, is their chief distinction now. And on this part their claim to renown in the history of mankind will rest. The great movement begun by Luther in the 16th century, carrying along with it either weaker or minor movements, after a period of stagnation, broke out again before the close of the last century; it was increased by the agitation caused throughout all Europe by the French Revolution; the wars of Napoleon, so disastrous to Germany, aided it; and now, during this long interval of peace, it has progressed with greater rapidity, and a smoother course; and though it is yet characterized by destruction to all the worn-out systems of thought, and has not brought, except in Prussia, any prospect or promise of political freedom, every day develops features which justify the warmest hopes respecting its ultimate results, which are brought so much the nearer through the impartation of this movement to the more practical people of England and the United States, and to the vigorous and less dreamy people of France. Frankfort-on-the-Maine is the place where the diet of the Confederation sits; and the population of the states composing it is about 60,000,000.

GERM, GERMAN, s. [Lat.] a sprout or shoot; that part which grows and spreads. In Botany, that part of a flower or plant which contains the seed.

To GERMINATE, v. n. [germen, Lat.] to sprout, bud, shoot, or grow.

GERMINATION, a. [Fr.] the act of shooting or sprouting; growth.

GERSE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Landes, Basses and Hautes Pyrénées, Haute Garonne, Tarn et Garonne, and Lot et Garonne. Its length is about 75 miles, and its breadth about 50. It is mountainous, and its chief produce is brandy. The Adur is its chief stream; others are tributaries to it and the Garonne. Auch is its capital. Pop. about 325,000.

GERSON, JOHN CHARLIER DE, an eminent French divine of the 15th century. He occupied the post of chancellor of the University of Paris, and was canon of Notre Dame. During his time Catholic Europe was greatly disturbed by rival popes, three of whom appeared at once. At the councils of Pisa and Constance, he took a very distinguished part; particularly at the latter, where his influence had much to do with the condemnation of John Huss and Jerome of Prague. During the latter part of his life he was the object of such political persecution that he expatriated himself, and lived for some time in Germany. He died in 1429, aged 66 years. He wrote many valuable and excellent works, and is by some reputed to be the writer of A Kempis's Invitation of Christ. This book is by others attributed to a John Gerson of the 12th century.

GERUND, s. [gerundium, Lat.] in Grammar, the name assigned to participles when used adverbially. In Latin Grammar, the name peculiarly assigned to that part of a verb which is a declinable singular substantive, formed from the verbal root by the addition of endo. It is an imperfect participle also, and is declinable in all genders, numbers, and cases.

GESENIUS, FREDERIC HENRY WILLIAM, an eminent oriental scholar of Germany, during the present century. He was latterly theological professor at Halle; but his fame rests on his Hebrew Grammars and Lexicons, which are the most valuable works extant. He wrote other works, one on Isaiah, which occasioned some controversy from the views he took of the author and date of that book. He died in 1842, aged 56 years.

GESNER, CONRAD, a distinguished naturalist and physician of Switzerland, in the 16th century. He is one of the numerous examples of successful pursuit of knowledge under all the difficulties which could damp the ardour and prevent the success of such a pursuit. He not only wrote on Natural History, but compiled a catalogue of all the writers whose works were known in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin; and maintained a correspondence with learned and scientific men in every country of Europe. He was philosophical professor at Zurich, his native place; and subsequently Greek professor at Lausanne. He died of the plague, leaving a name not only unspotted by any reproach, but adorned with all private and social excellences, in 1565, aged 48 years.

GESNER, SOLOMON, a painter, poet, and tale-writer of Zurich, during the last century. His Death of Abel has carried his name to most countries of Europe, or had carried it, for the book is all but forgotten now, and soon will be quite, not being of the class called Immortals. Gessner had however his living renown, and at Zurich some of the posthumous sort. He died in 1787, aged 57 years.

GESTATION, s. [gesto, Lat.] the act of bearing the young in the womb.

To GESTICULATE, v. n. [gestus, Lat.] to make odd gestures; to play antic tricks.

GESTICULATION, s. the throwing the arms or limbs about in odd and antic postures; an odd posture.

GESTURE, s. the postures or attitudes expressive of a person's sentiments; any movement or motion of the body.

To GESTURE, v. a. to accompany one's delivery with action, attitude, or motion of the body.

To GET, v. a. pret. I got, anciently gat; part. pass. got or gotten; [geten, gettan, Sax.] to procure, or acquire; to obtain by force or seizure; to attain by success; to win; to possess; to beget; to acquire; to gain; to earn by labour and pains; to learn. "Get by heart the more common and useful words."

Watts. To put into any state; to prevail on; to draw; to be-take; to remove by force or art.—v. n. to arrive at any state or posture by degrees with some kind of labour or difficulty; to fall; to come by accident; to find the way; to move; to remove; to go or repair to. To get off, to sell or dispose of by some artifice or expedient. To get in, to force or find a passage. To get off, to escape danger. To get over, to surmount; to conquer; to extricate oneself from any obstacle or impediment which hinders from action, or involves the mind in perplexity. To get up, to rise from a seat or a bed.

GETA, SEPTIMIUS ANTONIUS, younger son of the emperor Severus, and joint emperor after his death with Caracalla his eldest son. He was a mild and estimable young man, and was murdered by his brother, in his mother's arms, in 212, aged about 21 years.

GETTER, s. one who procures or obtains; one who begets.

GETTING, s. the act of obtaining. In Commerce, gain or profit.

GEWGAW, s. [gegaw, Sax.] a showy, empty trifle; a bauble, or splendid plaything.

GEWGAW, a. splendidly trifling; though showy and gaudy, yet of no value.

GEYSERS, intermittent hot springs in the island of Iceland, the greatest of which rises out of a spacious basin at the summit of a circular mound, formed by the silicious incrustations deposited by its waters. The water is thrown up to the height of 200 feet, at times; but the eruptions do not last very long, and the intervals between them are very irregular. These springs break out of the midst of a lava stream that has long ago flowed from Hecla. The water in all of them deposits silica.

GHA-STFUL, (gásful) a. [gast and fulle, Sax.] dreary; dismal; melancholy.

GHA-STLINESS, (gástlines) s. horror appearing on the countenance; dismal paleness, like a ghost.

GHA-STLY, (gástly) a. like a ghost; with horror and dread painted on the countenance; dreadful; horrible; shocking.

GHENT, a considerable city, the capital of East Flanders, Belgium. The city is divided by canals into 26 islands, and over the canals there are 300 bridges. The streets are large, and the market-place is spacious. The cathedral, churches, and other religious edifices are fine buildings. They have flourishing manufactures of silk, woollen, linen, and a great trade in corn. There is a large canal which passes from Ghent to Bruges, and thence to Ostend; and another which passes to Sas de Ghent. Ghent is seated on the confluence of the rivers Scheldt, Lis, Moeze, and Lieve, 26 miles N. W. of Brussels. Population, about 85,000. Lat. 51. 3. N. Long. 3. 43. E.

GHE'RKIN, (gérkin—the g pronounced hard), s. [gurche, Teut.] a small pickled cucumber.

GHI'LAN. See PERSIA.

GHOST, (góst) s. [gast, Sax.] the soul; a spirit or spectre. When joined with Holy, it implies the third Person of the Holy Trinity, otherwise termed the Holy Spirit. To give up the ghost, is to expire, to die.

GHOSTLINESS, (góstlines) s. spiritualness; the quality relating to the soul.

GHOSTLY, (góstly) a. spiritual, or relating to the soul.

GIALALINA, s. [Ital.] earth of a bright gold colour, found in the kingdom of Naples, very fine, and much valued by painters.

GIA'MBEAUX, (jámbose) s. [gambes, Fr.] armour for the legs; greaves.

GI'ANT, s. [geant, Fr.] a person of uncommon height of stature.

GI'ANNESS, s. a woman of more than natural height; a woman taller than the rest of the sex naturally are.

GI'ANTLIKE, GI'ANTLY, a. resembling a giant in tallness; of an enormous bulk, or exceeding great.

GI'ANT'S CAUSEWAY, a. promontory of Antrim in Ireland, composed of columnar basalt. See BASALT.

GI'ANTSHIP, s. the quality or character of a giant.

GIARO'LO, s. in Ornithology, a small bird of the snipe kind, with a white tail, which is sold in the markets of Italy.

GIBBE, s. any old worn-out animal; as a gibbet is an old cat.

To GIBBER, v. n. [Teut.] to speak in an inarticulate or unintelligible manner.

GIBBERISH, (the g pronounced hard), s. cant; the private language of rogues, gypsies, &c.

GIBBET, s. [gibet, Fr.] a gallows; or a cross post whereon malefactors are executed, or hung in chains.

To GIBBET, v. n. to hang or expose on a gibbet; to hang upon a beam, which crosses another standing upright.

GIBBON, EDWARD, the great historian of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, was born at Putney, and studied at Oxford. A real or pretended conversion to Romanism made it needful for him to leave Oxford, and he studied then at Lausanne, where he unlearned Romanism without learning any thing else. During some subsequent travels, he meditated his great work; and returning to England, commenced it. He entered parliament, and held some office under government for a short time. He visited Lausanne again, but was compelled to return to England by the Revolutionary wars. He died in 1794, aged 57 years. His work is one of the classics of British literature, rather than a standard work of history. Gibbon's pitiable advocacy and misstatements against Christianity, and a cool scientific obscenity, are among the most palpable faults of his work, but are not the only ones. It will be read, however, as containing the views of a scholar and a thinker, on one of the greatest series of phenomena history presents for study, whilst the language is understood in the world.

GIBBONS, DR. ORLANDO, an eminent English musician and composer of the 17th century. He was made organist of the Chapel Royal at the early age of 21. His church music and madrigals are greatly admired to this day. He died in 1625, aged 42 years.

GIBBOSITY, s. [gibbosité, Fr.] the quality of rising in a hump, or protuberance, above the rest of a surface; a prominence; convexity.

GIBBOUS, a. [gibbosus, Lat.] swelling or rising above the other part of the surface; convex; rising in knobs.

GIBBOUSNESS, s. convexity; prominence.

GIBBS, JAMES, an architect of the beginning of the last century, under whom were built St. Martin's and St. Mary le Strand churches of London, and several of the university buildings at Oxford and Cambridge, &c. He was no great genius, but a happy imitator of parts of beautiful structures. He died in 1754, aged 71 years.

To GIBE, (g soft), v. n. [gaber, old Fr.] to sneer in a contemptuous manner; to deride; to mock; to treat with scorn; to taunt.

GIBE, s. a taunt, sneer, or expression of ridicule, joined with contempt.

GIBBER, s. a sneerer; one who ridicules or sneers at another; a scoffer.

GIBBINGLY, ad. in a contemptuous, ridiculing, or sneering manner.

GIBLETS, s. [giblot, Sax.] certain parts of a duck or goose, which are cut off before they are roasted, consisting of the head or neck, parts of the wings, gizzard, heart, liver, and legs.

GIBRALTAR, a rock, a town, a bay, and a strait, at the S. extremity of Spain. The strait divides Europe from Africa, at this near approach of the two continents, and is 15 miles broad. The rock is one of the ancient pillars of Hercules, and stands almost separated from the mainland, is 1400 feet in height, and is accessible only on the W. side. It is pierced with galleries, in which are all the necessaries for a long siege; as well as being defended by batteries at the base and on the side. It has in addition to these artificial tunnels, many curious natural caverns. The town stands at the base of the rock, and its chief buildings are those of the government and the garrison. The bay has a good harbour, formed by two long moles. Its population is about 20,000, and is of a very mixed character. Gibraltar has long been in the possession of England, and is of great value, commanding as it does the straits by which entrance is effected into the Mediterranean. Lat. 36. 6. N. Long. 5. 19. W.

GIBSTAFF, s. a long staff to gauge water, or to shove forth a vessel into the deep.

GIDDLY, (the g pron. hard), ad. the appearance of external things turning round at rest, with a swimming in the head. Figuratively, without steadiness, or forethought; heedlessly; negligently.

GIDDINESS, (the g pron. hard), s. the state of being giddy; inability to keep its place.

GIDDY, (the g pron. hard), a. [gidig, Sax.] having a swimming in the head, whereby external things, though at rest, seem to turn round; changeable; inconstant; unsteady; heedless; elated too much with success or praise.

GIDDYPACED, a. moving without regularity.

GIESSEN, a town of Hesse, with a university. It is an ancient place, but the academical buildings are good, and well furnished, having, amongst other necessities, a good library. Its population is about 10,000. Lat. 50. 34. N. Long. 8. 34. E.

GIFFORD, WILLIAM, the founder of the Quarterly Review, an eminent critic and satirist; who rose from obscurity by the force of his intellectual ability, and the aid afforded by some friends who were capable of discerning his worth. He travelled as a private tutor to Lord Belgrave, and soon after his return published his satires on the rhyme and play writers of the day—the Baviad and the Mæviad. He was afterwards editor of the Anti-jacobin; and of some translations of the classics, of some old dramatists of England. From its commencement to his death he conducted the Quarterly Review; and earned the literary fame for himself and for this Journal, which is associated with both to this day. He died in 1826, aged 89 years.

GIFT, (the g pron. hard.) s. [gift, Sax.] something bestowed on another without price or exchange; the act of giving; an offering or oblation.

GIFTED, (the g pron. hard.) a. endowed with gifts; possessing intellectual abilities, or genius.

GIG, (the g pron. hard.) s. [etymology uncertain;] a small top made of horn, which is kept spinning by whipping it with a thong; also a two-wheeled open carriage.

GIGANTIC, (last g pron. hard.) a. [gigas, Lat.] resembling a giant, of an enormous size. Figuratively, exceedingly wicked.

GIGG, J'GA, or JIG, s. See JIG.

To GIGGLE, (the g pron. hard.) v. n. [gichelen, Fr.] to be inclined to laugh; to laugh at trifles.

GIGGLER, (the g pron. hard.) s. one who bursts into laughter at the least trifles; one very much inclined to laughter.

GIGLET, (the g pron. hard.) s. [geaght, Sax.] a wanton girl.

GILBERT, DAVIES, an eminent scientific inquirer of the beginning of the present century. He was a Cornish man, and having ample means, devoted himself to the promotion of science, by the encouragement and aid he could so well bestow on worthy students. Sir Humphrey Davy was the most distinguished of those he raised from obscurity to world-wide renown. He held the chair of the Royal Society for some years, and was a member of parliament for Bodmin for a quarter of a century. He died in 1840, aged 73 years.

To GILD, (the g pron. hard.) v. a. pret. gilded or gilt; [gildan, Sax.] to wash over with liquid or cover with leaf gold; to adorn with lustre; to illuminate or brighten. To gild over, to recommend a thing, or hide its defects by some additional ornament.

GILDAUS (THE WISE), a British historian, was a monk at Glastonbury during the latter part of his days. He was one of those who kept this flame of ancient British religion alive during the devastation caused by the Saxon invasion and conquests. Some doubts exist respecting the authenticity of the work published under his name. He flourished about 550.

GILDER, (the g pron. hard.) s. one who covers the surface of any body with gold;—[from geld, Teut. money,] a coin valued from one shilling and sixpence to two shillings.

GILDING, (the g pron. hard.) s. gold laid or stuck on any surface by way of ornament; the act of covering with gold.

GILFORD, (the g pron. hard.) a. town of Down, in Ulster, Ireland. It is seated on the river Ban, over which there is a good stone bridge of 22 arches. The rising grounds surrounding it, adorned with wood, and the bleach-yards in the bottom, afford altogether a prospect truly delightful. Here is a calicheate spa of good quality. It is 60 miles from Dublin. Pop. 643.

GILL, (with the g hard.) s. [gula, Lat.] in Animal Physiology, the apertures and fringed organs on each side of the head of a fish, by which they extract oxygen from the water, as our lungs do from the atmosphere, and for the same purpose. The red flap under the beak of a fowl, or fleshy excrescence under the chin of a man;—(with the g soft,) a liquid measure, containing the fourth part of a pint; in Scotland and some northern counties, the fourth part of a quart. In Botany, the plant called ground-ivy. Likewise also, wherein ground-ivy has been steeped.

GILL, DR. JOHN, a Baptist minister of Kettering, well known from his Exposition of the Bible, in which the rigid necessitarian doctrines ascribed to Calvin are set forth, which has been the chief cause of the prevalence of those views amongst the less enlightened portion of the ministers and congregations of that sect. He died in 1771, aged 74 years.

GILLYFLOWER, s. [corrupted from July-flower, so called from the month it blows in;] in Botany, the dianthus, under which genus are included pinks, carnations, and the sweet-william; applied also to the wall-flower, and various kinds of stocks.

GILOLO, an island in the Archipelago of the Moluccas, Asia, about 210 miles in length, and 750 in circumference. It produces neither cloves nor nutmegs, though it is included in the Spice Islands, but is very fertile in rice and sago. The air is said to be very hot and unwholesome. It has a town of the same name. It is seated under the line in Long. 128. 22. E.

GILPIN, BERNARD, one of the English Reformers; he adopted the principles of the Reformation while at Oxford, and being settled as a clergyman in the north of England, obtained an unspotted renown by the fervency of his preaching and the holiness of his life. He narrowly escaped the stake during Mary's reign; and died in her successor's, in 1583, aged 66 years; leaving behind him a memory more apostolical for works of faith and labours of love, than was enjoyed by any of his fellow-labourers. He was called the father of the poor, and the apostle of the north.

GILPIN, WILLIAM, descended from the foregoing, and, like him, a divine of the English Church, added to his reputation of being a faithful parish priest, that of being a writer of some worth. His works are numerous, chiefly biographical, Bernard Gilpin, Huss, Wickliff, Latimer, and Cranmer, being the principal Lives. Others were of an expository and practical character. He died in 1804, aged 40 years.

GILT, (the g pron. hard.) s. gold laid on any surface. Figuratively, golden show or splendour.

GILTHEAD, s. in Natural History, a sea-fish; also a bird.

GILTTAIL, s. in Natural History, a worm, so called from its yellow tail.

GIM, a. [gim, Sax.] neat; spruce; well dressed.

GIMCRACK, s. a machine more curious than useful.

GIMLET, (the g pron. hard.) s. a boring with a kind of worm or screw at the end.

GIMMAL, GIMMER, s. a movement; a part of a machine; machinery; a hinge.

GIMP, (the g pron. hard.) s. a kind of silk-twist or lace.

GIN, s. [contracted from engine,] a trap or snare; a machine for raising great weights; a pump worked by wheels; a distilled liquor drawn from barley and flavoured with juniper-berries, &c., contracted from Geneva.

GINGER, s. [gingere, Ital.] in Botany, and Commerce, an aromatic root, of a yellow colour, and very hot and pungent taste, used in cookery as a spice; by apothecaries as a medicinal.

GINGERBREAD, (gingerbread) s. a kind of bread made of flour sweetened with treacle, and mixed with ginger and aromatic seeds.

GINGERLY, ad. cautiously, nicely.

GINGERNESS, s. [gingre, Sax.] caution, tenderness, or slightness in handling for fear of hurting or soiling; niceness.

GINGIVAL, a. [gingiva, Lat.] belonging to the gums.

GINGLYMOID, a. [ginglymos and eidos, Gr.] resembling a ginglymus; approaching to a ginglymus.

GINGLYMUS, s. [ginglymos, Gr.] in Anatomy, a kind of articulation or joint, whose motion resembles that of a hinge.

GINNET, s. [ginnos, Gr.] a nag, or mule, or degenerated breed.

GINSENG, s. a root of a very agreeable aromatic smell, though not very strong. Its taste is acid and aromatic, and has somewhat bitter in it. We have it from China; and there is some of it in the same latitude in America. Its alleged virtues exceed belief.

GIOTTO, a celebrated Florentine painter, who studied with Cimabue, having been before only a shepherd's lad. He was a friend of Dante and Petrarch, and is said to be the first who produced life-like portraits. His mosaics are reckoned very fine. He died in 1336, aged 60 years.

GIPSY, s. [corrupted from Egyptian,] the English name of a peculiar race of people, who have lived a vagabond life in most European countries for above 400 years now. They travel in small companies, and are exceedingly jealous of the purity of their blood, seldom intermarrying with other people. They profess various trades, as tinkering, horse-dealing, &c., and the women are almost the only fortunetellers now found in England. They are unscrupulous thieves, and indulge in most vagabond vices. But their women are personally strictly chaste, though they are frequently procuresses. Their religious notions are very confused; the fear of the evil eye is universal among them. And they seem to look on all other people as the fair game for their cunning. Their language is Oriental, and presents analogies to the Indo-European and Somic families. Their origin is quite unknown; the names by which they pass in different countries express only the popular belief about them; their own designation seems not to be derived from any country. Figuratively, used to imply a person of a dark complexion, or a woman of great craftiness and cunning.

GI'RAFFE, s. in Zoology, a quadruped which inhabits the interior of Africa. Its neck is very long, so that it often is above 16 feet from the ground to the end of its very short horns. It is of a reddish white, marked with numerous little rusty spots. It is gentle and shy in its habits.

GI'RALDUS CAMBRENSIS, (or DU BARRI,) a Welsh ecclesiastic of the 12th century. His works relate to the topography of Ireland and Wales, or are biographies of saints, &c.; and in them he shows himself one of the zealots for church forms. He died in 1220, aged 74 years.

GI'RASOLE, s. [girasol, Fr.] the sunflower; also the opal stone.

TO GIR'D, (in this word and its derivatives the g is pron. hard,) v. a. preter. girded or girt: [girdan, Sax.] to bind round; to fasten by binding round; to invest; to clothe; to enclose; to encircle.

GIRD, s. a twitch, or pang, alluding to the pain or sensation caused by a girdle drawn tight on a sudden.

GIRDER, s. in Architecture, the largest piece of timber in a floor; its ends are fastened into the summers or breast-summers, and support the joists, which are framed into it.

GIRDLE, (the g is pron. hard in this word and its following derivatives,) s. [gyrdel, Sax.] any thing or bandage drawn round the waist, and tied or buckled; an enclosure or circumference.

TO GIRDLE, v. a. to encompass and surround as with a girdle; to enclose, shut in, or environ.

GIRDLEBELT, s. the belt that encircles the waist.

GIRDLER, s. one who makes belts or girdles.

GIRL, (in this word and its subsequent derivatives the g is pron. hard,) s. a young female or woman; applied to one who is playful, giddy, and thoughtless, not arrived to years of discretion, or not acting with that reserve which a person of discretion ought.

GI'RLISH, a. like a girl, or one who is not arrived to years of discretion; wanton, playful, or giddy.

GI'RLISHLY, ad. in a wanton, playful, giddy, or thoughtless manner.

GIRO'NDE, a department of France lying on the Bay of Biscay, and bounded by the departments of Landes, Lot et Garonne, Dordogne, and Charente Inferieure. It is about 100 miles in length, and 75 in breadth. It has few hills, and the estuary forming the embouchure of the Garonne and its associated system of rivers, (called the Gironde,) is its chief physical feature. Its products are wheat and other grain, sheep, fruits, and claret. Bordeaux is its capital. Pop. about 600,000.

GIRONDISTS, the name of a party in the Legislative Assembly during the French Revolution, who took their name from the department whence the leaders were sent. They were mostly young men, highly cultivated, fired with enthusiastic admiration of the so-called republics of antiquity, rhetoricians, and believers in the slim philosophy of the day. They were but moderate revolutionists, having firm faith in a constitution, such as they could make and work. When pressed by the madness of the people, they went beyond their intent, and sacrificed Louis XVI. At the next step they were engaged in death-grips with the party of the Mountain, headed by Robespierre, Danton, Marat; and, after a desperate contest, fell by an insurrection. They were mostly guillotined, and some died wretched and starved outcasts. The chief of them were Vergniaud, Brissot, Madame Roland and her husband, General Dumouriez, Barbaroux, Petion, Gaudet, Gensonné, &c.

TO GIRT, (the g pron. hard,) v. a. Johnson says it is an improper word; to gird; to surround, encircle.

GIRT, (the g pron. hard,) s. a band which goes under or round a horse's belly, and fastens to the saddle or burden on its back. In Surgery, a circular bandage, with a bolster in the middle.

GIRTH, (the g pron. hard,) s. the band by which the saddle is fastened upon a horse; the circumference or measure of a person's waist.

TO GIRTH, (the g pron. hard,) v. a. to put on, or bind with, a girth.

GI'SBOROUGH, or GI'RSBOROUGH, (Gisbōro; g pron. hard,) Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is pleasantly seated on a flat, 4 miles from the mouth of the river Tees; and is of note for being the first place where alum was made, as it was formerly for its abbey. It is 247 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1776.

TO GIVE, (the g pron. hard,) v. a. preter. gave, past part. given: [gifan, Sax.] to present or confer on another without receiving any thing in exchange; to transmit, communicate, or impart from oneself to another by hand, speech, or writing; to assign; to put into a person's possession; to consign; to pay as a price or reward; to expose; to allow; to grant; to enable; to exhibit or express; to expand or stretch; to offer. To give back, to restore or return. To give the hand, to yield pre-eminence. To give for, to exchange one thing for another. To give ear, to listen or attend to what a person says. To give way, to yield without resistance or denial. Used with to, to addict, apply, or habituate. Used with away, to make over, to transfer to another. Used with out, to proclaim, publish, or utter; to spread a false report or rumour; also, to yield; to expand. Used with up, to resign, quit, yield, abandon, or deliver. Used with in, to retreat; to give way; to go back. Used with into, to comply with; to assent to; to yield to. Used with off, to cease. Used with over, to leave; to quit; to cease from an act; to conclude lost. Used with way or place, to yield without resistance; to fall back or make room.—v. n. to grow moist; to melt; to thaw.

GIVER, (the g pron. hard,) s. one that lets another have a thing without receiving any thing in return.

GIULIO ROMANO, a pupil of Raffaele, and a celebrated master of the Roman school. His paintings are distinguished by an almost awful grandeur of conception. He died in 1546, aged 54 years.

GI'ZZARD, (the g pron. hard,) s. [gigeria, Lat. gesier, Fr.] a strong muscular stomach in birds, wherein their meat; by means of stones which they swallow, is ground in pieces, as in a mill.

GLACIAL, a. [glacies, Lat.] icy; made of ice; frozen.

GLACIATION, s. the act of turning into ice; ice.

GLACIERS, s. [Fr.] masses of ice occupying the valleys of lofty mountain chains, reaching up to the region of perpetual snow, and serving as the origin of the rivers which flow from those heights. They have attracted great notice lately, from the part they play in some of the geological changes of the surface of the earth. These masses resemble frozen torrents, and are found to consist of very different kinds of ice in different parts, being gradually more like mere snow as they lie higher on the mountain. Partly because of their lying on sloping ground, and partly because of the internal motion arising from the freezing of water in their cracks and fissures, they are always slowly sliding down the valleys they fill, carrying with them masses of rock which fall from the cliffs and heights as they pass, and grinding to powder and pebbles any that slip between them and the sides of the valleys, grooving the rocks against which they grind these pieces, and polishing the general surface over which they glide. In the summer the heat melts the lower part, and then their stony load is deposited in beds resembling our gravel, called moraines. The streams which flow from the glaciers, usually work for themselves a sort of tunnel for some way under the icy mass, out of which they flow at last as from an arched fountain.

GLACIS, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, a sloping bank. It is more especially taken for that which ranges from the parapet of the covered way to the level on the side of the field.

GLAD, a. [glæd, Sax.] cheerful; gay; rejoicing at some good which has happened. Figuratively, used for any thing which appears bright, light, or showy.

TO GLA'DDEN, v. a. to cheer; to affect with a sensation of pleasure or delight.

GLADE, s. [glad, Dan.] a lawn or opening in a wood; a passage through a wood made by lopping off the branches of trees.

GLADIATOR, s. [Lat.] a person who used to fight with a naked sword in the public shows in Rome. Figuratively, a prize-fighter, or sword-player.

GLA'DIOLE, s. in Botany, an herb with long narrow radical leaves, naked cylindrical stem, and purplish and white blossoms; the same with the flowering rush.

GLADLY, ad. in a joyful manner.

GLA'DNESS, s. a sensation of joy or delight, arising at the prospect of success, or the actual possession of good.

GLA'DSOME, a. delighted; pleased.

GLA'DSOMELY, ad. with some sensation of delight or pleasure.

GLA'DSOMENESS, s. gaiety; a slight sensation of joy or delight.

GLA'DSWYN, s. a provincial term for the stinking flag.

GLAIRE, s. [glaise, Fr.] the white of an egg; a kind of halbert.

To GLAIRE, v. a. [glaiser, Fr.] to varnish or smear with the white of an egg, used by bookbinders.

GLAMORGANSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, lying on the Bristol Channel, and bounded by Carmarthenshire, Brecknockshire, and Monmouthshire. It is in length 48 miles, and 26 in breadth; and is divided into 10 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 8 market towns, and 118 parishes. On the N. side of this county, where it is mountainous, the long continuance of the snow renders the air sharp; but the country being more level on the S. side, it is there milder, more pleasant, more populous, and bears large crops of corn, with remarkably sweet grass; whence it has been called the Garden of Wales. Cattle abound in all parts, there being fruitful valleys among the mountains, that yield very good pasture. Here are also lead, coal, iron, and limestone. Its principal rivers are the Rumney, which separates it from Monmouthshire, the Taafé, Elwy, Neath, Ogmore, Avon, Cleddagh, and Tawy. Cardiff is the principal town, and Swansea the most commercial one; but the assizes for the county are held at Cowbridge. Pop. 171,188. It sends 5 members to parliament.

GLANCE, s. [glantz, Teut.] a sudden shoot or beam of light or splendour; a stroke or dart of light.

To GLANCE, v. n. [glantzen, Teut.] to shoot a sudden ray of light or splendour; to fly off, or to strike in a sloping manner. Used with at, to hint at, or censure a person's faults by some oblique hints. Used with eye, to take a quick, slight, or transient view; to view obliquely.

GLANCINGLY, ad. in an oblique manner; transiently.

GLAND, s. [glans, Lat.] in Anatomy, the general name for a class of small fleshy organs, performing very various functions in the animal frame.

GLANDERS, s. in Farriery, a disease affecting the mucous membrane of the horse's nose.

GLANDFORD BRIDGE, Lincolnshire. It has a large manufacture of skins, and a considerable trade in corn, coals, and timber. It is seated on a river or navigable canal, called Ancholme, or Ancam. Is 156 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1822.

GLANDY'FEROUS, a. [glans and fero, Lat.] bearing acorns, mast, or fruit like acorns.

GLANDULE, s. [glandula, Lat.] in Anatomy, a small gland; sometimes applied, in the plural, to signify what are vulgarly called the almonds of the ear.

GLANDULOSITY, s. a collection of glands.

GLANDULOUS, a. pertaining to, situate in, or having the nature of, the glands.

GLANVILLE, RANULF DE, an eminent judicial writer of England, and chief justice in the reign of Henry II. He fought bravely against William the Lion of Scotland at Alnwick, and went on the third crusade with Richard I., where he fell in battle. The work that goes by his name, is not with any certainty ascribed to him. He died in 1190.

To GLARE, v. n. [glaren, Belg.] to shine so bright as to dazzle the eyes.

GLAIRE, s. an overpowering or dazzling lustre; a fierce, piercing look.

GLA'REOUS, a. [glareous, Lat.] consisting of a viscous and transparent matter like the white of an egg.

GLA'RING, part. of glare; flagrant; enormous, applied to any very great crime.

GLA'RIS, or GLA'RUS, one of the thirteen cantons in Switzerland, entirely surrounded by the Alps, except towards the N. It is bounded by the cantons of Schweis, Uri, St. Gall, and the Grisons. It is a cold, mountainous country, some points being above 9000 feet in elevation above the sea, yet affording cattle, cheese, butter, and a prodigious variety of uncommon plants, minerals, metals, crystals, medicinal springs, petrifications, and large slates. The capital, of the same name, stands on the Linth, and is a bustling place. Its population is about 4500. The population of the canton is about 35,000.

GLA'SGOW, Lanark, Scotland. A city which, from its extent, and from the beauty and regularity of its buildings, may justly be esteemed the second city in the kingdom. The streets are clean and well paved; and the four principal streets divide the city nearly into four equal parts; and the different views of them, from the cross, or centre of intersection, have an air of magnificence. Here are a few magnificent public buildings, and several charitable establishments, particularly the Merchants' Hospital, and that of the town. Here is a celebrated university; the single college belonging to which is an elegant and commodious building. Their cotton manufactures rival those of Manchester in cheapness and elegance; a pottery is likewise carried on here, that emulates, in beauty and elegance, the Staffordshire ware. Printing types are well executed here, and the glass manufactory has been very successful. Here are also manufactures of coarse earthenware, hats, stockings, gloves, ropes, cordage, &c. Glasgow has the advantage of two canals, besides the great canal that joins the Clyde to the Forth. Its proper river, the Clyde, has been made navigable for vessels drawing 7 feet 6 inches water. It has a considerable trade. It is seated on the N. bank of the above river, over which it has two stone bridges, one of them an elegant one of 7 arches, 500 feet long, and 32 wide. It is 35 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 274,533. Lat. 55. 52. N. Long. 4. 2. W.

GLASS, s. [glas, Sax.] a substance made by fusing or melting alkalies and flux together; transparent to the sight, ductile when hot, but not malleable. The manufacture of glass was known very early, but its general use is comparatively of late date. The various kinds are crown, plate, pressed, bottle, &c. A glass vessel of any kind; hence, figuratively, it is used for that quantity of liquor which such a vessel contains, as a glass of wine. Also, a mirror; a telescope, or microscope; an hour-glass.

GLASSFURNACE, s. a furnace in which glass is made.

GLASSGRINDER, s. one whose trade is to grind and polish glasses.

GLASSHOUSE, s. a house where glass is manufactured.

GLASSITES, the name of a sect of enthusiasts in Scotland, formed during the last century, by one John Glass of Dundee. They do their best to cultivate spiritual religion, and are not great idolaters of Presbyterianism.

GLASSWORK, s. manufacture in glass.

GLASSWORT, s. in Botany, a name of the saltwort and marsh samphire.

GLASSY, a. resembling glass in smoothness, lustre, or brightness.

GLASTONBURY, Somersetshire. It principally consists of two streets. Its abbey was formerly the most magnificent in the world, the domains and revenue of which were immense. It was anciently called the Isle of Avalon, into which no person, not even a bishop or prince, was allowed to enter without leave from the abbot, to whom this power was granted by Canute the Dane. Extensive ruins of this immense range of buildings are still remaining. The principal manufacture here is stockings. Nearly adjoining, on a high steep hill, is placed the tower of a church, called the Tor, which lifts its head into the clouds, and is an object of admiration to travellers, and even serves as a landmark to seamen in the Bristol Channel. It is situated in a low, marshy country, nearly encompassed with rivers, 129 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 3314.

GLAUBER, JOHN ROBDOLPH, an eminent chemist of Germany, in the 17th century, who made some most useful and remarkable discoveries in the course of his ardent and ceaseless experiments for the sake of discovering the universal solvent, and the philosopher's stone. He discovered the salts which bear his name, which are the sulphate of soda, by being led to examine the residue of a process instituted for a widely different purpose. He died in 1688, aged about 90 years.

GLAUBER'S SALTS, GLAUBERITE, s. in Chemistry, the sulphate of soda, and the sulphates of soda and lime fused together in the ratio of their equivalents. Both are found native also.

GLAUCOMA, s. [glaukos, Gr.] in Medicine, a disorder of the eye.

GLAIVE, s. [glaiue, Fr.] a broad sword, or kind of pole-axe. To GLAZE, v. a. to furnish windows with glass; to cover with a substance resembling glass, like that with which potters cover their earthenware, porcelain, &c.; to cover or overlay with something shining.

GLAZIER, s. one whose trade is to make glass windows.
GLEADE, GLADE, s. in Ornithology, a name of the kite.
GLEAM, (gleem) s. a sudden and transient shoot or ray of splendour; lustre; brightness.

To GLEAM, (gleem) v. n. to shine with sudden and transient flashes; to shine.

GLEAMY, (gleemy) a. flashing; darting sudden and transient flashes of light.

To GLEAN, (gleen) v. a. [glaner, Fr.] to collect the leavings of the reapers at harvest; to gather things thinly scattered.

GLEAN, (gleen) s. a collection made by slow degrees and laborious application.

GLEANER, (gliener) s. one who gathers after the reapers; one who gathers any thing slowly and laboriously.

GLEANING, (gleening) s. the act of gleaning, or things gleaned.

GLEBE, s. [gleba, Lat.] a clod; turf; soil; land. In Natural History, a clod or piece of stone or earth, frequently containing some metal or mineral. In Law, church-land.

GLEBOUS, GLEBY, a. abounding in clods. Figuratively, fertile, or fruitful.

GLEE, s. [gligge, Sax.] joy or mirth. In Music, a particular kind of composition, written for voices alone, in parts, and in which one voice alone should sing each part.

GLEEK, s. [gligge, Sax.] music, or a musician.

To GLEEK, v. a. [gligman, Sax.] to sneer; to mimic; to droll upon.

To GLEEN, v. n. perhaps a corruption of gleam; to shine with heat or polish.

GLEET, s. the flowing or dripping of a humour from any wound.

To GLEET, v. n. to drop slowly, or ooze with a thin humour.
GLEETTY, a. resembling a gleet. Thin and sanious, applied to humours.

GLEIM, FREDERIC WILLIAM LOUIS, a famous German lyric poet of the last century, called the Anacreon of Germany. He wrote patriotic songs during the war, for the Prussian soldiers. He died in 1803, aged 84 years.

GLEN, a. [gleen, Eng.] a valley; a dale.

GLENDOWER, OWEN, a Welsh prince who opposed Henry IV., and attempted to dethrone him. The best view of his insurrection is to be found in Shakspeare's drama of Henry IV. He died in 1416, aged 66 years.

GLEW, s. [gluten, Lat.] a viscid, tenacious matter, used as a cement to join divers things together. The common glew is made of the skins or hides of beasts; fish glew is made of the mucilaginous parts of a large fish, found chiefly in the Russian seas, and is what we call isinglass.

GLIB, a. [glid, Sax.] smooth; slippery; without any inequalities on the surface; formed so as to be easily moved. Voluble, applied to speech.

GLIBLY, ad. smoothly; without any obstacle.

GLIBNESS, s. smoothness; slipperiness. Volubility, or easiness of motion, applied to the tongue.

To GLIDE, v. n. [glidan, Sax.] to flow or pass gently, smoothly, or without any tumult; to move smoothly and swiftly along.

GLIDE, s. a lapse; a sliding motion; the act of passing smoothly.

GLIDER, s. one that glides.

To GLIMMER, v. n. [glimmer, Dan.] to shine faintly; to afford a faint light.

GLIMMER, s. a faint splendour, or dim light.

GLIMMERING, s. an imperfect view; a faint resemblance; a trace.

GLIMPSE, s. [glimmen, Belg.] a weak, faint light; a sudden or quick flashing light; a transient lustre; a short and transitory view; a faint resemblance or likeness.

GLISSON, FRANCIS, a celebrated anatomist and physiologist of the 17th century. In some of his discoveries and conjectures, he nearly anticipated some of the great steps of modern science. He died in 1677, aged 81 years.

To GLISTEN, v. n. [glitlan, Teut.] to shine with lustre or splendour.

To GLITTER, v. n. [glitman, Sax.] to shine with lustre or polish; to gleam; to appear pompous, specious, or striking.

GLITTER, s. lustre; splendour; a shining or showy brightness.

GLITTERINGLY, ad. with a shining or sparkling lustre.

GLOAR, (glor) v. a. [gloeren, Belg.] to squint; to look askew.

To GLOAT, (glot) v. n. to look at a person as a lover looks. Figuratively, to feel as a lover feels, only with the implication of some grossness.

GLOBATED, a. [globatus, Lat.] formed in the shape of a globe.

GLOBE, s. [globus, Lat.] a round body, representing a sphere, chiefly used to designate one on whose convex surface is drawn a map, either of the earth or heavens. The globe which represents the earth, is called the terrestrial, and that which represents the heavens, the celestial; the former is very useful in geography, the latter in astronomy.

GLOBE-FISH, s. in Natural History, a kind of orbicularly formed fish.

GLOBE-FLOWER, s. in Botany, a kind of crowfoot.

GLOBOSE, GLOBOUS, GLOBULAR, GLOBULOUS, a. [globus, Lat.] round or spherical.

GLOBOSITY, s. roundness.

GLOBULARIA, s. [Lat.] a fuscous flower.

GLOBULE, s. [globus, Lat.] a small particle of matter, of a round or spherical form, applied to red particles of the blood, &c.

To GLOMERATE, v. a. [glomus, Lat.] to gather several parts or bodies into a round body or sphere.

GLOMERATION, s. the act of forming several parts or bodies into a round ball or sphere; a body formed into a ball.

GLOMEROUS, a. gathered into a ball or sphere, as a ball of thread.

GLOOM, s. [glomang, Sax.] an imperfect, faint, or obscure light. Figuratively, sullenness.

To GLOOM, v. n. to shine obscurely; to be darkish, like the twilight. Figuratively, to be melancholy, dull, or sullen.

GLOOMILY, ad. dimly, without perfect light. Figuratively, sullenly.

GLOOMINESS, s. want of light; duskiness; darkness; dismalness. Figuratively, sullenness; sadness, or melancholy.

GLOOMY, a. obscure; imperfectly lightened; having a faint light; dark or blackish. Figuratively, sullen; melancholy; sad.

GLORED, a. illustrious; honourable.

GLORIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of giving glory, attributing honour, and rendering praise.

To GLORIFY, v. a. [gloria and facio, Lat.] to procure honour or praise to a person or thing; to procure honour or praise in worship; to extol, honour, or praise; to exalt to a state of splendour, dignity, or glory.

GLORIOUS, a. [gloria, Lat.] in its primary sense, haughty; proud; ostentatious; or boasting in any advantage. Figuratively, adorned with glory; exalted to a state of splendour and dignity; noble; illustrious.

GLORIOUSLY, ad. illustriously; nobly.

GLORY, (used by the ancient poets as a word of one syllable, and pronounced glorie) s. [gloria, Lat.] praise or honour attributed in adoration to worship. In Scripture, a state of ineffable splendour and felicity, prepared for the righteous in heaven. Generally, honour; praise; fame; renown; a state of splendour, dignity, and magnificence; lustre or brightness; a circle of rays which surrounds the heads of saints in pictures; pride; arrogance; boastfulness.

To GLORY, v. n. [glorior, Lat.] to boast in; to be proud of, used with in.

GLOSS, s. [glose, Fr.] a comment or explanation of the sense of an author. Figuratively, a false interpretation, or specious explanation of the words of an author, in order to serve a particular purpose; a superficial lustre or brightness, appearing on the surface of silks, or any smooth or polished thing.

To GLOSS, v. n. [gloser, Fr.] to comment, or make remarks, on the sense of an author; to make a sly remark, or give a broad hint; to palliate, or make a thing appear right by some specious reasoning or interpretation. To make the surface of a thing shine; to embellish with superficial show, used with over.

GLOSSARY, s. [glossarium, from glossa, Lat.] a dictionary, explaining obscure and obsolete words.

GLOSSATOR, GLOSSER, a. a commentator or scholiast.

GLOSSINESS, s. the shining lustre appearing on the surface of silk, or any polished bodies.

GLOSSOGRAPHER, (glossografer) s. [glossa and grapho, Gr.] a scholiast; a commentator.

Gloucester Cathedral

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS

- |                         |                           |                 |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|-----------------|
| 1 Barton Regis          | 12 Dronbach               | 23 Tewkesbury   |
| 2 Berkeley              | 13 Dudstone & Kingscorton | 24 Thornbury    |
| 3 Bisley                | 14 Grombalds Ash          | 25 Thibaldstone |
| 4 Bladestoe             | 15 Hinkbury               | 26 Westbury     |
| 5 Boscote               | 16 Kirtlington            | 27 Westminster  |
| 6 Brading               | 17 Lammarbury Duly        | 28 Whitstone    |
| 7 Brighthelm Barrow     | 18 Langley & Kirckhead    |                 |
| 8 Cheltenham            | 19 Longtree               |                 |
| 9 Cirencester           | 20 Puckchurch             |                 |
| 10 Cirencester          | 21 Ruspington             |                 |
| 11 Cirencester & Mynyth | 22 Slough                 |                 |

Boundary of Hundreds

Scale of Miles.
0 1 2 3 4 5
The County returns 4 members.
Railway Stations, thus

The New Spa Cheltenham

Tewkesbury Abbey Church

GLOSSOGRAPHY, (glossography) s. the writing commentaries; the expounding hard and difficult words and terms.

GLOSSY, a. having a shining and smoothly polished surface.

GLOTTIS, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the mouth or aperture of the larynx, through which the air ascends and descends in respiring, serving for the formation of the voice, and giving that wonderful variety of notes of which the voice is capable in speaking and singing.

GLOUCESTER, (Glister.) Gloucestershire. The chief city, containing 5 parish churches, besides its ancient and magnificent cathedral. It is well built, and its four principal streets are greatly admired for the regularity of their junction in the centre of the town; besides which there are several smaller ones, all well paved. Here is a good stone bridge over the Severn, the lowest down that river, with a quay, wharf, and custom-house. The manufacture of pins, &c., is not so flourishing. It is seated on the E. side of the Severn, where, by its two streams, it forms the Isle of Alney. It is 106 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Fairs on April 5, July 5, Sept. 28, and Nov. 25, the latter chiefly for fat hogs. Pop. 14,152.

GLOUCESTER, ROBERT OF, an old English poet, about whom nothing is known save that he wrote some time in the reign of John, or his successors, and that he was a monk. His Chronicle has some value.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Monmouthshire, Herefordshire, Worcestershire, Warwickshire, Oxfordshire, Wiltshire, and Somersetshire. It extends in length more than 60 miles, but is not more than 26 in breadth. It is divided into 13 hundreds, which contain one city, 27 market-towns, 280 parishes, and 1229 villages. The soil and appearance of this county vary in different parts, but the air is healthy throughout; sharp on the E. or hilly part, which contains the Cotswold Hills, but mild in the rich vale of Severn, which occupies the Centre. The W. part, which is the smallest district, is varied by bill and dale, and chiefly occupied by the Forest of Dean, which was once full of oak trees, but now occupied by coal-mines and iron-works. The staple commodities are cheese, cyder, perry, bacon, grain, and fish, besides its manufactories of woollen cloths, hats, leather, paper, bar-iron, edge tools, nails, brass, &c. Its rivers are the Severn, the Warwickshire Avon, the Lower Avon, the Wye, Thames, Coln, Lech, Windrush, Eveslode, Churn, Leden, Swilgate, Caron, and Stour. Gloucester is its chief place. Pop. 431,383. It sends 15 members to parliament.

GLOVE, s. [glufe, Sax.] a covering worn upon the hands, either for luxury, or to keep them from the inclemency of the weather.

To GLOVE, v. a. to cover with a glove.

GLOVER, s. one who makes or sells gloves.

GLOVER, RICHARD, a poet who wrote an epic, entitled Leonidas, which no one reads, and the famous and spirit-stirring ballad, called Admiral Hosier's Ghost, which excited the whole nation against Spain. He left and published some other things, and died in 1755, aged 73 years, with a better name as a man than as an author.

To GLOUT, v. n. to pout; to look sullen, or discover dislike and discontent in the countenance. A low word.

To GLOW, (glō) v. n. [glowan, Sax.] to be heated so as to shine without flame; to burn with vehement heat; to present or exhibit a strong bright colour; to feel a heat in any part of the body; to feel a warmth of passion, or heat arising from the eagerness or ardour of the mind.

GLOW, (glō) s. a shining heat. Vehemence or ardour, applied to the passions. Brightness or ruddiness, applied to colour.

GLOW-WORM, (glō-worm) s. in Entomology, an insect which appears luminous in the dark. The glow-worm is the wingless female of a beetle insect. The male is of a dusky hue, without much beauty or peculiarity of markings. The female is more like the larva or grub of a beetle, than a perfect full-grown insect. The light, which is of a beautiful greenish yellow colour, proceeds from the three last rings of the body.

To GLOZE, v. n. [glozen, Sax.] to make use of soothing and flattering words in order to persuade, coax, or wheedle a person. To comment or interpret; but in this sense it should be gloss.

GLOZE, s. flattery; soothing words; insinuations.

GLUCINIUM, s. [glukus, Gr.] in Chemistry, a metallic base, discovered in the emerald, beryl, and euclase. Salts formed with the oxide of glucinium, or glucina, and acids, have a sweetish taste.

GLUCK, CHRISTOPHER, one of the most eminent of modern musical composers. He was born in Bavaria, and appeared first in London; afterwards, in France, Germany, Italy, he obtained unprecedented renown. In Paris, the controversy between him and Piccini made all other things forgotten for a day. His Iphigenie en Aulide is one of his noblest pieces. He died in 1787, aged 73 years.

GLUE, s. [glue, Fr.] a viscous substance used to join things together. See GLEW.

To GLUE, v. a. [gluer, Fr.] to join together with a viscous substance or cement; to hold together. Figuratively, to join, or make a thing join; to unite as it were with glue.

GLUEBOILER, s. one whose trade is to make glue.

GLUER, s. one who cements with glue.

GLUM, a. [a low word, corrupted from gloom,] sullen; affectively and obstinately grave.

To GLUT, v. a. [englouter, Fr.] to swallow with little chewing; to devour; to cloy; to fill too full; to sate, or disgust; to feast or delight to satiety; to bring in large quantities; to overflow, or load; to saturate, or supply with as much as it can dissolve, &c.

GLUT, s. that which is gorged or swallowed in a ravenous manner; more than enough; any thing which fills or stops up a passage by its too great or excessive quantity.

GLUTEN, s. in Chemistry, a vegetable substance, somewhat similar to animal gelatine. It is the gluten in wheat-flour, which gives it the property of making good bread, and adhesive paste. Other grain contains a much less quantity of this nutritious substance.

GLUTINOUS, a. [glutineux, Fr.] viscous; tenacious.

GLUTINOUSNESS, s. the quality of being viscid.

GLUTTON, (s. [glouton, Fr.] one who indulges himself too much in eating; one who eats to excess. In Zoology, the common name for an animal of the colder temperate regions, called also the vorlence. Figuratively, one eager of any thing to excess.

To GLUTTONIZE, v. n. to eat to excess; to be luxurious.

GLUTTONOUS, a. given to excess in eating.

To GLUTTONOUSLY, adv. after the manner of a glutton, or of one that eats to excess.

GLUTTONY, s. [glouttonnie, Fr.] excess in eating.

GLUTY, (glū-ee) a. sticky; viscid; tenacious.

GLYN, s. [Ir. and Erse,] a valley, or hollow between two mountains.

GLYPHOGRAPHY, s. [glypho and grapho, Gr.] in Electro-metallurgy, the art of producing metallic surfaces, which can be used as wood-cuts are, by preparing a design on which a deposit of copper is laid by the common electro-type process.

GMELIN, the name of three celebrated botanists, of whom John George and Samuel Theophilus, uncle and nephew, travelled in the Russian empire, and greatly enlarged our knowledge of the plants of that wide realm. The first died in 1755, the latter in 1774. John Frederick added chemistry to botany. He edited part of Linnaeus's work, wrote a History of Chemistry, and made many very useful discoveries. He died in 1804.

To GNAR, (gnarl, (nar, narl) v. n. [gnyrar, Sax.] to growl, murmur, snarl, or grind the teeth.

GNARLED, (narled) a. knotty.

To GNASH, (nash) v. n. [knaschen, Belg.] to strike or clash together, applied to the teeth, either on account of rage, or from a sensation of excessive cold or agony.

GNAT, (nat) s. [gnat, Sax.] in Entomology, the general name of a very large class of small two-winged insects, which live by blood-sucking.

To GNAW, (nave) v. a. [gnagan, Sax.] to bite and tear off by means of the teeth; to eat or chew by degrees; to bite in agony and rage; to fret, waste, or corrode.

GNAWER, (nawer) s. one who bites or tears to pieces with the teeth.

GNOMES, (nomēs) s. in Teutonic Mythology, certain invisible people who inhabit the inner parts of the earth. They are supposed small in stature, and the guardians of quarries, mines, &c.

GNOMON, (nomōn) s. [Gr.] the hand, index, or pin of a dial.

GNOMONICS, (nomōniks) s. [gnomon, Gr.] dialing; or a science which teaches to find the just proportions of shadows for the construction of all sorts of sun-dials.

GNOSTICS, (Nástike) [gnostikoi, Gr.] in Church History, a name borne by a large class of ancient heretics, expressing that new knowledge and extraordinary light to which they made pretensions. Their distinguishing tenets were, that the Creator of the world was not God, and that all matter was the antagonist of spirit, and of good; that Jesus was a mere man, in whom Christ (an Æon, or Divine being, proceeding from God) dwelt. Their morals were very bad.

GNU, s. in Natural History, a very large species of antelope, found in the south of Africa.

To GO, v. a. preter. I went, I have gone, participle gone: [gan, Sax.] to move step by step; to walk; to move slowly, opposed to running. To proceed from one to another; to depart from a place; to move, or pass in any manner, or to any end; to intend or be near undertaking a thing; to march in a hostile or warlike manner; to change state or opinion for better or worse; to have recourse to; to tend towards death or ruin. "He is far gone." To tend to any act; to be in a state of compact or partnership. "Go your halves." To be regulated by any method; to be pregnant. "Gone with young." To reach, or be extended to any degree. "No man's knowledge can go beyond his experience." To contribute; to conduce; to concur; to fall out, or terminate; to proceed in train or consequence; to succeed. To go about, to attempt, to endeavour. To go aside, to err, to deviate from the right. To go between, to interpose. To go by, to pass unnoticed; to find, or get in the conclusion; to observe as a rule. To go down, to be swallowed; to be received. To go in and out, to do the business of life; to be at liberty. To go off, to die; to depart from a post. To go on, to proceed. To go through, to execute or perform thoroughly; to suffer or undergo. To go over, to peruse, or read through; to revolt. To go after, to pursue. To let go, to give a person his liberty. To go for, to pass, to be received for. To move, or be in a state of motion, applied to machines, &c. To go out, to be extinguished, applied to flame, or fire. To go against the grain, is a proverbial expression, to express something extremely repugnant, disagreeable, or disgusting. To GO TO, interfect, come, come, take the right course. A scornful exhortation.

GOA, a large and well-built city on the W. coast of Hindustan, capital of the Portuguese settlements in India, and the seat of the viceroy. It stands on an island of the same name, about 24 miles in circumference, separated from the continent by a fine river called Mandova, capable of receiving ships of the greatest burden, which lie within a mile of the town. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 15. 28. N. Long. 73. 45. E.

GOAD, (goad) [goad, Sax.] a stick or pole armed with a sharp point at the end, with which oxen, &c. are driven forward.

To GOAD, (goad) v. a. to prick or drive with a goad. Figuratively, to incite, stimulate, or drive forward.

GOAL, (goal) [gaule, Fr.] a long pole set up to determine the bounds of a race; a post set up to which race-horses are to run; a starting post. Figuratively, the design, final purpose, or end, of any measure or undertaking.

GOAR, GORE, s. [goror, Brit.] an edging sewed on cloth to strengthen it—[gor, Brit.] the warm blood of any creature.

GOAT, (goat) [gat, Sax.] in Natural History, a well-known species of horned ruminant animal. The goat of Angora has hair soft and glossy like silk.

GOATBEARD, s. in Botany, a poisonous plant with compound flowers, called by the country people, John-go-to-bed-at-noon, on account of its shutting its flowers at noon.

GOATHERD, s. [gat and hyrd, Sax.] one who keeps goats.

GOATISH, (götlisk) a. resembling a goat.

GOAT-SUCKER, s. in Natural History, the name of a bird allied to the swallow tribe.

GOBBET, s. [gobe, Fr.] a mouthful; as much as can be swallowed at once.

To GOBBET, v. a. to swallow at once.

To GOBBLE, v. a. [gobber, old Fr.] to swallow hastily, or in a ravenous manner, attended with noise.

GOBBLER, s. one who devours in a ravenous manner, without chewing.

GOBELINS, s. a species of French tapestry, so called from the name of a celebrated French dyer.

GO-BETWEEN, s. a mediator; or one who carries on a design by sent backwards and forwards with messages by the two parties.

GO'BLET, s. [gobelet, Fr.] a bowl or cup that holds a large draught.

GOBLIN, s. [Fr.] a spirit; an elf, or fairy.

GOBY, in Ichthyology, the name of a genus of fishes with prickly backs.

GO-BY, s. a delusion, artifice, or stratagem.

GO-CART, s. a machine going upon castors, in which children are to be taught to walk.

GOD, s. [Sax.] the self-existent, infinitely perfect, and infinitely good Being, who created and preserves all things that have existence; the object of adoration and worship; any person or thing which is too much the object of a person's thoughts and labours.

To GOD, v. a. to deify, or worship as a god. Figuratively, to confer the greatest honours that can be imagined.

GODA/LMING, Surrey. It is noted for licorice, excellent carrots, and peat that burns as well as pit-coal. Here is a manufactory of stockings; as also of mixed kerseys, and blue ones, that are not to be matched for colour. The country about it is agreeably diversified with hills and gentle uplands. It is seated on several streams of the river Wye, which abounds with good fish, especially pike, and which drives one grist-mill, two paper-mills, and three corn-mills. It is 34 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4328.

GODCHILD, s. an infant or person for whom one is a sponsor in baptism.

GODDAUGHTER, (god-daughter) s. a female for whom a person is sponsor in baptism.

GODDESS, s. a female deity or divinity.

GODFATHER, s. [godfader, Sax.] a man that is sponsor for any person at baptism.

GODHEAD, (godhead) s. the state, condition, or nature of a god. Figuratively, a deity.

GODLESS, a. without sense of a deity; atheistic; irreligious; impious.

GODLIKE, a. divine; resembling God; superlatively excellent.

GODLING, s. a divinity of small stature or dignity.

GODLINESS, s. duty or piety towards God; a general observation of all the duties towards God.

GODLY, a. having a proper sense of our duty and obligations to God. Figuratively, pious, righteous, or religious.

GODLY, ad. in a pious and religious manner.

GODMANCHESTER, Huntingdonshire. It is parted from the town of Huntingdon by the river Ouse, but united to it by a bridge and short causeway. It is chiefly inhabited by yeomen and farmers, who were famous for their agricultural skill, in the infancy of that science, in England. Pop. 2152.

GODMOTHER, s. a woman that is sponsor for a person in baptism.

GODOLPHIN, SIDNEY, EARL OF, a statesman of the later Stuart reigns, who held various offices under Charles II., James II., and Anne; being made by the latter lord high treasurer. He had the honours which the Garter and an earldom could give, as a reward for his services; and died in 1712, aged about 85 years.

GODSHIP, s. the office, rank, or character of a god.

GODSON, s. one whom a person has been sponsor to in baptism.

GODWARD, a. towards, or with respect to God.

GODWIN, EARL, a powerful lord during the reign of Edward the Confessor, who gave great trouble to the king by his ambition and unscrupulous conduct in compassing his ends. He had acquired his celebrity during the Anglo-Danish reigns preceding Edward's; and seems to have been a devoted adherent of the English interest, in opposition to the Norman, which the king so warmly aided. He was Canute's son-in-law, Edward's father-in-law, and father to Edward's successor. He gave the name to the dangerous sands off the S. coast of Kent, which misdirected piety regarded as Godwin's ill-gotten estates swallowed up by the sea. He died in 1053, as some said to flatter the king, by a visible judgment for his crimes and perjury.

GODWIN, WILLIAM, a distinguished political writer and man of letters at the end of the last and the beginning of the present century. He was first of all Dissenting minister, having followed the wishes of his father, who was of that profession.

His first work, from the period of its publication, as much as from the sentiments it avows, raised him to the height of notoriety; but he was not made a martyr to political justice. He was connected with Horne Tooke and other radical politicians of that age. His subsequent life was that of a book writer; novels, as Caleb Williams, &c.; histories, as that of the Commonwealth; works on political economy, &c. &c., proceeded from his pen, with considerable rapidity; but he did not keep the place he took by his first work, and is not much read now. His connexion with the famous Mary Wollstonecraft, and their common submission to the degradation, as they professed to regard it, of marriage, is the chief event of his life, apart from his literary productions. He died in 1836, aged 80 years. He may be regarded as one of the pioneers of popular liberty; for although he was behind his age when he died, he had helped in no despicable manner to advance it to that point, and had sacrificed all that he most prized to effect it. Godwin Mary Wollstonecraft, his first wife, was a very remarkable woman; who being gifted with a strong mind, and having little feminine feeling, undertook to claim as the rights of women a full participation in all that is commonly regarded as man's peculiar task and privilege. She had been badly taught, and having had few friends beside herself, she looked at the world from a most unfavourable position. Her infidelity was the most revolting feature of her character. She consented for her child's sake to be married to Godwin, and died in giving her birth, in 1797, aged but 30 years. She has had a host of imitators, in this country and America; and many men have been overcome by the power of her writing. But happily both for the world and for women, imitation of such a course does not lead to the realization of her speculations.

GODWIT, s. in Ornithology, a bird of the woodcock tribe, which is esteemed a particular delicacy.

GODYELD, GoDYELD, ad. corrupted from God shield; a term of thanks, wherein a person wishes another the protection and providence of the Deity. Not in use at present.

GOER, s. one that moves from one place to another; one that runs; one that has a good pace, applied to a horse. One that is regular in its motions, applied to a watch or clock.

GOETHE, JOHANN WOLFGANG VON, the greatest literary man of modern Germany; and apparently even to his own countrymen one of the greatest enigmas, as some almost deify him, and others profess to ridicule him. He was well born, and well taught at Leipsic, and Strasburg; and devoted himself to natural science most ardently. His first appearance before the public attracted all eyes to him, and the Sorrows of Werther and Goetz of Berlichingen, though quite forgotten now, stirred all Europe. He settled at Weimar, under the patronage of one of those petty potentates of Germany, who, as a partial realization of a government by the wisest, had Goethe, Schiller, Wieland, and others yet, as ornaments of his court, and of his council-chamber. The great events of his life were, his journey to France, along with the coalized forces under the Duke of Brunswick, which Argonne, and autumn, and Dumouriez so disastrously repulsed; and his journey to Italy, at an earlier period. He wrote a work developing a new and baseless theory of colours. He discovered the initiative idea of the science of botany, since so successfully pursued in Germany and England, under the designation Morphology. He wrote the first true novel in Germany, called Wilhelm Meister. His poems are numerous, and the grandest of all is his Faust. He was the complete opposite of Schiller, and never submitted to the sway of the critical philosophy; on which account he, at one time, seriously differed from his great friend and rival. In Goethe the admirable equipose of mental and spiritual qualities is most remarkable; which makes him approach nearer to Shakespeare than any other writer of any age. But living in an age and amongst a people who had greater skill at hero-worship, he scarcely lived, in any respect, a private life. That with all this he shows so great a sign, not trivial, of his true grandeur. He died in 1832, aged 83 years.

GOGET, s. in Ichthyology, the sea-gudgeon, or rockfish.

To GOGGLE, v. a. [soelgege, Sax.] to look aquint.

GOGGLE-EYED, a. [soelgeegen, Sax.] squint-eyed; not looking straight; or looking with the balls of the eyes turned contrariwise.

GOGGLES, s. in Surgery, instruments used for curing the distortion of the eyes.

GO'ING, s. the act of walking or moving from one place to another; departure.

GOLTRE, s. [Fr.] in Surgery, a disease of the throat, very common in the Alps, in which the part affected is enlarged and becomes pendulous like a dewlap. It arises from the ingredients of the water used for culinary purposes; and used to be regarded as a beauty. Iodine seems to be a specific remedy for it.

GOLA, s. the same with CYMATUM.

GOLCONDA, a country of Hindustan, bounded by Berar, the Circars, Mysore, the Carnatic, Dowlatabad, and Visiapor, subject to the Nizam of the Deccan. The great rains which fall in June, part of July, August, September, and October, swell the rivers here to a dangerous degree of depth and rapidity, but render the land exceedingly fertile, especially in fruits. The inhabitants make white wine of their grapes, and have yearly two crops of rice and other grain. The diamond-mines here are reckoned the most considerable in the world. They have also mines of salt and fine iron; and manufactures of curious calicoes and chintzes. Hyderabad is the capital, but the city and fortress of Golconda was formerly the residence of the kings of this country. See HINDUSTAN.

GOLD, s. [Sax.] one of the precious metals, used by the ancients as well as by the moderns, for money and for costly ornaments. It is of a yellow colour, is capable of receiving a brilliant lustre, and exceeds all other metals in ductility and malleability. It does not oxidize by exposure, and is not soluble by many acids. Its only uses are for ornaments of bijouterie and plate; and for money, which has led to innumerable economical blunders, as its quantity is insufficient, and its value, actually, fluctuating. South America is the chief source of the gold now in use. But it is found in all parts of the world, in grains in rivers, in masses, in veins, &c. in mines; and pure, and combined with iron and other metals, &c. A purple dye is prepared from gold by the mixture of silver and tin, and a peculiar mode of preparation. Figuratively, money or any thing very valuable. "A heart of gold."

GOLDBEATER, (goldbeater) s. one who hammers gold into thin leaves, which are used by gliders. Goldbeater's skin is the intestine rectum of an ox or bullock, well scoured and prepared, which is laid by goldbeaters between the leaves of the metal while they beat it, whereby the membrane is reduced thin. It is used as a plaster for cuts or small fresh wounds.

GOLDBOUND, a. encompassed with gold.

GOLD COAST OF GUINEA, a maritime country of W. Africa, in which are more forts and factories of European nations than in any other part of the coast of Africa. It reaches from the river Suera da Costa on the W. to the river Volta on the E., and includes several districts, in which are two or three towns or villages, scattered along the sea-shore. The whole Gold Coast is about 180 miles in length. Gold is the chief article of commerce here. The tribes inhabiting this part are numerous.

GOLDBREST, s. in Ornithology, a very small species of native British birds, of a greenish yellow colour, with a brilliant yellow crest.

GOLDEN, a. made or consisting of gold; gilt. Figuratively, shining; bright; splendid; yellow, or of the colour of gold. Golden number, in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, is that which shows what year of the moon's cycle any particular year is. Golden Rule, in Arithmetic, an old name of the Rule of Three.

GOLDENLY, ad. in a pompous or splendid manner.

GOLDFINCH, s. in Ornithology, a singing bird common in England, one of our prettiest birds, and very docile.

GOLDFINDER, s. one who finds gold.

GOLDFISH, s. in Ichthyology, a kind of carp, of a beautiful golden hue, a native of China, and often kept in glass vases for ornament.

GOLDHAMMER, s. in Ornithology, a kind of bird, called also the yellow bunting.

GOLDING, s. in Horticulture, a sort of apple.

GOLDINS, s. in Botany, the chrysanthemum.

GOLDNEY, s. in Ichthyology, a sort of fish, otherwise called gilthead.

GOLDONI, CHARLES, a celebrated Italian dramatist, who endeavoured, and apparently in vain, to improve the Italian comedy after the model of Molière, and who at length took refuge in France, where he had a pension till the Revolution. His comedies are not first-rate. He died in 1793, aged 86 years.

GOLDSIZE, s. a glue of a golden colour, with which painters form their letters, and gilders lay those parts of their works which are to be covered with gold.

GOLDSMITH, s. a person who makes and sells golden wares.

GOLDSMITH, OLIVER, a celebrated English man of letters during the last century. He was the associate of a circle of the most famous writers of England, Johnson, Burke, &c. &c. He was born in Ireland, and studied medicine; but left Leyden on a most vagrant ramble over good part of W. Europe. Settling in London eventually, he experienced all the vicissitudes which a professional littérateur, aided by improvidence and gambling, could. He wrote dramas; poems, amongst which the Deserted Village stands highest; histories, which have been no boon to schools from their partisanship; the Vicar of Wakefield, which every one reads, and every painter illustrates; &c. &c. He was a good-tempered, vain man, but had genius, and has left its creations to us. He died in 1774, aged 43 years, and has a monument in our pantheon, Westminster Abbey.

GOLDSYLOCKS, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the sweet-willow crockwort; a kind of fern.

GOLF, s. a game of great antiquity, peculiar to the Scots. It is played with a club and balls.

GOLT, GAULT, s. in Geology, a bed near the lower part of the chalk formation, and partaking the general features of that group; best developed near Cambridge, and in Kent.

GOMBRON, a town of Persia, on the Persian Gulf, once very celebrated for its European trade, but now of little consequence.

GOMPHOSIS, (gomphosis) s. (gomphos, Gr.) in Anatomy, a species of articulation, whereby one bone is set into another, like a nail or peg, as the teeth within the jaws.

GONDAR, the chief town of Abyssinia, Africa, situated on a hill of considerable height. It has manufactories of arms, cotton goods, &c. It is near 1000 miles from Grand Cairo. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 12. 34. N. Long. 37. 40. E.

GONDOLA, s. (gondole, Fr.) a flat boat, very long and very narrow, used upon the canals at Venice.

GONDOLIER, (gondolier) s. one who rows a gondola.

GONE, (goner) preter. of go; advanced; forward in progress; lost; or undone. Gone by, past, applied to motion or change of place. Lost; departed; consumed; at an end; dead.

GONFALON, GO'NFANON, s. [Fr.] an ensign, or standard.

GONG, s. [onomatopoeic] a kind of bell, consisting of a large circular plate of metal suspended by one side, to be struck with a hammer. It is of Asiatic origin.

GONIO-METER, s. (gonia and metro, Gr.) in Mineralogy, an instrument invented by Dr. Wollaston, by which the angle of any crystal can be measured with the greatest accuracy; which has provided mineralogy with a distinct basis for classification.

GONORRHEA, (gonorrhœa) s. (gonos and rheo, Gr.) in Medicine, a kind of venereal disease.

GOOD, a. comparative better, superlative best; [good, Sax. good, Belg.] having such perfection, as are requisite, fit, and proper for the end; wholesome; sound; salutary; complete; full; useful; valuable; legal; confirmed; valid; established; proved. Cheerful; gay; not easily displeased, but inclined to acts of benevolence and kindness, joined with any words expressing the temper of the mind. Joined to breeding, elegant, decent, delicate, polite; consistent with the character of a gentleman. Virtuous, and endowed with all moral qualities or virtues; kind, or benevolent; skilful; ready; dexterous; happy; prosperous; considerable; not small, though not very great. "A good while ago." Real; serious. "Good earnest." Kitch; of credit. "As good as," has a kind of negative sense, implying, no better than. Companionable; sociable. "A good fellow." "In good time," not too fast. "In good sooth," really; seriously. To make good, to perform what is promised or expected; to supply. Good Friday, the day observed in the Romish, English, and other churches, as the anniversary of our Saviour's crucifixion.

GOOD, a. a blessing or advantage. Figuratively, prosperous.

GOOD, interj. well! right! sometimes used ironically.

GOOD, DR. JOHN MASON, an eminent physician, and literary man, whose acquisitions, of a most varied kind, were mostly accomplished during his professional surgical walks, and whose varied and multitudinous work was effected by the adoption of an almost ideal regularity and punctuality in his labours.

His Book of Nature, is an interesting compendium of natural science. His Study of Medicine, is not wholly useless even in the late advances of that study. His translations of Lucretius, Solomon's Song, &c., and his own poetical effusions, are interesting, though not of the first rank. He died in 1827, aged 63 years.

GOOD-CONDITIONED, a. without any ill qualities. Lusty, or plump, applied to persons.

GOODLACK, interj. O strange! wonderful indeed! it is possible! say you so!

GOODLINESS, s. beauty; grace; elegance, applied to external appearance.

GOODLY, a. beautiful; graceful, applied to persons. Fine, or splendid, applied to things, and particularly to dress. Bulky; swelling; happy; desirable.

GOODMAN, s. a rustic term of compliment.

GOODNESS, s. the fitness of a thing to produce any particular end; perfection; kindness, or benevolence.

GOOD-NOW, interj. in good time; or prithe. Sometimes used as a slight exclamation to express wonder.

GOODS, s. the moveables or furniture of a house; wares sold in trade.

GOODWILL, s. a friendly and benevolent disposition; also, a consideration for coming into a shop or business ready prepared.

GOOSE, s. plural geese; [gos, Sax.] in Ornithology, a kind of large water-fowl. Figuratively, a foolish person.

GOOSECAP, s. a silly person.

GOOSEFOOT, s. in Botany, the wild orach.

GOOSEBERRY, s. in Horticulture, a well-known fruit and shrub.

GOOSEGRASS, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there are many sorts found in England. That called clivers is esteemed a good antiscorbutic.

GORBELLIED, a. lusty; fat; having a large, protuberant, and swelling belly.

GOR-COCK, s. in Ornithology, the red-grouse or moor-game.

GORD, s. [gourd, Fr.] an instrument of gaming.

GORDIAN-KNOT, s. in Antiquity, a knot made with the harness of the knot of Gordius, king of Phrygia, so very intricate, that there was no finding where it began or ended. The oracle declared, that he who could untie it should be master of all Asia. Alexander the Great attempted, but not being able to accomplish it, cut it asunder with his sword, and thus fulfilled or eluded the oracle.

GORDIANUS, the name of three emperors of Rome, during the early part of the fall of the empire. The first two, father and son, were men of great private worth, whose valour had been tested in many engagements. Scarcely had they received from the senate their joint dignity than the son fell in battle, and the father killed himself from grief; this was in 237. The third Gordian was an amiable and virtuous youth, descended from the others, who acted under the advice of Mithridates, his father-in-law, and engaged in a war with the Persians. His captains of foot guard assassinated him, and usurped the throne, in 244, after about 6 years' reign.

GORDON, LORD GEORGE, the last incarnation of pure anti-Romish bigotry, was an M. P., and on a proposal for Catholic Relief, organized a tremendous mob, amongst which the 'prentice knights figured conspicuously, which beat off the troops, broke open the gaols, destroyed the Romanist chapels and private houses, and were masters of London for some days. He was impeached and imprisoned. He subsequently got again into his libellous and treasonable courses, and died in Newgate in 1793, aged 43 years.

GORE, s. [Sax, gor, Brit.] blood effused from the body; clotted or congealed blood.

To GORE, v. a. to stab or pierce, either with a weapon or the horns of an animal, so as to make a wound.

GOREE, an island on the W. coast of Africa, about three quarters of a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth, subject to the French. Lat. 14. 40. N. Long. 17. 30. W.

GORGE, s. [gorge, Fr.] the throat or swallow; that which is gorged or swallowed. In Architecture, a sort of concave moulding. In Fortification, the entrance of a bastion, ravelin, or other work.

To GORGE, v. a. [gorgery, Fr.] to fill up to the throat; to glut or satiate; to swallow.

GORGED, a. in Heraldry, the bearing of a crown, coronet, or the like, about the neck of a lion, swan, &c. Among farriers, it signifies swelled.

GORGEOUS, a. [gorgias, old Fr.] fine; splendid; glittering.

GORGEOUSLY, ad. in a splendid, pompous, showy, or magnificent manner.

GORGEOUSNESS, s. splendour; lustre; magnificence; finery.

GORGET, s. the piece of armour which is worn round and defends the throat.

GORGIAUS, a Grecian orator and sophist of the 5th century B.C. a Sicilian by birth, he acquired by his travels a fame in all Greek lands. Plato seems to have looked on him as a type of the sophist class, and designated one of his books by his name.

GORGONS, [Gr.] in Heathen Mythology, they were the three daughters of Phorcus, viz. Medusa, Stene, and Eurydale; so called from their savageness, because they killed at the first sight. The emblems of all sinful pleasures, which insare and destroy men at the first sight.

GORMAND, s. [gourmand, Fr.] a person who eats greedily, and to excess.

TO GORMANDIZE, v. n. to eat with greediness, and to excess.

GORMANDIZER, s. one who eats greedily.

GORSE, [gors, Sax.] in Botany, furze or whins; a thick, prickly shrub bearing yellow flowers.

GOTRY, a. covered with clotted or congealed blood; bloody; murderous.

GOSHAWK, s. [gos and hasoc, Sax.] in Ornithology, a large kind of hawk.

GOSLING, s. in Ornithology, a young goose, not full grown.

GOSLIN, a catkin on nut-trees and pines.

GOSPEL, [gode spel, Sax.] the good news brought by the Saviour to mankind; the system of truth centring in the Person of Jesus Christ; the narratives written by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. See those names.

TO GOSPEL, v. n. [godspellan, Sax.] to preach the gospel; to instruct as a priest.

GOSPELLER, [godspeller, Sax.] an evangelist or preacher.

GOSPORT, Hampshire. It is situated in Alverstock parish, on the W. side of Portsmouth Harbour, over which there is a floating bridge. It is mostly inhabited by sailors and their wives, and the warrant officers, every thing being much cheaper and more commodious here than at Portsmouth. The mouth of the harbour, which is not so broad here as the Thames is at Westminster, is secured on this side by four forts, and a platform of above 20 guns, level with the water. Here are several docks for repairing merchant ships, a naval hospital, and the manufactory for biscuit for the navy. Market, Saturday. Pop. 8862.

GOSSAMER, GOSSAMOR, s. [gossipium, low Lat.] the down of plants; the long white cobwebs which are perceived in the air in calm sunny weather.

GOSSIP, [god and sypp, Sax.] one who is a sponsor for a child at baptism. A tattling woman.

TO GOSSIP, v. a. to chat; to prate; to spend time in frivolous and insignificant discourse.

GOT, the pretent, and past, part. of To GET.

GOTHE, a fine town, nobly situated, in the duchy of Saxe Coburg, Germany. The palace of the duke contains some rich treasures in books, &c. Beside the business of a court residence, the town has some manufactures, and a tolerable transit trade. It is on the Lena. Population, about 15,000. Lat. 50. 58. N. Long. 10. 43. E.

GOTHEBORG, or GOTIENBURG, a fortified and commercial town of West Gothland, in Sweden, seated at the mouth of the river Gotha, which forms an excellent harbour, about two furlongs wide, enclosed between two chains of rocks, and near its conflux with Moldal. It is the best situated for foreign trade of any in the kingdom, as it lies without the Sound. A considerable herring fishery is carried on here. It is 100 miles from Stockholm. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 57. 42. N. Long. 11. 57. E.

GOTHIC, a. in general, whatever relates to the Goths, as Gothic customs, Gothic architecture; also used by some to express what is monstrous or disproportionate in matters of taste. Gothic language, that dialect of the Teutonic branch of the great Indo-European family, spoken by the Goths on the Danube; into which language the Gospels were translated by Ulfilas.

GOTHLAND, one of the five general divisions of the kingdom of Sweden, containing the provinces of Ostrogothia, Smaaland, Westrogothia, Warmland, the fief of Babus, Dalia, Halland, Blekinge, and the Isles of Gothland and Eland. It is a pleasant and fertile country. See SWEDEN.

GOTHIS, a race of the Teutonic family, which, driven from Asia by those movements which agitated the whole of that vast continent, and eventually crumbled the mighty empire of Rome to the dust, came and settled on the Danube, whence they made incursions into the neighbouring part of the eastern empire. Being pressed by the Huns, they left that spot, and in the course of some ages had spread themselves over the whole country from the Mediterranean to the North Sea. In Spain and Sweden they obtained more lasting settlements. Rome was more than once in their power, and some of their kings in those days obtained and deserved a better repute for valour and wisdom than was enjoyed by the nominal masters of the world.

GOTTINGEN, a town of Hanover. Here is a university, which has acquired a very distinguished reputation. The library called the Duloocean, is justly reckoned one of the most capital in Europe. Here is also a fine observatory, a physic garden, an anatomical theatre, and a school for midwifery; together with a royal society of sciences, and a royal German society, all part of the university. The other public buildings are good. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 51. 30. N. Long. 9. 56. E.

TO GOVERN, v. a. [gouverner, Fr.] to rule over in the character of a magistrate, parent, or other superior; to regulate; to direct; to manage or restrain. In Grammar, used to express the constant association of a particular case with a verb.

GOVERNABLE, a. subject and obedient to command, rule, authority, or direction.

GOVERNANCE, s. the act of exercising authority over others that are bound to obey; government; the management, control, or authority of a guardian.

GOVERNNESS, GOVERNANT, [gouvernesse, gouvernante, old Fr.] a female invested with authority to influence or rule; a woman who has the care of instructing or regulating the conduct of ladies; the teacher, instructress, or mistress of a lady's boarding-school.

GOVERNMENT, [gouvernement, Fr.] the form in which justice is administered in a nation; an establishment of legal authority, or administration of public affairs; regularity of behaviour; the actual rulers of a nation, or chief advisers of the crown; manageableness, obsequiousness. In Grammar, the particular forms or construction regularly employed to express particular thoughts, &c.

GOVERNOR, [gouverneur, Fr.] one who is invested with supreme authority in a state; one who governs a place with delegated temporal authority; a tutor; pilot; regulator; manager. Amongst the rising generation, a master; or one's father.

GOUGE, [gouge, Fr.] a chisel having a round edge, for the cutting of such wood as is to be rounded or hollowed.

GOUGH, RICHARD, an eminent antiquary. His great works are on the Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain, British Topography, an edition of C Camden's Britannia, &c. &c. His life was one of quiet college research, and he died in 1809, aged 74 years.

GOURD, [gourde, Fr.] in Botany, a plant which creeps along the earth like the cucumber, and produces a yellow fruit of the size and colour of an orange.

GOURDINESS, s. in Farriery, a swelling in a horse's leg, so called from its resembling a gourd.

GOUT, [goutte, Fr.] in Medicine, an inflammatory and acutely painful disease, arising usually from too high living, especially from free use of wine. Excessive action through the stimulant, and excessive supply of material for the frame, are apparently the true features of the disease.

GOUT, (gou) [s. [Fr.] a taste; relish; or flavour.

GOUTWEED, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, called also ash-weed.

GOUTY, a. afflicted with the gout, relating to or having the gout.

GO'WER, JOHN, an early English poet, a friend of Chaucer, who wrote, beside an English poem in Chaucer's manner, some in the Norman-French of the court, and in Latin. He seems not to have shared in his friend's genius. St. Saviour's, Southwark, is his mausoleum. He died in 1402, aged about 80 years.

GOWN, [gonna, Ital.] a long loose upper garment worn by men as an undress; a woman's upper garment; the long loose habit worn by ministers of the Established Church, &c.

GOWNMAN, s. a student at a university; or one whose proper habit is a gown.

TO GRAPPLE, v. n. [perhaps corrupted from grapple], to grapple; to search or feel greedily with the hands.

GRACCHUS, TIBERIUS and CAIUS, two noble Romans of the period of the republic, the sons of the celebrated Cornelia, the daughter of Scipio of Africa, who have gained a name for themselves by their espousal of popular principles, and dying for them. Tiberius fell in the attempt to pass an agrarian law, which would have been of great benefit to the poor free citizens of Rome. Caius attempted the same, but by insurrection, and so fell less unjustly. Tiberius died in 133 B. C., and Caius in 121 B. C.; both were young, and both, in their measures, and in the plan they adopted to carry them, seem to show how hard it is for men of such a class rightly to comprehend the wants of the impoverished and disfranchised in a state.

GRACE, s. [gratia, Lat.] favour or kindness; pardon; a kindness; a privilege or favour conferred; elegant behaviour, or the air and appearance wherewith any thing is done; beauty, either natural or heightened by art; an embellishment, ornament, flower, or perfection; a physical virtue or power. The title of a duke, formerly given to a king, implying goodness or clemency. In Theology, the favour showed to man in the redemption of Jesus Christ; also, that favour as enjoyed by any individual believer in Jesus. A short prayer used at meals, expressive of gratitude or thanks to the Divine Providence for supplying our necessities. To be in a person's good graces, is to be favoured or esteemed by him. Act of grace, an act of parliament for a general and free pardon, and for setting at liberty insolvent debtors.

TO GRACE, v. a. to adorn, beautify, embellish, dignify, set off, or recommend; to confer an honour on a person; to dignify or raise by an act of favour.

GRACED, a. beautiful; graceful; virtuous; regular.

GRACEFUL, a. elegant; with pleasing dignity or majesty.

GRACEFULLY, ad. elegantly.

GRACEFULNESS, s. elegance and dignity of manners; dignity joined with beauty.

GRACELESS, a. without any virtue, either religious or moral; wicked or impious.

GRACES, s. In the Heathen Mythology, they were three goddesses, daughters of Jupiter, whose names were Aglaia, Thalia, and Euphrosyne. They are sometimes represented dressed, but more frequently naked; and presided over mutual kindness and acknowledgments, bestowing liberality, eloquence, and wisdom, together with a good grace, gaiety of disposition, and easiness of manners. See PROVISIONS.

GRACIOUS, (gracious), a. [gracieux, Fr.] merciful; benevolent; kind; virtuous, or good; acceptable; favoured; excellent; graceful, or becoming.

GRACIOUSLY, (graciously) ad. with kind condescension; in a pleasing and favourable manner.

GRACIOUSNESS, (graciousness) s. kind condescension; a pleasing manner.

GRADATION, s. [gradation, Fr.] a regular progress or advance from one degree to another; order; arrangement.

GRADIENT, a. [gradior, Lat.] walking or moving by steps. See ENGINEERING.

GRADUAL, a. [graduel, Fr.] proceeding or rising by degrees; advancing step by step.

GRADUAL, s. a light of steps. In the Romish Church, a part of the mass sung between the Epistles and Gospels.

GRADUALITY, s. a regular progression; advancing higher by degrees.

GRADUALLY, ad. by degrees; in regular progression; by steps, advancing from a lower to a higher degree.

TO GRADUATE, v. a. [gradus, Lat.] to dignify with a degree in a university; to mark with degrees in measuring; to heighten or improve.

GRADUATE, s. a person who has taken a degree in a university.

GRADUATION, s. the division of a scale or measure into decimal or other regular parts. In Chemistry, a process by evaporation, of bringing fluids to a certain degree of consistence, in order to separate more easily the substances they hold in solution.

GRECIA, s. the ancient name of Greece.

GRAFF, GRAFT, s. [greffe, Fr.] in Gardening, the shoot of a tree inserted in another tree, nourished by its sap, but bearing its own fruit.

TO GRAFF, GRAFT, v. a. [greffer, Fr.] to take a shoot from one tree and insert it into another in such a manner that they grow together; to insert into a place, or body, to which it did not originally belong.

GRAFTER, s. one who propagates fruit by inserting the branch of one tree into that of another.

GRATTON, GEORGE, an eminent maker of astronomical and other instruments. He became a watchmaker in London, and made the great mural arc at the Greenwich Observatory for Dr. Bradley. He received great attention from the various scientific societies, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He died in 1751, aged 76 years.

GRAHAM, JAMES, a modern Scottish poet, whose Sabbath and other pieces are greatly admired. He entered the English Church, and died in 1811, aged 46 years.

GRAIL, s. [grêle, Fr.] small particles of any kind. "Lying down upon the sandy grails," Spenser.

GRAIN, s. [grainum, Lat.] a single seed of corn or other fruit. Figuratively, corn. Any minute particle, or small body. Grain of allowance, some small indulgence, which implies a remission of rigour or severity. A weight used in physic, twenty of which make one scruple; but in troy weight, twenty-four make a pennyweight. The direction in which the fibres of wood, leather, &c. grow. In Dyeing, a method of communicating colours, so as to make them more lasting than in the common way. The form of the surface, with regard to smoothness, roughness, or the size of the constituent fibres or particles of a body. Figuratively, temper; disposition; humour or inclination.

GRAIN COAST, or PEPPER COAST, or MALAGUETTA, a country of Guinea, extending from Sierra Leone to the Ivory Coast, for about 100 leagues along the Atlantic. The productions are peas, beans, gourds, lemons, oranges, and a kind of nut, with an exceedingly thick shell, a most delicious fruit. The palm wine and dates of this country are in great esteem. Cows, hogs, sheep, and goats, are also in great plenty; but what constitutes its chief wealth, is the abundance of aromatic seeds, called grains of parada, it produces.

GRAINED, a. rough; appearing less smooth, or weather-beaten.

GRAINGER, JAMES, a Scotch poet, whose poems are almost forgotten now. His Sugar Cane, which is his principal production, was written in the W. Indies, whither he went and practised as a surgeon. He died in 1767, aged 44 years.

GRAINS, s. without a singular; the husks of malt of which beer has been made. Grains of Paradise are an African spice.

GRAINY, a. full of corn or seeds.

GRAMERCY, interject. [contracted from God have mercy;] an obsolete expression of surprise. "Gramercy, sir, said he," Spenser.

GRAMINIVOROUS, a. [gramen and voro, Lat.] eating or living upon grass.

GRAMMAR, s. [grammaire, Fr.] the science which investigates the laws of language, and gives the rules of correct usage in speaking and writing. Figuratively, an expression or construction agreeable to the rules of grammar; a book which treats of the laws of language.

GRAMMARIAN, s. [grammarius, Fr.] one who is skilful in, or one who teaches the rules of, grammar.

GRAMMATICAL, a. [grammaticus, Lat.] belonging to, or taught by, grammar.

GRAMMATICALLY, ad. according to the rules of grammar.

GRAMMATICASTER, s. [Lat.] a mere verbal critic or low grammarian.

GRAMMONT, COUNT, a celebrated profligate and wit of the court of Charles II. He was a Frenchman, and had served in the wars of Louis XIV. with distinction, but was banished for some offence against the Grand Monarque. His Memoirs present a faithful and revolting picture of the manners and customs of the most audacious debauchery of those times. He died in 1707, aged 84 years.

GRAMPIAN-HILLS, a chain of high mountains in Scotland, which run from east to west almost the whole breadth of the kingdom. The highest points fall under 4000 feet in elevation.

They take their name from a single hill, where Galgacus, the Gaelic chief, was totally routed by Agricola.

GRAMPLE, s. in Zoology, a kind of crab-fish.

GRAMPOUND, Cornwall. It has a considerable manufacture of gloves, and is seated on the river Fale, over which it has a bridge. It is 244 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 607.

GRAMPUS, s. in Zoology, a cetaceous animal, which grows to about 25 feet in length, and is said to be a very great enemy to the whale.

GRANADA, a province of Spain, on the Mediterranean, bounded by Andalusia and Murcia, about 175 miles in length, and from 20 to 90 in breadth. It is rather a mountainous country; but the soil is remarkably fertile, although not well cultivated, and the climate is healthy and temperate. It produces corn, wine, oil, sugar, flax, hemp, excellent fruits, honey, wax, grapes, and mulberry-trees, which feed a great number of silk-worms. The forests abound with gall-nuts, palm-trees, and oaks. Population, about 750,000.

GRANADA, a large city of Spain, capital of the province of Granada, containing a university and several palaces, with other splendid public buildings. It has manufactures of silk, and is situated on two hills, near the confluence of the Oro, or Darro, with the Xenil, and is 240 miles S. of Madrid. Pop. about 75,000. Lat. 37. 17. N. Long. 3. 34. W.

GRANADA, or GRENADA, an island in the West Indies, about 20 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. A chain of mountains crosses it from N. to S., in the centre of which is a large lake. Near the coast the soil is fertile, producing indigo, sugar, coffee, cocoa, cotton, and tobacco. It is finely wooded, and trees of all sorts, both fruit and timber, except the cocoa-tree, thrive better here than those of the same species in the neighbouring islands. It is watered with many rivers. The principal harbours are Port Lewis, a very spacious one on the W. side of the island, and St. George. It belongs to England. Pop. about 30,000.

GRANADA, NEW, a S. American republic, at first part of Colombia. It occupies the N. W. corner of that continent, and is bounded by Guatemala, Ecuador, Brazil, and Venezuela. The most striking physical features are the Andes, some peaks of which in this state are above 15,000 feet in height; and the Llanos, or forest deserts, which occupy the upper part of the region drained by the Orinoco. Its rivers are the Orinoco, the Magdalena, the Bogota, and the Cauca. The most precious metals abound here, and constitute its chief wealth; coal, &c. are found. Timber trees, vegetable drugs, fruits, &c., wild cattle, &c., are also amongst its exports. Bogota is its capital; and it has ports on both oceans. Pop. about 1,500,000.

GRANARY, s. [granum, Lat.] a storehouse for thrashed corn.

GRANATE, s. [granum, Lat.] a precious stone, of a high red colour, so called from the resemblance it bears to that of the kernel of the pomegranate; it is vulgarly named a garnet. The oriental is the best.

GRANBY, JOHN MANNERS, MARQUIS OF, an exceedingly popular English general, who served with great distinction during the seven years' war in Germany. He died in 1776, aged 50 years. His celebrity is somewhat ludicrously preserved by the very public exhibition of his portrait in almost all our towns.

GRAND, a. [grandis, Lat.] great; illustrious; powerful; splendid; noble; sublime; lofty.

GRANDAM, GRANDAME, s. a term of consanguinity, denoting the father's or mother's mother. Figuratively, an old withered or decrepit woman.

GRANDCHILD, s. the son or daughter of a person's son or daughter.

GRANDDAUGHTER, (grand-daughter) s. the daughter of a son or daughter.

GRANDEE, s. [grandis, Lat.] a person of rank, dignity, or power; one of the nobility.

GRANDEUR, s. [grandeur, Fr.] splendour, pomp, or magnificence.

GRANDFATHER, s. the father of a person's father or mother.

GRANDIFIC, a. [grandis and facio, Lat.] making great.

GRANDINOUS, a. [grando, Lat.] full of hail.

GRANDITY, s. [grandis, Lat.] elevation of thought; pomp or magnificence of language.

GRANDMOTHER, s. the father's or mother's mother.

GRANDSIRE, s. a grandfather. In Poetry, any ancestor.

GRANDSON, s. the son of a person's son or daughter.

GRANGE, s. [Fr.] a farm; a barn or thrashing-floor; a farmhouse.

GRANITE, s. [granum, Lat.] in Geology, a kind of granular crystalline rock, of igneous origin, which occurs in all parts of the world, especially in mountainous regions, where it forms the loftiest peaks of rocks, upon which the regular strata of sedimentary origin lie. It is found in circumstances which show that it has been protruded at very different times in different places; in some it is seen penetrated in every direction by veins of the same rock; and in others it lies over and encloses quite recent formations. Its general constituents are felspar, hornblende, mica, and quartz, in various proportions; and according to the abundance of one or the other, its colour, &c. vary. It is used as a building-stone, and for colossal statuary, and is the most durable rock known.

GRANTIVOROUS, a. [granum and voro, Lat.] eating or living upon grain.

To GRANT, v. a. [garantir, Fr.] to admit a thing not proved; to allow or concede; to bestow something which cannot be claimed as a right.

GRANT, s. the act of giving or bestowing a thing which cannot be claimed as a right; the thing granted; a concession. In Law, a conveyance in writing of such a thing as cannot pass or be conveyed by word only; such as rents, reversions, services, tithes, &c.

GRANT, MRS. (ANNE), of Laggan, a literary Scottish lady, whose letters, written after she had accompanied her father from America, where the war of Independence ruined him, are much admired, and have often been reprinted. She died in 1838, aged 83 years.

GRANTABLE, a. that may be given or yielded to another, though he has no claim to it.

GRANTEE, s. in Law, the person to whom any grant is made.

GRANTHAM, Lincolnshire. It is noted for the steeple of its church, which terminates in a spire, near 300 feet high, and which, by a deception of the sight, seems to lean on one side. Here is a good free-school, where the celebrated Sir Isaac Newton received his first education. It is situated on the river Witham. It is 110 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 8691.

GRANTOR, s. in Law, the person that yields or grants any thing to another.

GRANULARY, a. small and compact, resembling a grain or seed.

To GRANULATE, v. n. [granular, Fr.] to be formed into small particles or grains.—v. a. to break into small masses or grains.

GRANULATION, s. [Fr.] the act of forming into small masses resembling grains. In Botany, the small berries which join together and compose a large one, as the blackberry.

GRANULE, s. a small compact particle, resembling a seed or grain of corn.

GRANULOUS, a. full of little grains.

GRAPE, s. [grappe, Fr.] a single berry of the vine, which grows in clusters, the fermented juice of which is wine.

GRAPESHOT, s. in Artillery, a number of small shot, put into a thick canvass bag, and corded strongly together, so as to form a kind of cylinder, whose diameter is equal to that of the ball adapted to the cannon.

GRAPESTONE, s. the stone or seed contained in the grape.

GRAPHIC, (grâfic) a. [grapho, Gr.] appearing as if written, well formed, described, or delineated.

GRAPHICALLY, (grâfically) ad. well described; described minutely, or in a picturesque manner.

GRAPHITE, s. in Mineralogy, the name of plumbago or black lead.

GRAPNEL, s. [grapin, Fr.] a small anchor belonging to a little vessel; a grappling-iron used in a sea-fight to fasten ships together.

To GRAPPLE, v. n. [grabbelen, Belg.] to lay fast hold on a person; to combat or engage in close fight.—v. a. to fasten, unite, or join inseparably.

GRAPPLE, s. a close combat, in which persons seize fast hold on each other; an iron instrument, used to fasten one ship to another.

To GRASP, v. a. [graspere, Ital.] to hold in the hand with the fingers shut; to seize, or catch at; to struggle, strive, or grapple; to gripe; to encroach; to be insatiable in one's pursuit after riches.

GRASP, s. the gripe or seizure of the hand; the act of holding a thing in the hand with the fingers shut or doubled over it; possession or hold.

GRASPER, s. one who seizes, grasps, or catches at.

GRASS, s. [gras, Sax.] in Botany, the general name of a large class of plants having hollow stems, amongst which are ranked some of the most useful plants that man knows; the best kind of food, whether as pasture, or made into hay, for cattle; and wheat, Indian corn, barley, sugar-cane, &c. The genera and species are very numerous, the most common of which are described under their trivial names. In Agriculture, this name is given not only to true grasses, but to other plants, chiefly of the trefoil kind, which are cultivated for hay and pasture.

To GRASS, c. n. to produce grass.

GRASSHOPPER, s. in Entomology, a small insect found among the summer grass, so named from its hopping, for which it is remarkably formed. It is allied to the locust tribe.

GRASSINESS, s. the state of abounding in grass.

GRASS-LAND, s. in Farming, marshes, meadows, and any land laid down for a season in grass.

GRASS-OF-PARNASSUS, s. in Botany, a beautiful English marsh-plant, flowering in the autumn. Its blossom is of a delicate white colour, and its nectaries are green.

GRASS-PLOT, s. a small level piece of ground in a garden, &c. covered with grass.

GRASSPOLY, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, the same with the lythrum. There are two British species.

GRASSY, a. covered with, or abounding in, grass.

GRASSWRACK, s. in Botany, a species of seaweed.

GRATE, s. [grates, Lat.] a partition made with iron bars, or wires crossing each other, placed at the windows or other apertures of prisons, cloisters, or tradesmen's shops; a receptacle with iron bars, within which fires are made.

To GRATE, v. a. [gratere, Fr.] to rub, or wear off the particles from any thing by rubbing it; to offend by any thing harsh or vexatious; to offend the ear by a harsh and disagreeable sound.

GRATEFUL, a. [gratus, Lat.] having a due sense of benefits conferred; pleasing; agreeable; delightful to the senses or mind.

GRATEFULLY, ad. in a manner willing to acknowledge, repay, and retain a proper sense of an obligation; in a pleasing or agreeable manner.

GRATEFULNESS, s. gratitude; the quality of being agreeable, acceptable, or affording delight.

GRATER, s. [gratoir, Fr.] a kind of coarse file, or instrument formed of tin or silver, punched in holes, with which soft things are rubbed to powder.

GRATIAN, a. Benedictine monk of the 12th century, who abridged the Canon Law; which work is commonly called Gratian's Decretal.

GRATIANUS, AUGUSTUS, a Roman emperor, who succeeded Valentinian in partnership with Valentinian II. his brother. He associated Theodosius with him in the empire, who endeavoured to overthrow him. He was an able and enlightened prince; but was disliked by the army, who set up Maximian against him, and murdered him in 383, after he had reigned 8 years.

GRATIFICATION, s. [gratus and facio, Lat.] the act of pleasing; the act of complying with, and answering the craving of, the sensual appetites; pleasures; delight; a reward.

To GRATIFY, v. a. to indulge; to please by compliance; to do a thing in order to please or delight; to requite, repay, or reward.

GRATINGLY, ad. harshly; offensively.

GRATIS, ad. [Lat.] for nothing; without being paid, or receiving any thing in return.

GRATITUDE, s. [gratitudo, Lat.] a virtue, consisting in a due sense and outward acknowledgment of a benefit received, together with a readiness to return the same, or the like.

GRATTAN, HENRY, an eminent Irish orator and politician, who in the Irish parliament, and in the House of Commons, distinguished himself by his resolute opposition to the Union, and by his advocacy of Catholic Emancipation. He was greatly admired for his eloquence, and for his private character; and died in 1820, aged 70 years.

GRATUITOUS, a. [gratis, Lat.] voluntary; or granted either without asking or merit; asserted without proof.

GRATUITOUSLY, ad. without claim or merit; without proof.

GRATUITY, s. [gratuité, Fr.] a free gift; a present; an acknowledgment.

To GRATULATE, v. a. [gratulor, Lat.] to congratulate; to declare joy.

GRATULATION, s. salutations made by expressing joy.

GRATULATORY, a. expressing joy for the success, preference, or good fortune of another; congratulatory.

GRAZ, the capital of Styria, Austria. It stands near the Mur, over which are bridges. It is fortified and adorned with many fine buildings. Here also is a university, of some note, having a good library, and museum. The government buildings are extensive. It has some manufactures, and an excellent trade. Population, about 35,000. Lat. 47. 4. N. Long. 15. 27. E.

GRAUN, CHARLES HENRY, a distinguished German composer of the last century. He was in the service of Frederic the Great and his father, of Prussia. His works consist of masses, oratorios, &c. &c., and are very numerous. His fame in this country does not equal his desert. He died in 1759, aged 58 years.

GRAUWACKE, in Geology, the old German name of some of the oldest rocks which are now arranged under the Silurian and Cambrian systems.

GRAVE, s. [graf, Sax.] a hole dug in the ground, wherein a dead body is, or is to be, buried. Grave, at the end of the names of places, is from the Sax. graf, a grove, or cave.

To GRAVE, v. a. preter. graved, past. partic. graven; [graver, Fr.] to cut figures or inscriptions with a sharp-pointed tool, on any hard substance or metal; to copy pictures or writings with a sharp-pointed instrument, on wood, copper, or pewter, in order to be printed on paper.

GRAVE, a. [Fr.] solemn; serious; of a modest colour, not showy or tawdry. Not sharp or acute, applied to sound.

GRAVE-CLOTHES, s. the dress of a corpse.

GRAVEL, s. [gravelle, Belg.] in Geology, the name applied to certain recent beds, chiefly composed of bouldered chalk flints and sand, of a deep yellow or orange tint, and resembling the mooraines of glaciers or shingle beaches in appearance. In some places it is obscurely stratified. It is used chiefly for forming the walks in gardens, as it binds very firmly, and is a pleasant contrast to the beds and flowers. In Physic, a disease in the kidneys or bladder, occasioned by a collection of gritty matter therein, whereby the due secretion and excretion of the urine is impeded. When this substance strongly coheres, and forms a hard mass, it is then called the stone.

To GRAVEL, v. a. to pave or cover with gravel; to puzzle, annoy, or embarrass a person with some difficulty he cannot solve.

GRAVELESS, a. without a grave or tomb.

GRAVELLY, (grâ-vê-lee) a. consisting or abounding in gravel.

GRAVELY, (grâ-lee) ad. in a solemn or serious manner; without gaudiness or show.

GRAVENESS, s. seriousness; solemnity.

GRAVEOLENT, a. [graveolens, Lat.] strongly scented.

GRAVER, s. [graveur, Fr.] an engraver, or one who copies designs with a sharp-pointed tool or style, on metals or wood, to be printed on paper. The style, or sharp-pointed instrument, used by an engraver.

GRAVESEND, Kent. It is a place of considerable resort, being a common landing-place for seamen and strangers in their passage to London. It is commonly called the corporation of Gravesend and Milton, these two places having been incorporated by Queen Elizabeth. It is the most frequented watering-place near London, being so easily accessible by steamers and by railroad. The gardens round the town are so rich, that they not only supply the shipping, and all the towns for several miles round, with every article of that kind, but great quantities, and particularly of asparagus, remarkably fine, are sent to London.

The chief employment of the labouring people is the spinning of hemp, to make nets for fishing, and ropes. It is situated on the Thames, directly opposite to Tilbury Fort. It is 22 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 15,670 (including Milton).

GRAVESTONE, s. the stone that is laid over the grave; the monumental stone.

GRAVITY, s. [gravitus, Lat.] the state of being with child.

GRAVING, s. any piece engraved; carved work.

To GRAVITATE, v. n. [gravis, Lat.] to tend to the centre.

GRAVITATION, s. the act of tending to the centre. In Astronomy, that force which operates throughout the whole universe, the discovery of the law of which, by Sir Isaac Newton, opened up this most stupendous science to researches which are limited only by the means of calculation which mathematicians possess. The general expression of this law is, that every atom in the universe attracts every other with a force inversely proportionate to the square of its distance. And from this has followed in strictest development and demonstration all those grand truths which compose the physical branch of astronomy. See ATTRACTION, KEPLER, NEWTON, ASTRONOMY, &c.

GRAVITY, s. [gravit, Fr.] weight; heaviness; the power, or virtue, by which bodies naturally tend towards each other. Gravity, applied to the nature of actions, denotes their nature or quality; but when applied to crimes, their atrociousness. Applied to the countenance or behaviour, seriousness; solemnity; majesty, or awfulness. Specific gravity, the comparative weight of equal masses of different substances. Centre of gravity, that point in any body on which it can be supported in any position.

GRAVY, s. the juice which runs from meat when being roasted.

GRAY, a. [grag, Sax. grau, Dan.] white, with a mixture of black; of the colour of unbleached cotton. White or hoary with age, applied to the hair.

GRAY, s. a gray colour; in Natural History, a badger.

GRAY, THOMAS, one of the English classic poets, who, having studied for the bar, and travelled with Horace Walpole, spent some time in literary labours alone, and finally was made Professor of Modern History at Cambridge. His poems are not numerous, and his Bard, Elegy in a Country Churchyard, and Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College, are the most known. His letters exhibit him in a very different light from his poems, and his natural qualities and varied acquirements are most agreeably set off by their frankness and elegance. If the name poet were used strictly, it might perhaps be withheld from Gray. But as it includes musical or rhythmical compositions of a pleasing character, as well as such as exhibit the vision and the faculty divine, it must be accorded him. He died in 1771, aged 55 years.

GRAYBEARD, s. figuratively, an old man; used in contempt.

GRAYLING, s. in Ichthyology, the umber, a fish.

GRAYMILL, s. in Botany, a name for the common gromwell.

GRAYNESS, s. the quality of being gray, or being hoary by age.

GRAY'S THURLOCK, Essex. It is seated on the Thames, opposite Dartford in Kent. Market, Thursday. Pop. 1464.

To GRAZE, v. n. [grassian, Sax.] to eat or feed on grass; to produce grass,—v. a. to tend, to set cattle to feed on grass.—[graser, Fr.] to brush in passing; to touch lightly, generally applied to a bullet.

GRAZER, s. one that grazes or feeds on grass.

GRAZIER, s. one whose trade is to feed or breed cattle for food.

GREASE, (greece) s. [graisse, Fr.] the soft part of the fat of animals. In Farriery, a swelling and gourdiness of the heels, occasioned by hard labour, cold, &c.

To GREASE, (greece) v. a. to smear, anoint, or spot with grease.

GREASINESS, (greeciness) s. oiliness or fatness.

GREASY, (gréczy) a. oily; fat; spotted or smeared with grease.

GREAT, (the ea in this word and its derivatives has something, though not entirely, the sound of ai—grait, graitly, graitness), a. [great, Sax.] large in bulk, number, or quantity; having any quality in a high degree. Long or considerable, applied to time or duration. Important; weighty; chief, or principal. "The great seal," Shak. High in rank, or extensive in power; illustrious, or eminent; majestic, or grand in aspect and mien; haughty, swelling, or proud. To be great with, to be familiar or intimately acquainted. In pedigree, it is added in every step of ascending consanguinity beyond a father or grandfather, and in every step of descending consanguinity beyond a grandson. Thus, a great grandson is the son of a person's grandson; a great grandfather, the father of a person's grandfather, or the grandfather of a person's father; and great uncle is the uncle of a person's father.

GREATBELLED, a. pregnant; with child.

GREAT BRITAIN, the principal of the British Isles, and the largest island of Europe. It lies to the N. W. of that continent, and is divided from it by the English Channel, the Straits of Dover, the German Ocean, and the North Sea. It is about 600 miles in length, and from 100 to 300 miles in breadth. Its chief capes are, Land's End and Lizard Point, Start Point, Dungeness, N. Foreland, Spurn Head and Flamborough Head, C. Wrath, the Mull of Cantire, the Mull of Galloway, St. David's Head, and Hartland Point. The Wash, the Firths of Forth, Moray, and Dornoch, those of Pentland, Clyde, and Solway, the Minch, the N. Channel, the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel between it and Ireland, Caernarvon and Cardigan Bays, the Bristol Channel, Mount's Bay, and Torbay, are the chief gulfs and bays around it. The N. and W. parts of the island (Scotland and Wales) are mountainous, and there are rocky elevations in Cumberland and Cornwall; the rest of the surface is broken by fine sweeping ranges of hills. The loftiest points in Scotland are about 4000 feet high, those in Wales, about 3500, those in Cumberland are about the same height: the Derbyshire hills have points nearly 2000 feet in height, and the Chalk Hills range below 1000. The chief rivers are the Thames, the Severn, the Ouse, the Trent, the Humber, the Forth, the Tay, and the Clyde.

It possesses every variety of scenery, and abounds especially in rich rural and woodland prospects. Its mineral wealth is considerable: iron and tin, with other metals less abundant; coal; limestone, and all kinds of building-stone; have made it independent of other countries for those invaluable productions. It has also salt-mines, and mineral springs. But its agricultural advantages are equally great; it has soils naturally adapted to every variety of growth, and capable, with judicious and scientific culture, of yielding most copiously; and all kinds of pasture land, from the high sheep-walks of the wolds, to the rich low meadows suited for other cattle. Its manufactures embrace every kind of necessary for man, and have long been looked at as the most extensive and the best in the world. These have been the chief stay of its commerce, which embraces every spot inhabited by civilized man, and many of those tenanted by the rudest nations of the globe. Its climate is proverbially fickle, and yet it knows none of the severe atmospheric pests of other climes, and its people are healthy and strong in spite of all disadvantages. It has not a single noxious wild animal, and no poisonous reptile, save the viper, which is by no means common. Such advantages, rendered secure by its insular position, compensate for its manifold wants, most of which commerce supplies, and make it a spot which might be rendered one of the most favoured on earth. It has, beside small islands, the Isles of Wight and Man, Anglesea, Arran and Bute, Islay, &c., the Western Isles and Skye, the Orkneys and the Shetland Isles, lying in various directions around it. Population, including these islands, 18,844,344. See ENGLAND, WALES, SCOTLAND, their several counties, &c. &c.

GREATHEARTED, a. high-spirited; proud.

GREATLY, ad. very much; in a great or high degree; nobly; in an illustrious manner; courageously; bravely.

GREATNESS, s. largeness, applied to quantity, size, or number. High place or dignity; a consciousness of superior birth or rank; magnanimity, nobleness; grandeur; state; magnificence.

GREAVES, (greeces) s. [grèves, Fr.] armour for the legs.

GREBE, s. in Ornithology, a genus of water-fowls resembling the divers.

GRECISM, s. [græcismus, Lat.] a construction, idiom, or expression, peculiar to the Greek language.

GREECE, a kingdom of Europe, recently erected out of some of the S. provinces of European Turkey, formerly known by that name. It is surrounded on all sides, save the Turkish frontier, by the sea, and is about 200 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. It has some mountains and rivers, more famous, however, for their poetical and historical associations, than for their magnitude. Its chief wealth is its agricultural produce, consisting of corn, fruits, tobacco, wine, &c. &c. Athens is the capital. The population is about 1,000,000. More cannot be said at present respecting this very unsettled state.

GREECE, or GRECIA, was the name given to the whole region occupied by the various states of Macedonia, Epirus, Thessalia, Acarnania, Ætolia, Doris, Locris, Phocis, Boeotia, Attica, Megaris, Corinth, Argolis, and the others occupying the Peloponnesus, with which was often included the country lying between the Danube and the Black Sea, and the most northerly of the above-named states. The islands inhabited by Greeks were also included. These states differed much in their habits, laws, &c.; but were in time fused together so as to present a generally uniform appearance; being ardent patriots, having highly imaginative dispositions, and looking on all other nations, both those they gained their philosophy from, and those to whose strong hand they had to submit, as barbarians.

GREEDILY, ad. in an eager, hasty, or ravenous manner, with keen appetite.

GREE/DINESS, s. [greditipose, Sax.] ravenousness; voracious hunger; eagerness of appetite or desirous.

GREEDY, a. [greedy, Sax.] ravenous; hungry; incited with a violent desire of food; eager; vehemently desirous.

GREEK, GRECIAN, a. belonging to Greece. Greek Language, the general name given to the various dialects known as the Doric, Ionic, Attic, Æolic, Hellenic, and Alexandrine dialects; to which may be added the Romaic, or modern Greek. Of these the Attic is the most polished. In one or other of those ancient dialects, are written the loftiest works in philosophy, history, oratory, and poetry, that the human mind has produced. Its general characteristics are copiousness, refinement, flexibility, and facility in combination, which the German alone can rival. Greek Church, in Ecclesiastical History, that communion which arose in E. Europe and W. Asia, when the church catholic was torn asunder in the 9th century. Its difference from the Romish Church consists in form alone, and in the inferior skill and power of those who have conducted it. The Constantinopolitan patriarch is the actual chief, and next after him are the patriarchs of Alexandria, Jerusalem, and Antioch; under them are the bishops, &c. It differs from the Romish Church in the particulars, of the form of faith in respect of the Holy Spirit, of clerical celibacy, of communion in two kinds, of purgatory, of image-worship, &c. &c. Its strong hold is Russia, and its condition may be divined from that fact.

GREEN, a. [gram, Teut. green, Belg.] having a colour like that of grass; in compositions of dyeing and painting, made by mixing blue or black and yellow together. Flourishing; fresh; undecayed; new, or lately made. "A green wound." Unripe; immature; young, alluding to fruits being green before they are ripe; not roasted; half raw; not dry; pale; sickly.

GREEN, s. the colour of grass, or that which resembles it. In Optics, that colour in the solar spectrum which ranges between the blue and the yellow spaces. Figuratively, a plain covered with grass; the leaves of trees and vegetables, opposed to their flowers. In Cookery, used in the plural for those plants which are of this colour, and eaten boiled.

GREENE, DR. MAURICE, held successively the situations of organist at St. Paul's, and at the Chapel Royal, and Professor of Music at Cambridge. He wrote much secular music; but his anthems are the most famous of his works. He died in 1755, aged about 60 years.

GREENE, ROBERT, one of our English ante-Shakspearian dramatists. His life was a tissue of prodigy and misery. His writings are chiefly of note as marking the gradual progress of the art which reached its loftiest development in the bard of Avon. He died in 1592, aged 42 years.

GREEN-CLOTH, s. a board or court of justice, held in the counting-house of the king's household, for taking cognizance of all matters of government and justice within the king's court royal, and for correcting all the servants that offend. It takes its name from a green cloth spread over the board where they sit. None of the king's servants can be arrested for debt, without a warrant first obtained from this board.

GREENEYED, a. having eyes coloured with green.

GREENFINCH, s. in Ornithology, a kind of bird.

GREENGAGE, s. in Horticulture, a delicious species of plum. GREENHOUSE, s. a house or place in which exotics or tender plants are kept from the inclemencies of our climate, and furnished with such a degree of heat as is proper to make them grow.

GREEN/NISH, a. somewhat green; tending to green.

GREEN/LAND, the name of a vast country, occupying the N. E. corner of the N. American continent, lying between Baffin's Bay and Davis's Straits, and the N. Ocean. It is an almost uninterrupted region of rocks, and the shores, as is usual in rocky countries, are full of deep and dangerous bays. It is always covered with snows and frozen up in the higher parts, and on the E. side; while its N. boundary is lost in the everlasting snows of the pole. A few shrubs are its largest plants; mosses and similar plants are most numerous. Dogs, rein-deer, bears, &c., wild-fowl, seals, whales, walrus, &c., are its native inhabitants. It is frequented almost solely for its whale-fisheries. The aborigines are a tribe of the Esquimaux; the settlers are of Danish or Icelandic origin. But the population is extremely scanty. The Moravian Brethren maintain missions here. Cape Farewell is the most southerly point.

GREENLY, ad. with a greenish colour; newly; freshly; immaturity; wanly.

GREENNESS, s. the quality of being green; viridity; immaturity; unripeness; freshness; vigour; newness; also rawness, unskillfulness, and imperfection in trade, art, science, &c.

GREENOCK, Renfrew, Scotland. A sea-port town situated at the mouth of the Clyde. It has a considerable foreign trade, and a share in the herring-fishery. It has some manufactures also. It is about 60 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 36,135. Lat. 55. 57. N. Long. 4. 29. W.

GREEN SAND, in Geology, the name of the lowest member of the chalk formation. It varies much in its structure, &c. in different places, being in some of a hard chalky texture, thickly interspersed with green spots of a kind of grit (this has originated its name); in others, of alternate beds of a soft limestone, and an almost impenetrable chert, or flint; and in others, again, of a coarse-grained, dark-red sandstone. It has some very characteristic fossils; and in some parts is quite non-fossiliferous.

GREEN/SICKNESS, s. in Medicine, a disease incident to young females, called by physicians chlorosis.

GREENSTONE, s. in Geology, a kind of trap or basaltic rock, of a very fine quality, and of a very deep rich green colour. It occurs in Scotland, and is often turned in the lathe into ornaments of various kinds.

GREENSWARD, GREESWORD, s. the turf on which grass grows; a field.

GREENWEED, s. dyer's weed.

GREENWICH, Kent. It is situated on the Thames, and is now almost one with London. It is notorious as a place of resort for pleasure-seekers from the metropolis. Here is the National Observatory, well furnished with all requisite astronomical instruments; from the meridian of which the English reckon their degrees of longitude. Here, too, is the grand Naval Hospital, in which about 3000 disabled seamen from the fleet are kept at the expense of the nation. Schools, &c. are connected with it. It is 5 miles from London. Pop. 29,595.

GREENWOOD, s. wood considered as it appears when its leaves are out. In Botany, the name of a plant, with butterfly-shaped yellow blossoms.

To GREET, v. a. [gretan, Sax.] to address at meeting; to salute in kindness or respect; to congratulate; to wish health; to send or pay compliments at a distance.

GREETER, s. he that pays his compliments to another.

GREETING, s. salutation or compliment.

REGA/RIOUS, a. [grez, Lat.] assembling in flocks or herds.

REGORY OF NAZIANZUS, ST., a distinguished father of the church in the 4th century. He studied at the first schools of the age, and he entered the church as presbyter under his father, who was bishop of Nazianzus. After his death, he retired into obscurity for a time, and then preached at Constantinople with such success against the Arians, that he was appointed to the patriarchate. But he never held this exalted post. For a short time he was bishop of his native place, and afterwards lived in complete retirement, and died in 390, aged about 65 years. His works consist of eloquent but immethodical orations, epistles, and poems.

REGORY OF NYSSA, ST., a father of the church during the 4th century. He was made bishop of Nyssa, and was much harassed by persecutions of the Arians; against whom, by preaching, counsel, and writing, he did good service. To him is attributed the Nicene Creed in its present form. He died about 395, aged about 65 years.

GREGORY OF NEO-CÆSAREA, surnamed Thaumaturgus, a father of the church in the 3rd century. He was born of heathen parents, and was a law student, when meeting with Origen, he embraced Christianity, and became bishop of his native place. He was most devoted and successful in his evangelical labours. His works are few, and of them, his Eulogy of Origen is most remarkable. He died about 265, aged about 65 years.

GREGORY, Bishop of Tours, France, a celebrated French ecclesiastic and historian. He was much engaged in councils and disputes. His great work contains the general history of the world till the establishment of the kingdom of the Franks, and a particular history of that kingdom till near the 7th century. He excupulates all orthodox kings, especially if they endow churches, &c., from all faults and crimes; but heterodoxy is in his eyes an unpardonable offence. He died in 595, aged 52 years.

GREGORY, the name assumed with the pontificate by 16 popes, of whom the most famous are:—Gregory I., surnamed The Great. He was a great defender and promoter of the purity of the church, and a zealous propagator of the faith. The British islands, which had almost lost the knowledge of Christianity, through the bloody wars of the Saxons, received it anew from him, and the influence of Rome in this country then began. He was an eminently good man, and lived long before the papacy was what we are most accustomed to regard it. He died in 604, aged about 55 years, after a pontificate of 14 years. Gregory VII., the celebrated Hildebrand, the most famous of all the successors of St. Peter. He seems to have early mourned over the evils of the times, and the degeneracy of the church, of which he perhaps first seized the idea. His power, arising solely from this, was so great, that through the pontificates of 5 popes, his was the real guiding and ruling mind of the church. On being raised to the tiara, he instantly took the ground which was expected of him from his well-known views, and aimed at the complete purification of the church from its numberless abuses, and the exaltation of it from being the creature of the empire, to being the chief power in the world, as it became the church to be. His pontificate was consumed in a fierce and mortal struggle with the emperor Henry IV., in the course of which Henry was deposed by Gregory, and restored only on a most humiliating penance; and Gregory was besieged in his own palace, defied by the rival pope Henry set up, and at last driven out to die in exile, in 1085, after a pontificate of 12 years. Gregory XIII. was the reformer of the calendar, which he was enabled to effect through the aid of the learned men and astronomers of his states. He died in 1585, aged 83 years, having reigned 13.

GREGORY, JAMES, a distinguished mathematician, &c. of the 17th century. He was successively professor at St. Andrews and Edinburgh, and died a few days after he had suddenly lost his sight, in 1675, aged 37 years.

GREGORY, DAVID, nephew to the forenamed, and similarly distinguished. He held the professorship at Edinburgh first, and afterwards was elected Savilian professor at Oxford. He died in 1710, aged 49 years.

GREGORY, DR. JOHN, a medical practitioner and professor at Aberdeen; and a writer, whose "Father's Legacy to his Daughters," by some means got admission to the English classics. He died in 1773, aged 49 years.

GREGORY, DR. OLINTHUS, late mathematical professor in the military college, Woolwich. He rose to that distinction, and to the eminent position he held amongst English mathematicians, through his own almost unaided labours; and he maintained his reputation by his writings. He wrote also a work on Christianity, embracing both a defence and exposition of it, which has had a very large circulation, and is one of the best of its kind. He also edited the works of Robert Hall of Bristol. He died in 1841, aged 66 years.

GRENADE, GRENADE, s. [Fr.] a hollow ball of iron, &c. filled with gunpowder, fired by a fusee. It is a small bomb-shell thrown by the hand.

GRENADE/R, (grenade/r) s. [grenadier, Fr.] a tall soldier, formerly armed with grenadoes, from whence the name is derived. Every battalion of foot has a company of grenadiers belonging to it.

GRENOBLE, a city in the department of Isere, France. It is the see of a bishop. It has some noble buildings, and an excellent library. The leather and gloves made here are highly esteemed. It is seated on the river Isere near its conflux with the Drac. It is 285 miles from Paris. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 45. 12. N. Long. 5. 49. E.

GRENVILLE, GEORGE, an English statesman during the reigns of George II. and III. He was at length appointed prime minister. His administration was not a very brilliant one. He was esteemed an eloquent orator, and died in 1770, aged 65 years.

GRENVILLE, WILLIAM, LORD, son of the preceding, and like him an eminent statesman. He was home secretary in Pitt's ministry, and resigned when he expected a war with France. After Pitt's death, he was appointed prime minister, but did not hold the office long. He advocated Catholic Emancipation, and distinguished himself in parliament as a powerful orator. He was also chancellor of Oxford, and died in 1834, aged 75 years.

GRESHAM, SIR THOMAS, a celebrated merchant of London in the 16th century. He greatly increased a princely fortune, accumulated by his predecessors, and built the Royal Exchange, which was destroyed during the great fire of London on the site of the present magnificent pile. He also endowed Gresham College, so that there should be lectures delivered gratuitously on the principal sciences. He died in 1579, aged 60 years.

GRETN GREEN, Dumfriesshire, Scotland. A village near the mouth of the river Esk. It was formerly noted for the number of private marriages performed here in evasion of the law.

GRETRY, ANDREW ERNEST, an eminent French composer of the last century. His works are chiefly operas, some of which have been performed in England; they are greatly admired by connoisseurs. He died in 1813, aged 69 years.

GREUT, s. a fossil body, consisting of a congeries of crystal, or sparks of spar, of the size of bay salt, and of a brown shining colour.

GREW, the preterite of To Grow.

GREY, a. See GRAY, which is the correct spelling.

GREY, LADY JANE, an amiable and accomplished lady, rendered illustrious in English history by her early and undeserved death. She was remotely connected with the royal family. Henry VIII. had specially disqualified his daughters from sitting on the throne; Lord Northumberland had, during Edward VI.'s brief reign, married his son to her, with a view to securing the succession. Lady Jane was proclaimed queen on Edward's death, but Northumberland's unpopularity, and Mary's energy, ruined her cause. And she, who acted only from a mistaken view of filial duty, shared the punishment of his treasonable ambition. Perhaps her Protestantism, and her successful rival's Popery, have aided to the lustre of her renown. She was beheaded in 1554, aged 17 years; having borne the title of queen for 9 days.

GREY, CHARLES, EARL, (of Howick), the chief of the parliamentary reformers of 1830. He was one of the most inflexibly consistent of our late English statesmen; having during a long public life zealously aimed at bringing about a fuller representation of the country, which he was at last able to accomplish. At his first entrance on the political stage, he joined Mr. Fox, and during the stormy scenes which were the result of the French Revolution, played a distinguished part. He then advocated the measures which are always associated with his name, and went even further in reform than did his colleagues in achieving their success. He was more fearless than his leader in his attachment to popular principles, and in opposing the war with France. Abolition of Slavery and Catholic Emancipation he always endeavoured to promote; and equally firmly opposed the unconstitutional proceedings against Hunt and others during the regency, at the close of the war. On the accession of William IV. he was made prime minister, and his first measure was the Reform Bill. On the fall of his party, he retired from public life, and died in 1845, aged 81 years. He was an impressive and commanding speaker; and a fine specimen of a genuine English nobleman. Although his views were limited by his political maxims, he deserves the country's gratitude, as having worked most earnestly to accomplish all he saw to be right, and having laid a foundation for future triumphs of popular freedom.

GREYHOUND, s. [grighund, Sax.] in Natural History, a slender fleet hound that hunts by sight.

GRICE, s. a little pig; a young wild boar. A step.

To GRIDE, v. n. [gridare, Ital.] to cut; to make way by cutting.

GRIFDELIN, s. a colour compounded of white and red.

GRIFDIRON, s. a movable frame of iron bars, which is used to dress virtues over a fire.

GRIEF, (grief) s. [griff, Brit.] sorrow for something which is past; a grievance, oppression, or injury; pain, or disease.

GRIESBACH, JOHN JAMES, a distinguished New Testament critic of Germany during the last century. His great work was the recension of the Greek text, and he accomplished it in a more satisfactory way than it had ever been performed in before. But some of his theories of the text are worse than groundless; and some of his alterations are not justified by his own principles of criticism. He held, as is common in the German states, a privy councillorship under the Duke of Weimar, and was rector of Jena university. He died in 1812, aged 67 years.

GRIEVANCE, (griefance) s. that which makes a person uneasy, generally applied to the actions or conduct of another.

To GRIEVE, (grieve) v. a. [greuer, Fr.] to afflict; to hurt; to make a person uneasy by some unkind or offensive action.—v. n. to be sorrowful.

GRIEVINGLY, (griefingly) ad. with sorrow; sorrowfully.

GRIEVOUS, (grecuous) a. [gravis, Lat.] afflictive, or causing pain not easily borne; causing sorrow; expressing great uneasiness. Great, or atrocious, applied to crimes.

GRIEVOUSLY, (griefously) ad. with great offence, discontent, or ill-will; painfully, or so as to occasion great uneasiness; miserably; vexatiously.

GRIEVOUSNESS, (grecuousness) s. sorrow; pain; a state of calamity, oppression, or wretchedness.

GRITFIN, s. a fabled animal, having the head and paws of the lion and the wings of the eagle.

GRIG, s. in its primary sense, signifies any thing below the natural size. A species of eels. Figuratively, a merry, active, and jocosus person. In Botany, the common heath.

To GRILL, v. n. [griller, Fr.] to broil or dress meat on a gridiron.

GRILLADE, s. any thing broiled on the gridiron.

To GRILLY, v. a. to harass; to roast or tease a man.

GRIM, a. [grinna, Sax.] having a fierce or awfully sullen countenance; hideous; frightful; ugly; ill-looking.

GRIMACE, s. [grinace, Fr.] a distortion of the countenance from habit, affectation, or insolence; vulgarly styled making months.

GRIMALDI, a name borne by a very distinguished Italian family during the middle ages, four having been celebrated admirals of Genoa:—borne also by a painter and a mathematician of Bologna;—and lastly, by one of the best clowns that ever appeared on the English stage. This last worthy was noted for his intellectual drollery—displaying method in his folly. He died in 1838, aged 58 years.

GRIMALKIN, s. [gris, Fr. and malin,] an appellation for an old gray cat.

GRIME, s. dirt that is ingrained, or not easily washed off.

To GRIME, v. n. to dirt so as it cannot be easily washed off.

GRIMLY, ad. in a terrible, hideous, or horrible manner. In a fierce, stern, or sullen manner, applied to the looks.

GRIMNESS, s. a look which proceeds from the fierceness or sullenness of a person's disposition.

GRIMSBY, GREAT, Lincolnshire. It contains several streets of pretty good houses, and a church that looks like a cathedral. It is said to be the oldest corporation in England; and had formerly a good harbour, which has been long choked up with sand. It is situated on the river Humber, by which it has a trade in coals and salt. It is 170 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3700.

GRIMM, BARON, (FREDERIC) one of the French Encyclopedists of the ante-revolutionary æra, although a German by birth. He was acquainted with that brilliant circle of shallow infidels, and took part in their contests respecting music and art, &c. &c. He was appointed ambassador to France from Sax-Gotha, but retired on the breaking out of the Revolution: afterwards he was a minister plenipotentiary for Russia, in Saxony. He died in 1807, aged 84 years. His writings are merely his letters.

To GRIN, v. n. [grenian, Sax.] to set the teeth together, and withdraw the lips, used both as a sign of mirth and anguish.

GRIN, s. the act of closing the teeth, and withdrawing the lips from them, so as to expose them to view; the act of showing the teeth, used as an effect of mirth or anguish.

To GRIND, v. a. preter. and past part. ground; [grindan, Sax.] to reduce any thing to powder by attrition or rubbing; to sharpen or smooth by rubbing on something hard; to rub one against another; to harass or oppress by extortion.—v. n. to sharpen an instrument by holding it on a round stone, which is turned about the while; to move a mill; to fix the teeth close, and move them, so as to make a noise.

GRINDER, s. one who grinds or works in a mill; the instrument of grinding. Also, the common name of the double teeth.

GRINDSTONE, s. the stone on which edge-tools are sharpened.

GRINNER, s. one who grins and shuts his teeth, and opens his lips, so as to expose them.

GRINNINGLY, ad. with a grinning laugh; in a grinning manner.

GRINSTEAD, EAST, Sussex. It is seated on a hill, near the borders of Surrey. It is 29 miles from London. Market, Thursday; and a great fair, on Dec. 11, for Welch runts, fat hogs, and other cattle. Pop. 3586.

GRIP, s. a small ditch.

To GRIPPE, v. a. [greipan, Goth.] to hold tight in the hand; to squeeze with the fingers closed over. Figuratively, to oppress; to pinch, press, or squeeze.—v. n. to pinch the belly; to give the colic, attended with a sharp pain in the bowels.

GRIPE, s. a grasp or seizure of the hand or paw; a squeeze, or pressure. Figuratively, oppression, extortion, or crushing power; affliction; distress. In the plural, the belly-ache; the colic.

GRIPER, s. one who oppresses the poor; a usurer; an extortioner.

GRIPINGLY, ad. attended with a pain in the belly.

GRIPAMBER, s. a corruption of ambergris.

GRIPSKIN, s. [grignin, It.] the back-bone of a hog.

GRISLY, (grichy) a. [gridia, Sax.] dreadful; horrid.

GRISONS, THIEF, a canton of Switzerland, lying next to Austria, and bounded by the cantons of Glarus, Uri, Ticino, and St. Gall. It is above 75 miles in length, and about 50 in breadth. It is, like all Switzerland, very mountainous, having heights exceeding 10,000 feet in elevation. The Rhine, the Inn, and the Adda, take their rise amongst the glaciers in the valleys of this canton. Although very irregular, it yet has some arable land; but its staple productions are cattle, goats, cheese, &c. &c., from the excellent mountain pastures. This canton consists of a confederation of smaller free states, compacted into leagues, and these again constituting the canton. Coire is the capital. Pop. about 100,000. The more usual name of this canton, on the continent, is Graubünden.

GRIST, s. [grist, Sax.] toll taken by the miller when he grinds other people's corn; corn to be ground. Figuratively, a supply of provision. To bring grist to a mill, is a figurative and proverbial expression for producing profit or gain.

GRISTLE, s. [Sax.] in Anatomy, a cartilage or fleshy substance, very elastic, tough, and next in hardness to a bone.

GRISTLY, a. cartilaginous; consisting of gristle; having the properties of gristle.

GRIT, s. [gritta, greet, Sax.] bran, or the coarse part of meal; oats husked, or coarsely ground; sand; a particle of sand; rough, hard particles. In mines, any kind of hard, coarse sandstone.

GRITTINESS, s. sandiness; the quality of abounding in grit, or little rough, hard, and sandy particles.

GRITSTONE, s. See GRIT.

GRITTY, a. full of little rough, hard, and sandy particles.

GRIZELIN, s. See GRIDELIN.

GRIZZLE, s. [gris, Fr.] a colour made of a mixture of white and black, most commonly applied to that of perukes, or the hair: gray.

GRIZZLED, a. interspersed with black and white hairs; gray.

GRIZZLY, a. somewhat gray.

To GROAN, (grōn) v. n. [granan, Sax.] to breathe with a hoarse noise, in pain or agony.

GROAN, (grōn) s. a deep sigh, attended with a hoarse noise, made by persons in pain and agony. Figuratively, any hoarse, dead sound.

GROAT, (graüt) s. [groot, Belg.] a silver coin, value fourpence; hence it is used for fourpence, though consisting of copper coin.

GROCER, s. [gross, Eng.] one that buys and sells teas, sugar, plums, &c. A green-grocer is one that buys and sells greens.

GROCERY, s. the wares sold by a grocer; such as tea, sugar, raisins, spice, &c.

GRODNO, a town of Russia, in the part wrested from Poland. It is a large, straggling place, containing a mixture of houses little better than cottages, habitations in good repair, and ruined palaces, with magnificent gateways, and other remains of decayed splendour. A wing yet remains of the old castle, in which the diets of Poland formerly assembled. Here is a good scientific college; it has also manufactures of linen, woollen, cotton, and silk. It is seated on the river Niemen. It is about 650 miles from St. Petersburg. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 53. 40. N. Long. 23. 49. E.

GROGERAM, GROGRAM, GROGRAN, s. a sort of stuff, all silk, woven with a large woof, and a rough pile.

GROIN, s. in Anatomy, that part of the body which is between the belly and the thigh. In Architecture, the rib of an arch carried across a vaulted stone ceiling, intersected by other similar ribs. This word is used as a verb, and the participles groining and groined are formed from it.

GROMWELL, s. in Botany, a plant, otherwise called gromill or graymill.

GRÖNINGEN, a province of the kingdom of Holland, lying on the German Ocean, and adjoining to Hanover, bounded by the provinces Drenthe and Friesland. It is a mere marsh, kept habitable by drains and canals. It feeds horses, cattle, and sheep. It has also manufactures of woollen and linen. Its capital, Grönningen, stands at the junction of the two chief streams of the province, the Aa, and the Huntze, and is a large and well-fortified place. It has a good trade by means of its river. It is 85 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 51. 37. N. Long. 5. 57. E.

GRONOVIUS, the name of a German family which in the 17th century produced two of three classical scholars of great erudition and celebrity. John Frederic died in 1671, aged 60 years; and James, his son, died in 1712, aged 67 years.

GROOM, s. [groom, Belg.] a boy, waiter, or servant; one who tends or looks after horses; a man newly married. It is also applied to the several superior officers of the king's household, as groom of the chamber, groom of the stole, &c.

GROOVE, s. a deep cavern or hollow in a mine; a channel or hollow cut in wood.

To GROOVE, v. a. to cut hollow, or in channels.

To GROPE, v. n. [grapan, Sax.] to feel one's way out in case of blindness or darkness; to have an imperfect idea of a thing; to feel after a thing where a person cannot see.

GROPER, s. one who searches after, or endeavours to find, a thing in the dark.

GROSS, s. [gross, Fr.] large, thick, or bulky, applied to size. Shameful; very erroneous, coarse, palpable, or unrefined, applied to sentiments. Clumsy or inelegant, applied to shape. Thick, applied to the consistence of any fluid. Stupid or dull, applied to the understanding. Coarse, thick, fat, or bulky, applied to the size of the body. Impure; foul; applied to the human constitution.

GROSS, s. the main body or main force of an army. The bulk; the whole. The major part or body, applied to number, or a collection of men. In Commerce, a number, consisting of twelve dozen, or one hundred and forty-four.

GROSS-BEAK, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the bullfinch, with a very large beak.

GROSSLY, ad. in large or coarse particles; without any subtilty, art, or delicacy; flagrantly, or palpably.

GROSSNESS, s. coarseness; inelegant fatness; want of refinement.

GROT, s. See GROOTTO.

GROTE/SQUE, (gro'tik) s. [Fr.] distorted in figure; unnatural; wildly formed, without any regard to nature or propriety.

GROTIUS, HUGO, or DE GROOT, a famous Dutch statesman, jurist, and theologian, at the beginning of the 17th century. He rose by gradual steps to be pensioner of Rotterdam, and being a friend of the famous and unfortunate Barneveldt, narrowly escaped with his life. He was sentenced to perpetual imprisonment, but escaped, and took refuge in France. He returned again, but was banished, and died in the service of Sweden, in 1645, aged 62 years. His works alone would be sufficient to hand down his name to posterity, without his statesmanship, or romantic life. He wrote works of history, antiquities, laws, theology, classical scholarship, &c., and he was no mean poet. He met with an antagonist of no common order in Selden, when he wrote to claim for the Dutch the freedom of the seas between Holland and England. His treatise on international law is one of the standard works on that difficult subject. His theology was Arminian, and he was the first who clearly stated the forensic view of the doctrine of the atonement, which has since been so widely received; and his religious works generally betray the juridical rather than the spiritual mind.

GROTTA DEL CAÑE, a cavern near the Lake d'Agnano, in Naples. From the bottom of this little cave a vapour, or mephitic air, rises, (about a foot in height,) which is destructive of animal life. For the amusement of travellers, persons attend at the cave with dogs, on which they perform the cruel experiment of holding their heads in the vapour; after which they are convulsed in a few minutes, and expire in tortures.

GROTTO, s. [grotte, Fr. grotta, Ital.] a cavern or cave made for pleasure. Used sometimes, as by the Italians, from whom it is derived, for a dark or horrid cavern.

GROVE, s. [graf, Sax.] a walk formed by trees whose branches meet above.

To GROVEL, v. n. [grufile, Isl.] to lie prostrate, or with one's belly on the ground; to creep along with one's belly on the ground; to have low, mean, or abject thoughts.

GROUND, s. [grund, Sax.] the earth, considered as that which supports us when walking, as opposed to air or water, or as situated low; land; country; regio; territory; a farm, estate, or possession; the floor or level of a place. In the plural, the dregs, lees, or that which settles at the bottom of liquors. In Painting, the first layer of colours, or that on which the images are painted and described. The fundamental cause or substance; the original principle. The first principles, applied to knowledge or science. The space occupied by an army, as they fight, advance, or retreat.

To GROUND, v. a. to fix or support upon the ground; to build, found, or settle as a cause or first principle; applied to opinions. To settle in the first principles or rudiments of knowledge, applied to instruction.

GROUND, the prot. and past part. of To GRIND.

GROUND-BAIT, s. a bait made of barley or malt boiled, &c., which is thrown into the river where you intend to angle, and sinking to the bottom, or ground, draws the fish after it.

GROUND-FLOOR, s. the lower story of a house, level with the external ground.

GROUND-FURZE, s. in Botany, a plant, otherwise called petty whin, and cammock.

GROUND-IVY, s. in Botany, alehoof, or tunhoof.

GROUNDLESS, s. without any foundation, reason, or justice.

GROUNDLESSLY, ad. in an unjust manner; without reason, cause, or foundation.

GROUNDLESSNESS, s. want of cause, foundation, or support.

GROUNDLING, s. in Ichthyology, a fish that keeps at the bottom of the water. Figuratively, a person of mean, grovelling, or vulgar thoughts.

GROUND-PINE, s. in Botany, a plant with gaping blossoms, the germander.

GROUND-PLATE, s. in Architecture, the outermost pieces of timber lying on or near the ground, and framed into one another with mortises and tenons. In these also are mortises made to receive the tenons of the joints, the summer and girders, and sometimes the trimmers for the stair-case and chimney, and the binding joist.

GROUND-PLAT, s. the ground on which any building is placed.

GROUND-RENT, s. rent paid for the ground on which a house is built.

GROUNDSEL, s. the foot-post of a door, or the timber or raised pavement of a house next the door; a threshold. In Botany, the name of a plant with compound flowers, of which there are several sorts.

GROUNDWORK, s. in Painting, that colour or part on which all the images are drawn. A foundation of a building. Figuratively, the fundamentals, or first part of an undertaking; the rudiments or first principles of a science.

GROUP, (groep) s. [groupe, Fr.] in Painting and Sculpture, an assemblage or knot of two or more figures of men, &c. Figuratively, a crowd; a cluster; a huddle.

TO GROUP, (groep) v. a. [grouper, Fr.] in Painting, to introduce several figures into one piece.

GROUSE, s. in Ornithology, a kind of fowl, named heath-game.

GROUT, s. [grut, Sax.] coarse meal or pollard; that which purges off.

TO GROW, (grō) v. n. preter. grew, past part. grown: [groean, Sax.] to increase in length or extent, applied to the vegetation of plants. To be produced by vegetation; to increase in stature or bulk; to proceed or arise, as from a cause; to improve; to make progress. To accrue, or become due, applied to the increase of interest due on money lent. Applied to the sea by mariners, to swell or roll.

GROWER, (grōder) s. that which vegetates or increases in height or bulk.

TO GROWL, (one pronounced as in now), v. n. [grollen, Flem.] to snarl; murmur; or grumble.

GROWN, (grōn) past part. of To Grow; advanced in or increased by growth; covered or filled by the growth of any thing; arrived at full growth or stature.

GROWTH, (grōth) s. vegetation; vegetable life; increase by vegetation; product, or the thing produced; increase in number, bulk, frequency, stature, or improvement.

TO GRUB, v. a. [grab, Goth.] to destroy or extirpate by digging or throwing up the soil; to pull up by the roots; to dirty one's clothes or flesh.

GRUB, s. in Natural History, the common name given to the larvae of insects; especially if they feed on the inner substance of plants, animals, &c., or live under-ground.

TO GRUBBLE, v. n. [grubelen, Teut.] to grope, or feel in the dark.

TO GRUDGE, v. a. to envy, or view the advantages of another with discontent and uneasiness; to give or take unwillingly.—v. n. to murmur or repine; to be unwilling; to wish in secret.

GRUDGE, s. an old quarrel. Figuratively, ill-will; anger; resentment; envy.

GRUDGINGLY, ad. unwillingly; malignantly.

GRUEL, s. [gruelle, Fr.] a kind of spoonmeat or broth, made of oatmeal boiled in water; any kind of mixture or broth, made by boiling ingredients in water.

GRUFF, a. [groff, Belg.] sour, surly, or morose, applied to the aspect and behaviour.

GRUFFLY, ad. in a sour, morose, or surly manner.

GRUFFNESS, s. harshness of voice, or surliness of look.

TO GRUMBLE, v. n. [grommelen, Belg.] to murmur with discontent; to growl or snarl. To make a hoarse or rattling noise, applied to thunder.

GRUMBLER, s. one who murmurs with discontent; a discontented person.

GRUMBLING, s. a murmuring through discontent.

GRUME, s. [grumus, Lat.] a thick viscid consistence of a fluid, like that of the white of an egg, or like clotted blood.

GRUMLY, ad. in a morose, sour, or surly manner.

GRUMOUS, a. thick or clotted.

GRUMOUSNESS, s. the thickness of any curdled or clotted liquor.

TO GRUNT, GRUNTLE, v. n. [grunio, Lat.] to make a hoarse, discontented noise, applied to a hog.

GRUNT, s. the noise made by a hog.

GRUNTER, s. one that grunts.

GRUNTLING, s. a young hog.

GRUS, in Astronomy, the crane, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

GRY, s. [Gr.] any thing of little value, as the paring of the nails.

GUADALOUPE, one of the Leeward Islands in the West Indies, lying between Antigua and Dominica, and subject to the French. It is about 250 miles in circumference, and is divided into two parts by a channel, in one place four miles over, and navigable only for canoes, called Rivière Sale. On the top of a very lofty mountain, is a volcano, called La Soufrière, the two mouths of which open into a pit of sulphur. The negroes get brimstone here, which they afterwards purify and sell. The vegetables, fruits, and trees are much the same as in the other islands, except the cinnamon-tree, balsam of the capivi, and the milk shrub, which yields a balsamic liquor like milk. The honey produced in this island is very fine. It exports indigo, cotton, coffee, &c. &c. St. Louis is the capital. Pop. about 130,000.

GUADALQUIVIR, a large river of Spain, springing from the mountains in the S. of New Castile, and flowing through the whole length of Andalusia, into the Atlantic, to the N. of Cadiz. It is about 200 miles in length, and the most celebrated cities on its banks are Cordova and Seville.

GUADIANA, a large river of the Spanish peninsula, rising on the opposite side of the mountains to that whence the Guadalquivir flows, in New Castile; and flowing through Estremadura, the province of Alentejo in Portugal, and between the two countries to the Atlantic Ocean. It is about 250 miles in length; and has seated on its banks, Ciudad Real, Orellana, Merida, and Badajoz.

GUAIACUM, s. in Botany and Medicine, a West Indian tree, the wood of which and resinous exudations are used in medicine as stimulants.

GUANO, (heñhno) s. [Span.] in Commerce and Agriculture, a very superior kind of manure, brought from Peru, in S. America; where its excellence has been long proved. It is the dung of sea-birds, accumulated through ages on the rocky islands, &c. they haunt, on the Peruvian coast; and has been found in many other places where penguins and birds of similar habits haunt: and the use of it has suggested the employment of similar excrementitious deposits. It should be observed, that extensive frauds have been committed by the vending of a spurious article, although artificial guano has been made little inferior to the genuine; and that many who have tried it, have prevented their success by improperly applying it to the seed instead of to the soil.

GUANACO, s. See LLAMA.

GUARANTEE, (garantie) s. [garant, Fr.] a power who undertakes to see the conditions of any league, peace, or bargain performed.

TO GUARANTY, (garantee) v. a. to undertake to see the articles of any treaty kept.

TO GUARD, (the u in this word and its derivatives is usually dropped in pronunciation, as gord, gardian, &c.) v. a. [garder, Fr.] to watch, in order to secure from or prevent a surprise or sudden danger; to protect or defend; to anticipate or secure against objections; to adorn with lists, laces, or ornamental borders.

GUARD, s. [garde, Fr.] a man or body of men employed to watch, in order to defend from danger or prevent surprise. Used with on or off, a state of caution or vigilance. A limitation; anticipation of an objection; an ornamental hem, lace, or border. In Fencing, an action or posture proper to defend the body from the efforts of an enemy. Advanced guard, is a party of horse or foot which marches before a corps to give notice of approaching danger. Main guard, is that from which all the other guards are detached. Piquet guard, is a number of horse and foot always in readiness, in case of an alarm, the horses being saddled and their riders booted. Guards, in the plural, is particularly applied to those troops or companies which are kept up to guard the king.

GUARDER, s. one who protects, defends, or watches.

GUARDIAN, s. [gardien, Fr.] one who has the care of an orphan, or person whose parents are dead; one to whom the care or preservation of any thing is committed. Guardian of the spiritualities, is he to whom the spiritual jurisdiction of any diocese is committed, during the vacancy of the see. He may be either guardian in law, or jure magistratus, as the archbishop is of the diocese within his province; or guardian by delegation, as he whom the archbishop or vicar-general doth for the time depute.

GUARDIAN, a. [gardien, Fr.] performing the office of a kind protector and defender.

GUARDIANSHIP, s. the office of a guardian.

GUARDLESS, a. without defence.

GUARDSHIP, s. care; protection; or the state of a person under the disposal of guardians; a king's ship employed in guarding the coast.

GUARINI, JOHN BAPTIST, an Italian poet of the end of the 16th century. He lived at courts all his life long, being secretary to Alphonso of Ferrara, Ferdinand di Medici of Tuscany, Francis of Urbino, and others. His chief work is a pastoral drama, called Il Pastor Fido, which is greatly admired. He died in 1619, aged 75 years.

GUATIMALA, a republic of N. America, bounded by Mexico and New Granada, and washed by the Pacific Ocean and the Caribbean Sea. A range of mountains, which is a continuation of the Rocky Mountains of the more northerly part of the continent, passes along its W. side. The Lake of Nicaragua is its principal fresh-water feature. It exports mahogany, cotton, &c. &c. Pop. about 1,250,000. It is called also the United Provinces of Central America, as it consists of a federal republic and several states. Its chief city is Guatemala, and stands on the narrow plain between the mountains and the Pacific Ocean. It is a regularly built town, and has some fine buildings, but the frequency of earthquakes is a hindrance to architectural ornament. The population is about 50,000. Old Guatemala stands at a distance of some miles from the present city, and is yet inhabited, although in so dangerous a vicinity for earthquakes, &c. New Guatemala, Lat. 14. 36. N. Long. 90. 13. W. Old Guatemala, Lat. 14. 27. N. Long. 90. 28. W.

GUAYAQUIL, a town of Ecuador, S. America, standing at the head of a gulf of the same name. It is most unhealthy situated, and is in constant danger from earthquakes besides. A considerable trade is carried on, and the products of the country round exported for Europe, &c. Its population is about 30,000. Lat. 2. 9. S. Long. 79. 56. W.

GUBERNATION, s. [governance, Lat.] the exercise of authority in protecting, preserving, and directing; government or superintendency.

GUDGEON, s. [goujon, Fr.] in Natural History, a small fish found in brooks or rivers, and easily caught. Figuratively, a person easily cheated.

GUELDERLAND, a province of the kingdom of Holland, lying on the Zuyder Zee, and adjoining to Prussia, bounded by the provinces of Overijssel, Holland, Utrecht, Brabant, and Limburg. It is, like all Holland, sufficiently level, and is watered by the Rhine, the Meuse, the Waal, the Yssel, &c. Agriculture is the principal occupation. Arnheim is its capital. Pop. about 300,000.

GUELF and GHIBELINE, the names of the two great parties in Italy, during the middle ages; the Gueffs being the party favourable to the Papal aims, and the Ghibelines that favourable to the emperor of Germany's. The use of these terms did not arise thus, but became appropriated in the course of years in this manner. It cannot be asserted of either party, that it upheld the principles of liberty which had been embodied in so many places in Italy. It happened then, as it has happened in England, each party adopted any opinions by which it could gain power, which it used for its own ends; and so both appear on different occasions as the maintainers of popular rights and liberties.

GUERCINO, whose real name was John Francis Barbieri, an eminent painter of the Bolognese school. He was remarkable for his vigorous colouring, and was especially distinguished for his fresco paintings. He died in 1666, aged 76 years.

GUERICKE, OTTO, a distinguished natural philosopher of the 17th century, whose great discovery was the air-pump. He studied at the best schools of Holland and Germany, and travelled in other countries to increase his learning. He settled at Magdeburgh, and died in 1686, aged 84 years. He also made the first electrical machine, with a globe of glass, where we use a cylinder or plate.

GUERLINGUET, s. in Zoology, a kind of squirrel that is found in Guiana.

GUERNESEY, an island in the English Channel, near the coast of France, about 30 miles in circumference. It has been held subject to England since the time of the Norman Conquest. The natives speak French, this island having been formerly a part of Normandy, and being still governed by the old Norman laws. The air is healthy, and the soil more rich and fertile than that of Jersey. Here is a very good harbour, and on the S. side of the island a bay capable of receiving large vessels. They are sufficiently supplied with corn and cattle for their own use and that of the ships; wines and cider are cheap and plentiful; there is plenty of game and fowl; and they catch great quantities of sea-fish of various kinds. The inhabitants have a considerable trade; and the staple manufacture is knit stockings. Port St. Pierre is the principal town. Pop. 26,705. Lat. 49. 33. N. Long. 2. 40. W.

GUESCLIN, BERTRAND DU, a renowned French warrior and statesman, who was constable of France in the 14th century. His life and actions may be regarded as embodying almost the ideal of a knight, according to the notion of the times. To his valour is attributed the expulsion of the English from Normandy, Guyenne, Poitou, &c. He died in 1380, aged 65 years.

To GUESS, (the u is usually dropped in the pronunciation of this word and its derivatives, and the g before the e pronounced hard, as guess, &c.) v. a. [ghissen, Belg.] to conjecture; to judge without any fixed or certain principles.

GUESS, s. a conjecture.

GUESSER, s. a conjecturer; one who judges without certain knowledge.

GUESSINGLY, ad. forming a judgment in a casual manner; uncertainly.

GUEST, (gest, the g pronounced hard,) s. [guest, Brit.] one who is entertained in the house of another; a stranger.

GUESTCHAMBER, s. chamber of entertainment.

To GUGGLE, v. n. [gorgoliare, Ital.] to sound or make a noise like water running out of a narrow-mouthed bottle or vessel.

GUIANA, a district of S. America, lying on the Caribbean Sea, part of which is contained in Brazil, and part in Venezuela, and the remainder is occupied by settlements of the British, French, and Dutch. The British portion is divided into Berbice, Demerara, and Essequibo; which see. The French is called Cayenne, from a river and a town of that name. The produce is the same as that of British Guiana. Cayenne stands on an island, and has a population of about 2500; the province having a population of about 20,000. Lat. 4. 56. N. Long. 52. 20. W. The Dutch is called Surinam; which see.

GUICCIARDINI, FRANCIS, a celebrated Italian historian of the 16th century. He began his career as professor of law at Florence, and was afterwards employed on various embassies, &c. by that republic; which led to higher occupations still. In the contests of those days he took part with Charles V. against the French. His History he wrote in the leisure of his later life; and it is esteemed a valuable work, but tinctured with the simulation of his age; and not too favourable to the people, against whom he had taken part with one of the Medici at Florence. He died in 1540, aged 58 years.

GUIDAGE, s. the reward or money given to a guide.

GUIDANCE, s. direction; government.

To GUIDE, (the u in this word and its derivatives is usually dropped in pronunciation, and the g before i pronounced hard, as guide, &c.) v. a. [guidere, Fr.] to direct or show a person a way; to govern, direct, instruct, regulate, or superintend by counsel, or exertion of authority.

GUIDE, s. [Fr.] one who directs another in his way; a director.

GUIDELESS, a. without a guide.

GUIDER, s. a director; a guide.

GUIDO RENDI, a celebrated Italian painter of Bologna, in the 17th century, who studied under Denys Calvart of Antwerp, and afterwards under the Caracci; and to the skill in design which he acquired under them added graces equal to those of Coreggio. He died in 1642, aged 67 years.

GUILD, (sometimes pronounced gild, and sometimes gild, with the g hard,) s. [Sax.] a society, corporation, fraternity, or company, united together by orders and laws made among themselves by their prince's licence. Hence Guildhall, a place or hall belonging to a corporation, wherein affairs relating to the members in their united capacity are transacted.

GUILF, (usually pronounced, as well as its derivatives, gile, with the g hard,) s. [guille, old Fr.] low cunning or craft, whereby a person tricks or cheats another; deceit.

GUILFEL, a. full of deceit; wily; fraudulent; treacherous; secretly mischievous; imposing, or over-reaching a person in a crafty or fraudulent manner.

GUILLESS, a. without any secret or concealed fraud; without any intention to deceive, cheat, or impose upon a person by false appearance and concealed treachery.

GULFDORF, Surrey. It is seated on the declivity of a hill, on the river Wye, which is navigable to the Thames, and by which a great quantity of timber is carried to London, not only from the neighbourhood, but from Sussex and Hampshire woods. It is 30 miles from London. Market, (chiefly for corn,) Saturday. Pop. 4074.

GUILLEMOT, in Ornithology, the name of some birds of the diver kind, very common in N. Britain.

GUILLOTINE, s. [from Guillotin, the name of the introducer into France,] an instrument for beheading, made of a heavy blade sliding in a frame, and so operating swiftly and surely. A similar machine once existed in England, and in Scotland, called the Maiden.

GUILT, (pronounced, with its derivatives, gilt, with the g hard,) s. [gilt, Sax.] the state of a person justly charged with a crime; a consciousness of having done amiss. Figuratively, a crime or offence.

GUILTYLY, ad. without innocence; in such a manner as to be conscious of having done a crime laid to one's charge.

GUILTINESS, s. the state of being guilty; the consciousness of having done a crime.

GUILTFLESS, a. free from crime; innocent; free from sin or punishment.

GUILTFLESSLY, ad. without guilt; innocently.

GUILTY, a. [giltig, Sax.] chargeable with having committed a crime; wicked or corrupt.

GUINEA, (pronounced ginny, with the g hard,) s. a gold coin formerly current in England; nominally at the value of 21 shillings.

GUINEA, a country of Africa, of which little is known except the coast, thence called the Coast of Guinea. It comprehends Sierra Leone; the Grain Coast, or Malaguetta; the Tooth Coast; the Gold Coast; the Slave Coast; and Benin. It is unhealthy for Europeans, though the natives live to a considerable age. The latter in general go almost naked; and are said to be an innocent, inoffensive, and hospitable people, except such as have been corrupted by the Europeans, who have factories on the coast. The productions of this country are the variety of rich tropical fruits, gums, hard woods, grain, gold, ivory, wax, &c. See under the different names by which its districts are called.

GUINEA, NEW, a name of Papua, which see.

GUINEAHEN, s. in Ornithology, a fowl, supposed to be of Guinea.

GUINEAPEPPER, s. in Botany, the capsicum, a plant.

GUINEAPIG, (ginny-pig, with the g hard) s. in Natural History, a small variegated animal, allied to the rat, a native of Brazil.

GUISE, (pron. gize, with the g hard; the same as wise, the w being changed, as is common, into g.) s. [Fr.] appearance; looks; behaviour; manner, custom, or practice; external appearance; dress or habit.

GUISE, the name of a very powerful noble family of France, descended from the kings of Lorraine. Francis and his son Henry, both surnamed Blafré, from scars in their faces, hold the foremost place in the lost list of powerful and illustrious men belonging to this family; their lives were marked by the same personal courage, unscrupulous ambition, and ferocious bigotry, and both died by the hands of assassins. The son was one of the contrivers of the infamous St. Bartholomew's massacre of the Huguenots. He also in the day of Barricades conquered his king. A Huguenot slay Francis, in 1563, aged 44 years. Henry III. had Henry assassinated in his own royal apartments, in 1588, aged 38 years.

GUIAR, (pronounced gildr, with the g hard,) s. [ghitara, Ital.] in Music, a stringed instrument with a neck like a violin, an oval body, and played on in the same manner as the harp with the fingers.

GULES, s. [gules, Fr.] in Heraldry, red. In the arms of noblemen, it is called ruby; in those of sovereign princes, Mars; and, in engraving, is signified by drawing perpendicular or straight strokes from the top of the escutcheon to the bottom.

GULF, GULPH, s. [golfo, Ital.] an arm of the ocean running into the land. Figuratively, an abyss, or immeasurable depth; a whirlpool, or sucking eddy; any thing insatiable.

GULF-STREAM, the name of a great ocean-current, which is traced first crossing the Atlantic from the Gulf of Guinea; and afterwards proceeding from the Gulf of Mexico in a northerly direction, or almost parallel to the American coast. Its influence extends to the icy Ocean itself. It is nearly 200 miles in width, and its temperature is always higher than that of the surrounding ocean.

GULF, s. full of eddies, gulfs, or whirlpools.

TO GULL, v. a. [guller, Fr.] to trick; to cheat; to deceive or defraud by artifice.

GULL, s. in Ornithology, a large genus of sea-birds, some species of which are often seen with rooks following the plough for the sake of the insects. A cheat, or trick; a stupid animal; a person easily cheated.

GULLCATCHER, s. one who cheats; a bite; one who deceives another by artifice.

GULLER, s. a cheat or impostor.

GULLERY, s. cheat; imposture.

GULLET, s. [goulet, Fr.] the throat, passage, or pipe through which the food passes, called by anatomists the oesophagus.

TO GULLY, v. n. to run with a noise, applied to water.

GULLYHOLE, s. the hole where the gutters or kennels empty themselves into the common sewer; so called from the noise they make in their fall.

GULO'SITY, s. [gula, Lat.] greediness; gluttony.

TO GULP, v. n. [golpen, Belg.] to swallow eagerly; to drink down without any intermission, or with one swallow.

GULP, s. as much as can be swallowed at once.

GUM, s. [gummi, Lat.] a vegetable juice exuding from certain trees and plants, and then hardening into a tenacious substance, soluble in water. In Gardening, a disease incident to fruit-trees of the stone kind, indicated by the exudation of gum. In Anatomy, the fleshy substance of the mouth in which the teeth grow, generally used in the plural.

GUMMINESS, s. the state of a thing smeared or abounding with gum.

GUMMOSITY, s. [gummi, Lat.] the nature of gum; viscosity; gumminess.

GUMMY, a. consisting of gum; of the nature of gum; overgrown or smeared with gum; sticky.

GUN, s. [gyne, Old Eng. from engine,] a fire-arm or weapon which forcibly discharges a ball, shot, &c. through a cylindrical barrel, by means of gunpowder. Great guns are generally called cannon, and known likewise under the term of ordnance. Small guns are such as are portable, and include muskets, musketoons, carbines, blunderbusses, fowling-pieces, &c.

GUNNEL, s. See GU'NWALE.

GUNNER, s. a person who manages, and has the charge of, the artillery of a ship, &c. Gunners, in the plural, are officers employed in looking after and managing the ordnance mounted on lines, batteries, or forts.

GUNNERY, s. the science or art of using cannons and mortars, in attacking and defending forts, ships, &c.

GUNPOWDER, s. an explosive composition of saltpetre, sulphur, and charcoal, in certain proportions, formed into grains of various degrees of fineness. It is fired by heat, or by a spark, burns with intense rapidity, evolving a very great volume of various kinds of gas, whence arises its expansive force.

GUNPOWDER PLOT, the name by which a scheme, formed by some young and rash Romanist gentlemen, at the beginning of the reign of James I. to blow up the king and both houses of parliament by powder placed in the vaults beneath the house, and which was betrayed and frustrated, is known.

GUNSHOT, s. the distance to which a ball can be shot out of a gun.

GUNSMITH, s. one who makes and sells guns.

GUNSTOCK, s. the wood to which the barrel of a gun is fixed.

GUNTER, EDMUND, a practical mathematician, whose inventions have proved of great value in the arts, arising from the application of mathematics. His scale, land-surveying chain, &c. &c. are still in use. He discovered the variation of the magnetic needle. He was Gresham professor of astronomy, and died in 1626, aged 45 years. See SLIDING SCALE, &c.

GU'NWALE, or GUNNEL OF A SHIP, that piece of timber which reaches on each side of the ship from the half deck to the fore-castle; this is called the Guncale, whether there be guns in the ship or not.

GURGE, s. [gurgus, Lat.] a whirlpool; a gulf.

GURGION, s. the coarser part of the meal sifted from the bran.

To GURGLE, v. n. [gorgogliare, Ital.] to make a murmuring sort of noise, like water poured out of a bottle, or a stream from a fountain.

GURNARD, GURNET, s. [gurnar, Fr.] in ichthyology, a kind of sea-fish.

To GUSH, v. n. [gostenen, Belg.] to flow or rush out in a large body; to flow out in a large quantity, and with violence.

GUSH, s. a sudden, forcible, and large flowing of water, or other fluid; any thing poured out with a sudden and forcible eruption.

GUSSET, s. [gousset, Fr.] any thing sewed on cloth to strengthen it; by sempstresses peculiarly applied to the triangular pieces of cloth at the neck, under the arms, and at the openings of the flaps of a shirt.

GUST, s. [gusto, Lat.] the sense of taste; the height of sensual enjoyment; love, or liking; turn of fancy; peculiar taste or genius; pleasure, caprice, or whim; a sudden violent blast of wind; a sudden burst of passion.

GUSTABLE, a. fit to be tasted; the object of taste; pleasant to the taste.

GUSTATION, s. the act of tasting.

GUSTAVUS, the name of four kings of Sweden. The first, commonly called Gustavus Vasa, delivered Sweden from the cruel tyranny of the king of Denmark, after a period of toil and peril, borne with rare courage, and enlivened by rarer romance in his escapes. He was sprung from the ancient line of kings, and was elected king by his grateful country. He died in 1560, aged 70 years, having reigned 33 years. The second, his grandson, was the heroic Gustavus Adolphus. His first exploits were the deliverance of Sweden from the king of Poland and the czar of Russia, who had invaded it, and the addition of some valuable territory to it. He then entered into the affairs of Europe, and crossed the Baltic to join the Protestants in their thirty years' struggle against Austria. He twice defeated Tilly, and in the second battle that great general lost his life. Gustavus fell in an attack on Wallenstein and the imperial forces, at Lützen, in which the Swedish troops had the manifest advantage, in 1632, aged 37 years, and having reigned 21. He was one of the true kings, whose names render their age illustrious, and whose appearance and deeds mark the epochs in the history of mankind. The third, was a good routine-monarch, who, to put down the aristocracy, encouraged the people, and was too successful; for he provoked a conspiracy against him, and was assassinated in 1792, aged 46 years, having reigned 21. His son, the fourth, was one of the weak obstinates, who are troublesome enough in private life. He was seized with a fierce anti-Napoleon mania, which rendered a revolution needful, and he, as Colonel Gustavson, and about £100 per annum, was sent out a wanderer in Europe. He died in 1837, aged 59; and he reigned, from his father's death till 1809, 17 years.

GUSTFUL, a. very agreeable or pleasant to the taste; agreeable to the mind.

GUSTO, s. [Ital.] the relish, flavour, or taste, which a thing causes; the power by which any thing excites a sensation in the palate. Liking or prejudice, applied to the mind.

GUSTY, a. windy; stormy.

To GUT, v. a. to take out the entrails of an animal. Figuratively, to strip or plunder any thing completely.

GUTS, s. [kuteln, Teut.] the entrails. Figuratively, gluttony; the inside of any thing, particularly the movements of a clock or watch.

GUTTA PERCHA, s. in the arts, a vegetable product imported from Borneo, greatly resembling caoutchouc, but having no essential oil in it. It is coloured and moulded (by being steeped in hot water to soften it) into any shape, and so models, imitations of carving, pannels for carriages, &c. &c. are made. Beside which it is made into driving-bands for machines, cables, mats, nets, ropes, boots and shoes, &c. It is not acted on by acids, fixed oils, grease, alkalies, nor water. And it never loses its elasticity, but recovers its original form when reimmersed in hot water.

GUTTA SERENA, s. [Lat.] in Ophthalmic Surgery, a disease of the nerves of the eye, producing total, and most usually incurable, blindness, without any defect being apparent.

GUTTATED, a. [gutta, Lat.] besprinkled with drops; be-dropped.

GUTTENBERG, the inventor of movable types in printing, was a partner of the famous Fust, at Mentz, and suffered great injury at his hands and his fellow-townsmen's; but he has had awarded to him the praise and fame his great invention merits, and so has gained a place amongst the highest of the benefactors of mankind. He died in 1468, aged 68 years.

GUTTER, s. [gutter, Lat.] a passage for water, either on the ground, or on the roofs of buildings.

To GUTTER, v. a. to cut or wear into small channels or hollows.

GUTTULOUS, a. [guttula, Lat.] in the form of a small drop. "In its guttulous descent," Brown.

GUTTURAL, s. [guttur, Lat.] pronounced in the throat, applied to some letters of the alphabet, as g, k, q. In Anatomy, belonging to the throat.

GUTTURALNESS, s. the quality of being sounded in, or belonging to, the throat.

GUTTY, GUTTE, a. [gutta, Lat.] in Heraldry, besprinkled with drops.

GUY, s. in a ship, is a rope used for keeping off things from bearing or falling against the ship's sides when they are hoisted in.

GUYON, MADAME DE LA MOTHE, a celebrated French quietist, or mystic religionist, whose life was a very disturbed one; being early widowed, she devoted herself to the practice and preaching of her highly-strained piety, and was more than once imprisoned by the royal order. Fenelon was her friend and director. Some of her hymns have been beautifully rendered into English by Cowper. She died in 1719, aged 71 years.

GUZERAAT, a province of Hindustan, lying on the Indian Ocean, and bounded by Cutch, Agimere, Malwa, Candish, and Dowlatabad. It consists of a wide plain, and a peninsula formed by the Gulfs of Cambay and Cutch, and a marshy tract lying between them inland. The peninsula is very hilly, but has some highly cultivated parts, which, like the plain of Guzerat, have a most fertile soil, are well watered, and yield abundantly all the best grain, cotton, &c. &c. Ahmedabad is the capital; Cambay is a port; and Diu, a Portuguese settlement. Ahmedabad has a population of about 150,000. Cambay has about 50,000. Other towns are similarly populated.

To GUZZLE, v. n. [from gust], to feed immoderately; to swallow any liquor greedily.

GUZZLER, s. an immoderate eater or drinker.

GYBING, s. the act of shifting any boom-sail from one side of the mast to the other.

GYMNASIUM, s. [gymnasium, Gr.] in Grecian Antiquity, a place fitted for performing exercises, both of the literal and athletic kind; a sort of school, wherein philosophers, rhetoricians, and the professors of all other sciences, read their lectures; and wrestlers, fencers, dancers, &c. exercised their various talents, for the diversion of the people. At the present time, the name given to a sort of high school, in which youths are prepared for universities.

GYMNASTIC, a. [gymnastikos, Gr.] something relating or belonging to bodily exercise, such as wrestling, &c.

GYMNASTICALLY, ad. athletically; fitly for strong exercise.

GYMNIC, a. [gymnikos, Gr.] practising such exercises as relate to the body.

GYMNOSPERMOUS, a. [gymnos and sperma, Gr.] having the seeds naked.

GYMNOTUS, s. in Natural History, the electrical eel, so called from its similarity in form to an eel, and its singular power of communicating at will a smart electrical shock to a short distance through the water: it stuns its prey so, and defends itself from attack. Professor Faraday has succeeded in obtaining a spark from this fish, and otherwise demonstrating the complete identity of its power with electricity.

GYNECOCRACY, s. [gune and kratos, Gr.] denotes the government of women, or the state where women are capable of the supreme command.

GYPSIE, s. in Botany, a plant with indented serrated leaves, whitish blossoms, and a four-cornered stem; called also water-horhound.

GYT'SUM, in Mineralogy, the name for the common sulphate of lime, or alabaster. Calcined, it is plaster of Paris, so much used in the arts. It has recently been applied to some soils as a manure, with great success.

GYRATION, s. [gyro, Lat.] the act of turning any thing about in a circle.

GYRE, s. a circle described by a thing going in an orbit.

TO GYVE, v. a. to fetter or shackle; to insnare.

GYVES, s. [gyeyn, Brit.] fetters or chains consisting of two links for the legs.

H

H, THE eighth letter in our alphabet, is pronounced by a strong expiration of the breath between the lips with the tongue nearly approaching the palate, as appears in uttering the words eat and heat, arm and harm, ear and hear, ell and hell. In English, it is occasionally mute in the beginning of a word, as in hour, hair; when it is followed by a consonant, it has no sound, as in eight; when it has before it, it is sometimes dropped, the h being pronounced hard, like a k, as in Christ, which the Saxons wrote Crist, and in echo; but this does not hold good always, for it is pronounced in charity, church, &c. With w, it has different sounds, as in who and which. Whenever it follows p, it is sounded together with it like an f, as Philip, &c. Among the ancients it was a numeral letter, signifying 200; and when with a mark over it thus h̄, 2000.

HA, interject. [Lat.] an instinctive expression of sudden wonder or surprise.

HAA'RLEM, a city of Holland, standing on the Spaaren, and strongly fortified. It has some fine old buildings, which attest its former wealth and splendour; and in the cathedral is the organ, which, till late years, was the most gigantic and wonderful instrument in the world. Its manufactures are yet of some worth, but they show poorly in this age of manufacturing enterprise. Near it is a large shallow sheet of water, called the Lake of Haarlem. It is about 10 miles from Amsterdam. Population, about 25,000. Lat. 52. 23. N. Long. 4. 36. E.

HABA'KKUK, a Jewish prophet, who lived contemporaneously with Jeremiah, or perhaps with the earlier part of his prophetic career. The book of Habakkuk's prophecies is very short, but of a very simple and exquisite construction. The prophet bewails the condition of the Jewish nation, and receives the assurance that deliverance shall be achieved at the fitting time. After another prayer, follows a highly poetical description of the appearance of God for the rescue of his people, concluding with the expression of profound trust in God on the part of the prophet. The story of Habakkuk's being carried to relieve Daniel when in the lions' den, in Babylon, contained in that portion of the Book of Daniel remanded to the Apocrypha, is completely apocryphal, being self-contradictory.

HAB'EAS CORPUS, s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ which a man may have out of the Queen's Bench, to remove himself thither at his own expense, to answer at the bar there, when indicted or imprisoned for a crime before justices of the peace, or a franchise court, after having offered sufficient bail, which is refused, though the case be bailable.

HAB'ERDASHER, s. one who sells small wares, such as pins, needles, &c.

HAB'ERDINE, s. a dried salt cod.

HAB'E'RGEON, (habérgeon) s. [habergeon, Fr.] armour to cover the neck and breast; a breast-plate; a neck-piece; a coat of mail.

HAB'LIMENT, s. [habilitment, Fr.] dress; clothes.

HAB'ILITATION, s. qualification.

HAB'IT, s. [habitus, Lat.] the state of any thing, as, "habit of body;" dress or clothes; a power and ability of doing any thing, acquired by frequent repetition of the same action; custom; inveterate use; or a strong inclination to perform any particular action.

TO HAB'IT, v. a. to dress or clothe.

HAB'ITABLE, a. [habito, Lat.] that is or may be dwelt in.

HAB'ITABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a place proper for the residence of any animal.

HAB'ITANT, s. a dweller in a place.

HABITATION, s. the act of dwelling in a place; a place wherein a person resides.

HABITUAL, a. [habitus, Fr.] customary; established by frequent practice and repetition.

HABITUALLY, ad. by custom; by habit or frequent practice. To HABITUATE, v. a. [habituor, Fr.] to accustom; to use oneself by frequent repetition.

HABITUDE, s. [habitus, Lat.] relation or respect; the state of a thing with regard to something else. Familiarity, converse, intimacy, followed by with. Custom, habit, or the frequent and uninterrupted practice of the same thing.

TO HACK, v. a. [hacan, Sax.] to cut or chop into small pieces by frequent and unskilful blows. Figuratively, to speak or pronounce improperly.

HACKER, FRANCIS, a distinguished officer in the parliament's army during the civil war of the 17th century, to whom was committed the ordering and attending to the execution of Charles I. During Cromwell's Scotch campaign he did good service in putting down the Moss-troopers. He maintained his republicanism through Cromwell's protectorate, attempted to raise a regiment in its behalf in the last year of the commonwealth, and fell in 1660, on the scaffold, as a regicide. He was one of the sternly resolute religious men of that day, whose doings are so strange in the eyes of most men now. A man of few words, and those not always pleasant; but of deeds not to be misinterpreted by any that at all enter into the spirit of his age.

HACKET, BISHOP, one of the English dignitaries during the troubled period of the 17th century. He was a good scholar, and a tolerably resolute churchman. During the commonwealth he got imprisoned; but was amply repaid by the see of Lichfield after the Restoration. He repaired the cathedral at his own expense, for it had been greatly damaged during the siege of that city by the parliament; and for this his piety he is, of some, had in everlasting remembrance. He died in 1670, aged 78 years.

HACKLE, s. raw silk, or any filmy or fibrous substance unsprung.

TO HACKLE, v. a. to dress flax.

HACKNEY, s. [hacknai, Brit.] a horse let out for hire; a two-horsed carriage, let on hire in the streets. Figuratively, any thing let for hire; one who writes for hire; any thing that is trite or used in common.

TO HACKNEY, v. a. to use a thing very frequently; to accustom to the road.

HACKNEY, Middlesex. One of the suburbs of the metropolis. Pop. 55,768. See LONDON.

HAD, the preter. and past part. of TO HAVE.

HADDINGTON, Haddingtonshire, or East Lothian, Scotland. It consists of four streets, which intersect each other at right angles. It is surrounded with the seats of the nobility and gentry, and there are the ruins of a magnificent church. It is seated on the river Tyne. It is 16 miles E. of Edinburgh. It is the county town; and here John Knox was born. Pop. 5452.

HADDINGTONSHIRE, or EAST LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth and the German Ocean, and bounded by the counties of Edinburgh and Berwick. It is about 25 miles long, and 15 miles broad. The land is in many places doubly productive, affording immense quantities of coal, while rich crops of corn are raised on its surface. The southern part of the county, comprehending the N. side of Lammermuir Hills, is very hilly. These high grounds, however, feed vast numbers of sheep. On the sea-coast are several harbours and fishing towns; salt is made in many places, and there are some other smaller manufactures. The only river is the Tyne. Pop. 35,886. It returns two members to parliament.

HADDOCK, s. [hadot, Fr.] in Natural History, a sea-fish of the cod kind, but smaller.

HADLEIGH, Suffolk. It is tolerably well built, and large quantities of yarn are still spun here for the Norwich manufacture; formerly it had a considerable woollen manufacture. It is seated on the river Preston. It is 64 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Saturday for corn, provisions, &c. Pop. 3670.

HADRIANUS, AELIUS, the successor of Trajan in the Roman empire. It was reported that he had been adopted by Trajan, and he proved himself a worthy follower of that great prince. He withdrew from the conquered territories of the last reign; and kept the empire to its old limits, the Rhine, the Danube, the Euphrates, &c. The Jewish insurrection under Barchochebas happened in this reign; and in consequence of this the name of Jerusalem was changed to Elia Capitolina, and the place thoroughly Romanized. Hadrian made a progress through his dominions, and endeavoured to maintain order and justice. He acted in most respects as well as he knew, and sought the welfare of the empire. During the latter part of his reign, age and illness made him cruel, but his adopted son mitigated this as far as he could. He died in 138, aged 62 years, and having reigned 21.

HÆMORRHAGE, s. [haima and rheo, Gr.] in Surgery and Medicine, a violent discharge of blood, from a ruptured or wounded vessel.

HÆMORRHOIDS, s. in Surgery, veins turgid with blood, forming tumours in the rectum, having ruptured its lining membrane: the piles or emoroids.

HÆMORRHOIDAL, a. belonging to the piles, or resembling that disease.

HAFIZ, MOHAMMED SCHEMSEDDIN, a celebrated Persian poet of the 14th century. His poems are lyrical, and in praise of love and wine; which being somewhat heterodox in the apprehension of the true believers, are expounded figuratively, or typically, to mean other things. The poet's life exceeded them literally enough. They have great poetic beauty and animation. He died in 1389. He may be tasted by means of Sir William Jones's and other English versions of some of his songs.

HAFT, s. [heft, Sax. heft, Belg.] a handle; that part of any instrument by which it is held in the hand.

HAG, s. [hajn, Brit.] a fury, or spirit of a deformed or terrible aspect; a witch or enchantress; an old ugly woman.

To HAG, v. a. to haunt; to torment; to possess or harass with vain terror; to bewitch.

HAGGAI, one of the latter Jewish prophets, who fulfilled his mission during the perplexed and discouraging events immediately following the return from the Babylonish captivity. His work was shared by Zechariah, and it seems they did not labour vain. The writings left by him are very brief, and consist of an impressive remonstrance with the people for being disheartened in their work of restoring the temple, and a glowing promise of the superior glory that was preparing for that house, above the one that had been destroyed. He flourished about 520 B.C.

HAGGARD, a. [Fr.] wild or irreclaimable; lean; rugged; ugly; wildly disordered.—s. in Falconry, a species of hawk.

HAGGARDLY, ad. deformedly; ugly; like a hag.

HAGGISS, s. a mess of meat, chopped small, enclosed in a membrane, and boiled.

HAGGISH, a. like a hag; deformed; horrid.

To HAGGLE, v. a. [corrupted from hack, or hackle.] to cut, chop, or mangle.—v. n. to be tedious in a bargain, or long before settling the price.

HAGGLER, s. one that mangles in cutting; one that is slow in bargaining.

HAGIOGRAPHIA, s. [agios and grapho, Gr.] a name given to a part of the books of the Old Testament, (viz. Ruth, Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Canticles, the Lamentations, and Daniel,) by the Jewish commentators.

HAGIOGRAPHER, (hagiografer), s. an inspired writer.

HAGUE, (Hägs), a town of Holland. It is not fortified, and is called a village, and yet it may compare with the handsomest towns or cities in Europe, with regard to its extent, the number and beauty of its palaces, its streets, its agreeable walks, and its great trade, especially in books. The greatest part of the houses have the appearance of palaces. It is seated three miles from the sea, and there is a pavement across the Downs, with trees on each side. The stadtholder, or governor of the country, generally resided here. It is the place where the states-general assemble, and here the foreign ministers are admitted to audience; and here also the supreme courts of justice are held. It is 30 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 52. 4. N. Long. 4. 10. E.

HÄHNEMANN, DR. SAMUEL, the originator of the homœopathic school of medicine. He was well instructed in all the customary elements of a liberal and medical education; and having completed his course of study, he practised in various parts of Germany. Being of an inquiring disposition, the empirical state of medical science could not but distress him; and from a happy thought respecting the effect of bark on a healthy subject, he gradually evolved his new system. He had to experience the usual fate of innovators and disturbers of vested ignorance, but he obtained in his native land, and in Paris, where medicine has always been most assiduously cultivated, many followers. Sober England, without knowing the principle of his scheme, has almost contemptuously rejected it, shocked, it appears, by the small quantities of drugs, &c. administered, according to its formulas. Hahnemann died in 1843, aged 85 years. See HOMŒOPATHY.

HAIL, s. [hagel, Sax.] drops of rain congealed into ice. These icy fragments are sometimes very large and irregularly formed, and sometimes they have a kernel of a different kind of ice. They are one of the atmospheric phenomena dependent on peculiar electrical action, by which the temperature of strata of air is rendered very strongly different.

To HAIL, v. n. to pour down hail.

HAIL, interj. [hoel, Sax.] a term of salutation, wherein we wish health to a person. It is used at present only in poetry.

To HAIL, v. a. [halel, Sax.] to salute; to call to, applied to the manner in which ships address each other.

HAILSHAM, Sussex. It is 58 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1586.

HAILSHOT, s. small shot scattered like hail.

HAILSTONE, s. a particle or single ball of hail.

HAILSTORM, s. a sharp shower of hail, such as frequently occurs in June and July, or during thunder-storms.

HAILY, a. consisting of hail.

HAINAN, an island lying on the S. of China, not 20 miles distant from it, forming the E. side to the Gulf of Tonquin. It is about 200 miles long, and 120 or more in breadth. It has lofty, forest-covered mountains in the central region, but nearer the shores are fertile plains and valleys. The grain, fruits, and other vegetable products of these parts are yielded copiously. Population, about 1,000,000. Its capital is Kung-cheou-fou.

HAINAUT, a province of Belgium, bounded by E. and W. Flanders, S. Brabant, and Namur. It is about 55 miles in length, and 48 in breadth. Its surface is tolerably level, and its chief rivers are the Scheldt, the Sambre, the Haine, &c. It is quite agricultural, and fairly productive. But it has manufactures also, and is rich in coal, freestone, &c. Population, about 600,000. Mons is the capital.

HAIR, s. [har, Sax.] in Physiology, the fine filamentary processes forming the external covering of almost all animals and plants. In animals the hairs are bulbous, and receive their colour from the oily fluid they draw from the skin. In plants, they are intimately connected with the cuticle, and are called lymphatic, or glandular, according to their structure. Figuratively, any space very small.

HAIRBEL, HAIRRELL, s. in Botany, a species of the hyacinthus, or scilla, of Linneus, very common in the woods and hedges of England, and flowers in May.

HAIRBREADTH, s. a very small breadth; the width of a hair.

HAIRCLOTH, s. stuff woven of horse-hair.

HAIRGRASS, s. in Botany, a genus of grasses, of which there are several species. They flower in July and August.

HAIRINESS, s. the state of being covered or overgrown with hair.

HAIRLACE, s. a fillet or band with which women tie up their hair.

HAIRLESS, a. without hair; bald.

HAIRMOSS, s. in Botany, the polychitrium, of which three are native in England.

HAIRY, a. overgrown or covered with hair; consisting of or resembling hair.

HAÏBERT, HAÏBERD, (haïbert) s. [halebarde, Fr.] a long pole armed at one end with a broad spearhead, carried by sergeants of foot.

HAÏLYON, (haïlyon) s. [Lat. from als and kuanos, Gr.] in Old Fable, the name of the kingfisher.

HAÏLYON, (haïlyon) a. peaceful; quiet; undisturbed; without tumult or violence. "His haïlyon days brought forth the arts of peace," Denham.

HALE, a. healthy, sound, or hearty; of a good or fresh complexion.

To HALE, (hault) v. a. [halen, Belg. haler, Fr.] to drag by force; to pull violently.

HALE, SIR MATTHEW, a very eminent English judge, of the 17th century. He studied the law in the best schools, and appears in the Assembly of Divines, whence it would seem that he had gained some distinction. He endeavoured to steer an even course through that difficult period, and acted as a judge under Cromwell, resorting to jesuitical subterfuge either then or subsequently to justify it. He accepted office and knighthood at the Restoration, and was finally chief justice of the King's Bench. He died in 1676, aged 76 years. He has always enjoyed a high reputation for his legal knowledge and for piety. His writings bear out the former; but his time-serving conduct, more than his superstition, casts a shade over the latter.

HALER, (halder) s. he who pulls or drags by force.

HALESWORTH, Suffolk. It is situated on a neck of land between two branches of the river Blyth, which is navigable from hence to Southwold for barges, that pass three or four times a week with corn, &c. for the London markets. It is 101 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2662.

HALF, (the l is often not sounded,) s. plural halves; [healf, Sax.] one of two parts into which a thing is equally divided. In Composition, it signifies imperfection.

HALF, ad. in part, or equally.

HALF-BLOOD, s. one who has but one parent the same with another person.

HALF-BLOODED, a. mean; cowardly; base-born.

HALF-MOON, s. the moon when at quadratures; any thing in the figure of a half-moon.

HALFORD, SIR HENRY, an eminent court physician to four of our monarchs. He owed his high standing as much to his professional knowledge as to his wealth and connexions. His tracts contain much that is valuable for medical students, and evince both reading and observation. He died in 1844, aged 78 years.

HALFPENNY, (hāpenny; plural halfpence, pronounced hāpenny) s. a copper coin, of which two make a penny.

HALF-PIKE, s. the small pike carried by officers.

HALF-SIGHTED, a. seeing imperfectly; having weak discernment.

HALF-SWORD, a. close fight; within half the length of a sword.

HALF-WAY, ad. in the middle.

HALF-WIT, s. a blockhead; one who vainly affects to be thought a wit; a silly fellow.

HALF-WITTED, a. of dull or imperfect understanding.

HALIBUT, s. in Cookery, a delicious sort of fish.

HALIFAX, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is seated on a branch of the river Calder, rendered navigable to the Air and Ouse. The principal manufactures are shalloons, tannies, droyes, kerseys, baizes, &c. The Piece Hall, or Market House, is a very elegant new structure of stone, in the form of an oblong square. The parish is very large, comprising several townships, having a population of 130,743. It is 197 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 19,881.

HALIFAX, the principal town and seat of government of Nova Scotia, N. America. It is seated on the W. side of Chebucto Bay, in a beautiful country, which is greatly improved of late years, and has the appearance of fertility and cultivation, but is subject to fogs. It has a large, safe, and commodious harbour, affording shelter to the largest fleets, and an excellent naval yard for repairing ships of war. The town is defended by an entrenchment and forts of timber. It is advantageously situated for the fishery. Lat. 44. 44. N. Long. 63. 30. W.

HALIMASS, s. the feast of All Souls.

HALITUOUS, a. [halitus, Lat.] vaporous; fumes.

HALL, (hault) s. [hal, Sax. halle, Belg.] a court of justice; a manor-house, so called, because formerly courts were held in it for tenants; the public room of a corporation; the entrance room of a house.

HALL, JOSEPH, bishop of Norwich in the beginning of the 17th century. He was an earnest-minded man and pious, but not in harmony with the church of his time; therefore it was his lot to be suspected equally by Laud and by the anti-pre-latists, who had too good reasons for distrusting bishops. He was one of the insane redactors of the famous protest against the validity of all measures passed in the compulsory absence of the bishops from the House of Lords, which marked him as the fair prize of the victorious party. He endured hard measure, as he said, at their hands. He died in 1656, aged 82 years. Several of his works have become very well known of late by cheap reprints; his Contemplations especially.

HALL, ROBERT, one of the most eloquent preachers England ever produced. He was a Baptist minister, and the son of a Baptist minister; and having studied at Bristol and Aberdeen, he successively occupied the post of minister at Bristol, Cambridge, Leicester, and Bristol again. He was a martyr to a most extraordinary calculus during the latter years of his life; and earlier, he was twice incapacitated for his labours by attacks of mental derangement. His scholarship was considerable; and he had all he knew under control, so that he was never at a loss for argument or illustration, either to confute or to vindicate, either in preaching or conversation. His power of expression was most complete, and a deep vein of humour might be discerned running through some of his most serious, as well as his more trivial sayings. His works have been collected and published in 6 vols. by Dr. Gregory. He died in 1831, aged 67 years.

HALL, CAPTAIN BASIL, a naval officer, who superadded to a very respectable professional reputation, that of an ingenious and acute observer, both in scientific subjects, and the more universally interesting subjects of men and manners; and an agreeable writer. It was his lot to visit many parts of the earth to which neither adventure nor commerce often take men; and what he saw, he has recorded in his various publications. He died in 1844, aged 56 years.

HALLE, a town of Prussia. It stands on the Saale. As a trading place it is known chiefly for its salt works. In the literary world it stands reputably, because of its university, which is subordinate to Wittenburg. And in the Christian world it has a distinguished place, as the cradle of the second German Reformation, and the seat of Francke's Orphan House. Its population is about 20,000. Lat. 51. 28. N. Long. 11. 58. E.

HALLELUJAH, (the j is pronounced like an i vowel, or y) s. [Heb.] a song of praise or thanksgiving; also, an exhortation signifying, in Praise we the Lord.

HALLER, ALBERT VON, an eminent Swiss physician of the last century. He was distinguished by extraordinary precocity in learning the classical languages; and studied medicine at Tubingen, Leyden, and Paris. He was for about 17 years professor of surgery, &c. at Göttingen, and afterwards returned to his native place, Berne, where he received the highest honour, and died in 1777, aged 69 years. The greatest service which he rendered to his science was in the department of physiology, which he first treated in the spirit of the Baconian philosophy. His writings are numerous, and some of them are yet of value.

HALLEY, EDMUND, a distinguished mathematician and astronomer of England, in the time of Newton. His life was most active and laborious, and his discoveries almost wholly made by observation, although he was so skilful a mathematician that he was intrusted by Newton with the publication of his immortal work. He observed and catalogued the stars of the S. hemisphere, at St. Helena; went as ambassador from the Royal Society to Dantzic to meet Helvetius; travelled through Europe; made a voyage as captain of a ship to observe the variation of the compass; surveyed the Dalmatian coast of the Gulf of Venice, for the emperor of Germany; and occupied successively the Savilian professor's chair at Oxford, and the post of astronomer royal. The discovery which made his name most famous, was the period of the great comet, which was seen last in 1835; other astronomical discoveries he made, but they were of a very refined and subtle kind, which were the first proofs of the correctness of Newton's theory of gravitation, the law of which Halley had guessed at before he knew the great astronomer. Beside these his inquiries were directed to the variation of the compass, the trade-winds, the barometer, the diving-bell, &c. &c. His works are numerous, and valuable in the history of astronomy. His character also deserved and received its share of praise. He died in 1742, aged 86 years.

HALLIARDS, s. a sea term for those ropes by which all the yards of a great ship are hoisted up, except the crossjack and the sprit-sail yard, which are always slung; but in small craft the sprit-sail yard has Haliards.

HALLOO, interject, a word of encouragement or enticement when dogs are let loose at their game.

To HALLOO, v. n. [haler, Fr.] to make a cry or noise after a person, alluding to that made after dogs; to chase or persecute with a noise; to call or shout to.

To HALLOW, (hallo) v. a. [halgian, Sax.] to consecrate, make holy, or dedicate to some religious use; to reverence and esteem as holy.

HALLUCINATION, s. [halluciner, Lat.] an error, blunder, or mistake, owing to folly.

HALLM, s. (hawn) straw; or the stalks of beans and peas.

HALLMOT, HALMOT, (hailmote, hailmote) s. an old law-term, signifying a court baron, or a meeting of the tenants of the same manor, in which differences between them are determined; it was likewise called Folkmete, or a meeting of the citizens in their common hall.

HALO, s. (halos, Gr.) a meteor in the form of a luminous or prismatic ring, appearing round the sun, moon, or stars; occasioned by the interposition of a light mist or cloud.

HALSTED, or HALSTEAD, Essex. It has a considerable manufacture of beys and seys. It is pleasantly situated on a rising ground near the river Colne. It is 46 miles from London. Market, Friday, noted for corn. Pop. 5710.

To HALT, (halt) v. n. [healtan, Sax.] to limp, or be lame; to stop in a march, applied to an army. To besitate; to be dubious which of two opinions to prefer.

HALT, (halt) a. [healte, Sax.] lame or crippled.

HALT, (halt) s. the act of limping, or the manner in which a person walks who is lame; a stop in a march.

HALTER, (halter) s. one who limps or is lame.

HALTER, (halter) s. [healtstre, Sax.] a rope, peculiarly applied to that which is put round a criminal's neck when he is to be hanged.

To HALTER, (halter) v. a. to bind with a strong cord; to catch in a noose, alluding to that made in a rope with which criminals are hanged.

HALTON, or HALTON, Cheshire. It is situated on a hill, near a navigable canal, which communicates with the inland navigations. It is 186 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1397.

HALTWHISTLE, Northumberland. It stands in a lofty situation, and has a small manufactory of baize. It is 315 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 4655.

To HALVE, v. a. [from half,] to divide into two equal parts.

HAM, s. [Sax.] the lowermost and hindmost part of the thigh, adjoining to the knee, in a human creature. In Cookery, the thigh of a hog or bear salted and dried. In the names of places, the syllable ham, whether initial or final, is the same as the Saxon hame, or home, a house, farm, or village.

HAMADRYADS, in Heathen Mythology, rural deities, or nymphs, who were supposed to be born and to die with particular trees, over whose growth, &c. they presided.

To HAMBLE, v. a. to hamstring, or cut the sinews of the thigh.

HAMBURG, the largest of the free cities of Germany. It is seated on the Elbe, and is strongly fortified. The chief part of the town resembles the Dutch towns in its style of building, &c., but the new part is laid out according to a more modern taste. The principal building is St. Michael's church, which is very fine. It abounds in institutions for charitable and educational purposes, and has a very superb library. Its trade is unlimited, and is confined to no region in the world. Its territory stretches from the Elbe to Denmark, and comprises some other spots detached from it, amongst which, the most important is Cuxhaven on the German Ocean. The harbour there and its own docks are very extensive. Public works are laid out on the ramparts, which add much to the appearance of the city. Its constitution resembles those of the Italian republics of the middle ages, where there was a quasi-aristocracy, above the mass of the citizens. The population of the town and territory is about 150,000. Lat. 53° 32'. N. Long. 9° 58'. E.

HAME, s. [hama, Sax.] the collar by which a horse draws in a waggon.

HAMILCAR, the greatest Carthaginian general before the rise of Hannibal, his son. When the war first broke out, he was enabled by his fleet to annoy the Romans by incessant incursions on all parts of their territories, but the building of the first Roman fleet put an end to that predatory kind of warfare, and a great defeat brought that war to an end. Hamilcar afterwards prosecuted the conquests of Carthage in Spain, and fell in battle there in 229 B. C.

HAMILTON, Lanarkshire, Scotland. It is a very pretty, neat town; and near it the Duke of Hamilton has a very magnificent palace and large park. It is seated on the river Clyde, and is about 30 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 10,862.

HAMILTON, a town of New York, United States, seated on the Chaugung river, where is a flourishing Baptist college. It is 335 miles from Washington. Pop. 3738. There are 18 other places in the States bearing this name.

HAMILTON, GAVIN, a Scottish historical painter of the last century. He painted a series of pictures illustrating the Iliad. He made excavations, and discovered many lost works of Roman and Grecian art in various parts of Italy, especially in the Tiburtine villa of Hadrian. Most of the best collections of ancient sculptures, as the Museo-Pio-Clementino at Rome, the Townley Gallery at the British Museum, and others in Russia, Germany, &c., owe some of their best specimens to his indefatigable labours. He died in 1797, from anxiety, when the French took possession of Rome.

HAMILTON, SIR WILLIAM, a distinguished naturalist and collector of Etruscan antiquities, owed his enjoyment of the favour of George III., perhaps, to his mother's having been the royal nurse. He was the English ambassador at Naples during the latter part of the last century, where he had abundant opportunity of prosecuting his favourite studies. He published his observations on that richly interesting and varied volcanic region: the British Museum contains his superb collection of Etruscan vases, &c. Other works and papers written by him evince considerable learning, taste, and observation. He died in 1803, aged 73. His name has obtained a lamentable notoriety by means of his second wife, the infamous Lady Hamilton, who so nearly obscured the lustre of Nelson's memory; who in the course of her life experienced every vicissitude which a beautiful but abandoned woman could know.

HAMILTON, PATRICK, the first Scotch reformer and martyr. He belonged to a noble family, and, attracted by some of Luther's writings, sought instruction in the new way from Luther himself. On his return to Scotland, he was made abbot of Ferne, and taught the doctrines of the Reformation; for which he was seized by Cardinal Beaton, and burnt to death in 1527, aged but 24 years.

HAMILTON, JAMES, DUKE OF, a Scotch nobleman, who, in the civil wars of the 17th century, played a distinguished part, and lost his life. His first appearance in any prominence was as attempting to prevent the junction of the Scotch and English anti-royalists; failing in which, he was imprisoned by Charles. The parliament released him, and he raised an army to attempt the rescue of the king from the Independents, but was utterly defeated at Preston, taken, retaken, and finally beheaded in 1649, aged 43 years. His brother William, who succeeded to his title, pursued a similar course, and fell at Worcester fight in 1651.

HAMILTON, ELIZABETH, a literary English lady, author of many works replete with good sense and information, whose Cottagers of Glenburnie has made her name widely known. She died in 1816, aged 58 years.

HAMILTON, ALEXANDER, a distinguished soldier and statesman of America during the war of Independence. He fought during the whole war, and was greatly trusted, though but a youth, by Washington. He afterwards practised as a barrister, became a member of congress, edited a paper, and was commander-in-chief on Washington's death. He fell in a duel with Colonel Burr, in 1804, aged 47 years.

HAMILTONIAN SYSTEM, s. a scheme for teaching the languages, invented by one James Hamilton of Dublin, useful for conversational and trivial purposes, but not further, there being no royal road to learning now, any more than in Edward VI.'s time. Interlinear translations are the chief part of the apparatus employed.

HAMLET, s. [diminutive of hame, Sax.] a little village.

HAMMER, s. [Sax.] an instrument consisting of an iron head and long handle, by which metals are forged, nails, &c. are driven.

TO HAMMER, v. a. to beat, forge, or drive with a hammer.

HAMMERER, s. one who works with a hammer.

HAMMERSMITH, Middlesex. It stands on the Thames, over which it has a suspension bridge, and is pretty large, and full of handsome houses. It is 5 miles from London. Population, 17,018.

HAMMOCK, s. [hamaca, Sax.] a swinging bed, suspended by cords fixed on hooks, used on board ship.

HAMMOND, HENRY, styled by the Oxford divines, Presbyter and Confessor, and regarded by that school as one of the firm maintainers of church principles in England. He obtained preferment before the civil war, and fell into the hands of the parliament, who imprisoned him in the year before Charles's execution. Being soon liberated, as not very dangerous, he spent the rest of his life in theological and polemical authorship, and died shortly before the Restoration, in 1660, aged 55 years. His Commentaries are his chief work, and they show the elaborate and learned jejune-ness of one who placed all his confidence in the forms of his faith and ecclesiastical regimen.

HAMPDEN, JOHN, one of the greatest patriots of English story, the cousin of Oliver Cromwell, the first open opponent of Charles I.'s arbitrary rule, and the most illustrious martyr of the war of liberty. He was a Buckinghamshire gentleman, well educated, and sat in all Charles's parliaments. He sided with Pym and the patriot party; and when ship-money was levied, refused payment, for which he was tried, and though defeated, the stir occasioned prevented the repetition of those unjust and illegal imposts. He was once imprisoned by Charles, in breach of his parliamentary privilege; and was one of the five members, to seize whom the infuriated king violated all parliamentary privileges at once. He entered most heartily into the parliament's cause at the outbreak of the war, and concurred in Cromwell's great plans respecting its conduct. But he lived not to see the vision realized, being killed in a skirmish on Chalgrove Field, near the spot where he set his banner of revolt against the royal tyranny, in 1643, aged 49 years. His early removal from the deadly strife has secured for him a fairer estimation at the hands of those who have recorded the history of the struggle, than they have received on whom rested the severer burden of prosecuting to the consummation the objects which Hampden, equally with them, devoted his life to. He was of a beautiful and noble spirit, but his constitutional theories would have little fitted him to share or sympathize with the original part his great cousin had to play in the later period of the Puritan revolution.

HAMPER, s. a large covered wicker basket, used for carriage.

TO HAMPER, v. a. to entangle, or to embarrass, so as to hinder from flight, or the use of one's limbs or faculties; to insnare, to inveigle; to catch by means of some allurements; to perplex or harass with a variety of accusations or law-suits.

HAMPSHIRE, HANTS, or SOUTHAMPTON, a county of England, lying on the English Channel, bounded by Dorsetshire, Wilts, Berks, Surrey, and Sussex. It extends, exclusively of the Isle of Wight, 42 miles in length, and 38 in breadth. It is divided into 39 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 20 market towns, 253 parishes, and 1062 villages. It is one of the most fertile counties in England. The range of Chalk downs runs through the N. part of the county. Its products are the finest corn and hops, very large flocks of cattle and sheep, with excellent wool, bacon, honey, and timber. For the last it has been particularly famous, on account of its great woods, of which the principal are the New Forest, and the Forest of East Bere. The principal rivers are the Avon, the Test or Tese, the Itchen, and the Stour. The Isle of Wight is included in its boundaries (which see). Opposite to the island are Portsmouth and Southampton harbours. It has good fisheries, and some small manufactures. Winchester is the county town. Pop. 355,004. It returns 19 members to parliament.

HAMPSTEAD, Middlesex. It is seated on the declivity of a hill, on the top of which is a fine heath, reaching about a mile every way, adorned with several pretty villas, and affording an extensive prospect of the metropolis, and the country all round it, as far as Shooter's Hill, Banstead Downs, Windsor Castle, &c. It is 4 miles from London. Pop. 10,093.

HAMPTON-COURT, Middlesex. Here is a royal palace, built by Cardinal Wolsey, who gave it to Henry VIII. It contains many magnificent paintings, &c., and amongst them the famous Cartoons of Raphael. The buildings, gardens, and parks are about four miles in circumference, and watered on three sides by the Thames, over which there is a bridge to Kingston. It is seated on the N. side of the Thames, 13 miles from London. Pop. 4711.

HAMSTER, s. in Zoology, a kind of rat, which is furnished with remarkable pouches in its cheeks, and constructs a granary in which it lays up its food, not for winter, but for the latter part of autumn, and the beginning of spring. It is an inhabitant of Germany.

HAMSTRING, s. the tendon or sinew of the ham or thigh. To HAMSTRING, v. a. preter. and past part. hamstrung: to lame by cutting the tendon of the ham.

HANAPER, s. [hanaperium, low Lat.] a treasury; the exchequer. The clerk of the hanaper receives the fees due to the king for sealing the charters and patents.

HANCCES, s. in a ship, the falls of the five-rails, placed on bannisters in the poop and quarter-deck, down to the gangway. In Architecture, the end of elliptical arches, which are arches of smaller circles than the scheme, or middle part of the arch.

HAND, s. [hand, hond, Sax. Belg. and Teut.] that part of the arm from the wrist to the end of the fingers; a measure of four inches, used in measuring the height of horses; part, quarter, side; rate, price; care, necessity of managing; method of government, discipline, restraint; an actor, workman, or soldier; the index of a clock, or that which performs the office of a hand or figure in pointing to a particular thing. Out of hand, quick, sudden, or expeditious performance. Figuratively, power of performing. Manner of acting or performing, particularly applied to music. To have a hand in, to be concerned in. At hand, within reach; ready prepared; near. In Writing, a peculiar cut or cast of the letters, which distinguishes one person's writing from another; a person's own writing, or singing. "Under my hand and seal." In Gaming, cards held after a deal. From hand to hand, from one to another successively. Hand over head, negligently; rashly; without thought or caution. From hand to mouth, without making any provision against a necessity. To bear in hand, to keep in expectation. To be hand and glove, to be very intimate and familiar. Hands off, is a phrase implying forbear.

TO HAND, v. a. to give or reach to another by the hand. Figuratively, to guide; to conduct or lend by the hand; to seize; to lay hands on; to manage with the hand; to deliver from one to another; to transmit, or deliver down in succession.

HAND, is used in composition for that which is manageable by the hand, as a hand-saw; or borne in the hand, as a hand-basket.

HANDBARROW, s. a frame on which any thing is carried by the hands of two men without wheeling on the ground.

HANDBREADTH, (handbreith) s. a space equal to the breadth of a hand.

HANDED, a. having the use of either the left or right hand; hand in hand; with hands joined.

HANDEL, GEORGE FREDERIC, the great musical composer of the former part of the last century. He was by birth a German, and received his musical training at Halle, his native place, and at Berlin. At Hamburg he made his debut, producing his opera of Almira. Soon after this he visited Italy, where he stayed for six years, producing from time to time, at different places, operas, &c. &c. The elector of Hanover next endeavoured to secure the services of this unparalleled genius, but the attractions of England prevented it; on his accession to the English throne, however, as George I., he found Handel amongst his new subjects, and received him to favour. He now was engaged in some of his most brilliant pieces, when a strange quarrel arose, in which he found that he had the English nobility for his opponents, and mortifications and losses multiplied. He visited Ireland, and on his return to England, set out at once on the most triumphant part of his career. He had introduced a new style of sacred music, called Oratorios, before his hejira to Dublin, but it was not heeded; now the people had recovered themselves, and taking the matter out of the hands of the aristocracy, they more than compensated for their coldness to the mighty master. After some years of blindness, he died in 1759, aged 75 years. It is needless to characterize Handel's

Scale of English Miles

REFERENCE

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

to the

Hampshire &amp; Dorset

music, since now the world has consented to his being placed highest on the lists of those inspired by genuine musical genius, and few have failed to hear his Messiah, which as it is the greatest of his works altogether, so it seems to exemplify all the varied forms of his greatness and power.

HANDER, s. one who delivers down in a regular succession, used with down.

HANDFUL, s. as much as the hand can grasp or hold; a handbreadth, or four inches; a small number or quantity.

HAND-GALLOP, s. a slow easy gallop, in which the hand presses the bridle, to prevent increase of speed.

HANDGLASS, s. in Gardening, a portable glass frame, used in raising cuttings and striking new plants.

HAND-GUN, s. a gun wielded by the hand.

HANDICRAFT, s. work performed by the hand.

HANDICRAFTSMAN, s. one whose work or business is performed by the hand.

HANDILY, ad. in a skilful, dexterous, or ready manner.

HANDINESS, s. the quality of doing any thing in a skilful or dexterous manner.

HANDIWORK, s. work of the hand; product of labour.

HANDKERCHIEF, (pron. without the d), s. a piece of silk or linen, used for wiping the face or nose, or for covering the neck.

HANDLE, v. a. [handelen, Belg.] to touch, feel, or hold in the hand; to manage or use. Figuratively, to treat of, or enlarge upon, applied to discourse. To deal in, or practise; to deal with.

HANDLE, s. [handle, Sax.] that part of a thing by which it is held in the hand. Figuratively, any thing which may discover a person's weakness, and be made use of by an enemy to his disadvantage.

HANDMAID, s. a maid who is in waiting, or within call; a waiting-maid.

HANDMILL, s. a mill moved by the hand.

HANDSAILS, s. sails managed by the hand.

HANDSAW, s. a saw manageable by the hand.

HANSELS, s. [hansel, Belg.] the first act of using any thing; the first parcel which is sold of any commodity.

To HANSEL, v. a. to use or do any thing for the first time.

HANDSOME, a. [handsaem, Belg.] beautiful with dignity; graceful. Elegant, applied to a person's manners or behaviour.

Generous or noble, applied to the quality of action. Figuratively, ready; convenient; ample; liberal.

HANDSOMELY, ad. conveniently, or dexterously; in a beautiful, neat, elegant, graceful, or generous manner.

HANDSOMENESS, s. beauty or pleasing majesty, applied to the features. Grace, applied to the behaviour. Elegance or neatness, applied to the manner in which any thing is wrought.

HANDSPIKE, s. a sort of wooden lever, for moving heavy bodies.

HANDVICE, s. a vice to hold small work in.

HANDWRITING, s. a cast or form of writing peculiar to each hand.

HANDY, a. performing or giving with the hand; ready, dexterous, or skilful; convenient for use.

To HANG, v. a. preter. and past part. hanged, or hung [hangan, Sax.] to suspend on high by something fastened to the upper part; to suspend or keep in the air without falling; to suspend by the neck in a rope so as to kill a person; to let fall downwards from any eminence, or below its natural situation, sometimes used with down. "White lilies hang their heads," Dryd. To adorn, by hanging any thing upon or over, followed by with. "Hang several parts of his house with trophies," Spect.—v. n. to fall loosely; to be suspended on high with the lower part loose; to dangle; to float; to proceed from. "That gentle tongue—where soft persuasion hung," Prior. To be supported by something raised above the ground; to lean upon. "Hang about my neck," Shak. Used with over, to threaten; to be very near, applied to danger. "While the dread of Popery hung over us," Atterb. To be burdensome or troublesome; to oppress with weight, used with upon. "In my Lucia's absence—life hangs upon me," Addis. To be compacted; to be united; to be of the same party; to support one another mutually; to be in suspense. To be dependent on, used with on. "Hangs on princes' favours," Shak.

HANGER, s. that by which any thing is supported in the air, or at a distance from the ground; a kind of short sword with a single edge.

HANGER-ON, s. one who is dependent on another; one who lives at another person's charge.

HANGING, s. drapery, stuffs, or paper, hung or fastened upon the walls of a house by way of ornament.

HANGING, s. the act or punishment of putting to death by a halter.

HANGMAN, s. the person who puts criminals to death, by hanging them on the gallows.

HANK, s. [isl] a skein of thread, &c. Figuratively, a tie, check, or influence.

To HANKER, v. n. [hankeren, Belg.] to long impatiently for; to have an incessant wish for.

HANNIBAL, the great Carthaginian general, one of the greatest military commanders of ancient history. He was the son of the defeated general in the first war of Carthage against Rome, and was sworn in his boyhood to deadly hostility against the rival city. He was in his father's army in Spain at the time of his death, and after awhile rose to the supreme command. When the renewal of the war was determined, Hannibal led his army from Spain across the S. of Gaul and crossed the Alps, met the Roman army in the plains around the Po, and defeated it in two great battles. Marching southerly, he continued his victories, and was only harassed by the tactics of Fabius the Lingerer; at length, at Canne, he totally routed the largest army Rome had ever sent into the field, and with tremendous slaughter. Now came the reverse; gradually, step by step, he found that he had not the prestige of victory with him; he was suddenly recalled to protect Carthage, whither, with consummate skill, Rome had transferred the seat of war,—recalled, to be totally routed at Zama. This ended the second war. Hannibal found a powerful party league against him in his own senate, and had his plans for future operations against Rome betrayed by them, so that he had to flee to the ally he had been endeavouring to gain, Antiochus of Syria. Losing this last hope, by the war with Rome which followed, he found shelter at the court of the king of Bithynia, who, at the demand of Rome, consented to surrender him, as if he were a prisoner. Hannibal, to escape ignominy, poisoned himself, in 183 B. C., aged 64 years. The examination of the plan of his campaigns, when the character of his forces and the kind of weapons in use are taken into account, will impress on the mind a conviction of the greatness of his military genius, as deeply as the study of those campaigns of Napoleon, in which he pursued the steps and fought in the fields of Hannibal, does. He was worthy a different end. But his very misfortunes seem to help the record of his genius and valour from fading from the memory of man.

HANOVER, a kingdom of Germany, Europe, lying on the German Ocean, bounded by Holland, Prussia, Lippe-Detmold, Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick, Mecklenburg, Denmark, and Hanburg. The Hartz mountains are the loftiest range in Hanover, some points being 3500 feet high. The N. parts of the state are comparatively level. It has coal, iron, building-stones, &c. &c. Timber is abundant. Agriculture and grazing are in a flourishing condition. It exports both cattle and grain, and its linen manufactures, though not in large quantities. Its rivers are the Elbe, which forms its N. E. boundary, the Weser, the Ems, &c. It was formerly connected with the English crown, but as it could not receive a female sovereign, it was separated at the demise of William IV. Its population is about 2,000,000. Hanover, its capital, stands on the Leina, and in the newer parts is a handsomely built town. It contains the palace and government buildings, 3 hospitals, &c. &c. Here, too, is an excellent library. It has some valuable manufactures of lace, stuffs, ribbons, &c., and some large tanneries and breweries. It has some fine ornaments, and delightful pleasure-grounds. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 52. 22. N. Long. 9. 42. E.

HANSE TOWNS, or HANSEATIC LEAGUE, a confederacy formed during the middle ages, by about 80 cities, famous for their commerce, in different countries of Europe. Lübeck was the place where the meetings for arranging the business of the League were held. The importance of such a confederation cannot be estimated, unless the state of society and the relations between the different nations of Europe in those days is considered. And when it is perceived, the effect of the changes introduced into the commerce of Europe, by the discovery of America, and the Cape of Good Hope, on the League, will not appear so strange. At the beginning of the 17th century it had quite disappeared, being no longer needed in the world.

HAP, s. [anhap, Brit.] chance; fortune; or that which comes to pass without design or being foreseen.

To HAP, v. n. to fall out; to come to pass without design or foresight.

HAP-HAZARD, s. chance; accident.

HAPAE. See FRIENDLY ISLANDS.

HAPLESS, a. unhappy; unlucky; unfortunate.

HAPPLY, ad. perhaps; peradventure; it may be; by chance, or mere accident.

HAPSBURG, HOUSE OF, the name of one of the imperial dynasties of Germany, which held the throne from 1273 to 1437; and named from the first of the series, Rudolf of Hapsburg, a prince whose possessions lay in Switzerland and on the Upper Rhine, who was elected after the empire had been for 23 years without a head.

To HAPPEN, v. n. to fall out; to come to pass without being designed or foreseen; to light upon or meet with by chance, or mere accident, exclusive of any design.

HAPPILY, ad. in a fortunate, happy, or lucky manner; with address, dexterity, or grace; without labour; in a state of happiness. By chance; by accident; used instead of happily.

HAPPINESS, s. a state wherein a person has all his wishes satisfied, and is sensible of the highest pleasures; good luck or fortune.

HAPPY, a. in a state where the desires and wishes are satisfied, and the greatest pleasures are enjoyed; lucky; successful; ready; or disposed by nature, without art or study.

HAQUETON, s. a coat of mail.

HARANGUE, (haráng) s. a speech; a discourse or oration delivered in public.

To HARANGUE, (haráng) v. n. [haranguer, Fr.] to make a speech, or pronounce an oration.—v. a. to address by an oration, as, "he harangued the troops."

HARANGUER, (haráng) s. an orator; a person who pronounces a set speech; a word conveying some idea of contempt.

HARBINGER, s. [herbinger, Belg.] a person who prepares the way, or gives notice of the coming of one that follows; a precursor, or forerunner. Figuratively, a sign or omen of something to come.

HARBOROUGH, MARKET, Leicestershire. It has some manufactures of tanneries and lastings. It is 83 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 2433.

HARBOUR, v. a. [herberg, Belg.] a lodging or place of entertainment and rest; a port, or station wherein ships are sheltered from storms. Figuratively, an asylum, or place of shelter and security from danger.

To HARBOUR, v. a. to entertain or permit a person to reside. Figuratively, to cherish, favour, or entertain an opinion; to shelter, rest, or secure from danger.

HARBOURER, s. one who entertains another.

HARBOURLESS, a. without harbour, lodging, entertainment, or shelter.

HARD, a. [hard, Sax. hard, Belg.] firm, or not easily penetrated. Figuratively, difficult to be understood; not easy to be accomplished; painful, or dangerous. Rigorous, cruel, or oppressive, applied to the manner of treatment. Unfavourable; unkind; unhappy; vexatious; forced; powerful; harsh; stiff. Hard words, sour; rough; reproachful. Insensible; untouched, or not to be affected. "Know I am not so stupid, or so hard." Very vehement, keen, and inclement, applied to the season. Unreasonable and unjust. Dear, or in which a person cannot easily acquire a competency, applied to the times.

HARD, ad. [hardo, old Teut.] close; near; diligently; laboriously; earnestly; uneasily; vexatiously. Fast or nimble, applied to motion; or with difficulty. Tempestuously; boisterously; with force or violence, applied to the wind.

HARDBOUND, a. costive, applied to the habit of body. Unfertile or barren, applied to the invention.

To HARDEN, v. n. to grow hard or solid.—v. a. to make hard; to make impudent; to make obdurate; to make insensible; to make firm, or endure with constancy; to make resolute by the incessant practice of any particular action.

HARDENER, s. one that renders any thing hard, or not easily penetrated.

HARDFAVOURED, a. having a coarseness or harshness of features.

HARDGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, found on the sea-coast.

HARDHANDED, a. coarse; mechanic; that has hands hard with labour.

HARDHEAD, s. clash of heads; manner of fighting in which the combatants dash their heads together.

HARDHEARTED, (hard-hárted) a. cruel; inexorable; merciless.

HARDHEARTEDNESS, s. the quality of being insensible to the cries of misery, and unmoved at the sight of wretchedness.

HARDICANUTE, the third Anglo-Danish monarch of England, being son of Canute, and half brother of Harold Harefoot; with whom he disputed the possession of the crown for some time, and whom he succeeded. The only things preserved respecting him are, that he taxed England, as if it were a conquered country; and that he was such a glutton and drunkard, that he (to his subjects' great joy) died of apoplexy, in 1042, having reigned but 2 years.

HARDINESS, s. [hardesse, Fr.] hardihood, or fatigue; courage, or disposition of mind insensible to danger; effrontery; impudence.

HARDLY, ad. with difficulty and great labour; scarcely. "There is hardly a gentleman," Swift. Used with think, in a severe or unfavourable manner. "To think hardly of our laws," Hooker.

Applied to manner of treatment, with rigour, oppression, severity, or harshness. "Hardly lodged" Dryden.

HARDMOUTHED, a. not easily governed by the rein, applied to horses.

HARDNESS, s. applied to matter, a firm cohesion of the parts, so that the whole does not easily change its figure. Difficulty to be understood. Difficulty to be performed or accomplished.

Scarcity or dearthness, joined to times. Obduracy; profligacy.

Harshness of look. Cruelty; inhumanity; want of compassion. Keenness or sharpness, applied to weather or frost.

Stinginess, or want of profit, applied to the making of bargains. In Painting and Sculpture, stiffness, or harshness, in design, or workmanship.

HARDOUIN JOHN, a French Jesuit, who has obtained an imperishable renown by one of the most courageous and preposterous follies which a man of any scholarship could commit. He maintained in good earnest, that the classic authors were all forgeries of the 13th century. An opinion not more baseless than a similar one maintained respecting the Sacred Writings; but which, appealing less to the passions of men, meets with its doom of ridicule more speedily. He died in 1729, aged 82 years.

HARDS, s. [heorðan, Sax.] the refuse or coarser parts of flax.

HARDSHIP, s. oppression; injury; inconvenience; fatigue.

HARDWARE, s. manufactures or wares made of metal.

HARDWAREMAN, s. a maker or seller of wares made of metal.

HARDWICKE, PHILIP YORKE, EARL OF, the first of the same name and title, was an eminent English lawyer, who was successively solicitor-general, attorney-general, chief justice of the King's Bench, and lord chancellor, which last office he held for 20 years, and in which he gained his name. He died in 1764, aged 74 years.

HARDY, a. [hardi, Fr.] bold; brave; strong; daring; hard, or firm.

HARE, s. [hara, Sax.] in Natural History, an animal of the rodent class, a native of Britain, too well known to need description. It is one included in the term game, and is hunted and coured, as well as shot. A young hare is called a leveret.

To HARE, v. a. [harier, Fr.] to frighten; to perplex or throw into confusion by hurrying or terrifying.

HAREBELL, s. See HARBELL.

HAREBRAINED, a. wild; irregular; inconstant.

HARELIP, s. [because resembling the upper lip of a hare,] a defect in the upper lip for want of flesh, which makes it appear as if cut, and shows the teeth.

HARESBURY, in old records called HEYTSBURY, and now written HATCHBURY, Wilts. It has a large woollen manufacture. It was once the residence of the Empress Maude, and is situated on the Willey. It is 93 miles from London. Pop. 1311.

HARESTONG, s. in Botany, a plant, called also hog's fen-nel and sulphur-wort.

HARLOT, s. See HERIOT.

To HARK, v. n. to listen, or be attentive to what a person says. HARK! interject, list, or listen; be attentive to hear; used on a sudden apprehension of danger, &c.

HARL, s. [theoria, Sax.] the filaments or threads of flax; any substance consisting of threads or filaments.

HARLECH, Merionethshire, Wales. It is naturally strong, being seated on a rock, on the sea-shore. It is chiefly remarkable for its castle, built by Edward I., which is still almost entire. Near it is a cataract of the Rhais Du, which rushes down a mountain, for above 100 yards, and then forms a cascade, part of an elliptical curve, to a pool 40 feet below. It is 223 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. of Llandanwg, its parish, 746.

HARLEQUIN, s. a person dressed in a motley-coloured jacket and trowsers; the hero in pantomime entertainments, who diverts the populace by his activity, artifices to extricate himself from danger, and his seeming power in enchantments and metamorphoses.

HARLEY, ROBERT, EARL OF OXFORD, one of the statesmen of England of the beginning of the last century; who, by aid of the famous Mrs. Masham, mounted the topmost round of ambition's ladder, whence he fell, when the favourite directed her royal mistress's regards to Bolingbroke, Harley's rival. On the accession of George I. his coquettish with the exiled Stuarts procured him an imprisonment and a trial; but he was acquitted. He accumulated the valuable library and the MSS. which now are deposited in the British Museum. He died in 1724, aged 63 years.

HARLING, EAST, Norfolk. It is seated on a rivulet between Thetford and Buckingham. It is 88 miles from London. Market, Thursday, chiefly for linen yarn and linen cloth. Pop. 1062.

HARLOT, s. [herlodes, Brit.] a female that is unchaste.

HARLOTRY, s. an habitual practice of unchasteness, applied to a woman.

HARLOW, Essex. It is chiefly noted for its annual fair, on a common, about 2 miles from the town, much frequented for horses, hogs, and cows, on Sept. 9. It is called Harlow Dush fair. It has another fair on Nov. 8. Harlow is situated on the W. side of the Rodings. It is 24 miles from London. Pop. 2315.

HARM, s. [harm, Sax.] an action by which another person may receive damage in his goods, or hurt in his person; mischief; hurt; or injury. SYNON. Harm particularly relates to any ill done a man's person or character, and is inferior in degree to hurt, which includes a great degree of harm. Mischief implies ill done either to person or property with an evil intent; injury, a degree of hurt without justice, and refers either to character or property. Detriment includes an idea of loss, and is seldom used but when speaking of property.

To HARM, v. a. to damage the goods or fortune of another, or to hurt his person.

HARMATTAN, s. the name of a remarkable periodical wind, which blows from the interior parts of Africa towards the Atlantic ocean. It is attended with fog, extreme dryness, and yet great salubrity.

HARNER, THOMAS, a laborious writer, on theological and similar subjects, of the last century. He was the Independent minister of Wattisfield, Suffolk; and the principal work that he printed was Illustrations of the Bible from relations of Oriental travellers; which is a book of some value yet. His most interesting and singular collections are yet in MS. He died in 1788, aged 73 years.

HARMFUL, a. hurtful; injurious; detrimental; mischievous. HARMFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to produce mischief, hurt, or damage.

HARMFULNESS, s. the quality which renders a thing or person detrimental to the interest, hurtful to the person, or injurious to the character, of another.

HARMLESS, a. without hurt; without injuring or causing any mischief; without being damaged; innocent.

HARMLESSLY, ad. innocently; without malice or crime.

HARMLESSNESS, s. the quality of a thing or person which can affect another with no damage or hurt.

HARMONIC, HARMONICAL, a. [harmonikos, Gr.] proportioned, or adapted to each other; musical. Harmonical proportion, in Arithmetic and Geometry, is when in any three numbers or lines, the first is to the third, as the difference between the first and second is to the difference between the second and third.

HARMONICA, s. a musical instrument formed of glasses, filled with water according to the tone to be produced.

HARMONICS, s. the theory of musical sounds emitted by stretched strings. Those notes which are produced by an unkeyed instrument, by altering the force of the blast, and so the rapidity of the vibrations; all of which bear an harmonical relation to the simplest sound produced by it.

HARMONIOUS, a. [harmonios, Fr.] adapted to, or having the parts proportioned to, each other. In Music, having sounds that are consons to each other; musical, or affecting the ear with an agreeable sensation.

HARMONIOUSLY, ad. with a just proportion of parts to each other; in such a manner as to delight the ear.

HARMONIOUSNESS, s. that quality which renders sounds agreeable and delightful; proportion of parts.

To HARMONIZE, v. a. to agree with respect to proportion. To make musical, or convey delight to the ear, applied to sound.

HARMONY, s. [harmonia, from harmozo, Gr.] In Music, is the agreeable union of several musical sounds heard at one and the same time. Also, that part of the score of a vocal piece which does not contain the air, or melody. Figuratively, an agreement, suitableness, union, conformity, &c. In Literature, it is a certain agreement between the several parts of a discourse. In Architecture, an agreeable relation between the parts of a building. In Painting, in the composition of a picture, it signifies the union or connexion between the figures, with respect to the subject of the piece; in the colours, it denotes the union or agreeable mixture of different colours.

HARNESS, s. [harnois, Fr.] in its primary sense, armour for a horse; the traces by which horses are fastened to carriages of pleasure or state; that of other horses is called gear.

To HARNESS, v. a. to dress in armour; to fix horses in their traces; or to put traces on a horse.

HAROLD I. [Harfotok], the son and successor of Canute the Great on the English throne. He seems to have been a mere puppet in the hands of Earl Godwin, and so deserves neither the praise nor the censure bestowed on him. He died in 1039, having reigned thus above 3 years.

HAROLD II. the son of the famous Earl Godwin, and successor of Edward the Confessor, who being the last of the Anglo-Saxon monarchs of England, has had the benefit of all the sorrow and regret of those who mourned the conquest of the Normans. Harold shared his father's plans, and glory; but after his death, he seems to have been faithful to Edward, but without compromising himself. Either by accident, or with a message from Edward, he was once at the court of Duke William of Normandy, and there (as William was next in hereditary succession) swore fealty to him. On Edward's death, Harold ascended the throne, pleading the king's last wish. His first opponent was his brother Tostig, who came with Harold Harfager from Norway to get back his earldom of Northumbria. Him Harold utterly defeated, but was summoned from the field of victory to oppose Duke William, who had landed at Hastings, with every sign of the deadliest determination. As soon as he could march to the S., he, after fruitless embassages, joined battle with him, and fell, with his brothers, and his kingdom, in 1066, not having reigned a year. It was said, and by some believed, that he escaped the slaughter, and that another was buried by his name in Waltham Abbey, while he, a lone hermit, lived to bewail his own sins and his kingdom's sorrow, till Henry I.'s reign.

HAROUN ALRASCHID, the famous caliph of Bagdad, who figures as prominently in Eastern story as Arthur and Alfred do in ours, and Charlemagne in Frankish legend. He was a very powerful prince, and ruled from Egypt to Khorassan, and exchanged courtesies by ambassadors with Charlemagne, encouraging learning and the arts; but, as most monarchs of that class are, was cruel and oppressive, where he had the whim to be so. He died in 808, having reigned 22 years.

HARP, s. [harp, Sax.] a musical instrument strung with wire and struck with the finger. In Astronomy, the name of a constellation in the N. hemisphere.

To HARP, v. n. [harper, Fr.] to play on the harp. Figuratively, to touch any particular passion; to dwell on a subject.

HARPER, s. a player on the harp.

HARPOON, s. [harpago, Lat.] a bearded dart, with a line fastened to the handle, with which whales or other large fish are caught.

HARPOONEER, s. [harponneur, Fr.] he that darts or throws the harpoon in whale fishing.

HARPINGS, s. in a ship, properly denote the breadth at the bow. Some also give the same name to the ends of the bends that are fastened into the stern.

HARPSICHOORD, s. a musical instrument of the stringed kind, played by keys, after the manner of the pianoforte, which has superseded it.

HARPY, s. plural harpies [harpia, Lat.] a poetical monster of the bird kind, feigned to have had the face of a woman, the claws, wings, &c. of a bird, remarkable for rapaciousness, and on that account used to signify a ravenous or exceedingly covetous person.

HARQUEBUSS, s. a hand-gun. See ARQUEBUSE.

HARQUEBUSSIE/R, s. one armed with an arquebuse.

TO HAR/RASS, v. a. more properly harass [haraser, Fr.] to weary; to fatigue; to tire or make feeble with labour and uneasiness; to lay a country waste by continual inroads.

HARRASS, s. waste or disturbance.

HARRIER, s. a hound of excellent scent and courage, used in hunting hares.

HARRINGTON, Cumberland, a sea-port between Workington and Whitehaven. Its principal business arises from the colliers and ship-building. It is about 300 miles from London. Pop. 1934.

HARRINGTON, JAMES, a political writer of the 17th century, appears first in connexion with the king's attempt at escape from the Isle of Wight. He afterwards was somewhat patronized by Cromwell. On the Restoration he got imprisoned on some charge of a political nature; and when released, soon after died, in 1677, aged 66 years. He is known best by his Oceana, a book describing an ideal republic; and his Rota Club, in which restless republicans had the comfort of debating about democracy.

HARRIOT, THOMAS, an eminent English mathematician and astronomer, went with Sir Walter Raleigh to Virginia, and afterwards settled down to steady application to his sciences. He greatly advanced Algebraic science, and either preceded or immediately followed Galileo in some of his earliest telescopic discoveries. He died in 1621, aged 61 years.

HARRIS, JAMES, one of the earliest speculators on the philosophy of language in England, whose Hermes is a book of surprising ingenuity, but whose meanings are frequently fathomless. Horne Tooke's Diversions of Purley put it first into the shade; and both are now laid aside. He died in 1780, aged 71 years.

HARRISBURG, capital of Pennsylvania, United States. It stands on the Susquehanna, having two bridges over it, one of which is 2876 feet long, 40 wide, 50 feet above the water, and is covered. Its situation is commanding, and it is handsomely built; the state house, and county buildings, &c. being very fine. It is 110 miles from Washington. Pop. 5980. Five other places in the States bear the same name.

HARRISON, JOHN, the inventor of the chronometer, was almost a self-taught mechanist; and by studious application to the use of metals of different degrees of expansibility by heat, gained the prize of £20,000, proffered by the Admiralty for a correct time-keeper. He died in 1776, aged 83 years.

HARRISON, THOMAS, a distinguished soldier of the Puritan revolution, was the son of a grazing farmer in Staffordshire, and one of the new-model army. He fought in the siege of Basing-house, and at Preston, and subsequent fights, and rose to be a judge at Charles's trial, one of Cromwell's major-generals, and in his council of state. Getting into Anabaptist ways, he was unwise enough to take part in a revolt, and was imprisoned for it. At the Restoration he was executed as a regicide, in 1660.

HARROW, (hárrô) s. [charroue, Fr.] a frame of timbers crossing each other, set with teeth of iron, and drawn over ploughed and sown land, to break the clods and cover the seeds with earth.

TO HARROW, (hárrô) v. a. to draw a harrow over ground. Figuratively, to tear or rip up; to pillage, strip, or lay waste; to disturb or put into alarm or commotion.

HARROWER, s. he who harrows. In Falconry, a kind of hawk.

HARROWGATE, Yorkshire, W. R. This is one of the famous and fashionable watering-places. The springs are mostly used as baths. It is about 200 miles from London. Pop. 3372.

TO HARRY, v. a. [harer, Fr.] to disturb; to throw into commotion; to alarm or confuse; to ruffle.

HARSH, a. [Teut.] roughly sour, applied to taste. Rough or disagreeable to the ear, applied to sound. Crabbed, morose, or peevish, applied to the temper. Rough or rugged, applied to the touch. Unpleasing, severe, or rigorous, applied to treatment.

HARSHLY, ad. sourly, or like unripe fruit, applied to taste. In a violent, crabbed, sour, or morose manner; severely, or rigorously. Rough and displeasing to the ear, applied to sound.

HARSHNESS, s. sourness; roughness; crabbedness; moroseness.

HART, s. [heort, Sax.] in Hunting, a male of the deer kind.

HARTCLOVER, s. in Agriculture, a kind of trefoil.

HARTFORD, semi-capital of Connecticut, United States. It stands on the Connecticut river, and is intersected by Little river, over which is a fine stone bridge, whilst a covered bridge, 1000 feet long, crosses the larger river. It is regularly and handsomely built, and the government and state buildings are fine. Here, too, is Washington College, an Episcopalian institution, with a good library, and an asylum for the deaf and dumb, &c. &c. It is finely situated for commerce; and by steamboats and railroad, as well as by the river upland, is connected with the chief places in the N. States. It is 330 miles from Washington. Pop. 9468. There are 14 other places so named in the States.

HARTLAND, Devonshire, a place of some importance in the herring fishery on this coast. It is seated on the Bristol Channel, near a promontory called Hartland Point. It is 217 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2223.

HARTLEPOOL, Durham. It is seated on a promontory, partly surrounded by rocks and hills, and partly by the sea. It has a safe harbour, where the Newcastle and Sunderland colliers generally take shelter in stress of weather. It has a considerable fishery on the coast, and they export a good deal of coals and lime. It is 254 miles from London. Market, Saturday, much decayed. Pop. 5323.

HARTLEY, Northumberland. It stands on the coast N. of Tinnmouth. Here are salt, copperas, and glass-works; and here is a pretty haven, or harbour, to which a canal has been cut through a solid rock, 52 feet deep, 30 broad, and 900 long. It is 270 miles from London. Pop. 1911.

HARTLEY, DAVID, an English metaphysician of the last century. He was a severely logical thinker, but attempted to obtain a surer basis for his theory, by the hypothesis of an oscillating nervous ether, by which all associations in thought were originated. He lived a quiet and exemplary life, practising as a physician in various places, and finally at Bath, and enjoying the friendship of the literati of the age. In those times of indifference to religion, on the part even of the clergy, he maintained its influence both by his life and writings. He died in 1757, aged 52 years.

HARTROYAL, s. in Botany, a plant; a species of buckthorn plainain.

HARTSHORN, s. in Medicine, raspings or shavings of the horn of the red deer, used for making jellies, which are very nutritious. Also, a name by which the aqueous solution of ammonia is commonly known.

HARTSTONGUE, s. in Botany, a kind of fern, whose fronds are long and strap-shaped, being very rarely bifid, &c. It is very common in ditches.

HARTWORT, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, of which there are two kinds, found in hedges and corn-fields.

HARVEST, s. [harfest, Sax.] the season of reaping and gathering in corn; corn ripened, reaped, and gathered in. Figuratively, the product or reward of a person's labour.

HARVEST-HOME, s. the song sung by reapers at the feast made for having inured the harvest.

HARVEST-LORD, s. the head reaper at the harvest.

HARVESTMAN, s. one who labours at the harvest.

HARVEY, DR. WILLIAM, the celebrated English physician, who discovered the circulation of the blood. He was royal physician in the first two Stuart reigns, and suffered from the violence of the cavaliers during the civil war. He made some valuable bequests to the College of Physicians at London; and published many works which were of considerable use in promoting the study of physiological science. He died in 1658, aged 80 years.

HARUSPEX, s. plural haruspices; [Lat.] a priest of ancient Rome, who examined the entrails of the sacrificial victims, and pretended from the appearance of them to predict future events.

HARWICH, Essex. It is seated on a tongue or point of land, opposite to the united mouths of the Stour and Orwell. It is not very large, but has a very safe, spacious, and convenient harbour, extending from the sea to within 2 miles of Ipswich; here is also a very good dock-yard for building ships. The washing and undermining of the cliff have made the point a peninsula, and perhaps may in time make it an island. It is a place of considerable trade, and many vessels are employed in the North Sea fishery. It is 72 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Friday. Pop. 3829.

To HASH, v. n. [hacher, Fr.] to mince, or cut into small pieces. To mingle, used with up.

HASLEMERE, Surrey. It is seated on the edge of the county next Hampshire, and has two paved streets. It is 42 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 873.

HASLET, HA'LSLET, s. [haslet, Fr.] the entrails of a hog, consisting of the heart, liver, &c., generally applied to them when enclosed in a membrane, and roasted or baked.

HASP, s. [haspe, Sax.] a clasp folded over a staple, and fastened with a padlock; a small iron or brass fastening into a door; a kind of hank, going into an eye or loop, used for fastening shoes, necklaces, &c.

To HASP, v. n. to shut with a hasp.

HASSELQUIST, FREDERIC, a celebrated naturalist of Sweden, pupil of Linnaeus. His chief researches were made in Syria, and the neighbouring countries; and the results have been valuable as casting light on the Scriptures, as well as for the addition made by them to natural science. He died in 1752, aged 30 years.

HASSOCK, s. [hassek, Teut.] a round stuffed mat, on which persons kneel at church.

HAST, the second person singular of To HAVE, declined thus, I have, thou hast, he hath or has.

HASTE, s. [haste, Fr.] hurry; speed; the act of doing a thing quickly for want of longer time; passion; vehemence.

To HASTE, HA'STEN, v. n. [haster, Fr.] to move or walk with swiftness; to do a thing in a short time; to be in a hurry; to quicken a person's motion, or drive to a swifter pace.

HASTE'NER, s. one that hastens or hurries.

HASTILY, ad. in a short time; without delay; in a hurry, or rashly; passionately.

HASTINESS, s. speed or expedition; a performance executed in a hurry; anger; testiness.

HASTINGS, s. [corruptly from hastive, Fr.] early; forward; applied to fruits and vegetables.

HASTINGS, Sussex. It is seated between high cliffs or hills, on a small stream called the Bourne, which divides it into two different parishes. The chief employment of the people is fishing. It is one of the cinque ports. Here William the Conqueror landed; and near it was fought the battle which ended in the overthrow of the Saxon dominion in England, and the establishment of the Norman dynasty. It is 64 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 11,607.

HASTINGS, WARREN, the famous governor-general of India, whose efforts greatly established the British empire there, and for which he was tried on his return to England. He rose from comparative obscurity by the force and perseverance of his mind, but his trial was so much involved with the party contests of his day, that a fair judgment on his public character is very difficult. He seems, however, to have pursued the same line of policy as most who have been concerned in the erection of the empire in the East, which is condemned both by political prudence and sound morality. He died in 1818, aged 85 years.

HASTINGS-SANDS, a group of strata forming part of the great Wealden formation of the S. E. of England. It is chiefly made up of sandstones and grits, and contains the remains of gigantic animals of the lizard and crocodile kind, with shells and plants, indicating its origin to be the deposits of a very large river.

HASTY, a. [hastif, Fr.] moving with swiftness; quick, or speedy. Soon provoked, applied to the temper or humour; rash, precipitate, or undertaking without thought. Early ripe, applied to fruit. Hasty pudding, a pudding made of milk and flour, or of oatmeal and water, boiled quick together. SYNON. Hasty relates more to action or blows: passionate goes seldom further than words.

HAT, s. [hæt, Sax.] a covering for the head.

HATBAND, s. a string tied round a hat to keep the crown from stretching, or if too large, to make it fit the head better; a piece of silk or crape worn round the crown of a hat in mourning.

HATCASE, s. a slight box for a hat.

To HATCH, v. a. [hecken, Teut.] to produce young from eggs; to quicken an egg by sitting on it; to produce by any precedent action. Figuratively, to contrive or project.

HATCH, s. a brood proceeding from eggs; the act of excluding or producing young from the egg. Figuratively, disclosure or discovery. A short or half door; an opening over a door, which is closed or shut by a board moving on hinges. In the plural, the doors, or openings, in a ship, by which persons descend from one deck to another. To be under hatches, means to be in a state of ignominy, poverty, or depression.

To HATCHEL, v. a. [hachelen, Teut.] to beat flax, in order to separate the fibrous from the brittle part.

HATCHEL, s. [hachel, Teut.] the instrument with which flax is beaten.

HATCHELLER, s. a beater of flax.

HATCHET, s. [hachette, Fr.] a small axe.

HATCHET-FACE, s. an ugly face.

HATCHMENT, s. [corrupted from achievement,] the arms of a person who is dead, painted on a square board, and placed with an angle downwards over the door where he lived, or fixed against the wall of a church.

HATCHWAY, s. the way over or through the hatches of a ship.

To HATE, v. a. [hatian, Sax.] to regard as an object which may affect us with pain; or to detest on any account. SYNON. To hate implies an aversion actuated by revenge; to abhor, an aversion to that for which we have a natural antipathy; to loathe is more applicable to food; to detest implies aversion actuated by disapprobation.

HATE, s. See HATED.

HATEFUL, a. that causes abhorrence, aversion, or detestation; detesting, hating, or malicious.

HATEFULLY, ad. in an odious or abominable manner; in such a manner as to cause aversion, detestation, or hatred.

HATEFULNESS, s. the quality which renders a person or thing the object of hatred.

HATER, s. one who has a strong aversion or ill-will to a person or thing.

HATFIELD, Hertfordshire. Here the Marquis of Salisbury has a handsome palace, called Hatfield House. It is 19 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 3646.

HATFIELD-BROAD-OAK, or HATFIELD REGIS, Essex. It is situated on a branch of the river Lea, near a forest of the same name. It is 30 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Population, 1968.

HATH, the third person singular of To HAVE. Hath properly belongs to the serious and solemn; has, to the familiar. The same may be observed of doth and does.

HATRED, s. the aversion felt on the contemplation of a person who has injured us, or who is suspected of desiring to do so, or whose conduct and principles we strongly disapprove; very decided abhorrence of any course of conduct, or principles of action.

To HATTER, v. a. to harass, weary, or wear out with fatigue.

HATER, s. one who makes hats.

HATTOCK, s. [hatock, Erse.] a shock of corn.

HATTON, SIR CHRISTOPHER, lord chancellor of England during Elizabeth's reign. He was not a profound lawyer; but he was a distinguished favourite of the queen; and is said to have died from some token of her royal displeasure, in 1591. Hatton Garden derives its name from its vicinity to his residence in the city.

HAVA'NNAH, the capital of the island of Cuba, situated on the N. W. part of it, opposite Florida. The harbour is capable of containing commodiously 1000 vessels, without either cable or anchor. The entrance to it is by a narrow channel, strongly fortified. The houses are elegant, built of stone, and some of them superbly finished; and the churches and other public buildings are rich and magnificent. But much of the town is very poor. It is the chief port of Cuba. Pop. about 130,000; of whom about 30,000 are slaves. Lat. 23. 12. N. Long. 82. 14. W.

HAVANT, Hants. It is situated between Fareham and Chichester, 64 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2101.

HAWBERK, s. [hawberg, old Fr.] a coat of mail or breast-plate.

To HAVE, v. a. preter. and past part. had: [haban, Goth.] to find, or not to be without; to possess; to wear; to bear or carry. It is used as an auxiliary verb in most European languages.

HAVEN, v. [haven, Belg.] a port, harbour, or a part of the sea running up into the land, where ships may ride safe from storms. Figuratively, a place of shelter; refuge from danger.

HAVENER, s. an overseer of a port.

HAVER, s. one who possesses any thing.

HAVERFORDWEST, Pembrokeshire. It is seated on a creek of Milford Haven, called the Dungleidye, over which it has a stone bridge. It is a large, well-built, handsome place, inhabited by many genteel families; and has a considerable trade, with several vessels belonging to it. Here is also a commodious quay, for ships of burthen, and a custom-house. Here the assizes are held, and the county jail is kept. It is 239 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 4601.

HAVERHILL, Suffolk and Essex. It has a considerable manufacture in checks, cottons, and fustians. It is 59 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 2451.

HAVERSACK, s. in military language, a kind of bag, made of coarse gray linen, in which the soldiers carry their provisions on a march.

HAUGH-HAUGH, HAW-HAW, s. [hoeh, Sax.] a dry ditch, in which is a fence or palisade, so that it encloses ground without hindering the prospect.

HAUGHTILY, (haughty) ad. proudly, or prizing too highly; in an insolent, arrogant, or very proud manner.

HAUGHTINESS, (haughtiness) s. the quality of being possessed with too great a conceit of our own good qualities, and too mean an opinion of those which belong to others.

HAUGHTY, (haughty) a. [cheudaine, Fr.] insolent, or behaving contemptuously to others, from too high an opinion of ourselves.

HAVING, s. possession; estate or fortune; the act or state of possessing or enjoying. Behaviour; regularity: still retained in the Scotch dialect.

HAVIOUR, s. See BEHAVIOUR.

To HAUL, v. a. See To HALE.

HAUM, s. [healm, Sax.] straw, or the stalks of beans or pease.

HAUNCH, s. [hanche, Fr.] the thigh; the hindmost thigh of venison or mutton; the rear; the hind part.

To HAUNT, v. a. [hanter, Fr.] to frequent; to be much about any place or person; used sometimes of one who comes without being welcome. It is specially applied to supposed apparitions or ghosts.

HAUNT, s. a place frequented by any person; frequency, or the habit of being frequently in a certain place.

HAUNTER, s. a frequenter; one that is often found in any place.

HAVOCK, s. [hafog, Brit.] the act of plundering a country or killing its inhabitants; devastation.

To HAVOCK, v. a. to waste; to destroy; to lay waste.

HAVRE DE GRACE, a large, populous, and commercial town, in the department of Seine Inferieure. The harbour here has particular advantages, and the basin is reserved for ships of war, with room and depth of water for 30 vessels of 60 guns. It is seated on the English Channel, at the mouth of the river Seine. It is 112 miles from Paris. Pop. above 30,000. Lat. 49. 29. N. Long. 0. 6. E.

HAUTBOY, (hoboy) s. [haut and bois, Fr.] a musical instrument of the wind kind, sounded by a reed, shaped like a flageolet, but spreading wider towards the bottom. In Horticulture, a large species of strawberry.

HAY, RENE JUST, a French abbé, who constructed a system of classifying minerals, according to the laws of their crystallization. He discovered the remarkable fact in connexion with minerals, that the most usual forms differed very much from the first and simplest form, and he traced the laws of their structure.

He was imprisoned as a non-juring priest at the Revolution, but was released by Napoleon, who honoured him, not only as a man of science, but of inflexible integrity also. He died in 1822, aged 80 years.

HAW, s. [hag, Sax.] in Botany, the fruit of the hawthorn. In Veterinary Surgery, an excrescence resembling a gristle, growing under the nether eye-lid or eye of a horse.

To HAW, v. n. to speak slowly, with much hesitation and frequent intermissions.

HAWK, s. [hobeg, Brit.] in Natural History, a large genus of birds of prey, formerly manned, reclaimed, bred, and made use of to catch other birds.

To HAWK, v. n. to catch birds with a hawk.—[hook, Teut.] to sell any thing by crying it in the streets.

HAWKED, a. crooked or formed like a hawk's bill.

HAWKER, s. [hook, Teut.] one who sells wares by crying them about streets, particularly applied to those who sell newspapers.

HAWKINS, SIR JOHN, a distinguished English naval commander in the reign of Elizabeth. He was one of those adventurers, trained in naval affairs by their participation of the commerce of Spain. He was one of the admirals of the fleet sent out against the Armada; and he was the first Englishman who engaged in the African slave trade. He died in 1595, aged 74 years.

HAWKINS, SIR JOHN, a literary man of the last century, who was the first writer of note on the history of music. His life presented few incidents for notice; being that of a gentleman of fortune, after his marriage; whose friendship for Dr. Johnson had inspired him with literary tastes. He died in 1789, aged 70 years.

HAWKNUT, s. in Botany, a name of the pignut.

HAWKSEYE, s. in Botany, an herb with compound flowers, distinguished from the hawkweed by its chafy receptacle.

HAWKSHED, Lancashire. It is situated near the lake of Windermere, in a valley surrounded by a woody, hilly tract. It is 273 miles from London. Market, Monday, for the sale of wool, rams, provisions, &c. Pop. 2323.

HAWKWEED, s. in Botany, a genus of compound flowers, very common in England.

HAWKWOOD, SIR JOHN, a brave soldier in the wars of Edward III., who was knighted by him, and subsequently took up the profession of arms as a trade, and was one of the most famous of the free lances, who figure so conspicuously in the wars between the different republics of Italy. He died in 1393.

HAWSER, s. in the sea language, is a large rope or kind of small cable, serving for various uses aboard a ship; as, to fasten the main and fore shrouds, to warp a ship as she lies at anchor, and wind her up to it by a capstan.

HAWSEY, s. round holes in a ship, under her head, through which the cables pass when she is at anchor.

HAWTHORN, s. [hæthorn, Sax.] in Botany, the thorn generally growing in hedges, and bearing haws.

HAY, s. [hieg, Sax.] grass mowed and dried to feed cattle with. To dance the hay, is to dance round a couple of persons who are dancing at the same time.

HAY, Brecknockshire, Wales. It is seated between the rivers Wyal and Dalas, on the river Hay, over which it has a handsome stone bridge, of seven arches. It is 151 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1711.

HAYDN, JOSEPH, a celebrated musical composer, born in Austria, and first obtaining a narrow fame by his voice; and afterwards, through the Prince Esterhazy, a wider renown, which led to his removal to London; where he received general admiration and honour, and produced his great work, the Oratorio of The Creation. He returned to Vienna, and lived in retirement, yet continuing his labours, till 1809, when he died, aged 77 years. His numerous works embrace almost every kind of composition, and place him amongst the foremost of those who occupy the second rank in the realm of song.

HAYMAKER, s. one employed in turning grass when cut for hay.

HAYS, s. particular nets for taking rabbits, hares, &c.

HAYSTACK, s. a large quantity of hay laid in a heap.

HAZARD, s. [hazard, Fr.] chance; accident; any thing that happens without being foreseen or predetermined; danger, or a possibility of danger; a game played with dice.

To HAZARD, v. a. [hazarder, Fr.] to expose to chance or a possibility of danger; to venture; to run a risk.

HAZARDABLE, a. venturesome; liable to chance.

HAZARDER, s. one who does a thing without any certain knowledge or regard of its consequences.

HAZARDOUS, a. [hazardous, Fr.] dangerous; exposed to a possibility of danger; liable to chance.

HAZARDOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be exposed to danger.

To HAZE, v. n. to be foggy, misty, or cloudy.

HAZE, s. a fog or mist.

HAZEL, s. [hasel, Sax.] in Botany, a tree bearing nuts.

HAZEL, a. consisting of, or made of, hazel. Of a light brown, or the colour of hazel, applied to colour.

HAZELLY, a. of the colour of hazel, or light brown.

HAZELT, WILLIAM, a distinguished literary man of the last age; who after studying in a theological academy for awhile, devoted himself to art and philosophy, and finally gave himself up to literature; in which he toiled a slave instead of a master, through his imprudent habits. He was a brilliant and forcible writer, but not a discoverer; an essayist and lecturer, and as such acquired his name. His faults have departed with him; his works remain to preserve his name alive. He died in 1830, aged 52 years.

HAZY, a. dark; foggy; misty; cloudy, applied to weather.

HAZE, pronoun, his, genit., him, accus. and dat. This word is substituted for a person's name, in order to prevent its being too often repeated in a discourse, and is only applied to males. Sometimes it is used without any reference to any foregoing word, and then signifies all mankind collectively, or any person indefinitely. "He is never poor that little bath, but he that much desires." A man, or male being. Generally used in composition to express the male of any species.

HEAD, (the a in this word and all its compounds and derivatives is dropped in pronunciation—as hed, héd-ake, hédly, &c.) s. [heved, old Eng.] the uppermost part of an animal, which contains the brains. Figuratively, a chief, principal, or leading person, applied to societies or communities. The face, front, or foremost part of an army; resistance, as "to make head;" spontaneous resolution; individual; the top of any thing, particularly applied to such as are bigger than the other parts; the surface, or that which rises to the surface, of liquors; the upper part of a bed; the blade of an axe; power; force; dominion. Strength, applied to liquors. The principal topic of a discourse; the source of a stream; a crisis or pitch. In Anatomy, the extremity of a bone or a muscle. In Architecture, an ornament of carved work serving for the key of an arch or plat band. In Surgery, a state of maturity or ripeness. Head and ears, the whole person. Head and shoulders, violently; unnaturally; forcedly.

To HEAD, v. a. to march before; to command or lead an army; to cut off a person's head; to fit any thing with a head; to lop the tops of trees.

HEADACHE, s. a pain in the head.

HEADBAND, s. a fillet or bandage tied round the head. In Bookbinding, the head at each end of a book.

HEADBOROUGH, (héd-boro) s. primarily the chief of a frankpledge; at present a petty constable.

HEADRESS, s. the covering of a woman's head.

HEADER, s. one who heads, or puts heads, to pins or nails.

HEADNESS, s. hurry; rashness; or obstinate perseverance in one's own opinion.

HEADLAND, s. a promontory or cape.

HEADLESS, a. without a head; beheaded. Without chief or ruler, applied to a society or community.

HEADLONG, a. with the head foremost in a fall; rash; thoughtless; without meditation; sudden or precipitate.

HEADLONG, ad. with the head first or foremost; rashly, or without thought; hastily, or without delay.

HEADON, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It is situated on a river that falls into the Humber about two miles below, and is pleasant and well built, though little; and was formerly considerable in merchants and shipping, but its harbour is now nearly choked up. It is 182 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 998.

HEADMOULD-SHOT, s. in Medicine, the closing of the sutures of the skull over each other in infants.

HEADPIECE, (hédpeece) s. armour for the head; a helmet. Among sempstresses, that part of a cap or bonnet which goes over the crown of the head. Figuratively, understanding, or judgment.

HEADQUARTERS, s. the place of general rendezvous or lodgment for soldiers.

HEADSHIP, s. dignity; authority; the condition or state of a ruler or governor.

HEADSMAN, s. an executioner; or one who beheads malefactors.

HEADSTALL, s. part of the bridle that covers the head.

HEADSTONE, s. the chief stone, or that which is placed first in a corner, whether at the top, to adorn and strengthen, or at the bottom, to secure and support it. A tombstone placed at the head of a grave.

HEADSTRONG, a. obstinate; unruly; or not easily governed.

HEADY, a. rash, or without deliberation; obstinate, or not to be governed. Strong, or apt to affect the head, applied to liquors.

To HEAL, (heel) v. a. [hælen, Sax.] to cure a person who has been wounded or sick. In Surgery, to unite or consolidate the lips of a wound or ulcer. Figuratively, to reconcile.—v. n. to grow well, applied to wounds or sores.

HEALER, (heeler) s. one who cures wounds, or removes diseases.

HEALING, (heeling) part. mild; gentle; pacific, or easily reconciled, applied to the temper. Curing, applied to medicine.

HEALTH, (pron. helth); the a in this word, and all its compounds and derivatives, being dropped in pronunciation; s. [Sax.] applied to the body, a proper disposition of the several parts to perform their respective functions, without any impediment or sensation of pain. Applied to the mind, a just disposition of the mind and rational powers, to perform their respective offices, without being impeded by passion, or biased by any undue influence. A ceremony used in drinking, wherein a person wishes another health.

HEALTHFUL, a. free from pain or sickness; that may promote the dominion of reason, or advancement of virtue, by stifling the violence of passion, and by lessening the force of vicious habits.

HEALTHFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to promote health.

HEALTHFULNESS, s. the state of being well, or enjoying health; the quality of promoting or preserving health.

HEALTHINESS, s. the state of enjoying health free from any interval of sickness.

HEALTHLESS, a. weak; sickly; infirm.

HEALTHSOME, a. contributing to the preservation of health.

HEALTHY, a. in health; free from sickness; sound.

HEAP, (heep) s. [heap, Sax.] any collection of things thrown upon each other; a crowd or multitude; a throng; a cluster or number of persons assembled together.

To HEAP, (heep) v. a. [heapan, Sax.] to throw together, or one upon another; to accumulate, pile up, or acquire abundantly; to add to something else.

HEAPER, (heeper) s. one who piles, throws, or places several things upon each other.

HEAPY, a. lying in heaps.

To HEAR, (heer) v. n. [hyran, Sax.] to enjoy the faculty by which sounds are distinguished; to perceive a sound; to listen or hearken to; to be told of or informed of by words.—v. a. to give audience; to give a person permission to speak, and to attend or listen to him when speaking; to try; to acknowledge. Synon. To hear, implies having the ear struck with any sound; to hearken, means to lend an ear, in order to hear.

HEARER, (heerer) s. one who attends to any discourse spoken by another; one who perceives what another speaks; one who is informed of something, by word, which he does not see.

HEARING, (heering) s. the sense by which sounds are perceived; audience; a judicial trial; the reach of the ear, or the distance within which sounds can be perceived.

To HEARKEN, (hárken) v. n. [hearkenian, Sax.] to listen attentively to what a person says.

HEARKENER, (hárkener) s. a listener, or one who attends and pays a regard to what is spoken by another.

HEARSAY, (hearsay) s. that which a person does not know for certain himself, but gathers from rumour or common fame.

HEARSE, (herse) s. a covered carriage, hung with black cloth, &c., in which dead bodies are conveyed to the place of interment.

HEART, (the e in this word, as well as in all its compounds and derivatives, is dropped in pronunciation; as, hart, hart-ake, harty, &c.) s. [hearth, Sax.] in Animal Physiology, a muscular organ, which is the centre of the circulating system, and propels the blood, which, when properly formed, is conveyed to it through the whole frame. It assumes very various forms in different races of creatures, and in warm-blooded animals is most perfect;—being double, one part serving to propel the blood for aëration through the lungs, and the other serving for the general circulation. See Arteries, Veins, &c. In popular language, it is the seat of courage or affection. Figuratively, the chief or principal part; the inner part of any thing; passions; anxiety; concern; disposition of mind. The heart is considered as the seat of tenderness; a hard heart, therefore, is cruelty. Courage or spirit, opposed to despair or dejection. Used with get, deliver, or say, strength of memory. The mind or conscience. Strength, or power of producing, applied to soil. To lose one's heart, is to be very much enamoured, or to fall so deeply in love, that reason cannot control the affection. To take to heart, is to be zealous, earnest, solicitous, or grieved about any thing. To find in the heart, is not to be entirely or much averse to.

HEART-ACHE, s. sorrow; pang; anguish of mind.

HEART-BREAK, s. excessive sorrow.

HEART-BREAKING, a. overpowering with sorrow.

HEART-BREAKING, s. excessive or overpowering grief.

HEART-BURN, s. in Medicine, a pain at the mouth of the stomach, caused either by an alkali or acid prevailing in the stomach.

HEART-BURNED, a. uneasy or discontented.

HEART-BURNING, s. See HEART-BURN. Figuratively, discontent; grudge; or secret enmity.

HEART-DEAR, a. dear as one's life; sincerely and highly beloved.

HEART-EASE, s. tranquillity; quiet; a state of mind undisturbed by any passion.

HEARTED, a. disposed or inclined. It is only used in composition; as, hard-hearted, inclined to cruelty; not to be affected with distress, or prevailed on by entreaties.

To HEARTEN, v. a. to encourage, or animate a person to an attempt; to rouse from a state of dejection; to comfort; to improve and preserve ground fertile by nature.

HEART-FELT, a. that affects the mind; that is sincere; felt in the conscience.

HEARTH, (harth) s. [Sax.] the ground of a chimney, or the pavement in a chimney on which a fire is made, or a grate stands.

HEARTILY, ad. sincerely; diligently; eagerly; with a vehement desire; largely.

HEARTINESS, s. warmth of affection; freedom from hypocrisis; vigour, diligence, or strength.

HEARTLESS, a. without courage or spirit; without comfort.

HEARTLESSLY, ad. without courage or spirit; faintly.

HEARTLESSNESS, s. want of courage or spirit; a state of dejection.

HEART-PEAS, s. in Botany, a plant with round black seeds like peas, having the figure of a white heart upon each.

HEART-RENDING, a. rending the heart; killing with anguish.

HEARTSEASE, s. in Botany, a common name of the pansy.

HEART-SICK, a. under any pain, discontent, or anguish of mind; mortally ill, proceeding from and discovering some dangerous hurt.

HEART-SORE, s. that which pains the mind.

HEART-STRINGS, s. the tendons or nerves supposed to brace the heart. Used mostly in poetry.

HEART-STRUCK, a. driven to the heart, or fixed immovably in the mind; shocked with fear or dismay.

HEART-SWELLING, a. rankling in the mind. "Heart-swelling hate," Spenser.

HEART-WHOLE, a. without any bias on the affections; in good health; without impairment of the constitution.

HEARTWOUNDING, a. affecting the mind with grief.

HEARTY, a. sincere; undissembling; warm or zealous; in full health; vigorous; strong; merry.

HEAT, (heat) s. [Sax.] in Natural Philosophy, the common name of that subtle agent, called in chemistry, caloric. Its essence is unknown; but its laws have been accurately investigated. It is excited in various ways, beside the use of the sun's rays, vegetable fermentation, &c.; as by friction, by heavy and repeated blows, &c., and by the use of Galvanism and chemical combinations. It is transmitted at different rates of velocity through the substance of bodies, which is called conduction; and through the air surrounding a body, which is called radiation. It expands the bulk of substances, and gradually transforms solids to fluids and gases. In common language, it signifies the sensation experienced in the transmission of caloric by any means to the body. Latent heat, is that form of caloric which does not manifest itself in the common way, by exciting the sensation of heat, or raising the thermometer, &c., but by other more subtle effects. See THERMOMETER, PYROMETER, &c. Hot weather; the state of a body which is put into a fire; a course at a race, or the space of ground which a horse is to run without resting; a slight eruption on the skin, arising from the warmth of weather, &c. Figuratively, violence or vehemence of passion; the height or the most violent part of an action or battle; faction, contest, or the rage of party. Warmth, ardour, applied either to the thoughts or elocution.

To HEAT, (heat) v. a. to make hot, or endue with a power of burning; to grow warm by fermentation; to ferment; to warm with vehemence of passion or desire; to produce a sensation of warmth by violent exercise.

HEATER, (helter) s. a piece of iron of a triangular form, which, being made red-hot in the fire, is used in a box-iron, to smooth linen with.

HEATH, (heath) s. [heath, Sax.] in Botany, the name of a hardy family of plants found in all climates; some of which have very beautiful flowers. Our British species grow in barren and uncultivated soils. Figuratively, it signifies a place overgrown with the above plant, or covered with shrubs of any kind.

HEATH-COCK, s. in Natural History, a large fowl that frequents heaths.

HEATHEN, (heithen) s. [heyden, Teut.] one who worships false gods, and is not acquainted with the Bible; a Gentile; a pagan.

HEATHEN, (heithen) a. belonging to those nations that are unacquainted with the Bible.

HEATHENISH, (heithenish) a. practising idolatry. Figuratively, wild; savage; rapacious; cruel.

HEATHENISHLY, (heithenishly) ad. after the manner of a heathen.

HEATHENISM, (heithenism) s. the worship of idols; or the religion of those nations who were unacquainted with Scripture.

HEATHY, v. full of heath.

To HEAVE, (heave) v. a. preter. heaved, part. heaved; [heafian, Sax.] to lift up or raise from the ground; to carry or fling; to make a thing rise or swell; to elate or puff with success,—v. n. to pant or breathe with pain and frequent rising or falling of the breast; to rise with pain; to swell higher or larger; to be squeamish, or find a tendency to vomit.

HEAVE, (heave) s. a lift or effort made upwards; a rising of the breast; a struggle to rise. Heave-offering, in the Old Testament, an offering that was held or lifted up in the sight of the congregation.

HEAVEN, (heven) s. [heofon, Sax.] the regions above; the sky; the habitation of the blessed. Figuratively, the greatest degree of height; elevation.

HEAVENLY, (hevenly) a. resembling heaven; elevated beyond the common productions of mankind; perfect in the highest degree; inhabiting heaven.

HEAVENLY, (hevenly) ad. in a pious manner; in a manner resembling that of heaven; by the agency or influence of heaven.

HEAVENWARD, ad. toward heaven.

HEAVILY, (hevely) ad. with great weight. Figuratively, grievously; with great affliction, dejection, or sorrow.

HEAVINESS, (heviness) s. weight; or that quality in a body which renders it difficult to be lifted. Applied to the mind, dejection; depression; languor; inaptitude to motion or thought; oppression. SYNON. Heaviness is the quality spoken of generally; weight is the measure or degree of that quality, which we ascertain by comparison.

HEAVY, (hevy) a. [heafig, Sax.] not easily lifted or thrown; of considerable weight; sorrowful; dejected; grievous; or oppressive. Wanting briskness, or dull, applied to the eyes; lazy; drowsy; slow; sluggish; stupid; foolish. Wanting fire, spirit, or the ornaments of composition, applied to style. Tedious, or oppressing like a burden, applied to time. Not easily digested, applied to food. In Agriculture, it is applied to stiff, tenacious soils, such as rest on a clayey subsoil.

HEBDOMAD, s. [hebdomas, from hepta, Gr.] a week, or space of time consisting of seven days.

HEBDOMADAL, HEBDOMADARY, a. weekly; consisting of seven days.

HEBER, DR. REGINALD, the late English bishop of Calcutta, an elegant scholar and poet. He travelled through Eastern Europe soon after the termination of his university studies, and afterwards became a parochial minister in England. On Dr. Middleton's death he was appointed to the see of Calcutta; and he died of apoplexy in 1826, aged 43 years. He wrote, beside sermons, poems and critical essays, and edited Jeremy Taylor's works. His Journal in India has been published since his death.

HEBETATE, v. a. [hebes, Lat.] to dull; to blunt; to stupify; to make dim.

HEBETUDE, s. dulness; bluntness; obtuseness; want of discernment or sagacity.

HEBRAISM, s. [hebraismus, Lat.] a method of expression or a phrase borrowed from, or peculiar to, the Hebrew.

HEBRAIST, or HEBRISTIAN, s. a person skilled in Hebrew.

HEBREW LANGUAGE, s. the original language of the Jews, in which the Old Testament was originally written. It is the oldest of the Semitic family of languages, and casts great light on the Arabic, and others of that race, because of its greater rudeness and simplicity. There is no other book in pure Hebrew, as the writings of the Rabbins are debased with words and idioms of foreign origin. A Hebrew signifies one of the descendants of Terah, so called from a Hebrew word that signifies to pass over, because they came from beyond the Euphrates.

HEBREWS, EPISTLE TO THE, one of the books of the New Testament, which not having the writer's name prefixed to it, and being addressed to a particular class of Christians, did not find universal acceptance for some centuries. Most critics ascribe it to the apostle Paul; but there are sufficient grounds for doubt on this point. It is a lengthened essay on the superiority of the Christian scheme over the Jewish, and is argued on grounds which apply chiefly to Jews. The purpose is evidently to sustain the faith of the Hebrew converts; and in the appeal at the end of the argument is found a most eloquent recital of the deeds of the worthies of the Old Testament history, which displayed the power of faith. The truly epistolary part is confined to the last chapter; and is of a stamp similar to the acknowledged epistles of Paul. Some critics, following the statements of a few of the Fathers of the church, have held that this treatise was written originally in the Syriac language customarily spoken amongst the Jews of Palestine, and afterwards translated into Greek. But no substantial proof is adduced in support of the hypothesis.

HEBRIDES, or WESTERN ISLANDS OF SCOTLAND. These islands lie on the W. coast of Scotland, and are supposed to be about 300 in number. The principal of them are Skye, St. Kilda, Lewis, and Harris, N. and S. Uist, Cannay, Staffa, Mull, Jura, Islay, &c. See the principal names.

HEBRIDES, NEW, a group of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, situated immediately W. of the Friendly Isles. The principal islands are Tierra del Espirito, Santo, and Malicollo, besides several others of less note, some of which are from 18 to 25 leagues in circumference. In general they are high and mountainous, abounding with wood and water, and the usual productions of the tropical islands, bread-fruit, cocoa-nuts, plantains, sugar-canes, and yams. The inhabitants are of the semi-negro variety; and are very rude, but not savage.

HECATE, in Greek Mythology, a name of the moon.

HECATOMB, (hecatombe) s. [hekaton, Gr. hecatombe, Lat.] a sacrifice of a hundred cattle.

HECLA, a large volcano of the island of Iceland. It is very active, for during a period of above 600 years, at intervals rarely exceeding 20 years, eruptions have taken place; some of which have continued for six years without ceasing. The country being so constantly icebound, and so thinly inhabited, these convulsions have not been so destructive as they are in other countries. Its height is above 5000 feet.

HECTIC, HECTICAL, a. [hektikos, Gr.] habitual; constitutional. Hectic fever, a slow and continual one. Troubled with a distempered heat.

HECTOR, s. [from I Hector, the Trojan hero,] a bully; a blustering, noisy, and turbulent person.

TO HECTOR, v. n. to threaten; to treat with insolence; to play the bully.

HEDERACEOUS, a. [hederaceus, from hedera, Lat.] resembling ivy.

HEDGE, s. [hegge, Sax.] a fence of bushes made round any ground, to defend it from encroachments, or between the different parts of a garden, &c. When prefixed to any word, hedge denotes something mean, vile, and contemptible. A quickest hedge, is that which is formed of growing hawthorn and similar shrubs.

TO HEDGE, v. a. to enclose with a fence of trees or bushes. Used with up, to obstruct or stop up a passage.

HEDGEOG, s. in Natural History, a small animal, having its back, sides, and flanks set with strong and sharp prickles, which by the help of a muscle can contract itself into a globular form, and withdraw its whole under part, head, belly, and legs, within its thicket of prickles. In Ichthyology, the globe fish.

HEDGE-NOTE, s. a word of contempt for low and mean writing.

HEDGEPIG, s. a young hedgehog.

HEDGER, s. one who makes or repairs hedges.

HEDGEGROW, s. bushes planted in a line for an enclosure.

HEDGESPARROW, s. in Natural History, the trivial name of a species of warbler, very common in England.

HEDGING-BILL, s. a kind of axe or hatchet, with which hedges are cut.

TO HEED, v. a. [hedan, Sax.] to mind; to take notice of; to view with care and attention.

HEED, s. [hede, Sax.] care; earnest application of the mind; caution; notice; care to avoid; regard or respectful notice; seriousness; staidness.

HEEDFUL, a. cautious, or careful of the immediate effects or consequences of an action; attentive, or careful in taking notice or observing.

HEEDFULLY, ad. in an attentive or cautious manner.

HEEDFULNESS, s. caution; attentive notice.

HEEDLESS, a. negligent; inattentive.

HEEDLESSLY, ad. in an inattentive or careless manner.

HEEDLESSNESS, s. carelessness; negligence; inattention.

HEEL, s. [hele, Sax.] the hinder part of the foot; any thing which covers, or is shaped like, a heel; hence it is applied in the phrase, To be out of heel, i. e. to be very much impaired, or in a declining condition. "A good man's fortune may grow out at heels," Shak. To be at the heels, is to pursue closely. To lay by the heels, is to fetter, shackle, or imprison.

TO HEEL, v. n. to dance by beating the heels on the ground, as in jigs. To lean on one side, applied to a ship.

HEELPIECE, (hellpiece) s. a piece of leather, &c. sewed on the heel of a shoe, to repair what is worn away.

HEEREN, ARNOLD HERMAN LOUIS, a distinguished German historian. After studying at Göttingen, he travelled in France and Italy, and eventually settled as a professor at his alma mater. His historical works are numerous and of great value, as he has in his compendiums departed from the usual course, and details the great movements by which the progress of nations and of the civilized world has been brought about, rather than the intrigues and adventures of characters, which, however famous in their day, are of no moment to the world. His Manual of Ancient History, and his Manual of the History of European State-systems and their Colonies, are well translated into English, and are particularly excellent. He died in 1842, aged 81 years.

HEGEL, GEORGE WILLIAM FRÉDERIC, one of the great modern German philosophers, who have followed in the steps of Kant. He was a fellow student of Schelling, and at Jena succeeded to the professorship he had vacated. But he differed widely from all his teachers, and has established a name in the philosophical world equal with the very highest of those who are not actual discoverers. This he effected as professor at Berlin, which he filled for some years after he had held similar posts at Bamberg and Heidelberg. He died in 1831, aged 60 years. His system has been named Absolute Idealism, to distinguish it from the systems of Fichte and Schelling. He has taught it most succinctly and clearly in his Encyclopædia of Philosophy; and it is of so abstruse a character that it is impossible to convey any intelligible notion of it in a few words. His disciples have applied it to every department of human knowledge, and the latest prodigies of theology in Germany have sprung from this root.

HEGIRA, s. [Arab.] in Chronology, the æra whence the Mahometans compute their time. It took its origin from Mahomet's flight from Mecca, on the evening of the 15th or 16th of July, A. D. 622, in the reign of the emperor Heraclius. As the years of the Hegira consist of only 354 days, they are reduced to the Julian calendar, by multiplying the year of the Hegira by 354, dividing the product by 365, subtracting the intercalary days, or as many times as there are four years in the quotient, and adding 622 to the remainder.

HEIDELBERG, a considerable and populous town of Baden, Germany. It has a celebrated university, and is situated on the S. side of the Neckar, over which there is a handsome bridge. It suffered most seriously in the various continental wars, from the time of the Reformation, but it is now in a prosperous state, and its university is improving. Its library of MSS. is very rich. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 49. 24. N. Long. 8. 41. E.

HEIFER, (heffer) s. [æfære, Sax.] in Farming affairs, a young cow.

HEIGH HO, (hi ho) interject. a word used to express slight languor and uneasiness; sometimes applied to signify a joyful exultation.

HEIGHT, (hite) s. a distance or space above ground; space measured upwards. In Geography, the degree of latitude. A summit, ascent, or eminence. Figuratively, elevation, rank, or dignity above others; the utmost degree, perfection, or exertion.

To HEIGHTEN, (hiten) v. a. to raise above ground, or on high; to prefer, or raise to a higher post; to improve, or raise to a higher degree of perfection; to aggravate, or increase any bad quality; to adorn or make more beautiful or splendid by ornaments.

HEINOUS, (hainous) a. [hainoux, Fr.] wicked in a high degree; atrocious; shameful; odious.

HEINOUSLY, ad. in a very wicked or atrocious manner.

HEINOUSNESS, s. the quality which makes an action exceedingly wicked.

HEINSIUS, DANIEL, a very distinguished editor of the classics, who was a professor at Leyden in its palmiest days. He also wrote Latin verse. He died in 1666, aged 86 years.

HEIR, (the h in this word and its derivatives is silent;—ære.) s. [hæres, Lat.] in Civil Law, one who succeeds to the whole estate of another, after his death, whether by right of blood or testament. In Common Law, one who succeeds, by right of blood, to any man's lands or tenements in fee. An heir apparent is he on whom the succession is so settled, that it cannot be altered without altering the laws of succession. Heir presumptive is the nearest relation to the present successor, who, without the particular will of the testator, cannot be set aside.

To HEIR, v. a. to inherit, or possess by right of inheritance.

HEIRESS, s. a female who succeeds to the estate of another either by will or by blood.

HEIRLESS, a. without children to succeed to an inheritance.

HEIRLOOM, s. any thing which goes to the heir by custom, and not by common law. They are never inventoried, after the death of the owner, as chattels.

HELD, preter. and past part. of To HOLD.

HELENA, ST., an island in the S. Atlantic Ocean, almost midway between Africa and S. America. Its circumference is about 20 miles, and it has the appearance, at a distance, of a rock rising out of the ocean. It is accessible at only one spot, where the town is erected, in a valley at the bottom of a bay, between two steep, dreary mountains. It is mountainous, some points rising nearly 3000 feet above the sea; and bears tokens of volcanic origin. The country, however, is far from being barren; the little hills are covered with rich verdure, and interspersed with fertile valleys, which contain gardens, orchards, and various plantations. The valleys are watered by rivulets, and the mountains, in the centre of the island, are covered with wood. It rears fine cattle and sheep; and produces good fruit of various kinds. It belongs to England; and is remarkable as the place where the British government confined Napoleon Buonaparte, after his defeat at Waterloo. It is usually touched by vessels trading with India. James Town is the name of its only town. Pop. about 4000. Lat. 15. 55. S. Long. 5. 49. W.

HELENA, ST., a celebrated person in Ecclesiastical History, being the wife of a Roman emperor, and mother of Constantine the Great; and according to famous tradition, the inventor of the cross, on which our Saviour was crucified; the discovery (or invention, as it is in the Calendar) being made by means of a dream. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem is ascribed to her. She died in 327.

HELICAL, a. [helios, Gr.] hid by, or appearing by coming out of, the lustre of the sun. Helical rising, in Astronomy, is applied to a star, which after having been hid by the sun's rays, rises before it, and by that means becomes visible. Helical setting, is applied to a star which approaches so near to the sun, as to be hid by its rays.

HELICALLY, ad. in Astronomy, in such a manner as to emerge from the sun's rays, and become visible; or in such a manner as to approach so near to the sun as to be hid by its splendour.

HELICAL, a. [helix, Gr.] spiral; or twisting like a corkscrew.

HELICON, MOUNT, a hill in the ancient Bæotia, consecrated to Apollo and the Muses.

HELIER, ST., the capital of the island of Jersey, in the English Channel, on the coast of France. It is seated in St. Aubin's Bay, where it has a harbour, and a stone pier; having the sea on the S. W. and hills on the N. Another large bill projects, in a manner, over the town, and has a pleasant walk, that affords an extensive prospect. The little island, St. Helier, about a mile in circuit, contains Elizabeth castle, which is wholly occupied by the governor and garrison; it is a peninsula from half-flood to half-ebb, during which time there is a passage, called the bridge, which is half a mile long, and formed of sand and stones. It leads to the town, which is well paved, and has wide streets. The inhabitants are computed to be 2000, and in their place of worship the French and English languages are used alternately. Lat. 49. 13. N. Long. 2. 14. W.

HELIGOLAND, an island in the German Ocean lying about 25 miles off the mouth of the Elbe. It is scarcely three miles in circumference; and was originally much more extensive. It is partly a lofty rock, on which the little town is built; and it has good accommodation for the shipping which often put in there. It is in the possession of the English, but inhabited by the Dutch. Its population is about 3000.

HELIOCENTRIC, a. [helios and kentron, Gr.] in Astronomy, applied to the place of a planet, as it would appear to us from the sun, if the eye were fixed in its centre.

HELOGABALUS, or ELAGABALUS, one of the monsters who, in the decline of the empire, was emperor of Rome. The prætorian guards raised him to that dignity when he was but 15 years of age; and during a reign of nearly four years, after a fair beginning, he perpetrated almost every conceivable act of infamy and madness, and was killed by those who exalted him. He fell in 222 A. D.

HELIOPOLIS, the Grecian name of a city of Ancient Egypt, of which nothing remains now, but the ruin of a very magnificent temple, some obelisks, &c. It was one of the chief cities, and in the Book of Genesis is referred to by the designation On. See also BAALBEC.

HELIOSCOPE, s. [helios and skopeo, Gr.] a kind of telescope fitted for looking at the body of the sun, without hurting the eyes.

HELIOTROPE, s. [helios and trepho, Gr.] in Botany, the name of several plants which were observed or supposed to turn their flowers towards the sun, following it in its daily course from E. to W.

HELISPHERICAL, a. [helix and sphere, in] in Navigation, applied to the rhumb line, because on the globe it winds spirally round the pole, advancing continually nearer and nearer towards without terminating in it.

HELIX, s. [Gr.] a spiral line, or that which resembles a corkscrew.

HELL, s. [helle, Sax.] the place wherein the devil and wicked souls are confined; the wicked spirits, or inhabitants of hell; a place of inconceivable misery. Used in former times for the unseen world, or hades. "He descended into hell," Apostles' Creed.

HELLEBORE, s. [helleborus, Lat.] in Botany, a plant, the root of which was formerly used as a cathartic; the Christmas-flower.

HELL-HOUND, s. [helle hund, Sax.] the fabled dog which guards the infernal regions. Figuratively, an agent or emissary of the devil.

HELLENES, one of the ancient races of the S. E. of Europe, contemporaries of the Pelasgians, and ancestors of the true Greek population of Asia Minor, Greece, Italy, &c. They were divided into numerous tribes, who took up their residence in different parts, and originated the different states of Greece.

HELLENISM, s. [hellen, Gr.] an idiom, phrase, or manner of expression, peculiar to the Greek.

HELLESPOINT, s. a narrow arm of the sea, betwixt Europe and Asia: now called the Dardanelles or Straits of Gallipoli. HELLISH, a. [hellish, Sax.] having the qualities of hell, or the devil: excessively wicked or malicious; sent from hell.

HELLISHLY, ad. in a very wicked and malicious manner; wickedly; or like the devil.

HELLISHNESS, s. wickedness in excess; any quality inconsistent with goodness, rendering us like the devil.

HELLWARD, ad. towards hell.

HELM, s. [helm, Sax.] a covering formerly worn in war to protect and defend the head; that part of a coat of arms which bears the crest. The upper part or head of a retort, in Chemistry.—helm, Sax.] the rudder, or board, by which the course of a vessel is directed or altered. Figuratively, a post in the administration, or the station of those who conduct the affairs of a government.

TO HELM, v. a. to move the helm, in order to guide or alter the course of a vessel. Figuratively, to guide or conduct.

HELMED, a. wearing a helmet or head-piece.

HELMET, s. [elmetto, Ital.] a covering for the head, worn in battle. In Botany, the upper part of a gaping blossom.

HELMINTHIC, a. [helmin, Gr.] relating to worms.

HELMONT, JOHN BAPTIST VAN, the founder of the system of chemistry which superseded that of Paracelsus, and led the way to the foundation of a true chemical science. He was a wealthy gentleman of Brabant, and studied at Louvain. After some strangely fantastic proceedings, he travelled in France and Italy; and settling on one of his estates on his return, passed the remainder of his days in peaceable pursuit of his favourite science. He died in 1644, aged 67 years. His system was purely a metaphysical one, and it was taught under the customary veil of allegorical impersonations. It is curious that one of these impersonations should keep its place in our present chemical nomenclature:—gas, which in Dutch means spirit or ghost, was introduced to scientific use by Van Helmont.

HELMESLEY-BLACKMORE, or HELMSLEY, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on the river Rye, and has a brook running through it. It is composed of houses well built of stone, covered with slate. It has a considerable manufacture of cottons and linens. It is 222 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3475.

HELOTS, the name of the aboriginal inhabitants of Laconia, in ancient Greece, who were kept in a state of most degraded and hopeless slavery by their Spartan conquerors. See SPARTA.

TO HELP, pret. helped, part. helped or holpen, v. a. [helpan, Sax. hilpan, Goth.] to assist a person in order to enable him to perform any thing. Figuratively, to free from pain or disease; to cure; to heal; to remedy; to promote; to forward. To help up, to enable a person to raise himself from the ground, who could not rise without assistance. To forbear, avoid, to refrain from, followed by a participle of the present tense. "I cannot help remarking," Pope. To carve, or hand meat to a person at table.

HELP, s. [hulpe, Belg.] assistance or aid in weakness; support in necessity; relief in distress; that which forwards or promotes; the person or thing which assists. A remedy, followed by for. "There is no help for it," Hodder. SYNON. We use the word help, in labour; succour, in danger; assist, in want; relieve, in distress.

HELPER, s. one who enables a person to perform any thing, by lending his assistance; a supernumerary servant, employed only occasionally; one who supplies with any thing wanted.

HELPLEFUL, a. useful; that supplies any defect either in bodily strength or understanding; wholesome or salutary; promoting or advancing any end.

HELPLESS, a. wanting power to succour oneself; wanting support or assistance; not to be remedied or altered for the better.

HELPLESSLY, ad. without succour or strength to support oneself.

HELPLESSNESS, s. want of strength to succour oneself.

HELISTONE, Cornwall. It is one of the towns appointed for the stamping of tin, and below the town is a tolerably good harbour, where several of the tin-ships take in their lading. It is 274 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3584.

HELTER-SKELTER, ad. in a confused manner; in a hurry; without any order or regularity.

HELVE, s. [heffe, Sax.] the handle of an axe.

HELVETIC, a. that which relates or belongs to the Swiss; whose ancient name was Helvetii.

HELVETIUS, CLAUDE ADRIAN, one of the materialist metaphysicians of the beginning of the last century in France. He was descended from an eminent Dutch physician of some note in France, and his father was royal physician. He was attached by some lucrative post to the court; but he was a speculator, and published the results of his cogitations in a work, which was condemned by the authorities. He left France for awhile, but returned and continued his speculations, and published the application of his system to education, &c. His scheme was the parent of others worse than it. Their entire inhumanity has rendered them innocuous.

HELVOETSLSUYS, a sea-port of Holland, on the S. side of the island of Voorn, in one of the mouths of the Meuse, with the best harbour on the coast. The principal part of the Dutch navy is laid up here, in a spacious basin at the end of the harbour. It is about 50 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. about 9000. Lat. 51. 45. N. Long. 4. 23. E.

HEM, s. [hem, Sax.] the edge of a garment doubled and sewed to keep it from ravelling; [hemmen, Belg.] the noise made by a sudden effort or expulsion of the breath.

HEM, interject. [Lat.] a word used to express an indirect dislike or astonishment at something related.

TO HEM, v. a. to close the edge of linen by turning it over, and sewing it down, in order to keep it from ravelling. Figuratively, to sew any thing on the edges of cloth, &c. To hem in, to enclose, confine, or surround on all sides. To make a noise by a violent fetching or expulsion of breath.

HEMANS, FELICIA, an eminent and greatly admired British poetess. Her father was a Liverpool merchant, who being embarrassed in his circumstances, retired to a lonely dwelling in Wales, where her romantic disposition found abundant food. She married an officer in the English army, who eventually left her with a large family, and her mother, to struggle on alone. Her circle of distinguished literary acquaintance increased with her successive publications, and her celebrity is now as a poet of the affections established. Her works, which are chiefly lyrical, are published now in six volumes. Her poetry is characterized by melody of verse, and uninterrupted glow of language.

HEMATITE, s. in Mineralogy, a kind of iron ore.

HEMI, s. a word used in the composition of divers terms, signifying the same with demi, or semi, viz. one half.

HEMICRANY, s. [hemi and kranion, Gr.] in Medicine, a pain which affects one half of the head at a time.

HEMICYCLE, s. [hemi and kuklos, Gr.] a half round.

HEMICA, s. [hemi, Gr.] an ancient measure, now used in medicine to signify about ten uncies in measure.

HEMIPLEGY, s. [hemi and plessio, Gr.] in Medicine, a palsy, or nervous disorder which seizes one side at a time.

HEMISPHERE, (hemisfere) s. [hemi and sphaira, Gr.] one half of a globe when cut through the centre, in the plane of one of its great circles.

HEMISPHERIC, HEMISPHERICAL, (hemisferik, hemisferikal) a. half round; conning half a globe.

HEMISTICH, s. [hemi and stichos, Gr.] half a verse.

HEMLOCK, s. [Sax.] in Botany, a plant sometimes used in Medicine, and in fattening hogs, but reckoned by the ancients a deadly poison.

HEMP, s. [hemp, Sax.] in Botany, a plant of which cordage and cloth is made; and of the seed, an oil used in medicine. Hemp agrimony, a plant found wild by ditches and sides of rivers.

HEMPEN, a. consisting or made of hemp.

HEMPSTED, or HEMEL HEMPSTED, Hertfordshire. It is seated among hills, on a branch of the river Coln, called the Gade. It is 23 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 7268.

HEN, s. [henne, Sax.] the female of the common house-cock; joined to words to express the female of such birds or fowls as have but one word for both sexes, as, hen-sparrow.

HENBANE, s. in Botany, a very poisonous plant.

HENBIT, s. in Botany, an herb, the same with the hedge nettle; the great henbit is a kind of archangel; the lesser, the ivy-leaved speedwell.

HENCE, ad. or interject. [hencan, Sax.] at a distance from any spot, applied to place. From any particular instance or period, applied to time. For this reason: from this cause; from this source. "Hence may be deduced the force of exercise," Arbuth. At the beginning of a sentence, it is used as an interjection, expressing sudden passion and disdain, bidding a person quit the place, or leave off an action. "Hence with your little ones," Shak. From hence is a pleonastic phrase.

HENCEFORTH, ad. [hencforth, Sax.] from this time forward.

HENCEFORTHWARD, ad. [hencan forweard, Sax.] from this time; to futurity.

HENCHMAN, s. [hync, Sax. and man,] a page; an attendant: a designation chiefly used in Scotland.

TO HEND, v. a. [hendan, Sax.] to seize or lay hold upon; to surround, or crowd.

HENDE/CAGON, s. [hendeka and gone, Gr.] in Geometry, a figure that has eleven sides, and as many angles.

HENDRIVER, HEN-HARM, HEN-HARRIER, s. in Natural History, a species of hawk.

HEN-HEARTED, a. easily frightened; timorous; cowardly, like a hen.

HENLEY UPON THAMES, Oxfordshire. It is seated on the Thames, over which it has a large, elegant stone bridge, and by which prodigious quantities of malt, corn, flour, and wood are sent to London by barges. It is 35 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Pop. 3622.

HENLEY IN ARDEN, Warwickshire. It is situated near the river Arrow, 102 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1223.

HENNA, s. [Arab.] a vegetable dye used by the ladies of the East for staining their nails, and parts of their hands and feet, according to their notions of beauty.

HEN-PECKED, a. figuratively, subject to, or governed by, a wife.

HEN-ROOST, s. a place where poultry rest.

HENRY I., the third Norman king of England, and the youngest son of William the Conqueror. He was surnamed Beauclerc, or good scholar, from the character of his education. He was not appointed by his father's will to any part of his dominions; but he contrived to buy part of Normandy from his brother Robert, who was always glad to get money at any price. When his brother William Rufus was shot in the New Forest, Henry secured the royal treasure at Winchester, and thus succeeded to the crown without opposition. He rendered himself popular with all classes, at first, by profuse promises; and won the hearts of the Saxons, by engaging to restore the laws of Edward the Confessor, and by marrying Maud, the Scottish king's daughter, who was descended from the Anglo-Saxon race. But England reaped little good from all this. The poor were ground down by his extortions; and the rapacity of the nobles and the clergy made their sufferings worse. Yet the royal power was exercised in checking the power of these classes; and though in darkness, the foundation of future good was laid. Henry had bought Normandy of Robert, when he joined the first crusade; and after his return, contrived to keep possession of it; Robert was defeated by his brother, and most barbarously imprisoned and blinded by his orders. Henry had one excellent trait of character; he was truly fond of his children, and no grief so nearly touched his heart as the loss of his son by Maud, and of one of his illegitimate daughters at sea. Henry was more than once at war with the French king; but in the end gained the advantage over him. He married a second wife on Maud's death; but he had no issue by her, and left his crown to his daughter Maud; dying in 1135, in consequence of a surfeit, aged 66 years, and having reigned 34.

HENRY II. was grandson to Henry I., and succeeded Stephen, according to a treaty made when his mother gave up the contest with him for the crown. As soon as he was crowned he began in good earnest the reformation of the country; and proceeded so rigorously that he speedily reduced the turbulent nobility to some degree of submission. At the great council of the realm held at Clarendon, he procured the passing of laws or Constitutions, which brought the clergy under his control also, and deprived the pope of his chief advantage for troubling England. But having associated with him in his reform of the nobility, the famous Thomas à Becket, and found his energy of great service; he thought to be aided by him in his attempts on the clergy, and to effect this made the favourite (against his will) Archbishop of Canterbury. Becket at once sided against his patron, and with his order; and a contest ensued, which embroiled Henry with the king of France and the pope; and ended in Becket's murder, (or, as the churchmen called it, martyrdom,) and Henry's penance and flagellation at his tomb. Various circumstances in Wales, France, and Ireland, gave Henry the opportunity of extending his dominions, so that he grew to be the most powerful monarch of Europe, after the emperor. But now he was doomed to domestic trials; his sons rebelled, and joined with the French king and his own discontented nobility in taking up arms against him. His own queen, who was not a whit more chaste than himself, aided and encouraged this unnatural revolt. Repeated treaties were made and broken; and at last the unhappy king saw his youngest and favourite son, John, forsake him; and, broken-hearted, he died in 1189, aged 57 years, having reigned 34. The people during all these years fared as they could; reaping scantily the advantages of the more regular administration of the laws, and silently and slowly advancing in strength. Ireland was partially conquered, and dates from this reign its servitude, beggary, and degradation. The romantic tale of Henry's favourite mistress, Fair Rosamond, who, concealed in a labyrinth at Woodstock, was discovered and poisoned by the queen, is familiar to all.

HENRY III. was son and successor of John, and began his long and turbulent reign when he was but 10 years old. The majority of the nobility were at this time wreaking their vengeance on the crown by the aid of Louis, king of France; but by the skill and power of the regent, the Earl of Pembroke, were soon reduced, and their foreign ally driven out of the kingdom. On Pembroke's death, Hubert de Burgh succeeded to his post; who speedily had the king declared of age, summoned a parliament, and by consenting to the ratification of Magna Charta, obtained aid from the nobles, and the imposition of a tax, to carry on a war against the French king for the recovery of part of the continental dominions. But De Burgh was no favourite of the barons, and his character gradually made him lose the king's grace; after some pretences of legal proceedings against him, he was left unmolested, and Peter de Roches, Bishop of Winchester, who had at first shared De Burgh's regency, took his place. De Burgh had awakened the jealousy of the nobles by his leaning to foreigners; De Roches was more daring in the display of his favour to them; and having compassed the marriage of Henry to Eleanor of Provence, he so surrounded the court with them, that the barons openly declared their discontent. The king, who could obtain supplies only by their votes, promised each parliament to dismiss his courtiers; but having obtained the money, did not fulfil his engagement; and proceeded to violate the great charter in the most open manner. Meanwhile his reverses in France did not serve to assuage the animosity which was now fermenting against him. A new character now appeared in the opposition, Simon de Montfort, a foreign nobleman, but possessing an English earldom, and in decided opposition to the king, who, at the celebrated parliament at Oxford in 1258, carried the appointment of a council of state, half only to be nominated by the king. De Montfort, who ruled in this council, compelled all its proceedings to take a direction of complete hostility to the king; for they had found him to be utterly untrustworthy, having abused the advantage he gained in consequence of some victories in Gascony, and the alliance of his son Edward with the royal family of Castile, to infringe all the provisions of the charter, and to violate his most solemn oaths. After various attempts to reconcile the claims of the king and the nobility, civil war broke out, and various battles were fought. Prince Edward, who lost the battle of Lewes, and was taken prisoner with his father, made reprisals by gaining the victory at Evesham, when his great opponent was killed. Thus fell the power of the nobility; and Henry passed the rest of his reign undisturbed in his enjoyment of almost absolute rule, except by an attempt made by De Montfort's rival, the Earl of Gloucester, to carry on the cause in which De Montfort fell, which was speedily put down by Prince Edward. Henry died in 1272, aged 66 years, and having borne the title of king for 56. The political existence of the middle classes dates from this reign; the sheriffs of counties being required to send two knights from each to the parliament; and the municipal authorities to send from cities and boroughs, two burgesses. This was actually the admission of a wholly new element into the legislature. For the burgesses were not of the military, nor of the clerical class, who alone were admitted to the councils of the sovereign before. But it is singular in the extreme, that in spite of all the advance made by the nation from that day to the present, the wars that have been carried on, the statutory changes that have been made, the ostensible increase of the popular element in parliament, not a step has been taken which is truly an advance on this summoning of the burgesses to parliament in this particular direction. In the 19th century, the conditions of citizenship are virtually the same as they were in the 13th. All that are not possessed of real property are even more completely disfranchised than they were then.

HENRY IV., son of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and deposer and successor of his cousin Richard II. He had incurred the ill-will of Richard by taking part in some armed attempts of the nobility to check his tyranny; but was seemingly admitted to favour again. Being banished the realm on occasion of a solemn duel with the Duke of Norfolk, he found that the king had seized his patrimonial estates on John of Gaunt's death. He had long been a favourite of the people, and he resolved at once to make reprisals by depriving the tyrant and traitor of his crown. Availing himself of Richard's absence in Ireland, he descended on the Yorkshire coast, was joined by Percy, Duke of Northumberland, and others, and with a formidable army marched on London. Every thing fell before him; and Richard returning found all was lost, and himself a prisoner. He formally abdicated the throne, and the parliament as formally installed Henry. Some beneficial measures characterized his first parliaments; but attention was soon called to other subjects. A plot was formed to deliver Richard, and to assassinate Henry, but the popularity of the king prevented its success. Richard shortly after died, or was murdered, at Pontefract Castle. There were rumours of a war with France; and Scotland and Wales did actually make war on England. The Scots were defeated by the famous Hotspur, the son of Henry's first supporter. In Wales, however, Owen Glendower defeated all sent against him, and took Percy's kinsman, Edmund Mortimer, prisoner. A new scene now opens; Henry offended Percy, by refusing to sanction Mortimer's release; and a rebellion was organized, including the Scots, the Welsh, Percy, the warlike Archbishop of York, and others, who were all totally routed at Shrewsbury, in a great battle, in which the Prince of Wales greatly distinguished himself for courage and military skill. Glendower did not submit, and peace was made with him in the following reign. On the Scots Henry took ample vengeance by taking prisoner their king's eldest son. For some years still Henry had to meet and defeat such attempts as these; till wearied out in body and mind, he died in 1413, aged 46 years, and having reigned above 13. This was the first scene of that bloody tragedy which for so many years was being enacted in England, the wars of the houses of York and Lancaster; and there can be no doubt that the concessions made by Henry to establish his popularity, and secure the revolution, tended to advance popular liberty. But it should be remembered, that in this reign was first put in force, against the followers of John Wicliffe, that most barbarous statute by which heretics were burnt to death.

HENRY V., son and successor of the foregoing king, was known as a brave and successful soldier, and as a careless roisterer, who should strike the judge on the bench if he offended him. Henry soon determined on the course he should pursue; and rightly judging that he should not make his name dreaded in France, if it were not loved in England, he at once recalled the Percies, and restored them to all their honours and dignities, and set at liberty the Earl of March, whom his father had imprisoned as a dangerous rival to him respecting the crown. Delayed for a brief time to crush a conspiracy got up against him by the Earl of Cambridge, he speedily crossed the Channel, and laid claim to Normandy. The victory of Agincourt, won against superior numbers, brought all France to his feet, and the treaty of Troyes settled that on the death of the king of France the crown should devolve to Henry, who should administer the government for his imbecile opponent, and marry Catharine of Valois. But on Henry's return to England, the dauphin rallied all who loved France round him, and, aided by a body of Scotch adventurers, defeated the English forces, and slew the Duke of Clarence. Henry hastened to Paris, but it was only to die. He had but one son, not a year old, but he made the best arrangements possible, and died in 1422, aged 33 years, and having reigned 10. This is the second scene of the rivalry of the Roses; as yet all seems fair, and under the influence of a military and popular king, what was so threatening during the preceding reign seems to have lost its terror.

HENRY VI., the son and successor of the foregoing, was not more than three quarters of a year old when his father died, leaving the war in France in a more entangled state than ever, owing to the death of the French king, which very speedily followed. At first the English army carried all before them; but very soon they began to meet with difficulties, which the appearance of Joan of Arc, at the head of the French, greatly increased. The subsequent capture of Joan, and the cruel execution of her as a witch, did not restore success. Reverse followed reverse, with few checks, till nothing was left to England of all her ancient possessions but the town of Calais alone. Henry had married Margaret of Anjou, a fierce-tempered and powerful woman, who exercised a most unhappy influence on the almost childish king. The great statesmen of the former part of this reign were the Duke of Gloucester and Cardinal Beaufort, who had by their rivalry brought the kingdom to the verge of ruin. Gloucester was put to death in prison, and the Cardinal was now dead. The Duke of Suffolk succeeded them; but the House of Commons, who attributed to him the death of Gloucester, and who, by the king's weakness, had acquired and exercised great power, charged him with high treason; and when the king had interferred and released him, had him beheaded on the high seas. At this time occurred those popular tumults, of which the insurrection of Jack Cade was the most daring; which were not easily nor cheaply suppressed. The king's idiosyncy now made a regency needful; and this introduced the actual wars of the Roses. Richard, Duke of York, was descended from an elder son of Edward III. than Henry, and on this fact rested his claim to the crown. Henry's idiosyncy, the murder of Gloucester, the character of the queen and of the Duke of Somerset, the treasons of Suffolk, all strengthened his cause amongst the people. The Earl of Warwick, who was destined to be the most remarkable actor in this war, was on the side of the Yorkists. The first fight was at St. Alban's, where the royalists were dispersed, and the king fell into the hands of the victors. The contest lasted for 30 years, and there were 12 pitched battles fought. The Yorkists gained those at Blore Heath and Northampton; in the last of which the king was taken prisoner. But the queen collected another army, and gained a battle at Wakefield, in which the Duke of York was killed. She ordered his head to be cut off and fixed on the gates of York, and perpetrated some most horrid butcheries under the name of martial law. Edward, the son of the Duke of York, took his title and carried on the war. He won at Mortimer's Cross; but lost the day at a second battle at St. Alban's. He was victorious at Towton, and then caused himself to be crowned as king; and again, after Margaret had received help from France, at Hexham. The unfortunate king was discovered in his lurking-place, and thrown into the Tower. But a strange reverse now happened. Warwick, offended to discover that Edward's hot haste to wed Elizabeth Woodville had rendered nugatory all his diplomacy on account of Bona of Savoy, changed sides, and expelled Edward from England, restoring the miserable Henry. But at a second engagement at Barnet, after Edward returned, he was defeated and slain. Margaret, who with her son Edward landed that same day, heedless of the omen, advanced to Tewkesbury, where she was totally overthrown, being taken with the prince, who was murdered at Edward's suggestion,

This hapless king was, as is believed, shortly after murdered in the Tower, in 1471, aged 50 years, during almost the whole of which he had been a titular king. This reign, though not the end of the tragedy, was the most bloody scene of all. The immediate result of all this carnage was the establishment of the absolutism of the Tudors; for of the nobility, few families escaped loss either by battle or proscription. But a great advantage was given to popular power, though it did not unfold itself so as to challenge the attention of the world for near 200 years. Kings can easily avail themselves of advantages for securing their ends. A people moves slowly, except in times of revolution.

HENRY VII., the first monarch of England of the Tudor dynasty, the overthrower and successor of Richard III., was descended from John of Gaunt on his mother's side, and from the widowed queen of Henry V. on his father's; and thus embodied all the claims of the house of Lancaster. He was in exile in Brittany, when the Duke of Buckingham, who had aided Richard III. in his usurpation, being disconcerted, invited him to join in an insurrection against him. Buckingham, however, did not await his arrival, but rose and was taken and executed, thus ridding the field of a formidable rival to Henry's claims. Henry landed in Wales, and met Richard at Bosworth in Leicestershire, where he gained the victory, and his opponent fell. In order to strengthen his title to the throne, he, after long delay, married Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of Edward IV., thus bringing to an end that disastrous rivalry which had brought such severe sufferings on England. But he was not allowed to retain his throne wholly in peace. After a feeble effort by an English nobleman, the Duchess of Burgundy, sister of Edward IV., obtained one Lambert Simnel, who undertook to personate a brother of Richard III., (who was actually Henry's prisoner at the time,) and was proclaimed king, being joined by the discontented nobility. He was defeated in a decisive battle; and made a turnspit in the royal kitchen, by the king's clemency and contempt. Six years afterwards appeared another claimant of the throne, respecting whom historians are yet divided as to whether he was an impostor or not. He claimed to be the young Duke of York, who was said to have been murdered in the Tower along with Edward V.; the king's party called him Perkin Warbeck. He received support from all the Yorkists, and from the Scottish king also, but he was as unsuccessful as Simnel, being defeated and taken prisoner, and afterwards executed, together with the Earl of Warwick, whom Simnel had pretended to be. A pretended war with France, and the marriage of the king's eldest daughter to the Scottish king, whence sprang the unhappy Stuarts, are the only other events of particular note. Some improvements in the laws of treason, a treaty of commerce with Burgundy, and the establishment of the Star Chamber, also occurred in this reign. Henry had two objects which he steadily pursued; to put down the nobility, which he effected both by punishments and privileges; and to accumulate money, and in this he was equally successful. Lord Bacon, to gratify James I., wrote a fine history of this king, making him a complete realization of James's great ideal. But Henry was not such an adept in kingcraft as Bacon has said; nor was his reign so unmitigated an evil as might be concluded from his narrative. Commerce, which now stretched her arms to the East and West Indies, through the great discoveries of Columbus, Vasco de Gama, and others, was beginning to store up power in the hands of the middle classes, against a day not far distant; and the king by his very avarice aided its work. And the printing press was beginning to send abroad knowledge, which is power; and to prepare men for the events of the coming reign.

HENRY VIII., son and successor of Henry VII., began his reign with fair promises for England. His first public act was the attainder of Dudley and Empson, his father's instruments of extortion, which gained him great popular favour. He next joined in the league formed by the emperor against France, and defeated the French at the battle of Spurs; and on occasion of an irruption of the Scotch, to co-operate with the French, he utterly routed them at Flodden Field, where their king and most of the nobles engaged were slain. We find him next an ally of Francis I. of France at the splendid nuptials of the Field of Cloth of Gold; and then in league with the emperor, and afterwards changing his side more than once. But events of a novel chaacter followed. Lutner was shaking the papacy, and Henry, whose skill in theology was not remarkable, undertook to attack him; by which he earned from the pope the style of Defender of the Faith, yet borne by the English sovereign. Henry had married his elder brother's widow, Catharine of Arragon; but now smitten with the charms of one of the ladies of her court, Anna Boleyn, he felt his conscience troubled, and troubled every theological faculty in Europe, to obtain an opinion that would enable him to divorce Catharine. Cardinal Wolsey was Henry's minister, and he was opposed to Henry on this point. Anna Boleyn had imbibed a species of friendly regard for the Reformation. Wolsey fell, and Henry in overthrowing him felt that he could easily do without the pope, nay, be pope himself. He was aided in his determination by Cranmer, a priest who had drunk largely at the fountain-head of the Reformation; and he declared himself the Head of the Church, and married Anna Boleyn. Cranmer was rewarded with the see of Canterbury; and this singular Reformation was aided by the ready hand of Thomas Cromwell, who was made one of the chief officers of the crown. The next steps of Henry were in blood; the Holy Maid of Kent, a foolish impostor, by which more foolish people hoped to combat Henry's Reformation, Fisher of Rochester, and the good Sir Thomas More, were executed. The queen had not the hap to bear Henry a son; and he was sated with possession. He had set his affections on Jane Seymour, and Anna Boleyn, on the ground of a most infamous trial, and more infamous judgment, was executed. The king married his new idol the very same morning. Cromwell was now appointed (layman as he was) vicar-general of the Church, and was commissioned to suppress the religious houses, and seize their estates; which he did in spite of a revolt, much to his master's satisfaction. At the same time the Bible was translated into English, and copies were placed in all churches; which was almost the only good thing of the English Reformation. A creed was formally proclaimed; a terrible affair; for it differed scarce a whit from Romanism, and the penalty was death by burning. It was called, from its effects, the Bloody Statute. The queen had died in giving birth to a son; and now a new wife was to be sought for Henry. Anne of Cleves was fixed on; but Holheim's peccil had been too flattering; and the poor lady was divorced with a handsome pension. It was now that another influence came to light; Gardiner of Winchester, and Bonner of London, bishops of Henry's church, effected such a modification of this strange reformer's views, that Cromwell, who had been made Earl of Essex, fell into disgrace, and after the formality of a trial was executed. The Marquis of Exeter, and Margaret Pole, were also executed, on pretext of a conspiracy; really, as being descended from the house of York. Catharine Howard was Henry's next wife; but she was proved to have been a person of very irregular life, and this was declared to be treason, wherefore she was executed; and the king soon after married a widow, Catharine Parr. She was favourable to the Reformation, and narrowly escaped being destroyed by Gardiner. A war with France and a skirmish with Scotland diversified the concluding years of this reign; and executions for alleged heresy and for alleged treason proceeded as before. Amongst others, the Earl of Surrey fell. His father, the Duke of Norfolk, was sentenced, but death struck the executioner, and he escaped. Henry died in 1547, aged 56 years, and having reigned above 34. One of the most affecting comments on this king is the fact, that at least 72,000 persons perished by the hand of the executioner during his reign. His absolutism was that of a tyrant. His reformation involved not a single principle of truth for him. Yet it served to screen the growth of genuine principle and truth in not a few hearts; and the public reading of the Scriptures in English carried on in this country, in secret, a work similar to that which appeared more publicly in the German states and Switzerland.

HENRY, the name of four kings of France, the last of whom was called Henry the Great. He was born at Pau, on the N. slope of the Pyrenees, and was brought up a Huguenot, or Protestant. In the troubled state of France at that period he appeared, in consequence of his rank as king of Navarre, as one of the leaders; and in the civil wars he fought at the head of the Huguenots. His character already showed itself; for he professed Romanism to escape death, which, in spite of his marriage with the king's sister, threatened him. On the death of Henry

Henry VIII.

III. he succeeded to the throne, but not without opposition; for the holy league proclaimed the Cardinal of Bourbon as Charles X. But Henry's good fortune, after another war, prevailed; and under Turenne, and other famous generals, his forces completely overthrew his rival. He had embraced the Roman Catholic faith now again openly; and so had conciliated all the most powerful leaders of the opposition, and was thus at length seated at peace on the throne. During the rest of his reign, aided by his wise and virtuous friend and minister, Sully, he constantly endeavoured to restore peace and order to his kingdom; and by the Edict of Nantes he procured a partial tranquillity for the Huguenots. He was at length just about to attempt his long-cherished scheme for humbling Austria; when he was assassinated by Ravallac, in 1610, aged 57 years, having reigned for 21. His memory was most popular amongst the French people, in consequence of the statutes and edicts in their favour which he passed, till the Revolution made the very name of king hateful.

HENRY, the name of seven emperors of Germany, of whom the first, surnamed the Fowler, was the most famous. His renown is founded on the skill with which he consolidated the empire, and provided for its internal peace and strength. He died in 936, having reigned 16 years.

HENRY THE NAVIGATOR, was the fourth son of John, king of Portugal, who, living in the age of the most remarkable geographical discoveries of modern times, aided them by his person, efforts, and patronage. He was a brave and skilful soldier, and well versed in the science of the times. He applied the magnetic needle to the purposes of navigation, and is the reputed inventor of several astronomical instruments. He died in 1463, aged 69 years.

HENRY OF HUNTINGDON, an old English chronicler, whose History of England reaches to 1154. He died in 1168.

HENRY, MATTHEW, the more celebrated son of the eminently pious Philip Henry, and one of the most deservedly popular of English commentators on the Scriptures. His father was one of the ejected ministers at the English St. Bartholomew in 1662; and he was engaged as a Dissenting minister at Chester, and afterwards at Hackney, London. His piety was most distinguished, and it is this which gives the great charm to his Exposition. But his learning was quite equal to that of the best scholars of his day, especially in relation to the Bible. He died in 1714, aged 52 years.

HENRY, DR. ROBERT, one of the many writers of English history. He was a minister of the Scotch Church, and enjoyed some eminence in it. His work, which he did not live to complete, is constructed on a very ingenious and clear plan, by which the advance of the nation in laws, literature, science, &c. is exhibited, as well as the customary biographies of the monarchs. He died in 1790, aged 72 years.

HENRY, DR. WILLIAM, an eminent chemist of the last age, which was so distinguished for the progress of chemical science. His experiments were directed chiefly to the discovery of the properties of various gases. He wrote a small work on chemistry, and died in 1836, aged 61. His son, Dr. Charles Henry, pursued his father's steps, but was more remarkable for his eloquence as a lecturer, and for his generosity in aiding discoverers, than for any discoveries of his own. He committed suicide in the same year that his father died.

HEP/NSFEET, s. in Botany, the hedge fumitory.

HEPATIC, HEPATICAL, a. [hepaticus, Lat.] belonging to, or situated in, the liver.

HEPS, HIPS, s. in Botany, the berries of the dog-rose brier.

HEPTACA/PSULAR, a. [hepta, Gr. and capsa, Lat.] having seven cavities or cells.

HEPTAGON, s. [hepta and gone, Gr.] a figure with seven sides or angles.

HEPTAGONAL, a. having seven angles or sides.

HEPTARCHY, (heptarchy), s. [hepta and arche, Gr.] the name commonly assigned to the earliest period of the established Anglo-Saxon government in England; when there were seven (or more correctly eight) different kingdoms, independent of each other, except for mutual defence against foreign invasion. One of the monarchs was usually elected as supreme king, with the title Bretwalda. At length, after various changes, it was all merged in the sovereignty of Athelstan, and never revived.

HE/PTATEUCH, a name given to the first seven books of the Bible, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, and Judges.

HER, the genitive and objective case of she.

HERACLID/E, the name of a branch of the Dorian race, in ancient Greece, who were sprung from Hercules; and who, after a period of banishment from their native state, effected the overthrow of their opponents, and established themselves as masters of the greater part of the Peloponnus. This event, which is commonly called the return of the Heraclidae, took place in 1104 B. C.

HERACLITUS, an ancient Greek philosopher, who has been handed down by tradition as the Weeping Philosopher. He was a decided misanthrope, and justified his abhorrence of men by their corrupt and dissolute manners. But he did little to make them better, and his proud condemnation of them did harm rather than good. He was called the Obscure, because of the style of his teaching; and his philosophy chiefly related to the origin of things, and of our knowledge of them. He designated the ultimate principle of things by the name Fire; but it was evidently but a figurative title. He held the source of true knowledge to be the senses; but many of his enigmatical sayings point to a far more spiritual belief. He flourished in about 450 B. C.

HERALD, s. [Teut.] an officer who registers genealogies, determines armorial bearings, &c.; an officer at arms, whose business it is to declare war, to proclaim peace, to marshal all the solemnity at a coronation, christening, marriage, and funeral of princes, to emblazon and examine coats of arms, &c. Heralds were formerly held in much greater esteem than at present, and were created with great solemnity by kings alone. Their persons were esteemed sacred. The three chief Heralds in England are called Kings at Arms, the principal of which is Garter; the next is called Clarenceux; and the third Norroy, these two last are called Provincial Heralds. Besides these, there are seven others inferior Heralds, viz. York, Lancaster, Somerset, Chester, Richmond, Windsor, and Gloucester. From the reign of George I. to that of William IV. there was an eighth, styled Hanover Herald. Figuratively, a forerunner, omen, or token of something future.

To HERALD, v. a. to introduce as by a herald.

HERALDRY, s. [heraulderie, Fr.] the art of armoury and blazoning, which comprehends the knowledge of what relates to solemn cavalcades and ceremonies of coronations, instalments, the creation of peers, nuptials, funerals, &c. Also, whatever relates to the bearing of arms, assigning those that belong to all persons, regulating their right and precedencies in point of honour, and restraining those who have not a just claim from bearing coats of arms that do not belong to them. See BLAZONING, ARMS, SHIELD, BEARING, &c.

HERAULT, a department of France, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by the departments of Gard, Lozère, Aveyron, Tarn, and Aude. It is about 80 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The chain of the Cevennes passes through its inland border; and its rivers are the Herault, (whence its name), the Vidourle, the Salazou, &c., which form at their mouths large sheets of water communicating with the sea, and extending nearly all along its coast. It yields coal, some metals, and valuable kinds of stone; good corn, wine, fruits, timber, &c. It has also extensive silk, cotton, and woollen manufactures. Montpellier is its chief town. Pop. about 400,000.

HERB, s. (the h is mute in this word and its derivatives; erb;) [herbe, Fr.] in Botany, a plant whose stalks are soft, and not woody; as grass or hemlock. In Cookery, a plant whose leaves are used in sauces, &c., as sage or mint.

HERBA/CEOUS, a. [herbaceus, Lat.] belonging to, or having the properties of, herbs. Feeding on vegetables.

HER/BAGE, s. [Fr.] a collective or general term applied to several sorts of herbs; grass, or pasture. In Law, the title and right of pasture.

HER/BAL, s. a book containing the names and descriptions of plants.

HER/BALIST, HER/BARIST, s. a person skilled in plants.

HER/BELET, s. diminutive of herb; a small herb.

HERBELOT, BARTHOLOMEW D', a learned Oriental scholar of France in the 17th century. He travelled twice to Italy to obtain manuscripts, and information from scholars and travellers; and was appointed Syriac professor at Paris. He died in 1695, aged 70 years.

HERBERT OF CHERBURY, LORD EDWARD, one of those philosophers whose name has been always included in the list of celebrated infidels; but who was, in fact, one of those whose writings have in a most remarkable manner anticipated the highest flights of spiritual philosophy in the present day. He studied at Oxford, and gained some military skill in the continental wars. He was afterwards in favour at court; but during the civil war espoused at first the Parliament's cause, and afterwards deserted it for the king's. He died in 1633, aged 67 years. His philosophy is based on the doctrine of con-natural (or innate) ideas; and thus has met with little favour. He bases religion on this spiritual faculty in man, instead of making it a mere authoritatively bestowed revelation; and so has never had, till of late years, any in England who would, or could consistently with their philosophies or theologies, admit him to know any thing of it. Metaphysical students will find many parts of his works very useful and curious; but there was a futility, or love of paradox, about his mind, which at times makes him seem very inconsistent.

HERBERT, GEORGE, brother of the preceding; one of the most original and spiritual of the English sacred poets. He was a devoted son of the Church of England according to the theory of Laud, the non-jurors, and the recent Oxford school; and traces of these views occur often in his poems. But few of the productions of his age, of this kind, are so truly excellent, or so truly poetical. His other works are, a beautiful and simple sketch of the character of a country parson, a collection of proverbs, some Latin poems, &c. He died in 1633, aged 39 years.

HERBESCENT, a. growing into herbs.

HERBID, HERBOUS, HERBULENT, a. covered with, abounding in, or containing herbs.

HERBWOMAN, s. a woman who sells herbs.

HERBY, a. partaking of the nature of herbs.

HERCULANEUM, an ancient city of Italy, near Naples; which was destroyed by the same eruption of Mount Vesuvius which overwhelmed Pompeii. But it has been covered with lava as well as ashes, and so cannot be explored as the other city has been. Paintings, statues, furniture, domestic utensils, &c. &c. have been recovered from the part that was excavated. And along with these many rolls of papyrus, completely charred; which have however been unrolled with great ingenuity, and the writing deciphered and copied. It has hardly rewarded the patience of the investigators. The theatre of the city is the only part that remains open now.

HERCULEAN, a. a term applied to that which requires much strength, labour, and difficulty to perform.

HERCULES, a hero of ancient Greece; whose birth, deeds, and death all show that he is a mythic person. He was the son of Zeus (or Jupiter) and Alcmena; was persecuted by the jealous Hera in his cradle, but strangled the serpents she sent to destroy him. He is famed for 12 prodigious exploits, called his labours, which he performed at the command of the feeble and fearful king of Mycenae, Eurystheus. They were such deeds as the slaying of a hydra, a boar, a lion, the harpies, &c.; the cleansing of the Augean stable, by turning a river through it, &c. &c. He was enslaved by a passion for Omphale of Lydia, who made him spin for her, and wear her clothes. The tales told of him are very numerous. He died in consequence of putting on a poisoned garment, given him as a love-charm by his wife, who had received it from the centaur Nessus. The Choice of Hercules is a beautiful but more recent fable, in which the superiority of manly virtue, with all its toils, over unmanly sloth and pleasure is exhibited.

HERCULES, s. in Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

HERCULES-PILLARS, in Ancient Geography, the two mountains which form the Straits of Gibraltar; namely, Calpe on the side of Europe, and Avila on the side of Africa.

HERD, s. [herd, Sax.] a number or multitude of beasts, generally applied to cattle; flocks being applied to sheep. Figuratively, or in contempt, a company of men.

To HERD, v. n. to gather together in multitudes or companies, applied both to men and beasts; to associate, or mix in any company.

HERDER, JOHN GODFREY VON, a great German poet, philosopher, theologian, jurist, and historian, whose many writings are now placed amongst the classics of Germany. After various minor engagements he settled as Professor of Theology at Göttingen; and was attached to the court of the Duke of Weimar, at the time it was adorned by Goethe and Wieland. His character was most exemplary, and he died in 1803, aged 57 years.

HERDGRROOM, HERDSMAN, s. a keeper of herds or cattle.

HERE, ad. [her, Sax. hier, Belg.] the place where a person is present. This place, applied to situation. The present state, opposed to a future one. Joined with there, it implies, in no certain place. "This neither here nor there," Shak. It is also used in making an offer or attempt.

HEREABOUTS, ad. near this place.

HEREAFTER, ad. after the present time. Used substantively for a future state. "Points out an hereafter," Addison.

HEREAT, ad. at this.

HEREBY, ad. by this; by this means.

HEREEDITABLE, a. [heres, Lat.] that may be enjoyed by right of inheritance.

HEREEDITAMENT, s. in Law, an inheritance, or estate descending by inheritance.

HEREEDITARILY, ad. by inheritance.

HEREEDITARY, a. possessed or claimed by right of inheritance; descending by inheritance. Hereditary diseases are such as children derive from their parents.

HEREFORD, Herefordshire. It is pleasantly and commodiously seated among delightful meadows and rich corn-fields, and is almost encompassed by the Wye and two other rivers, over which are two bridges. It is a large place, and had six parish churches, but two of them were demolished in the civil wars. It had also a castle, which has been long destroyed. It is a bishop's see, and the cathedral is a handsome structure. The chief manufacture is gloves, many of which are sent to London. The streets are broad and paved. It is 136 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Pop. 10,921.

HEREFORDSHIRE, a county of England lying next Wales, and bounded by Shropshire, Gloucestershire, Worcestershire, and Monmouthshire. It extends about 38 miles from N. to S., and 33 from E. to W. It is divided into 11 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 6 market towns, 176 parishes, and 391 villages. The air is healthy, the climate mild, the soil generally fertile, producing wheat, barley, oats, clover, turnips, &c., a principal part of the land being employed in tillage; the face of the country is rich, beautiful, and picturesque; and it abounds with wood. It produces excellent cider, and the pastures abound with sheep, whose wool is of a very fine quality. The principal rivers are the Wye, Munnow, Lug, and Frome, all of which are well stored with fish and salmon in particular. Hereford is its chief place. Pop. 113,878. It sends seven members to parliament.

HEREIN, ad. in this; in this case, sense, or respect.

HEREINTO, ad. into this.

HEREMITICAL, a. (more properly eremitical), [eremos, Gr.] solitary; suitable to a hermit.

HEREOF, ad. from hence; from this; of this.

HEREON, ad. upon this.

HERESARCH, (heresiarch), s. [hairesis and arche, Gr.] a leader, inventor, chief, or head, of a heresy.

HERESY, s. [hairesis, Gr.] in the New Testament it signifies a number of persons holding the same opinions, of the same faith; and, in a bad sense, persons guilty of a practical departure from the gospel, or such as were accustomed to immoral practices. In Ecclesiastical affairs, it signifies such as refuse to take up the doctrines and opinions that are promulgated by authority. As a term of reproach against such as think for themselves, it is still in use.

HERETIC, s. one who thinks for himself, or refuses submission to authority in matters of faith.

HERETICAL, a. containing heresy.

HERETICALLY, ad. after the manner of a heretic; with heresy; contrary to ecclesiastical authority.

HERETO, ad. to this; to this.

HERETOFORE, ad. before the present time; formerly.

HEREUNTO, ad. to this.

REFERENCE TO

1. Brooscath
2. Regus Lacy
3. Greystree
4. Grimsworth
5. Huntingdon
6. Radlow

The County returns 3 men.

THE HUNDREDS.

7. Streetford
8. Webtree
9. Wymore
10. Wolphsy
11. Wormelow

Boundary of Berouthe

HERE
FORD
SHIRE

HEREWITH, ad. with this.

HERIOT, s. [herigild, Sax.] in Law, a fine paid to the lord at the death of a landholder, generally the best thing in the possession of the landholder.

HERITABLE, a. [heres, Lat.] in Law, that may be inherited.

HERITAGE, s. [Fr.] an inheritance; an estate descending by right of inheritance; an estate.

HERMA/PHRODITE, (hermafródite) s. [Hermes and Aphrodite, Gr.] the name of the son of Hermes and Aphrodite, in Grecian Mythology. In Physiology, partaking of the characteristics of both sexes. In Farming, a kind of cart, to which an additional pair of wheels can be fitted, so that it can be used as a wagon.

HERMAPHRODITICAL, (hermafróditical) a. partaking of both sexes.

HERMAS, in Ecclesiastical History, an early writer of the Christian church, reckoned amongst the apostolical Fathers. His work is called the Shepherd, and consists of tedious and absurd visions and allegories.

HERMES, in ancient Greek Mythology, one of the gods, who was employed as the messenger of the other gods, and was called by the Latins Mercury. See MERCURY.

HERMES TRISMEGISTUS, an Egyptian priest, and theosopher. He is a mythic person, and had ascribed to him all the symbolical and secret part of the national worship.

HERMETIC, HERMETICAL, a. [from Hermes,] chemical.

HERMETICALLY, ad. in a chemical manner. A term applied to the closing of any orifice so as to render it air-tight.

HERMIT, s. [eremos, Gr.] in Ecclesiastical affairs, a person who lives in a desert, or at a distance from men, for the sake of contemplation or devotion.

HERMITAGE, s. [Fr.] the cell or dwelling of a hermit. That near Warkworth, in Northumberland, is well preserved. It contains three apartments, hollowed in the solid rock, and hanging over the river in the most picturesque manner, with a covering of ancient hoary trees, reliques of the venerable woods in which this fine solitude was embowered.

HERMITICAL, a. like a hermit; suitable to a hermit.

HERMODACTYL, s. [Hermes and dactylus, Gr.] a medicinal root of a determinate and regular figure, and representing the common figure of a heart cut in two, from half an inch to an inch in length. It comes from Egypt and Syria, and was formerly used as a gentle cathartic.

HERN, a. See HERON.

HERNIA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, any kind of rupture.

HERO, s. [heros, Gr.] a man eminent for bravery; a person of distinguished merit, abilities, or virtues; the chief person in an epic poem, or in a piece of historical painting.

HERO, a mathematician and natural philosopher of Alexandria, who constructed various machines, and amongst the rest one moved by steam. He lived about 100 B. C. Another of the same name lived in the 7th century A. D. And the writings of both of them were greatly prized.

HEROD, the family name of several princes, who were conspicuous in Jewish history about the time of the Christian era. Herod the Great, after being governor of various parts of Syria, was appointed king of the Jews, and took part in the wars between Antony and Augustus. He rebuilt the temple and Jerusalem, and fortified many places in Palestine. His conduct towards his beautiful wife Mariamne has been the theme of many tragedies. He died in 4 B. C., which was the very year in which our Saviour was born. Herod Antipas, his son, put to death John the Baptist, and married Herodias, his brother Philip's wife; and it was by him that our Saviour was mocked on occasion of his being brought before him by the Jews, before his crucifixion. He was with his guilty wife afterwards banished, and they died at Lyon. Herod Agrippa, the grandson of Herod the Great, persecuted the first Christians, and died of a horrible disease at Caesarea. Herod Agrippa, son of the foregoing, married his own sister Berenice. It was before him that the apostle Paul was brought. He died at Rome.

HERODIANS, in the New Testament, a party attached to Herod Antipas, who perhaps were, from compliment to him, avowed Sadducees. But they were chiefly associated by political considerations, in opposition to the Roman prefects.

HERODIAN, a Greek historian, of the 3rd century A. D., who held various offices at Rome, and wrote a history of the Empire from the death of Marcus Aurelius to the accession of Gordian the Second.

HERODOTUS, the Father of History, was born at Halicarnassus in Caria; and travelled into various countries, investigating their natural productions and geography, their manners and customs, and history. The results of all his observations he embodied in seven books, which are preserved, and which are an invaluable treasury of all kinds of information relating to the civilized or accessible world of his times. It is said that he received some part of his history at one of the Olympic festivals. Recent travellers and well-skilled observers have confirmed some of the most marvellous accounts given by this writer, which were long treated with contempt, as fables. He died at Thurium, a Greek colony in Italy, in about 405 B. C., aged about 80 years.

HEROIC, HEROICAL, a. like a hero; performed under great disadvantages, and arguing remarkable courage and abilities. Heroic verse, is that consisting of lines of twelve syllables each.

HEROTICALLY, ad. like a hero.

HEROINE, s. [Fr.] a female hero.

HEROISM, s. [héroïsme, Fr.] the qualities of a hero.

HERON, s. [héron, Fr.] in Natural History, a bird with long slender legs, that feeds on fish. It was formerly included amongst game, and the penalty for breaking its eggs was death.

HERPES, s. [herpo, Gr.] in Medicine, a particular kind of cutaneous disease, which spreads rapidly around the place in which it first appears.

HERTRICK, ROBERT, an English poet of the 17th century, of some note, although his love poems are often very gross. He was an Anglican priest, and was deprived during the Protectorate, but was reinstated at the Restoration, and died shortly afterwards, aged about 70 years.

HERRING, s. [hering, Sax.] in Ichthyology, a common fish inhabiting the British seas, which being caught when it approaches the shallow waters in the breeding season, is cured, and forms a considerable article in commerce, as well as being regarded as a great delicacy, and providing food for the poor very cheaply.

HERNHUTTERS. See MORAVIANS.

HERSCHEL, SIR WILLIAM, one of our most eminent practical astronomers, was a Hanoverian by birth; and being very fond of and skilled in music, entered a military band, and afterwards, emigrating to England, was so connected with the Durham militia. Subsequently he became an organist at Halifax and at Bath. He here began to devote himself to mathematics and astronomy; and having constructed a large reflecting telescope, was rewarded by the discovery of a new planet, now called Uranus. He was thus introduced to the scientific world, and was honoured with a place created for him by George III., and a pension. At his residence near Windsor he now erected a gigantic telescope, the mirror of which was 40 feet in focal length; and with this he commenced a course of brilliant discovery, the results of which are chronicled in various papers communicated to the Royal Society, and in his famous catalogue of the double stars, nebulae, changeable stars, &c. This enlargement of the boundaries of our astronomical knowledge has been in the highest degree fruitful, and has confirmed the Newtonian theory in most beautiful and unexpected ways. He died in 1822, aged 84 years, leaving his son to prosecute his researches, and to gain a greater name.

HERSE, s. [see HEARSE,] in Fortification, a lattice or portcullis in form of a harrow, beset with iron spikes, usually hung by a rope, to be cut down in case of a surprise, or when the first gate is broken by a petard, that it may fall and stop up the passage.

To HERSE, v. a. to put into a herse.

HERSE/LF, the female personal pronoun.

HERTFORD, Hertfordshire. It is seated on the Lea, and is a neat place. The remains of an old castle have been converted into a high school in connexion with the East India college. The chief buildings are those belonging to the county. It is a great place for malting. It is 26 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 5450.

HERTFORD COLLEGE, Oxford, was founded in the last century, on the basis of a hall which had existed from the 13th, by Dr. Richard Newton.

HERTFORDSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Middlesex, Essex, Cambridgeshire, Bedfordshire, and Buckinghamshire. It is about 35 miles long, and 25 broad. It is divided into 8 hundreds, and contains 2 boroughs and 12 market towns. The chalk hills are the only heights, and they are, in general, not great, though one point is above 900 feet; but they render the surface undulating, and greatly enhance the beauty of the rural scenes it abounds in. The Colne and the Lea are its chief rivers. The New River, which supplies good part of London with water, begins near Ware. It is yet well wooded; but agriculture prospers, and corn, cattle, sheep, &c. &c. are plentifully produced. There are also many gardens cultivated for the supply of the London market. Hertford is its chief place. Population, 157,207. It sends 7 members to parliament.

HERVEY, JAMES, a clergyman of the English Church, who lived at the time of the Wesleyan movement, and partook of its influence, being personally acquainted with its leaders. He was a man of piety unquestionable, and the books that he wrote have undoubtedly conducted in their time to promote this spirit; but the metaphorical extravagancies they abound in have unfitted them for the taste of readers of the present day. He died in 1758, aged 44 years.

HESEDIO, one of the earliest Greek poets, who resided chiefly at Orchomenos. His poems consist of one devoted to the history of the gods, another called Works and Days, partly agricultural and partly religious in its object, and other minor ones. He flourished not earlier than 800 B. C.

HESTANCY, s. [hesito, Lat.] a pause from speaking or acting, arising from an impediment of speech; doubt, or want of resolution.

To HE/SITATE, v. n. to pause, or cease from acting or speaking for want of resolution; to delay; to be in doubt; to make a difficulty.

HE/SITATION, s. a pause or delay arising from doubt or suspicion; a scruple; an intermission of speech, owing to some natural impediment.

HE/SPER, s. [Hesperos, Gr. Hesperus, Lat.] in Astronomy, a name of the planet Venus, when she is an evening star.

HE/SPERIDES, in Greek Mythology, the daughters of Hesperus brother of Atlas, who kept a garden full of golden apples, guarded by a dragon; but Hercules, having laid the dragon asleep, stole away the apples.

HESSE, a country of Germany, bounded by Prussia, Weimar, Bavaria, Baden, the territory of Frankfurt, Nassau, and Hanover. It consists of 3 great portions; the N. of which is the state of Hesse Cassel, and the 2 others, Hesse Darmstadt; and there are some smaller fragments detached on all sides. Hesse is very mountainous; the Thuringwald, the Odenwald, the Vogelsgebirge, &c. being the chief masses or chains of elevations. The Rhine, the Maine, the Weser, &c. are its rivers. The mountains abound in metals, including silver; in coal, and other valuable products. Timber, corn, fruits, tobacco, hemp, &c., with cattle, horses, &c. &c., are also amongst its sources of wealth. Cassel is the capital of Hesse Cassel; whose population is about 800,000. Darmstadt is the capital of Hesse Darmstadt; and its population is about 850,000. Neither of these states have manufactures of any importance as yet.

HEST, s. [hest, Sax.] the command, precept, law, or order of a superior. Used only in poetry.

HETEROC/LITE, s. [heteros and clino, Gr.] in Grammar, a noun which varies from the common forms of declension, by redundancy, defect, or otherwise. Figuratively, any person or thing deviating from the common rule or standard.

HETEROC/LITICAL, a. deviating from the common rule.

HETERODOX, a. [heteros and doxa, Gr.] in Theology, contrary to one's own, or the established opinion; opposed to orthodox.

HETERODOX, s. a peculiar opinion, an opinion differing from the generality of mankind.

HETEROG/NEAL, a. [heteros and genos, Gr.] of a different nature, kind, or quality.

HETEROG/NEITY, s. [heterogenéité, Fr.] opposition of nature; contrary or difference of qualities.

HETEROG/NEOUS, (the  $\eta$  in this word and all its derivatives is sounded soft,) a. of a different kind; contrary, dissimilar, or different in properties or nature.

HETEROSC/ANS, s. [heteros and skia, Gr.] in Geography, those whose shadows at noonday are always projected or directed the same way; such are those who live in the temperate zones, the shadows of those of the northern tropic falling always north. In its primary sense, it denotes those inhabitants of the earth who have their shadows projected different ways from each other; in this sense, we, who inhabit the north temperate zone, are heteroscians to those who inhabit the south temperate zone.

HEVELIUS, JOHN, a Prussian astronomer, whose observations made at Dantzic, at an observatory which he had built himself, and with instruments of his own construction, gained him great repute in the 17th century. He published several works, in which he gave the result of his observations. He died in 1687, aged 76 years.

To HEW, v. a. part. heven or hewed; [heavean, Sax.] to cut by force with an edged instrument; to hack; to chop; to fell, form, or shape with an axe.

HEW/ER, s. one who cuts wood or stone.

HEXAGON, s. [hex and gone, Gr.] a figure containing six sides or angles.

HEXAGONAL, a. consisting of or having six sides or corners.

HEXAMETER, s. [hex and metron, Gr.] a verse containing six feet.

HEXANGULAR, a. [hex, Gr. and angulus, Lat.] having six angles or corners.

HEXAPOD, s. [hex and pous, Gr.] an animal having six feet.

HEXASTICK, s. [hex and stichos, Gr.] a poem consisting of six lines or verses.

HEXHAM, Northumberland. It has narrow streets and ill-built houses. Its market-place, however, near the centre of the town, is a spacious square, supplied by a fountain with water. Its present church, which contains many ancient tombs, bears considerable marks of Saxon grandeur, and it was formerly famous for an abbey. On the screen, at the entrance of the choir, are some strange monastic paintings, called the Dance of Death. Hexham is now principally noted for its manufacture of tanned leather, shoes, and gloves; and is situated on a small stream called the Hexhold, near the Tyne. It is 284 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 5989.

HEY, interject. a word used to express sudden or mutual encouragement.

HEY/DAY, interj. an expression of frolic, joy, and sometimes of surprise and wonder.

HEY/DEN, and HEY/DEN BRIDGE, Northumberland. It has a well-endowed grammar school, and a fine bridge of 6 arches over the Tyne. It is 259 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1908.

HEY/DON, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It is seated on a river which soon falls into the Humber; and was formerly a considerable town, but is now much decayed, on account of the neighbourhood of Hull. It is 181 miles from London. Pop. 485.

HEY/NE, CHRISTIAN GOTTLIOB, a distinguished editor of the classics, who rose to his celebrity from complete obscurity by his great patience in study, and perseverance through all difficulties. He held a professorship at Göttingen; and obtained universal esteem by the amiability and excellence of his character, as well as by his great learning. He died in 1812, aged 82 years.

HEY/TESBURY, Wiltshire. It is 93 miles from London. Pop. 1311.

HIATUS, s. [Lat.] an aperture or breach; the opening of the mouth by pronouncing one word ending and another beginning with a vowel. In Grammar, a fault in composing, arising from the use of two words together, the former of which ends, and the latter begins, with a vowel. In manuscripts, a gap or defect in the copy by time or accident.

HIBERNAL, a. [hibernus, Lat.] belonging or relating to the winter.

HIBERNIAN, a. [Hibernia, Lat.] belonging to Ireland.—s. a native or inhabitant of Ireland.

HIC/COUGH, (commonly pron. hiccup.) s. [hœquet, Fr. hicken, Dan.] a convulsive motion of the diaphragm and parts adjacent, made in the act of inspiration, which is accompanied with a sonorous explosion of the air through the mouth.

To HIC/COUGH, (hiccup) v. n. to sob or make a noise from a convulsive motion of the diaphragm.

Hertfordshire

Hertfordshire

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Hertford

Scale of Miles

HICKWALL, HICKWAY, s. in Natural History, a name of the woodpecker.

To HIDE, v. a. pret. hid, past part. hid or hidden: [hidan, Sax.] to conceal, or withdraw from a person's sight or knowledge.

HIDE, s. [thauide, Belg.] the skin of any brute, either raw or dressed; the human skin, so called when coarse, or in contempt. Hide of land, was such a quantity of land as might be ploughed with one plough within the compass of a year, or so much as would maintain a family; some call it 60, some 80, and some 100 acres.

HIDEBOUND, a. in Farriery, applied to a horse when his skin sticks so hard to his ribs and back, that it cannot be pulled or loosened. In Botany, applied to trees, when the bark will not give way to the growth. Figuratively, harsh; reserved; untractable; niggardly; penurious; parsimonious.

HIDEIOUS, a. [hideuz, Fr.] affecting with fear, terror, or horror; shocking.

HIDEOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to frighten or shock.

HIDEOUSNESS, s. that quality which renders a person or thing an object of terror.

HIDER, s. the person that conceals himself, or withdraws from sight.

To HIE, v. a. [hiegian, Sax.], to hasten, or go in haste.

HIERARCH, (hierark) s. [hieros and arche, Gr.] the chief of a sacred order.

HIERARCHICAL, (hierarkhikal) a. belonging to the spiritual order, or to ecclesiastical government.

HIERARCHY, (hierarchy) s. sacred government, or the order and subordination among the several ranks of an ecclesiastical establishment.

HIERES, a cluster of small islands in the Mediterranean Sea, on the coast of the department of Var, France. Three of them, namely, Porquerolles, Porteros or Port Cross, and Baguean, are inhabited, and the isle of Titan, the largest of them, is capable of cultivation. They abound with medicinal plants. Between these islands and the continent is the Road or Gulf of Hieres, an excellent and capacious pool or harbour. Hieres, a town in the department of Var, seated in a pleasant and fruitful country, in which are found the best fruits of France; but its harbour being choked up, it is now much decayed. Near the town are large salt-works. It is situated on the side of a hill, and is 350 miles from Paris. Pop. about 1000. Lat. 43. 7. N. Long. 6. 8. E.

HIERO, the name of two of the self-imposed kings of Syracuse, in Sicily. The first was a tyrant, in the worst sense of the word; but the second was a wise and able prince, who consulted for the good of the Syracusans, and ruled successfully during the wars between Rome and Carthage. He died in 216 b. c.

HIEROGLYPH, HIEROGLYPHIC, (hieroglyph, hieroglyphik) s. [hieros and glypho, Gr.] an emblem, or picturesque representation of something. This was the first method of writing, and was used only in the early stages of civilization.

HIEROGLYPHIC, HIEROGLYPHICAL, a. [hieroglyphique, Fr.] emblematical; expressive of some meaning beyond what immediately appears.

HIEROGLYPHICALLY, ad. emblematically.

HIEROGRAPHY, (hierograpy) s. [hieros and grapho, Gr.] holy writing.

HIEROPHANT, (hierofant) s. [hieros and phaino, Gr.] one who teaches the rules of any religion.

To HIGGLE, v. n. [corrupted from haggle], to beat down the price of a thing in a bargain; to be long in agreeing on the price of a commodity; to sell provisions from door to door.

HIGGLEDY-PIGGLEDY, ad. in a confused or disorderly manner.

HIGGLER, s. one who sells provisions by retail from door to door; one who buys fowls, butter, eggs, &c. in the country, and brings them to town to sell.

HIGH, (the gh in this word and all its derivatives and compounds is mute, and pronounced hi.) a. [heah, Sax.] far upwards; elevated in place. Raised above the earth, in the world to the mind. Exalted, applied to rank, condition, or nature. Refined or sublime, applied to thoughts or sentiments. High blood, noble; above the vulgar. Violent, loud, or tempestuous, applied to wind. Ungovernable, turbulent, applied to the passions. Joined with time, complete, full, proper, or almost elapsed. Strong, hot, warm with spices, applied to food. Receding from the equator, or towards the pole, applied to latitude. Capital, opposed to little or petty, applied to crime, as, "high treason." Dear, or costing much, applied to price. High, when used in composition, has a great variety of meanings, but generally includes the idea of a great degree of any quality. From high, from above; from a superior region; from heaven. On high, aloft; above; into superior regions; into heaven.

HIGHAM-FERRERS, Northamptonshire. Here is a castle near the church, the ruins of which are still visible. It is pleasantly seated on an ascent, near the river Nen. It is 69 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 1030.

HIGH-BLOWN, a. much puffed up.

HIGH-BORN, a. of noble extraction.

HIGH-BUILT, a. of a lofty structure; of great length upwards; covered with lofty buildings.

HIGH-COLOURED, a. having a deep or glaring colour.

HIGH-FED, a. pampered, or living on luxurious diet.

HIGH-FLIER, s. one that carries his opinions to extravagance.

HIGH-FLOWN, a. elevated; proud; turgid; extravagant.

HIGH-FLYING, part. extravagant in claims or opinions.

HIGHGATE, Middlesex, a hamlet of Hornsey and Pancras. It has its name from its situation on the top of a hill, and a gate erected there about 400 years ago, to receive toll for the bishop of London. The custom of swearing certain ridiculous oaths on the horns at the public-houses, formerly observed here, is well known, but now, happily, little practised. It is 4 miles from London. Pop. 4302.

HIGHLAND, s. a place abounding in mountains.

HIGHLANDERS, the inhabitants of the Highlands of Scotland.

HIGHLANDS, the name specially given to the mountainous parts of Scotland, into which civilization has but recently penetrated.

HIGHLY, ad. loftily, applied to place or situation. In a great degree; in a proud, arrogant, or ambitious manner.

HIGH-METTLED, a. proud; not easily governed, or provoked with restraint.

HIGH-MINDED, a. proud; arrogant.

HIGHNESS, s. loftiness or distance from the surface of the earth; a title given to princes, formerly to kings.

HIGH-SPIRITED, a. bold; daring; insolent.

HIGH-PRINCIPLED, a. extravagant in notions of politics.

HIGH-RED, a. deeply red.

HIGH-STOMACHED, (hi-stomaked) a. obstinate; easily provoked; proud.

HIGHWATER, s. the utmost flow, the greatest swell, or that state of the tide when it ceases to flow up.

HIGHWAY, s. a free passage for the king's subjects, and therefore called the King's highway, though the freehold of the soil belongs to the lord of the manor, or the owner of the land. Those ways that lead from one town to another, and such as are drift or cartways, and are for all travellers in great roads, or that communicate with them, are highways only; and, as to their reparation, are under the care of surveyors.

HIGHWAYMAN, s. a robber that plunders on the public roads.

HIGHWORTH, Wiltshire. It is seated on the top of a high hill, which stands in a rich plain, near the Vale of Whitehorse. It is 77 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 3939.

HIGH-WROUGHT, (hi-rút) a. finished to great perfection, with great pains and labour.

HILARION, in Ecclesiastical History, a disciple of Antony, who established monasteries in Palestine and Syria, in the beginning of the 4th century.

HILARITY, s. [hilaris, Lat.] gaiety; mirth.

HILARIUS, the name of four eminent men in Ecclesiastical History, two of whom were canonized; one of which was Bishop of Arles in France, and gained a distinguished name by his resistance of papal supremacy. He wrote several works, of no great value, and died in 449, aged 48 years.

HILARY, a. in Law, a term which begins in January, so called from the feast of St. Hilarius, celebrated about that time.

HILDESHEIM, a city of Hanover, chiefly celebrated as the see of a very wealthy bishopric, and as having a very superb cathedral. Its population is about 15,000. Lat. 52. 10. N. Long. 9. 56. E.

HILL, s. [hil, Sax.] an eminence, or heap of earth less than a mountain.

HILL, ROWLAND, an eminent preacher for nearly half a century, at one of the largest places of worship belonging to Lady Huntingdon's connexion in London. He was a son of a Shropshire baronet, and studied at Eton and Cambridge. Having obtained ordination, he quickly adopted the plans of the celebrated Whitefield; and with similar results. He was at first the regular preacher at Kingswood Tabernacle, and at the Tabernacle at London; but afterwards Surrey Chapel was built for him. He was an impressive preacher, but had contracted a habit of indulging his natural taste for drollery, so that he not unfrequently produced a feeling most opposite to decorum in his hearers. Many tales of a humorous character are in circulation respecting him, but many of them are forgeries. He died in 1833, aged 88 years. He published several little books, on religious subjects.

HILL MORTON, Warwickshire. It is seated on a rivulet that comes from Creek in Northamptonshire, and falls into the Avon below Clifton, partly on a hill, partly on moorish ground, from whence it has its name, near Rugby. It is 83 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 953.

HILLEL, a celebrated Jewish doctor or rabbin, who lived at Babylon in the 1st century B. C. He was one of the authors of the Talmud. Also, the name of another rabbin who lived in the 3rd and 4th centuries of the Christian era, and contributed to the later portions of the Talmud.

HILLOCK, s. a little hill.

HILLY, a. full of hills; unequal in the surface.

HILT, s. [hilt, Sax.] the handle of any instrument, but peculiarly applied to that of a sword.

HIM, pron. the oblique case of he.

HIMMALEH, or HIMALA'YA, the general name of the vast range of mountains lying to the N. of Hindustan. It is nearly 2000 miles in length, and is above 100 miles in breadth. The highest points are nearly 30,000 feet in elevation above the surface of the ocean. The rivers Indus, Ganges, Burrampooter, and their chief tributaries rise amongst them. See the different countries in which they lie, INDIA, THIBET, &c.

HIMSELF, pron. [hyssyltes, Sax.] of the same signification as he, only more emphatical, and to distinguish the person it is applied to from any other.

HIN, s. [Heb.] a Hebrew measure, containing one gallon and two pints.

HINCKLEY, Leicestershire. It was formerly much larger, as the back lanes between the orchards appear to have been once streets. It has a considerable manufactory of stockings, and fine ale. It is 91 miles from London. Market, Monday, and a very noted fair on August 28. Pop. 7291.

HIND, a. comparative hinder, superlative hindmost; [hyndan, Sax.] that is behind another or backward, opposed to fore.

HIND, s. [hinde, Sax.] the female of a hart, stag, or red deer; the first year she is called a calf, the second a hearse, sometimes a brocket's sister, and the third a hind.—[hine, Sax.] a servant.—[hinenian, Sax.] a peasant; a boor.

HINDBERRY, s. in Botany, the raspberry bramble.

To HINDER, v. a. [hindran, Sax.] to prevent; to delay; to stop or impede.

HINDER, a. the comparative of hind; that is placed backwards, or in a position contrary to that of the face.

HINDERANCE, HINDERANCE, s. an obstruction or impediment; any thing which prevents a person from proceeding in what he has begun, or from accomplishing what he intends.

HINDERER, s. any person or thing that prevents or stops any undertaking, or retards it by difficulties.

HINDERMOST, HINDMOST, a. the superlative of hind; hindmost is the most proper; the last in order, or farthest off in situation.

HINDUS, the people inhabiting Hindustan, called also Gentoos.

HINDUSTAN. See INDIA.

HINGE, s. a kind of joint made of iron or other metal, which moves on a pivot, and fastens doors, lids, &c., so as to open and shut. A governing rule or principle. To put off the hinges, a phrase signifying to be in a state of irregularity or disorder.

To HINGE, v. a. to furnish with, or hang upon, hinges. Figuratively, to bend like a hinge.

To HINT, v. a. [enter, Fr.] to bring to mind by slight mention; to mention imperfectly; to drop a word, by which the hearer may be enabled to trace out something which we do not mention; to allude to; to touch slightly upon.

HINT, s. a faint notice given; a remote allusion; an insinuation by which a hearer may come to the knowledge of a thing not expressly mentioned; a suggestion; an intimation.

HIP, [hype, Sax.] in Anatomy, that part of the body to which the thigh is articulated.—[heupa, Sax.] in Botany, the fruit of the brier or dog-rose. In Medicine, a contraction of hypochondriac.

To HIP, v. a. to sprain or shoot the hip.

HIP, interj. a word used in calling to a person, in order to stop him, or bring him towards one.

HIPPARCHUS, the most eminent of all the ancient Greek astronomers. He studied at Alexandria, and amongst other services to science, he discovered the precession of the equinoxes; calculated eclipses; determined the mean periods of the planets' revolution; invented the stereographical method of projection; catalogued the fixed stars; and laid the foundation for a true science of astronomy. He flourished in the 2nd century B. C.

HIPPARCHUS and HIPPIAS, two sons of Peisistratus, who had acquired the tyranny of Athens; which they retained. After a conspiracy had been formed against them by which Hipparchus was assassinated, Hippias ruled with great cruelty, and was at last driven from the city by a general revolt. He fled to Persia, and was instrumental in that ill-fated expedition of Darius against Greece. He died in the ranks of the Persians, at the battle of Marathon, in 490 B. C.

HIPPISH, HIPPE, a. a corruption of hypochondriac.

HIPPOCENTAUR, s. [hippos and centaurus, Gr.] a fabulous monster, half a horse and half a man.

HIPPOCRAS, s. [Fr.] a medicated wine.

HIPPOCRATES, the most eminent physician of antiquity, who travelled through various countries; and at length died at Larissa, in Thessaly, in 361 B. C. His writings are numerous. His observations on medical science were of the highest value at the time. The appearance of the countenance immediately before death he first described accurately; and it is still designated the Hippocratic face.

HIPPOGRIF, s. [hippos and grups, Gr.] a winged horse.

HIPPOPOTAMUS, s. [hippos and potamos, Gr.] in Zoology, a large amphibious quadruped, which inhabits some of the African rivers, and is exceedingly destructive and ferocious. It is allied to the elephant.

HIPSOT, a. having the hip sprained or out of joint.

To HIRE, v. a. [hyran, Sax.] to procure a thing for a certain time, at a price agreed on; to engage a person to work a certain time, to do a particular service for a sum of money. Figuratively, to bribe, or prevail on a person to do a thing for the sake of money, which he would not otherwise.

HIRE, s. money paid for the use of a thing, or wages paid a person for labour and attendance.

HIRELING, s. one who works for wages.

HIRELING, a. serving for hire, mercenary, or acting merely for the sake of lucre.

HIRER, s. one who pays money for the use of a thing, or engages the service of another by promising him wages for his labour.

HIRSUTE, a. [hirsutus, Lat.] rough and rugged.

HIS, pron. masc. [ys, Sax.] applied to any thing that belongs to the person mentioned before.

HISPANIOLA, called also St. Domingo, and HAYTI, a large island of the W. Indies; lying between Cuba and Jamaica, and Porto Rico. It is about 300 miles in length and 140 in breadth; but its outline is irregular, and it has two long narrow promontories, extending towards Jamaica and Cuba. Several ranges of mountains, of about 5000 feet in height, cross it, but in the plains between, and near the shore, the soil is very rich and fertile. It has a few small streams; and its coast presents many most excellent harbours. All the usual productions of the W. Indies are produced in the greatest abundance here; and coffee, sugar, fruits, timber, hides, &c. are exported. Its population amounts to abt. 1,500,000. This island was formerly held jointly by the French and Spaniards, and was the scene of all the abominations and cruelties of slavery. During the French Revolution, the negroes, who had heard of the proclamation of the rights of man, rose upon their owners, and with all the horrors of a servile war drove them from the country. At first a republic was set up; but this was put down; and at length, after various changes and wars, the whole island is an independent country, under a native ruler; and the government is so ordered that whites are subjected to similar prejudices as to their political grade, that the blacks are in other islands.

To HISS, v. n. [hissen, Belg.] to make a noise by shutting the teeth, applying the tongue to them, and breathing through them, resembling the noise of a serpent; to use with the highest degree of contempt; to condemn a performance.

HISS, s. a noise made by breathing through the teeth when shut; a noise made by a serpent and some other animals; censure, or an expression of contempt and disapprobation, shown by hissing.

HIST, interj. a word used to command silence.

HISTORIAN, s. [historia, Gr.] one who gives an account of facts and events.

HISTORIC, HISTORICAL, a. containing or giving an account of facts and events.

HISTORICALLY, ad. in the manner of history; by way of narrative.

To HISTORIFY, v. a. to relate or record in history.

HISTORIOGRAPHER, (historiografer) s. [historia and grapho, Gr.] a professed historian, or writer of history.

HISTORIOGRAPHY, (historiography) s. the art or employment of an historian.

HISTORY, s. [historia, from histōr, Gr.] a narration or description of the transactions, actions, or events of a state, king, or private person, delivered in their proper order or relation; a narration or relation. Natural History is a description of the productions of nature, whether plants, animals, vegetables, rivers, &c.

HISTORIONIC, HISTORICAL, a. [histrio, Lat.] befitting the stage; suitable to a player; belonging to the theatre; becoming a buffoon.

HISTORICALLY, ad. after the manner of a player, mimic, or buffoon.

To HIT, v. a. [hitte, Dan.] to strike with a blow; to touch a mark aimed at by a person at a distance; to attain; to reach a point; to strike a ruling passion; to mention a person's peculiar foible. Used with off, to determine precisely; to pitch upon with labour.—v. n. to clash, applied to two things which are made to touch one another. To chance luckily; to succeed; to light on.

HIT, s. a stroke; a lucky chance; success owing to mere accident; or a discovery made by chance.

To HITCH, v. n. [hiegen, Sax.] to be caught as upon a hook; to move by jerks; to strike one ankle against another in walking.

HITCHEL, s. [heckel, Tent.] the instrument with which flax is beaten and combed. See HATCHEL.

To HITCHEL, v. a. to beat or comb flax or hemp.

HITCHIN, formerly called HITCHEND, Hertfordshire. It is situated near a wood called Hitch, on the rivulet Hiz (which drives two mills here, and runs to Ickleford). It is 34 miles from London. Market, for wheat, malt, &c., Tuesday. Pop. 6125.

HITHE, or HYTHE, Kent, one of the Cinque Ports. It had formerly four parishes; but its harbour having been choked up, it has now but one. It is 68 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2265.

HITHE, s. [hythe, Sax.] a small port, haven, or wharf, for landing goods; hence Queen-hithe, Lamb-hithe, now corrupted to Lambeth.

HITHER, a. nearer; towards this part.

HITHER, ad. [hither, Sax.] to this place, including motion from some other; used in opposition to thither. — Hither and thither, from this place to that. To this end, design, or argument; in this sense.

HITHERMOST, a. superlative of hither: nearest to us; nearest on this side.

HITHERTO, ad. to this time; yet; not till this time; at every time till the present.

HITHERWARD, HITHERWARDS, ad. [hytherweard, Sax.] this way; towards this place.

HIVE, s. [hufe, Sax.] a small convenient house or lodging for bees, wherein they live and form their cells. Figuratively, the bees which are contained in a hive; a company.

To HIVE, v. a. to put into hives. Figuratively, to contain as in a hive.

HIVER, s. one who covers bees with hives.

HO, Ho, interj. [eho! Lat.] a word used to give notice of approach, or to fix the attention of a person at a distance.

HOACHE, a kind of earth used by the Chinese, in the manufacture of porcelain.

HOADLEY, BENJAMIN, a bishop of the English Church, who, during the former part of the last century, occasioned a considerable stir, by the avowal of opinions far more allied to Unitarianism, than to the scheme laid down in the Creed and Articles. This was the famous Bangorian controversy, which ended rather in the change of the spirit of the times than in the victory of either party. Hoadley was a strong-minded and acute man; but one who looked at theology as identical with religion, and at logic as the true means of investigating and establishing it. He died in 1761, aged 85 years.

HOAR, (hōr) a. [har, Sax.] white; white with frost or age.

HOARD, (hōrd) s. [hord, Sax.] money or any thing else laid up in secret; a hidden heap or stock.

To HOARD, (hōrd) v. a. to lay up store; to lay up money in heaps and in secret.—v. n. to make hoards.

HOARDER, (hōrder) s. one that heaps up treasure, and hides it.

HOAR-FROST, s. congelations in frosty and foggy weather on grass, &c.

HOARHOUD, s. in Botany, a plant with the leaves and flower-cup covered very thick with a white hoariness.

HOARINESS, (hōriness) s. the quality of appearing white; whiteness occasioned by age. Figuratively, old age.

HOARSE, (hōrse) a. [has, Sax. heersch, Belg.] having the voice rough with a cold, having a rough sound.

HOARSELY, (hōrsely) ad. speaking rough or harsh with a cold; with a rough, harsh voice or sound.

HOARSENESS, (hōrseness) s. [haesene, Sax.] roughness of voice, peculiarly applied to the harshness occasioned by a cold.

HOARY, (hōry) a. [harund, Sax.] white, or whitish; white or gray with age or frost.

HOBBS, THOMAS, of Malmesbury, the celebrated English philosopher. He studied at Oxford, and spent the active part of his life as tutor to various noblemen, and to Charles II. when Prince of Wales. During the early part of the sway of the Long Parliament, he retired to Paris. He received many tokens of favour from Charles II., and spent the last years of his life at Chatsworth, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire. He died in 1679, aged 91 years. Hobbes enjoyed, during his life-time, a European reputation, and received visits from all illustrious men who travelled to England, and was the correspondent of others. His fame was even then of a very mixed character, both as to his philosophy, and his politics and theology, which sprang from it; and it has continued so to this day. But perhaps we are in a better position to estimate him aright than any have been, since speculations on the foundation of government are no longer regarded as signs of political partisanship, and branded as treason; nor speculations on theology regarded as signs of irreligion, and branded as atheism. Hobbes wrote many works, but his Leviathan was the chief. His metaphysical system was a sort of anticipation of Locke's; and his theological and political opinions were logically deduced from it. In his aspect towards religion, he certainly shows no cordial friendliness, and what he says has rather the air of compliment, and compromise with prejudiced ignorance in possession of power, than even of philosophical dignity and clearness. Hobbes had purposed this book as an offering to the Protector, but the Restoration followed soon, and it was presented to Charles. He was afterwards aimed at by several censures by parliament, and his equanimity was sorely disturbed. These things have exposed him to the charge of temporizing, and have made his favourable allusions to religion suspicious. He had not, as Locke had, a heart full of love for liberty, and a deep conviction of the reality of revealed truth, to correct, or rather to prevent, the conclusions of his logic. He may always be read with great pleasure for the clear, manly, and vigorous English which he writes. Many of his sentences have long been current as proverbs.

HOBBSMA, MINDERHOUT, an eminent landscape painter of the Dutch school, whose pieces are remarkable for their beauty of execution, correct drawing, and excellent colouring. He flourished about 1640.

To HOBBLE, v. n. to hop, to hobble; [hubbelen or hobben, Belg.] to walk lamely or awkwardly, or with frequent hitches. To move roughly, or unevenly, applied to verse.

HOBBLE, s. a rough or lame motion in walking; an awkward gait.

HOBBLINGLY, ad. after the manner of a person who is lame; with a halting or awkward gait.

HOBBY, s. [hobereau, Fr. hoppe, Goth.] a species of hawk; a pacing horse; a stick hung with bells, &c., on which children get astride and ride. Figuratively, a stupid fellow.

HOBGOBLIN, s. an elf, spirit, or chief among the goblins.

HOB'IT, s. a small mortar from six to eight inches diameter, mounted on a carriage made gun-fashion, and used for annoying an enemy at a distance with small bombs.

HOB'NAIL, s. a nail with a thick, strong head, so called because used in shoeing a hobby or little horse.

HOBNAILED, a. covered with hobnails.

HOBNOB, ad. (more properly HAB-NAB), at random; at the mercy of chance; without any rule.—v. to drink with any one in the most friendly manner.

HOCHE, GENERAL LAZARE, one of those men, doomed by their birth to obscurity, but brought to light and eminence in seasons of revolution. He was first a stable-boy at Versailles, and having entered the army, rose to be serjeant of the grenadier guards. He devoted his pay and his spare time to study, and waited what years would bring. The taking of the Bastille enfranchised him: he fought under Dumouriez, and rose with great rapidity to the generalship. He subdued La Vendée; defeated the attempt at Quiberon; plumed and failed in an attack on Ireland; achieved a name at the head of the army of the Sambre and Meuse; and then, lost in the blaze of Napoleon's rising glory, died in 1797, aged but 29 years.

HOCK, s. the same with hough; [hok, Sax.] the joint between the knee and the fetlock; the fore end or quarter of a fitch, or the less and bony end of a gammon of bacon. Old strong beer, wine, &c., particularly old strong Rhenish wine, so called from Hockheim on the Maine.

HOCK-DAY, HOCK-TUESDAY, in our ancient customs, the second Tuesday after Easter-week, formerly celebrated for many ages in England, in memory of the great massacre of the Danes, in the time of King Ethelred.

HOCKHERB, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the mallows.

To HOCKLE, v. a. to hamstring; to cut the sinews near the ham or hock.

HOCUS-POCUS, s. legerdemain; juggle; cheat; sleight of hand. It may be a corruption of the words Hoc est corpus. This is the body, used by the Roman Catholics at the consecration of the sacramental bread.

HOD, s. [hod, Sax.] a kind of trough in which labourers carry mortar on their heads or shoulders to bricklayers or masons.

HODGE-PODGE, s. [hache-poeche, Fr.] a medley, or odd mixture of ingredients huddled or boiled together.

HODIERNAL, a. [hodie, Lat.] of to-day.

HODMAN, s. a labourer, or one that carries mortar in a hod. HOE, s. [houwe, Belg. hove, Fr.] an instrument used in cutting or scraping up the earth, of which the blade is at right angles with the handle. A horse-hoe is an implement fashioned somewhat like a plough, but having a blade so fixed as to cut off all the plants growing where it is drawn over, just below the surface of the ground.

To HOE, v. a. [houer, Fr. houwen, Belg.] to cut earth with a hoe; to weed with a hoe; to scrape earth over the roots of plants by means of a hoe.

HOFER, ANDREAS, the celebrated Tyrolean leader during the continental wars, in the first ten years of the present century. He was an innkeeper and farmer; possessed of great bodily strength, and a clear and steadfast intellect; and so was appointed commander by the peasants who rose against the Bavarians, and subsequently against the French. He was at length betrayed into the hands of the French, and shot, in 1810, aged 45 years. His countrymen revered him as a martyr.

HOFFMANN, the name of several eminent medical men of Germany; the most distinguished of whom was Frederic Hoffmann, who was professor at Halle, and enjoyed a European reputation. His theory greatly conduced to bring about the fundamental changes in medical science, which the last century has witnessed. He died in 1742, aged 70 years.

HOFFMANN, ERNEST THEODORE WILLIAM, a legal practitioner of Prussia, who attained considerable popularity as a musician, poet, and tale writer. He led a most roving, unsettled life, till near the close; and he wasted the fine materials of his mind in gross personal caricature, and the low excitement of the tavern. His music is yet admired, and his tales have obtained a place in German literature. He died in 1822, aged 46 years.

HOFFWYL, the seat of a celebrated educational institution, established and conducted by De Fellenburg, near Berne, Switzerland. It is arranged on the industrial scheme; and is self-supporting. The plans developed here have been wholly, or in part, adopted by many schemers for public education in England and America; but it seems that too rigid a utilitarianism has deprived them of the power of working out the good they might in subordination to a nobler aim have accomplished.

HOG, s. [huch, Brit.] a general name for a swine, or boar. Figuratively, a brutish, selfish, or greedy person. To bring one's hogs to a fine market, implies to be disappointed, or to take a great deal of pains for nothing.

HOGARTH, WILLIAM, the celebrated caricaturist and moralist in painting and engraving, who rose from being an engraver of ciphers on plate, to be serjeant-painter to the king. His works produced a deep impression on the nation, and are yet studies that would benefit not artists alone. He gained a considerable reputation on the continent even; but lacked that kind of mental power which enabled him to make the best use of his rare abilities. His series of prints, such as Industry and Idleness, The Baker's and Hawke's Progress, Marriage à-la-Mode, &c., are the most generally known. They have been frequently copied since his time. He died in 1762, aged 64 years.

HOGG, JAMES, the ETTRICK SHEPHERD, an eminent Scottish poet of late years. He began life as a shepherd; but relinquished this humble occupation for the cultivation of literature, became the friend and frequent companion of Sir Walter Scott, and one of the circle of the contributors to Blackwood, whose real and imaginary colloquies are recorded in the inimitable Noctes Ambrosianae. His published works are numerous, and he died in 1835, aged 53 years.

HOGGEREL, s. a two-year old ewe.

HOGGET, s. a sheep of two years old.

HOGGISH, a. having the qualities of a hog; brutish; greedy; selfish.

HOGGISHNESS, s. the quality in which a person resembles a hog; selfishness; greediness or brutishness.

HOGHERD, s. a keeper of hogs.

HOGSHED, (hig-zed) s. [i. e. hog's hide,] a measure of liquids containing sixty-three gallons; a vessel or cask containing sixty-three gallons; any large cask.

HOGSTY, s. the place in which swine are confined.

HOGUE, CAPE LA, the N. W. point of the department of Manche, France; lying E. of the isle of Alderney, and N. W. of Cherbourg. Lat. 49. 45. N. Long. 1. 57. W.

HOGWASH, s. the draft which is given to, or is only fit for, swine.

HOFEN-ZOLLERN, a small German state, lying in the Saxonian Alps, and bounded by Baden and Württemberg. Some parts of the heights are nearly 3000 feet above the sea. It is watered by the Neckar and the Danube. It is divided into two principalities, now distinguished by the designations Sigmaringen and Heckingen, from their respective capitals. Both of these states produce corn, timber, fruits, &c., and iron, building and other stone are found. The population of the former is about 50,000, and of the latter about 25,000.

HOIDEN, s. [hoeden, Brit.] a romping, awkward, ignorant, and wanton girl.

To HOIDEN, v. n. to romp indecently; to behave with levity and wantonness.

To HOISE, HOIST, v. a. [hauusser, Fr.] to lift or raise up on high. HOIBEIN, HANS, an eminent painter of the 16th century, chiefly celebrated for his portraits of royal and distinguished persons, and for his Dance of Death. He was much patronized in England by Henry VIII. and the leading men of his court at various times. His historical paintings are somewhat numerous, and all are distinguished by their great general excellency. The king's criticism on his too favourable portrait of Anne of Cleves, the least evil-intented of his six wives, is well known. He died in 1554, aged 56 years.

HOLBERG, LOUIS, BARON OF, a popular Danish writer, who travelled much in various European states, and gained great fame by his numerous and varied writings. Peder Paars, a satirical poem, was the first that raised him to celebrity. He died in 1754, aged 70 years.

HOLCROFT, THOMAS, an English writer of the latter part of the last century, who began life very humbly, and rose by degrees, as an actor, translator, play-wright, novelist, and political writer, to some prominence. His name is associated with Horne Tooke's and Thelwall's, in the prosecutions for treason. He died in 1809, aged 64 years.

To HOLD, v. a. preter. held, past part. held or holden; [holdan, Goth. and Sax.] to grasp in the hand; to gripe; to retain; to keep. Figuratively, to maintain, support, or stick to, an opinion; to possess, or enjoy. To stop, restrain, or suspend, applied either to the tongue or hand. To persevere or continue in a design; to solemnize or celebrate. "He held a feast," 1 Sam. xxv. 36. To assemble or collect together. "The queen—holds her parliament," Shak. To continue in any state; to retain; to offer; to propose; to form; to plan; to manage. To hold forth, in common and low discourse, to preach or deliver a discourse in public; to exhibit or present to a person's view; to stretch forth or from the body, applied to the arm, or any thing held in the hand. To hold up, to raise aloft; to sustain, to support.—v. n. to last, endure, or remain unbroken; to stand; to be right; to stand up for; to adhere; to be dependent on; to derive right. To hold up, applied to the weather, means, it is fair.

HOLD, [imper. mood of the preceding, used as an interj.] forbear; stop; be still.

HOLD, s. the act of seizing or keeping a thing fast in the hand; a seizure or grasp; something which may afford support, when seized or held by the hand; a catch; or the power of seizing or keeping; a prison, or place of custody. All that part that is between the keelson and the lower deck, applied to a ship. A lurking-place; the lurking-place or den of a wild beast; a fortified place; a fort. Figuratively, power; influence.

HOLDER, s. one who keeps any thing in his hand by shutting it; a tenant, or one who occupies lands or tenements of another by lease.

HOLDERFORTH, s. an haranguer; one who preaches or speaks in public: a word of contempt.

HOLDERNESSE, a division of the East Riding of Yorkshire, remarkable for its large breed of horned cattle and horses. It has the title of an earldom.

HOLDFAST, s. any thing by which a door is fastened when put close; a catch; a hook.

HOLDING, s. a tenure; a farm.

HOLE, s. [hole, Sax. hol, Belg.] a cavity that is narrow and long; a den; a cavity made with a borer; a rent or cut in a garment. Figuratively, a mean dwelling or house; a subterfuge; a shift.

HOLIDAM, s. a word in ancient writers, signifying Blessed Lady, that is, the Virgin Mary.

HOLILY, adv. in a pious manner.

HOLINESS, s. an absolute abhorrence to all kinds of sin, or evil; a conformity to the nature and will of God; the state of being hallowed, consecrated, or sanctified; the title assumed by the Pope.

HOLLA, interj. [hola, Fr.] a word used in calling to a person at a distance, or out of sight.

To HOLLA, v. a. to cry out with a loud voice. Most usually written hollo.

HOLLAND, the name of a province of the kingdom of the Netherlands, lying on the German Ocean and the Zuyder Zee, and bounded by Zealand, Brabant, Guelderland, and Utrecht. The face of the country is utterly destitute of any decided features, being one unbroken level; in fact, a mere marsh recovered from the sea, and held by its possessors by means of drains and dikes, and embankments; in which last operation they are aided by the sea, which has washed up dunes of sand, like those on the coast of Norfolk. Some of it is lower in level than the sea, as the reader of the wars in the 16th century will remember.

Its rivers are artificial, excepting the embouchures of the Rhine and its associated rivers: in the S. canals and lakes abound. Its produce is therefore that of a grazing country, and is most plentiful, and famed all over the world. Its manufactures, of linen especially, are equally celebrated. It has great facilities for commerce, which thrives accordingly. Amsterdam is its chief place. Its population is about 550,000. This name is sometimes incorrectly, or popularly, given to the entire kingdom.

HOLLAND, or more correctly, HOLLAND, the name of the flat marshy district extending from the Wash into the heart of England, which before the conquest was a tidal estuary, and had been an arm of the sea. It is also called the Bedford Level.

HOLLAND, NEW. See AUSTRALASIA.

HOLLAND, W. RICHARD VASSALL FOX, LORD, nephew to the celebrated Charles James Fox, and one of his most devoted followers, was, perhaps, as perfect a type of the Whig of that school as the times can furnish. The death of his parents took place in his infancy, so that he was educated in all the style of a peer, at Eton and Oxford. He travelled; and incurred an action, which ended in heavy damages and his marriage to a divorced wife, which no one regarded as a slur, and himself so little, that he assumed her family name. He entered after this on his public life, which was marked by the most undeviating adherence to the line of Whig policy to the day of his death. He was a brief time in office under Lord Grenville once; and on the accession of William IV. he was again a cabinet minister. Few men, unpossessed of brilliant parts as orators, were ever more highly esteemed by their party than Lord Holland. He was well informed, and always at his post, unflinching in his stand. He took considerable interest in the affairs of Spain, and was better informed respecting it than most of our statesmen. He patronized literature and the arts, with something more than the semi-official regard of a man of rank; and enjoyed the highest esteem for his great amenity in private life. He died in 1840, aged 67 years.

HOLLAND, s. in Commerce, a fine and close kind of linen, so called from its being its origin in Holland.

HOLLAR, WENCESLAS, a famous engraver of the 17th century, born at Prague, who had gained some celebrity on the continent before being brought to England by the Earl of Arundel. In this country he continued, enjoying the highest patronage, till the outbreak of the Civil War, when he found his occupation gone, and was himself taken prisoner at the storm of Basing-house, but soon after released. After a short stay abroad, he returned to his adopted country, which he never left again. He had occupation enough, but hardly patronage. He died in embarrassed circumstances in 1677, aged 70 years. His engravings are very numerous and of various excellence. His plates illustrative of the female dress of the pre-revolutionary period are the most famous.

HOLLOW, (holló) a. [from hole,] having the inside or any part scooped out; having a void space within, opposed to solid. Noisy, or like the sound made in some cavity. Figuratively, hypocritical.

HOLLOW, (holló) s. a cavity, or empty space; a concavity; a cavern, or den; a pit, passage, or empty space in the inside of a thing.

To HOLLOW, (holló) v. a. to scoop furrows, channels, or cavities in a thing. See HOLLA.

HOLLOWLY, (hollóly) adv. with empty spaces within; with channels or vacuities. Figuratively, with insincerity.

HOLLOWNESS, (hollóness) s. cavity; the state of having empty spaces; want of sincerity; deceit; treachery.

HOLLY, s. in Botany, a tree with prickly leaves, small white blossoms, and red berries, which grows naturally in woods and forests in many parts of England.

HOLLYHOCK, HO'LYOCK, s. [holihoc, Sax.] in Botany, a plant of the mallow kind, growing to a considerable height, but dying down in the winter.

HOLME, s. in Botany, the ilex, or ever-green oak.

HOLME. See ABBEY-HOLME.

HOLLOCAUST, s. [holos and kaino, Gr.] a burnt sacrifice, the whole of which was consumed on the altar.

HOLOGRAPH, (holograph) s. [holos and grapho, Gr.] in the Scottish law, applied to a deed written entirely by the grantor's hand.

HOLPEN, the old past part. of To HELP.

HOLSTEIN, a province of Denmark, extending from the German Ocean to the Baltic, and bounded by Sleswick, Lübeck, Lauenburg, Hanover, and the territory of Hamburg. Its surface is agreeably varied, but in some parts is mere heath; and is watered by the Elbe and some smaller rivers. It has also several pretty lakes of small extent. Its products are almost wholly of the agricultural and pastoral kinds. It has a good trade by means of its ports, and a canal which makes a direct communication between the two seas. Kiel is its chief place. Its population is about 450,000.

HOLSTER, s. [hulster, Teut.] a case for a horseman's pistol.

HOLT, either at the beginning or end of the name of a place, from holt, Sax. a wood, signifies that it is, or has been, a wood; sometimes indeed it may come from hol, Sax. hollow, especially when the name ends in ton and dun.

HOLT, SIR JOHN, an eminent English judge, of the 17th century. He was recorder of London; a member of the parliament which effected the revolution of 1688. He was afterwards appointed by William III. lord chief justice of the King's Bench; and he had the chancellorship offered him, but refused it. He was distinguished for his legal knowledge, and for the unbending firmness with which he discharged his official duties, and abode by what he regarded as right. He died in 1709, aged 67 years.

HOLY, a. [halig, Sax.] performing every duty of religion; abstaining entirely from sin; set apart, consecrated, or dedicated to divine uses; pure, or without spot; sacred.

HOLY GHOST, s. [halig and gast, Sax.] the Holy Spirit; the third Person in the adorable Trinity.

HOLY-THURSDAY, s. the day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated by some churches.

HOLY-WEEK, s. [halgen and weke, Sax.] in some churches, the week before Easter, so called because of the special services held then.

HOLYDAY, HO'LIDAY, s. [halyan and deay, Sax.] a day set apart by some churches as a sacred anniversary; a day wherein people abstain from work, and entertain themselves with feasts, &c.; a day of gaiety and joy.

HOLYHEAD, Isle of Anglesea. It is noted for several remains of old fortifications, and under the mountains that overhang the town, is a large cavern in the rock, supported by natural pillars, and called the parliament-house; it is accessible only by boats, and the tide runs into it. It has a good harbour, and is a great station for the Irish packets. It is chiefly supported by its fisheries. It is situated near the extremity of the island, joined to the N. W. part of it by a stone bridge, of one arch; and it takes its name from the cape it occupies. It is 278 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3869.

HOLY-ISLAND, or LINDISFARNE, Durham, a small island on the coast of Northumberland, one mile and a half from the nearest land. It is two miles and a quarter long, and one in breadth, and consists of one continued plain. The soil is rocky; and it has but one small town, or village, standing on a rising ground, consisting of a few scattered houses, chiefly inhabited by fishermen, with a church. Under the castle, which stands at the southern point, on almost a perpendicular rock, near 60 feet high, and is accessible only by a narrow and winding pass, cut out of the rock, on its southern side, there is a commodious bay, or harbour, defended by a blockhouse. The N. and N. E. coasts of the island are formed of perpendicular rocks; the other sides sink, by gradual slopes, to the sand. It has plenty of fish and fowl; the W. part is left wholly to the rabbits; and there is not a tree on the island. The monastery, which covered near four acres, is entirely in ruins. It is a peninsula at ebb-tide. It is 34 miles from London. Pop. 809.

HOLYROOD HOUSE, the name of the ancient palace of the Scottish kings at Edinburgh.

HOLYWELL, Flintshire. It is, from its vicinity to the lead mines, and its considerable manufactures, one of the most flourishing towns in the county. It takes its name from the famous well, called St. Winifred's, which is a copious stream of very cold and pure water, bursting out of the ground, at the foot of a hill, with great impetuosity, and is now applied to the purpose of turning several mills for the working of copper, making brass-ware, paper, and snuff, and spinning cotton. It is 212 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 10,834.

HOMAGE, s. [hommage, Fr.] the reverence, respect, submission, or fealty, professed and performed to a sovereign or superior; respect or submission shown by any external action.

HOMAGER, s. [hommager, Fr.] one who holds by homage of a superior lord.

HOME, s. [ham, Sax.] a person's own house. Figuratively, the country in which a person lives, or place of his constant residence. Used in composition, for any thing produced in our own country, or made within a person's own house.

HOME, ad. to the house wherein a person lives; to one's own country; fully; closely; to the utmost; to the purpose; to the point designed. Joined to a substantive, it implies force, or efficacy. "The home thrust of a friendly sword." Dryd.

HOME, JOHN, a writer of Scotland, who fought on the royal side in the war of 1745, and occasioned a great stir by writing a tragedy afterwards, being a minister of the kirk. He is known now solely by this tragedy, called Douglas, which is occasionally acted. He died in 1808, aged 85 years.

HOME, SIR EVERARD, BART., an eminent surgeon and anatomist of London, born in Scotland, who studied under Hunter, and obtained such celebrity, that he enjoyed many lucrative and highly honourable appointments. His works are valuable, and some of his treatises, as, for instance, that on the egg, highly interesting to general readers. He died in 1832, aged 76 years.

HOMEBOEN, a. natural; domestic; or of one's own country.

HOME BREED, a. native; natural; bred in a person's own breast. Figuratively, rude; artless; uncultivated; or not polished by travel.

HOMEELLY, a. internal; felt within; inward.

HOMEELLY, ad. in a rude, rough, or mean manner.

HOMEELINESS, a. plainness; rudeness; coarseness.

HOMEELY, a. plain; coarse; rude, or not polished by the assistance or information of foreigners.

HOMEELY, ad. in a plain manner; coarsely.

HOME-MADE, a. made in our own country, opposed to foreign.

HOMER, s. [Heb.] a measure of capacity among the Hebrews, containing 72 gallons liquid, or 32 pecks dry measure.

HOMER, the first epic poet of the world, to whom are popularly assigned the poems collected under the titles of the Iliad and the Odyssey, relating some part of the siege of Troy, and the wanderings of Odysseus, or Ulysses, on his return from Troy to Ithaca. There is no doubt that there was such a bard as Homer, but the place of his birth and the particulars of his life are all disputed. It is only agreed that he was a native of Ionia, in Asia Minor, and that he was blind. The history of those two great poems, the great diversities of style observable in various parts, the frequent and wide divergence from the subject announced at the opening of the Iliad in many books, and other particulars brought to light by modern criticism, leave no doubt that others were engaged in their composition, beside the poet whose immortal name they bear. But universal tradition may not be so far disregarded as has been proposed by some scholars, who would give us a number of independent rhapsodists, but no Homer, as the author of the oldest and most renowned songs. Homer and the Homerides (as the associated authors are sometimes called) flourished in about the 9th century B. C. There are some beautiful hymns to Apollo, Aphrodite, and other gods, attributed also to Homer. The epics have been paraphrased into English by Pope, in a way that shows all the faults of the school of poets of which he is the greatest; and translated by Chapman and Cowper, in versions which are too little known for their general excellence.

HOMESPU'N, a. spun or wrought in a private house, not by pressed manufacturers. Made in one's own country, opposed to foreign. Figuratively, coarse; rude; wanting perfection or elegance. Used substantively for a coarse, rude, unpolished, or ill-bred person.

HOME STALL, HO'MESTEAD, s. [ham and stede, Sax.] a house; the place where a house stood.

HOMEWARD, HO'MEWARDS, ad. towards home; or towards the house wherein a person constantly resides.

HOMICIDAL, a. murderous; bloody.

HOMICIDE, s. [homo and cædo, Lat.] murder. It is divided into voluntary, when committed with malice; or casual, when done by accident. A murderer; a manslayer.

HOMILETICAL, a. [homilous, Gr.] social; conversable.

HOMILY, s. a plain and popular discourse on some divine subject; applied to those which were composed at the English Reformation to be read in churches.

HOMOEOPATHY, s. [homiois and pathia, Gr.] in Medicine, a system of medical treatment; for which see HÄHNEMANN.

HOMOGENEAL, HOMOGENEUS, (the g is pronounced soft), a. [homos and genos, Gr.] having the same nature or principles; of the same nature or kind.

HOMOGENEALNESS, HOMOGENEITY, HOMOGENEUSNESS, s. the quality of having the same nature or principles.

HOMOGENY, s. likeness, or sameness of nature.

HOMOLOGATION, s. in the Civil Law, the act of confirming or rendering a thing more valid and solemn, by publication, repetition, or recognition thereof.

HOMOLOGOUS, a. [homos and logos, Gr.] having the same proportion. In Logic, applied to things which agree in name, but have a different nature.

HOMOONYMOUS, a. [homos and onoma, Gr.] signifying several things, applied to words which have several senses.

HOMOONYMY, s. equivocation; ambiguity.

HOMOTONOUS, a. [homos and tonos, Gr.] having the same sound.

HOMOTONY, s. sameness of sound.

HONDURAS, a state of Central America, N. America; lying on that part of the W. Indian Sea, which is called, after it, the Gulf of Honduras; bounded by the states of Guatemala, Salvador, and Nicaragua. It is rather mountainous, and produces not only mahogany in abundance, but the precious metals, and valuable stone; and cattle, which graze on the hills. Valladolid is the capital, and Omoa its chief port. Population, about 250,000. For British Honduras, see BALIZE.

HONE, s. a whetstone, used for sharpening penknives and razors.

HONE, WILLIAM, a well-known political satirist and popular writer of the beginning of the present century; a man of undoubted genius and fearless honesty, but lacking that ballast of common-place prudence, which is so essential to working successfully in the every-day world. His career as a tradesman was a succession of most unhappy and disastrous mistakes. But in his authorship it was the very reverse. His political pamphlets, which were published during the stormy season of Tory misrule that followed the war, exposed with terrible effect the evils of the plans and objects of the government, and lashed the oppressors and their minions with a scourge of scorpions. There can be no doubt that the popular feeling on behalf of the hapless Caroline, during her persecution by George IV., originated, or took its form and energy, from these publications, which were composed in good part of wood cuts, executed by (a then unknown artist) George Cruikshank. The greatest achievement of his political life, was in connexion with a trial for publishing parodies of parts of the English Prayer Book. He defended himself, and was acquitted; though he had all the government influence and the best efforts of Lord Ellenborough directed against him. He was possessed of an incredible store of curious and legendary information, as his work on Ancient Mysteries, his Every Day Book, Table Book, and Year Book, evince. His skill in pathetic narrative, though seldom exhibited, was equal to that of Charles Dickens. In the latter part of his life he openly avowed his return to the religion in which he had been too injudiciously brought up, and occasionally preached in London. He died in 1842, aged 63 years.

HONEST, a. [honestus, from honor, Lat.] performing every act of justice, or fulfilling every obligation and relation in which we stand as members of society.

HONESTLY, ad. consistently with justice; consistently with our duty.

HONESTY, s. [honestas, Lat.] goodness, which makes a person perform his promise or duty to his passion or interest.

HONEWORT, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, with few florets in the rundlets.

HONEY, s. [huniig, Sax. honig, Belg.] a viscous, semifluid substance, of a whitish or yellowish colour, sweet to the taste, soluble in water, of a fragrant smell, secreted by certain glands in the corollas of flowers; obtained for use from the nests and comb of the hive-bees, who extract it from the flowers and elaborate it. Figuratively, sweetness, or seducing allurements, applied to words; used as a term of tenderness and fondness.

To HONEY, v. n. to make use of endearing, sweet, or fond expressions.

HONEY-BAG, s. the stomach of bees.

HONEYCOMB, s. [honig comb, Sax.] the cells of wax, in which the bee stores its honey. These cells have each of them six sides, and are contiguous: they are arranged so that both surfaces present series of cells; and the bottoms are angular, and are constructed with the greatest accuracy, so that no space is lost.

HONEY-DEW, s. in Natural History, a glutinous deposit on the leaves of trees and plants, which is almost pure sugar, and is ascertained to be the excrement of aphides, insects which live by sucking their juices.

HONEY-FLOWER, s. in Botany, a plant with a perennial root, and of the appearance of a shrub. It produces large spikes of chocolate-coloured flowers in May, in each of which is contained a large quantity of black sweet liquor, from whence it is supposed to derive its name.

HONEY-MOON, s. the first month after marriage, so called from the fondness and tenderness which appears then between a married couple.

HONEY-SUCKLE, s. [huniig-sucke, Sax.] in Botany, a plant so called from the sweetness of its odour; it is likewise named the woodbine.

HONEYLESS, a. without honey, or robbed of their honey, applied to bees.

HONIED, a. covered with honey. Sweet, flattering, or enticing, applied to words.

HONITON, Devonshire. It has a large manufactory of broad-lace, (formerly of serges), and sends to London a great quantity of butter weekly. It is pleasantly seated on the river Otter, over which it has a bridge, in the best and pleasantest part of the country, abounding with uncommonly beautiful landscapes. It is 156 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3895.

HONORARY, a. [honor, Lat.] done in order to confer honour, or as a mark of esteem; conferring honour, but not gain.

HONORARIUS, son and successor (in the W. half of the empire) of Theodosius the Great. He was only 11 years old at his father's death, and was under the guardianship of the famous Stilicho, a Vandal by birth, who was by ability and influence the sole stay of the Roman empire. See STILICHO. Honorius removed the court to Ravenna, and there abode whilst the terrible Alaric sacked Rome, and parcelled out the empire. He was just such a weak and treacherous ruler as a declining state would produce, and as would accelerate its fall. He died in 423, having reigned 28 years.

HONORARIUS, four popes of Rome have borne this title, but nothing particularly deserving of notice is associated with their names.

HONOUR, (the u in this word, and all its derivatives and compounds, is dropped in pronunciation; as, honor, honorable, &c.) s. dignity, or high rank; reputation; fame; reverence; chastity; dignity of mien; glory; boast. A testimony or token of respect and esteem, used after do. The title of a person of rank; a subject of praise; a regard to the censure and esteem of the world. Nobleness or majesty, applied to persons. A place, office, or title, which attracts esteem; ornament and respect. "The honours of his head," Dryd.

To HONOUR, v. a. to esteem or respect; to entertain an inward esteem and reverence for any person superior to us in any relation, and to show it by outward signs and actions.

HONOURABLE, a. [honorable, Fr.] worthy of respect, or reverence; great, or suitable to a person's dignity; generous; conferring or attracting respect and reverence; without taint or reproach; honest; equitable.

HONOURABLENESS, s. a highness of post or dignity, which attracts reverence and respect; generosity.

HONOURABLY, ad. with tokens of honour; in such a manner as to add dignity to a person's character; generously.

HONOURER, s. one that entertains respect and esteem for another in his mind, and shows it in his actions.

HOOD, s. [hod, Sax.] denotes condition, quality, state, or character, as in childhood. It is sometimes taken collectively; and then signifies several united together, as sisterhood, a company of sisters; brotherhood, a fraternity of several of the same profession incorporated.

HOOD, s. [hod, Sax.] an upper covering worn by a woman over her cap; any thing drawn upon the head, and covering it; a kind of ornament worn by a graduate of a university to show his degree.

HOOD, ROBIN, a bold outlaw of the reigns of Richard I. and his successors, who frequented Charnwood Forest, in Nottinghamshire, chiefly, at the head of a band of men in like circumstances, with whom he made himself a terror to all rangers, and beloved as a champion of the down-trodden Saxons. He is the theme of numberless old English ballads and romances; and albeit that he is reported by some to have been Earl of Huntingdon, seems to have been a Saxon by birth, and a worthy successor of those who, through all the times of Norman ascendancy, protested, by armed opposition, against the wrongs done to their oppressed race.

HOOD, ADMIRAL LORD SAMUEL, a renowned naval commander during the wars of the last century. His great services were in the W. Indies, against the French fleet under De Grasse, and at the siege of Toulon, which was taken by Napoleon Buonaparte. He died in 1816, aged 92 years.

HOOD, THOMAS, a man of letters, who is best known by his comic productions. He entered on his literary career early, and experienced the usual vicissitudes of professional authorship. He wrote poems chiefly, and quizzical essays, and accompanied them by wood-cuts whose wit equalled that of the writings. But he not infrequently wrote pieces of great pathos; and so he gained a name for himself amongst the public, and love for himself in his own circle, which was more to him than wealth. He died poor, in 1845, aged 47 years.

HOODMAN'S-BLIND, s. a play now called blindman's-buff.

To HOODWINK, v. a. to hinder a person from seeing by binding something over his eyes.

HOOF, s. [hof, Sax. hoef, Belg.] the hard, horny substance which covers the feet of horses, and other grazing animals.

HOOFBOUND, a. in Veterinary Art, applied to a horse, when his hoof shrinks in at the top and at the heel, and the skin by that means starts above and grows over the hoof.

HOOFED, a. having a hoof.

HOOGLY, the name of that part of the Ganges on which Calcutta stands; and also of a small town standing on it, not far from Calcutta, once of some importance, but quite decayed now.

HOOK, s. [hoo, Sax. hoeck, Belg.] any thing bent so as to catch hold; a wire crooked and barbed at the point, used in fishing; a snare or trap; any bending instrument to cut or lop with. "A reaping hook." That part of a hinge which is fixed to the posts of a door; hence, off the hooks, implies a state of disorder or confusion. By hook or by crook, a phrase signifying one way or another; by any means, whether direct or indirect.

To HOOK, v. a. in Fishing, to catch with a hook. Figuratively, to entrap or ensnare; to draw or fasten as with a hook.

HOOK, THEODORE, a recent English novelist and essay writer, whose popularity was considerable, especially amongst the readers of the John Bull newspaper, which he edited. He was a reckless liver, and never seems to have possessed any sounder guide than good temper; whence it may be conceived he went far enough away from right at times. His troubles connected with defalcations in the treasury of the Mauritius, were brought into an exaggerated importance by his political opponents. He died in 1841, aged 52 years.

HOOKAH, s. among the Arabs, and other nations of the East, is a pipe of a singular and complicated construction, through which tobacco is smoked.

HOOKER, DR. ROBERT, a distinguished natural philosopher of the age of Newton, who came to be Gresham Professor of Geometry, and secretary to the Royal Society. He was an ingenious man, and of great invention; and thus we find him inventing pendulums, and improving telescopes, and half discovering gravitation, and quarrelling with those who went further, or preceded him in these matters. He published many books and treatises, and died in 1702, aged 67 years.

HOOKED, a. bent; crooked.

HOOKEDNESS, s. the state of being bent like a hook.

HOOKER, RICHARD, surnamed of his admirers, the Judicious, was a divine of the Anglican Church in Elizabeth's reign, who left to his country a work of great power and value, although intended as a defence of ecclesiastical establishments, entitled The Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity. He became prebendary of Salisbury, but attained no higher prize. He died in 1600, aged 46 years. He was one of England's most eminent Platonists; and his works contain valuable passages in defence and exposition of that philosophy.

HOOKNOSED, a. having a crooked, aquiline nose.

HOOP, s. [hoep, Belg.] any thing bent in a circular manner in order to bind or keep tight that which it surrounds, particularly casks or barrels; circles of whalebone formerly worn by women to extend their petticoats; any thing circular.

To HOOP, v. a. to put hoops on a cask or other vessel. Figuratively, to clasp, encircle, or surround.

To HOOP, v. n. [houpper, Fr.] to shout, or make a noise by way of call or pursuit; to call to by a shout.

HOOPER, s. a cooper; or one that puts hoops on vessels.

HOOPING-COUGH, Wnooping-cough, [hooping-koff] s. a convulsive kind of cough, incident to children, so called from the noise with which it is attended.

HOOPPOE, in Ornithology, a bird resembling a pie, and ornamented with a crest, which occasionally visits our island.

To HOOT, v. n. [hoot, Brit.] to make a noise in contempt; to cry like an owl—v. a. to drive with noise and shouts.

HOOT, s. [hute, Fr.] a clamour, shout, or noise, made at a person in contempt; the noise made by an owl.

To HOP, v. n. [hoppa, Sax.] to jump or skip lightly; to move by leaps on one leg. Figuratively, to hop or walk lamely, by laying all our stress on one leg; to move; to play.

HOP, s. a leap made with one leg; a light or small jump, generally applied to the motion of birds on the ground, or the manner in which they move from one branch of a tree to another, without extending their legs. In Botany, a plant whose flower is used as a bitter in brewing, to keep beer from turning sour.

To HOP, v. a. to impregnate with hops; to make bitter with hops.

HOPE, s. [opa, Sax.] that pleasure which arises in the mind on the thought of the enjoyment of some future good; an expectation of some future good. SYNON. Hope has for its object, success in itself, and denotes a trust borne up by some encouragement. Expectation regards particularly the happy moment of event, and intimates a certainty of its arriving. Thus, we hope to obtain things; we expect their arriving.

To HOPE, v. n. to expect a future good.

HOPE, THOMAS, a wealthy English gentleman, eminent as a patron of the arts, and cultivator of architecture, costume, and furniture. He published works on these subjects. He also wrote a novel called Anastatus, which is greatly admired; and a treatise on the Origin of Man, which was not of much account. He died in 1831, aged 60 years.

HOPEFUL, a. full of qualities which produce hope; promising; full of hope or expectation of success.

HOPEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to raise hope, or encourage an expectation of some future good.

HOPEFULNESS, s. the quality which encourages or occasions a pleasing expectation of success, or of some future good.

HOPELESS, a. without any expectation of future good. Figuratively, desperately abandoned.

HOOPER, s. one that has pleasing expectations of some future good.

HOOPINGLY, ad. with hope or confidence that nothing of evil will happen.

HOPITAL, MICHAEL DE L', the eminent chancellor of France, during the 16th century. He studied law with great assiduity, and early obtained renown for his learning. He was royal ambassador at the council of Trent. He rose by degrees to his highest honour, and observed the same scrupulous and fearless conscientiousness in every station. He was averse from all religious persecution; and so offended the court of Rome, and lost his office. He lived in retirement, till the year of the St. Bartholomew; when he died, having been spared by the contrivers of that massacre, in 1673, aged 67 years.

HOPPER, s. one who leaps or jumps on one leg.

HOPPER, s. the box or open frame of wood in a mill, into which the corn is put to be ground.

HORAL, HORARY, a. [hora, Lat.] relating, pointing to, or containing an hour. The horary circle, on globes, is the brass circle at the north pole, on which the hours are marked as on a clock. In Astronomy, horary motion of a planet, is the space it moves in one hour of time.

HORATIUS FLACCUS, Q., commonly called HORACE, an elegant lyric poet and satirist of the reign of Augustus, at Rome, who was one of the most distinguished of those who enjoyed the patronage of the emperor, and of his minister Mæcenas. His poems consist of four books of Odes, and one of Epodes, a Carmen Seculare, or National Ode, two books of Satires, and two of Epistles. Horace had seen something of life before he settled down to literature, having been in the unsuccessful army at the battle of Philippi. He died in 8 B. C., aged 58 years.

HORDE, s. [horde, Sax.] a flock, company, or regiment; a clan, or company of people generally changing their situation.

HOREB. See SINAI.

HORIZON, s. [horizo, Gr.] the line which terminates or bounds the sight. The sensible horizon, is the circular line which limits the view; the real, is that which divides the globe into two equal parts. On globes, this is generally the upper part of the frame on which the globe rests.

HORIZONTAL, a. [Fr.] near the horizon; parallel to the horizon; on a level.

HORIZONTALITY, ad. in a direction parallel to the horizon; on a level, or in a line equally distant in all its parts from the ground, supposing the ground to be level.

HORN, s. [horn, Sax.] a hard, pointed, and callous substance, which grows on the heads of some animals. Figuratively, an instrument of wind music, formed of the horn of some animal. The extremities of the waxing or waning moon, so called because representing the horns of a cow. The feelers of insects, or antennæ. To draw in one's horns, to be terrified, or have one's courage damped at the prospect of danger. A drinking-cup made of horn. In Scripture, horn is used for power, pride, or empire.

HORN, CAPE, the most southerly point of the American continent, situated in the island of Magelhaen; notorious for its storms. Lat. 56. 0. S. Long. 67. 20. W.

HORNBEAM, s. in Botany, a tree, with leaves like the elm or beech tree.

HORNBLEND, s. in Mineralogy, the common name of the augite; and a common constituent of granite.

HORNBOOK, s. a leaf with the alphabet and Lord's prayer printed on it, stuck on a piece of board, and covered over with horn to keep it from soiling, formerly used for teaching children their letters.

HORNE, BISHOP GEORGE, of Norwich, a pious and excellent prelate of the Anglican Church, and a most devoted Hutchinsonian in doctrine. He wrote some playful but earnest letters against Hume's Essays on Miracles; and few books have become more popular than his Commentary on the Psalms. He died in 1792, aged 62 years.

HORNED, a. having, or appearing as having, horns.

HORNEMANN, FRIEDRICH CONRAD, a young German, employed by the African Association in an attempt to explore the interior of Africa. He reached Fezzan, and crossed to Tripoli. Afterwards, returning to Fezzan, he died, in 1800, aged 28 years.

HORNER, FRANCIS, a statesman of the beginning of this century, of the Whig school, but prone to think for himself, who studied law at Edinburgh, and soon coming under the notice of the Whig leaders, was employed in various ways by them during the great struggles of the parties. He did not always follow the acknowledged leaders, and so was not so useful, though he was more respected than he had been otherwise. The Currency question was one of his favourite subjects. He often wrote for the Edinburgh Review; and died in 1817, aged 39 years.

HORNET, s. [hynette, Fr.] in Entomology, one of the wasp family, less frequent than the common wasp, and much resembling it, but much larger and more formidable.

HORNFOOT, a. hoofed.

HORNOWL, s. in Natural History, an owl, so called from its ear-coverings, which are like horns.

HORNPIPE, s. a jig, so called because formerly danced to a horn.

HORNSHA, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It is almost surrounded by a small arm of the ocean, which, by its continual encroachments on the land, has washed away nearly a whole street; and it is said, that a village, once standing on the N. side of the town, was wholly swallowed up by it. It is 188 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1005.

HORNWORK, s. in Fortification, an out-work, advancing towards the field, consisting of two demi-bastions, joined to a curtain.

HORNY, a. made of, or resembling, horn; hard as horn, or callous.

HOROGRAPHY, (horigraphy) s. [horographie, Fr.] an account of the hours.

HOROLOGUE, s. [horologium, Lat.] an instrument that tells the hour.

HOROLOGY, s. the scientific description of the art of making machines for measuring time by, as chronometers, clocks, watches, &c.

HOROMETRY, s. [hora and metreo, Gr.] the art of measuring the hours.

HOROSCOPE, s. [hora and skeptomai, Gr.] in Astrology, the configuration of the planets at the hour of a person's birth.

HORRENT, a. [horreo, Lat.] pointing outwards; bristled with points. Horrent arms, 3 Milt.

HORRIBLE, a. occasioning horror; hideous; odious.

HORRIBLENESS, s. that quality in a person or thing which affects with horror, or a strong apprehension of instant danger, &c.; a deep impression of odiousness.

HORRIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to raise fear and horror.

HORRID, a. hideous; shocking.

HORRIDNESS, s. that quality which renders a thing extremely odious, shocking, or dreadful.

HORRIFIC, a. [horror and facio, Lat.] causing horror.

HORROR, s. [Lat.] a passion excited by an object which causes both a high degree of fear and detestation. Figuratively, a gloom, or dreariness, which affects with horror.

HORROX, JEREMIAH, a working English astronomer of the 17th century, who first observed a transit of Venus, and suggested a reason for certain phenomena connected with the moon, which Newton afterwards adopted and demonstrated. He died in 1640, aged but 21 years, having given great promise of future celebrity he was not to attain.

HORSE, s. [hors, Sax.] a domestic beast, used in war, draught, and carriage. It is believed to have been originally a native of the East, and the Arabian horses are more distinguished for beauty and swiftness than any others in the world. Horse, in War, the cavalry, or those soldiers in an army that fight on horseback. In Manufactories, any thing used as a support; hence a horse to dry linen on. Among mariners, a rope fastened to the arms of each yard, to support the men when handling or reefing the sails. In Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere, more properly called the Horse's Head.

To HORSE, v. a. [horian, Sax.] to mount upon a horse; to carry a person, or to place a person, on one's back; to set astride upon a thing.

HORSEBACK, s. the back of a horse; the state of being mounted on a horse.

HORSEBEAN, s. in Fanning, a small bean usually given to horses.

HORSEBLOCK, s. a block made use of to assist a person in mounting a horse.

HORSEBOAT, s. a large boat used at ferries to carry horses over the water.

HORSEBOY, s. a groom, or boy employed in dressing horses; a stable-boy.

HORSEBREAKER, s. one who tames horses, and fits them either for riding or drawing.

HORSECHESNUT, Ho RSECHSTNUT, s. in Botany, a common and very handsome tree; which has broad digitated leaves, and large upright branches of cream-coloured flowers.

HORSECOURSER, s. one that runs or keeps running-horses; a dealer in horses.

HORSEFLESH, s. the flesh of horses. Figuratively, horses themselves.

HORSEFLY, s. in Natural History, a fly that breeds in horses.

HORSELAUGH, (horselauff) s. a loud, violent, and sometimes affected laugh.

HORSELEECH, s. [horse and leece, Sax.] in Natural History, a great leech, common in brooks and ponds; also, a farrier, a horse doctor.

HORSE-LITTER, s. a carriage hung upon poles between two horses, in which the person lies at full length.

HORSEMAN, s. a rider, or one mounted on horseback; one skilled in riding; one that fights on horseback, applied to an army.

HORSEMANSHIP, s. the act of riding, breaking, or managing a horse.

HORSEMASTER, s. a keeper of horses.

HORSEMATCH, s. a race, wherein two or more horses contend for superiority in swiftness.

HORSEMEAT, s. provender or food fit for horses.

HORSEMENT, s. in Botany, a large coarse kind of mint.

HORSEMUSCLE, s. in Natural History, a large muscle.

HORSEPLAY, s. coarse, rough, or violent play.

HORSEPOUND, s. a pond for horses.

HORSERACE, s. a contest between horses for a prize.

HORSERADISH, s. in Botany, a well-known plant, the root of which has a strong pungent taste, used in cookery.

HORSESHOE, s. a plate of iron nailed under the hoof of a horse. In Botany, an herb, with butterfly-shaped blossoms, found in chalky hills.

HORSETAIL, s. in Botany, a reed-like jointed plant, having smaller branches arranged in whorls, and the seed contained in very singular and beautiful spikes, which do not occur on every stem. It is a troublesome weed to farmers on some soils.

HORSEWAY, s. a broad way or road by which horses may travel.

HORSHAM, Sussex. It has a fine church, and a well-endowed free-school. It supplies great store of fine poultry for the London markets. It is 36 miles from London. Market, Saturday; and a monthly market for cattle (for which it has a patent) on the last Tuesday. Pop. 5765.

HORSLEY, SAMUEL, an English bishop who attained to some eminence as a biblical scholar, and polemical writer against the Socinians. He had some name also as an encourager of science, and as a political partisan. He died in 1806, aged 73 years.

HORTATIVE, a. [hortor, Lat.] an argument by which a person endeavours to excite another to practise any thing.

HORTATORY, a. encouraging, animating, or advising to perform a thing.

HORTENSIVS, QUINTUS, a celebrated Roman orator, whose works are unfortunately lost. Cicero, whose greater eloquence eclipsed his fame, was one of his intimate friends. He died in 49 B. C.

HORTICULTURE, s. [hortus and cultura, Lat.] the art of cultivating gardens.

HORTULAN, a. [hortus, Lat.] belonging to a garden.

HOSANNA, s. (Heb.) a form of blessing, or wishing a person well, used by the Jews, meaning, "save us now!" or, "save, we beseech thee!"

HOSEA, a prophet whose ministry was exercised amongst the Jews of the kingdom of Israel, contemporaneously with the ministry of Isaiah in the kingdom of Judah. His writings consist of denunciations because of sin, sparingly tempered with promises of future good, on condition of repentance. The great conciseness of his style has rendered his meaning in many places very obscure. He flourished about 760 B. C.

HOSE, (hoze) s. plur. hosen; [hosa, Sax.] a stocking, or covering for the legs.

HOSIER, (hizier) s. one who sells stockings.

HOSIERY, s. stockings, and other like articles of dress, sold by hosiers.

HOSPITABLE, a. [hospes, Lat.] giving entertainment to strangers; kind and affable to strangers.

HOSPITABLY, ad. in such a manner as to show kindness and give entertainment to strangers.

HOSPITAL, s. a place built for the reception of the sick, or the support of the poor.

HOSPITALITY, s. [hospitalité, Fr.] the virtue exercised in the entertainment of strangers.

HOSPITALER, s. [hospitaller, Fr.] one residing in an hospital to receive either the poor or strangers; a poor person living in, or supported at, an hospital. One of the names borne by the order of military monks, known otherwise as knights of Malta, of Rhodes, and of St. John of Jerusalem, because of the attention to the sick and wounded in the crusades, to which they were vowed.

HOSPODAR, s. a title borne by the princes of Wallachia and Moldavia, who received the investiture of their principalities from the Grand Seigneur, and were under his protection, and obliged to serve him, and he even sometimes deposed them; but in other respects they were absolute sovereigns within their own dominions.

HOST, (host), s. [hoste, Fr.] a person who keeps an inn.—[hostis, Lat.] an army; any great number or multitude.—[hostia, Lat.] the sacrifice of the mass, or the consecrated wafer, in the Romish Church.

To HOST, v. n. to put up at an inn; to go to a public-house for entertainment.

HOSTAGE, s. [ostage, Fr.] a person given up as a pledge for the security of the performance of certain conditions.

HOSTEL, HOSTELRY, (hötel, hôteley) s. [hostel, hostellerie, Fr.] an inn, or house where a person may meet with entertainment or lodging.

HOSTESS, s. [hostesse, Fr.] a woman who keeps a public-house or inn.

HOSTILE, a. [hostis, Lat.] like an enemy; adverse; opposite.

HOSTILITY, s. [hostilité, Fr.] the practice of an open enemy; open war; violent and vehement opposition.

HOSTLER, s. one who has the care of horses at an inn.

HOSTRY, s. the stable or place where horses are kept at an inn.

HOT, a. [hat, Sax. and Scot.] having the power to excite a sensation of heat; made warm by fire. Figuratively, lustful. Strongly affected with any sensible quality, in allusion to wounds. Violent; furious; ardent; precipitate; or furiously thoughtless; applied to action. Highly seasoned, or affecting the palate very strongly; in Cookery.

HOTBED, s. in Gardening, a bed made warm for producing of plants which would not thrive without that contrivance.

HOTBRAINED, a. furious; vehement; passionate.

HOTCOCKLES, s. a play in which one covers his eyes and guesses who strikes him.

HOTCH-POATCH, s. See HODGE-PODGE.

HOTHE/ADED, a. vehement or violent in passion; soon provoked.

HOTHOUSE, s. in Horticulture, a house in which are hotbeds to bring vegetables, &c. to perfection all the year round.

HOTLY, ad. with heat; with violence or vehemence; with lasciviousness.

HOTMOUTHED, a. headstrong; ungovernable.

HOTNESS, s. that quality or state which excites a sensation of heat; violence or vehemence. Figuratively, wantonness.

HOTSPUR, s. a person of violent passions, easily provoked, obstinate and ungovernable. In Botany, a pea of speedy growth.

HOTSPURRED, a. vehement; of violent passions; rash; ungovernable.

HOTTENTOTS, one of the aboriginal tribes of the S. part of Africa. Their features and appearance have a general resemblance to the Negro race, but they are much more repulsive in their appearance. In habit, of filth they are unequalled; and beside smearing themselves with grease, they wear through all seasons, as a cloak, a sheep-skin with the wool inward. Their huts are scarcely more than gipsy-tents; and in their native state they seldom occupy a place for a very great time. In their mode of life they unite the hunter, the herdsman, and the robber. Their forays usually had the plunder of the lowland Dutch farmers for their object; these settlers being naturally regarded with great animosity. They are divided into various clans; and some are reclaimed and even Christianized. It is impossible to say what their numbers may be. The territory they occupy borders on Cape Colony.

HOTTINGER, JOHN HENRY, a learned orientalist of Zurich, who travelled in England, Germany, &c. in quest of information on his favourite subject; and became professor of Ecclesiastical History at Zurich. He died in 1607, aged 47 years; leaving behind him great stores of erudition in his various publications.

HOUBIGANT, CHARLES FRANCIS, a learned French priest, who held at different times various professorships, in connexion with his order. His great work was an edition of the Hebrew Scriptures, accompanied by a Latin translation, and by critical and illustrative notes. He died in 1783, aged 98 years.

HOVE, the preter. of TO HEAVE.

HOVEDEN, ROGER DE, an old English historian, who wrote Annals commencing where Bede ended his labours, and carrying them down to John's reign. He is highly esteemed for his fidelity. He lived about 1190.

HOVEL, s. [diminutive of hope, Sax.] a shed open at the sides, covered over head; a mean, low habitation or cottage.

To HOVEL, v. a. to shelter in, or repair to, a hovel.

To HOVER, v.n. [hovia, Brit.] to hang in the air over a person's head, without flying off one way or another; to wander about one place.

HOUGH, (hō) s. [hog, Sax.] the lower part of the thigh of a beast.

To HOUGH, (hō) v. a. to hamstring; to disable; or hinder from running, by cutting the sinew or tendon of the ham.

HOUD, s. [hund, Sax.] a dog used in hunting.

To HOUND, v. a. to set on, or let loose to the chase; to hunt or pursue.

HOUNDESTONGUE, s. in Botany, a plant with broad spear-shaped leaves, purplish or white flowers, and seeds curiously covered with hooks.

HOUNSLOW, Middlesex. It stands on a branch of the Coln, and belongs to two parishes, the N. side of the street to Heston, and the S. to Isthworth. On its beach, once noted for horse-races and robberies, are some powder-mills. It is 9 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 3097.

HOURE, s. [heure, Fr. hora, Lat.] the twenty-fourth part of a natural day, or a space of time consisting of sixty minutes; the time marked by a clock; any particular time; a proper season for the performance of any thing.

HOURE-CIRCLES, s. on the globe, are meridian lines drawn at the distance of 15 degrees one from the other, serving to denote the difference of the time of places on the earth.

HOURLASS, s. an instrument to measure time with, by means of sand running through a small aperture out of one glass vessel into another.

HOURLY, a. and ad. happening or repeated every hour; frequent.

HOURLPLATE, s. the plate on which the figures of the hours are painted or described, whether for a clock or dial.

HOUSE, s. [hus, Sax. and Goth.] a building wherein a person or human creature dwells. Figuratively, any place of abode; the manner of living or eating; a table, joined to keep. "He kept a miserable house." Shak. The station of a planet, astrologically considered; family, race, descendants, or kindred; one's family affairs. "Set thine house in order." 2 Kings xx. 1. A body of men meeting for public concerns in any dwelling, applied to the Lords or Commons collectively considered: when used with upper, it implies the Lords; and when joined with lower, the Commons. House means a dwelling distinct by itself; tenement, part of a house, divided off, for the use of another family.

To HOUSE, (house) v. a. to harbour; to give lodging in a house; to shelter or keep under a roof.—v. n. to take shelter; to reside or live in a building. To have a station in the heavens, applied to Astrology.

HOUSEBREAKER, s. one who forces an entrance into another person's house to steal.

HOUSEBREAKING, s. the act of entering another person's house by force, in order to steal; called, in Law, a burglary.

HOUSEDOG, s. a mastiff, or dog kept in a house to secure it from thieves.

HOUSEHOLD, s. a family living together in one dwelling-place or house; the management, economy, or government of a family. Used in composition to imply domestic, or making part of a family.

HOUSEHOLDER, s. the master of a family.

HOUSEHOLD-STUFF, s. furniture of a house, or utensils fit or necessary for a family.

HOUSEKEEPER, s. one who is master of a family, and rents a whole house, opposed to a lodger; a woman-servant, who has the management of a family.

HOUSEKEEPING, a. domestic; fit or necessary for a family. HOUSEKEEPING, s. hospitality; a liberal and plentiful table; the charge and expense attending the keeping a family.

HOU/SELEEK, s. in Botany, a succulent plant, so called from growing on the walls or outside roofs of houses.

HOU/SELESS, a. without any abode or house to live in.

HOU/SEMAID, s. a female servant, employed in keeping a house clean.

HOU/SEROOM, s. shelter, place, or entertainment in a house.

HOU/SEWARMING, s. a feast or merry-making upon going into a new house.

HOU/SEWIFE, (pron. sometimes hāziff, or hāzzy), s. the mistress of a family; one skilled in the regulating of a family, and practising frugality; a kind of purse consisting of several pockets above one another, and a book made of cloth, to carry thread, silk, and needles in.

HOU/SEWIFELY, (hāziffy) ad. after the manner of a person who knows how to manage a family with order and frugality.

HOU/SEWIFELY, (hāziffy) a. skilled in the management of a family.

HOU/SEWIFERY, (hāziffy) s. the business or management of the mistress of a family; prudent and frugal management of the affairs of a family.

HOU/SING, (hōzang) s. [heuses, Fr.] cloth originally used to keep off dirt, now added to saddles as ornamental.

HOU/SSA, a country of the interior of Africa, more frequently called Soudan. It lies on the river Quorra or Niger; it is a wealthy country, and sends caravans down to the coast of the Gulf of Guinea, &c. periodically. Its chief commercial city is Kano. Various chieftains or kings seem to exercise almost independent power in different towns of Houssa. The travellers who have visited it hitherto, have been chiefly anxious to trace the course of the Niger, or to learn the fate of Mungo Park, so that much is not known of the country geographically or statistically.

HOW, ad. [hu, Sax. hoe, Belg.] to what degree; in what degree in what manner; for what reason, or from what cause; by what means. Used with much, it implies proportion, relation, and correspondence.

HOWARD, the name of a family of the ancient nobility of England, which has produced many distinguished men, amongst whom the following may be specially noted. Henry, Earl of Surrey, who was famed both for his bravery in war, and for his literary accomplishments. His poetry was the first that reads like modern English. On some charge of treason, he was seized by Henry VIII., subjected to the idle formality of a trial, and beheaded in 1547, aged 30 years. Charles, Earl of Nottingham, was lord high admiral of England under Elizabeth; and by his gallantry, greatly contributed to the defeat of the Spanish Armada. He also served in the attempt on Cadiz. He died in 1624, aged 88 years. Thomas, Earl of Arundel, a distinguished patron of the arts in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., who collected in Greece and Italy a great number of most valuable and curious antiquities. Part of these are now the property of Oxford university, and are called the Arundelian Marbles. He died in 1646.

HOWARD, JOHN, the eminent philanthropist, whose labours have done much to awaken men's minds to care for prisoners and captives, was left by his father in the enjoyment of a fine fortune, and determined on making a voyage to see the effects of the great earthquake of Lisbon, when his vessel was taken, and he was carried a prisoner to France. This first excited his compassion for that most neglected class of society. After his release, when he was sheriff for Bedfordshire, he had new opportunities of learning the condition of our English jails. This led to a series of journeys throughout England and Wales, solely for the purpose of visiting the prisons; and the results of these remarkable tours he reported to the House of Commons. Encouraged by the attention given to the subject so near his heart, he continued his labours, and extended them by degrees, till not his own country alone, but all Europe had been visited in these journeys of apostolic love. Nor did he cease here, but devoted great attention to the plan for preventing the spread of pestilential diseases, now universally adopted. At length, having taken an infectious disease at the bed of one whom he visited in the exercise of his great task, he died at Cherson in Russia, in 1790, aged 64 years.

HOW/BE, HOW/BE/IT, ad. [how, be, and it], nevertheless; notwithstanding; yet; however.

HOW/DEEN, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It is noted for being the birth-place, or residence, of the historian Roger de Hoveden, or Howden. It gives name to a small district, called Howdenshire, and is seated on the N. side of the Ouse, not far from its confluence with the Derwent and other large rivers. It is 179 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Fairs, on the second Tuesday in January, the Tuesday before March 25, the second Tuesday in July, and October 2. Pop. 4860.

HOWDY, [of how, do, and ye] in what state is your health? Used as a substantive for a mere compliment of civility, or an inquiry into the state of a person's health.

HOWE, JOHN, one of the most eminent of the ministers who, in his youth, in the Puritan revolution of the 17th century, stood up for liberty of conscience, and afterwards testified by the English St. Bartholomew of 1662, to their steadfastness. He was no mean scholar and theologian, and his numerous works are regarded as of great value. He was obliged to retire to the continent during the persecutions of the restored Stuarts, and returned when James II. had proclaimed liberty of conscience. He died in 1705, aged 75 years.

HOWE, ADMIRAL LORD RICHARD, the celebrated English commander, who, from the time of the young Pretender, was distinguished for his bravery and skill: his greatest services were the relief of Gibraltar, and the victory of the 1st June. He died in 1799, aged 74 years.

HOWEVER, ad. in whatsoever manner and degree; at least; at all events; let what will happen; nevertheless; notwithstanding; yet; for all that.

HOWITZER, s. a kind of mortar mounted upon a field carriage, called a gun. In howitzers, the trunnions are in the middle, and in mortars at the end.

To HOWL, (the ow is pron. as in how.) v. n. [huglen, Belg.] to cry, or make a noise, applied to a wolf or dog. Figuratively, to utter a mournful sound or cry from deep distress; to pronounce in a tone like a beast. Poetically used for any noise that is loud and horrid.

HOWL, s. the cry or noise of a wolf or dog; the cry of a human being oppressed with distress, and filled with horror.

HOWSOEVER, ad. See HOWEVER.

To HOX, v. a. [hog, Sax.] to hamstring; to hough.

HOY, s. [hou, old Fr.] a small vessel, whose sails are neither square nor cross, like other ships, but mizen, so that she can sail nearer the wind than another vessel can.

HOY, one of the Orkney islands, situated between the Island of Pomona and the N. coast of Caithness-shire. It is about 15 miles long, and more than 3 broad. On this island, besides the great conic hill of Holyhead, which is a sea-mark, there is a stupendous rock, called the Beary, where a bird, here named the layer, a species of the penguin, nests. There is also a very remarkable Gaelic or Runic relic here. Lat. 58. 56. N. Long. 3. 20. W.

To HOYSE, v. a. among mariners, to hale up any thing. See HOIST.

HU'BER, the name of a Swiss family, which has produced many distinguished authors, &c. John James, an anatomist, who died in 1778; and Francis, the most acute observer of the habits, &c. of bees; who became totally blind, but pursued his observations by the aid of his wife; and died in 1807.

HU'BBUB, s. a mixed or confused noise made by several people talking at the same time; a tumult, riot, or uproar.

HU'CKABACK, s. a kind of coarse linen with raised figures.

HU'CKLEBACKED, a. crooked in the shoulders; hunch or hump backed.

HU'CKLEBONE, s. [hucken, Belg.] the hip-bone.

HU'CKSTER, HU'CKSTERED, s. [hock, Teut.] a person who sells goods or wares in small quantities; a pedlar. Figuratively, a trickish, mean person.

To HU'CKSTER, v. n. to sell wares in small quantities.

HU'DDERSFIELD, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is a mart for narrow cloths fine and coarse, fine broad cloths, serges, kerseymeres, &c.; and is situated on the Calder, amid barren moors. It is 189 miles from London. Market, Tuesday; when the cloth is exposed for sale in a large hall, and merchants and wool-staplers attend from a considerable distance. Population, 25,068.

To HUDDLE, v. a. to dress up close in order to disguise; to dress in a hurry, or put one's clothes on carelessly and in haste. Figuratively, to cover up in haste; to perform in a hurry; to join together in a confused and improper manner.—v. n. to come in a crowd or hurry.

HUDDLE, s. a confused crowd or mixture; a crowd assembled together in a hurry; a tumult.

HUDSON, HENRY, one of the most distinguished of the early navigators, who attempted the discovery of a N. W. passage to the Indies. He made several voyages with this intent; discovered the river in the United States called after his name, and the bay which also bears his name; on the last voyage he was put on shore by his mutinous crew, and perished, in 1610.

HUDSON'S BAY, an inland sea, in the N. E. part of the N. American continent, joined to the Atlantic Ocean by Hudson's Strait; both named after their discoverer. It is more than 1000 miles long, and above 400 miles broad. Its shores vary in their character; some parts being very rocky and steep, and others being low, or mere swamps. It receives the waters of great numbers of rivers, but of no very considerable or celebrated ones; and it has many rocky islands in it. The country round, which forms part of British N. America, is most desolate; having never been used except for hunting grounds by the Indians, the Esquimaux, and traders, and the settlements being mere forts. The Hudson's Bay Company, is an English company who enjoy the monopoly of the fur trade in the region round the Bay.

HUDSON'S RIVER, one of the finest rivers in North America, rising in a mountainous country, in the N. E. part of the state of New York, about half way between the lakes Ontario and Champlain. It waters Albany and Hudson, and proceeds in a southerly direction almost its whole course to the Atlantic Ocean, which it enters at York Bay, 10 miles S. of New York, after a course of 250 miles. The tide flows a few miles above Albany, which is 160 miles from New York. It is navigable for hoes of 70 or 80 tons to Albany, and for ships to Hudson.

HUE, s. [hience, Sax.] colour.—[hude, Fr.] a clamour, or legal pursuit after a robber, attended with noise. Hue and cry, in Law, is the pursuit of a person who has committed felony on the highway.

HUEN, a fertile island of the Baltic, in the Sound, subject to Sweden. It has only one village, containing about 50 houses. This island was granted, by Frederick II. king of Denmark, to Tycho Brahe, the celebrated astronomer, with a castle called Uraniburg, erected for the purpose of making observations, in which he resided upwards of 20 years. It is about 6 miles in circumference, and lies 14 miles N. by E. of Copenhagen.

HUER, s. one whose business it is to call out to others.

HUERTA, VINCENT GARCIA DE, a Spanish poet and critic, who took a prominent part in restoring the national taste, and recovering it from the influence of French criticism. Some of his dramas are accounted very fine. He died in 1797, aged 68 years.

HUET, PIERRE DANIEL, the celebrated French scholar, whose editions of the classics, got out whilst he was engaged as tutor to the dauphin, and so called the Delphin Classics, for so long a time held a prominent place with scholars. He was for a time Bishop of Avrantes; and died in 1721, aged 91 years.

HUFF, s. [heofan, Sax.] a swell of sudden anger or insolence; a severe and insolent reprimand; one who is swelled and grown insolent with a vain opinion of his own value.

To HUFF, v. a. to swell or puff; to hector, or treat with insolence; to chide or reprimand with insolence or severity. In Gaming, to take a trick from a person who did not play to a lead.

HUFFEER, s. a boaster or bully.

HUFFISH, a. with arrogance, insolence, or bragging.

HUFFISHLY, ad. with arrogant petulance.

HUFFISHNESS, s. noisy blarney; insolent pride.

To HUG, v. a. [hegian, Sax.] to press close in an embrace. Figuratively, to fondle, or treat with tenderness; to hold fast with great affection.

HUG, s. an embrace wherein a person is held tight within the arms.

HUGE, a. [hooch, Belg.] large, applied to size, generally including excess; vast or immense. SYNON. Huge implies greatness in bulk; vast, greatness in extent; enormous, greatness in size, even to deformity and dreadfulness; immense, unlimited extent, even beyond expression. Thus we say, a huge giant; a vast tract of land; an enormous crime; the immense expanse.

HUGELY, ad. in an extensive manner; immensely, or enormously, applied to size. Greatly; very much; prodigiously; applied to degree.

HUGENESS, s. enormity, applied to bulk. Greatness or extensiveness, applied to quality or degree.

HUGGER-MUGGER, (the g in both these words before e has the hard sound, s. secrecy; by-place.

HUGUENOTS, a name given to the Protestants of France, in the religious wars and persecutions that followed the Reformation.

HUGY, s. vast; great; large.

HUKE, s. (husque, Fr.) a cloak.

HULK, s. (hulc, Sax. hulke, Belg.) the body of a ship. Figuratively, any thing bulky and weighty.

TO HULK, v. a. to pull out the entrails of animals.

HULL, s. (hulan, Sax.) the husk or outward covering of corn or any other thing; also, the body of a ship.

TO HULL, v. n. to float; to drive to and fro upon the water without sails or rudder. "He looked, and saw the ark hull on the flood," Par. Lost.

HULL, or KINGSTON UPON HULL, Yorkshire, E. Riding. It is seated on a river called the Hull, which rises not far from Driffield, and here enters the river Humber. Its situation is extremely advantageous; for, besides its communication with the Yorkshire rivers and canals, it has access also, by the Humber, to the Trent, and all its branches and communications. Hence it has the import and export trade of many of the northern and midland counties. The foreign trade is chiefly to the Baltic; but it has also a regular traffic with the southern parts of Europe, and with America. More ships are sent hence to Greenland, than from any other port, that of London excepted. The coasting trade, also, for coal, corn, wool, manufactured goods, &c. is very extensive. The harbour is chiefly artificial, consisting of a dock, the largest in the kingdom, with which the river communicates, and in which 800 ships may ride safely and conveniently. Among the public buildings are the Trinity House, for the relief of seamen and their widows; an exchange; and a town hall. The grand stone bridge over the river to Holderness consists of 14 arches. It is 173 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 41,629.

HULLY, a. husky, or abounding in husks.

HULVER, s. holly.

TO HUM, v. a. (homelan, Belg.) to make a noise, applied to bees. To make an inarticulate noise, by forcing the breath through the lips when shut; to pause in speaking, and fill up the interval by making a sound with the breath forced through the lips when shut; to sing so low as scarcely to be heard. "To hum a tune," Pope. To applaud. To hum a person, is to render him ridiculous, by exercising some frolic upon him.

HUM, s. the hoarse buzzing noise made by bees. Figuratively, the confused noise made by a crowd of people engaged in discourse; any low, rough noise; a pause filled up by a forcible emission of the breath through the lips when shut.

HUM, interj. an instinctive sound, uttered to express doubt and deliberation.

HUMAN, a. (humanus, Lat.) having the qualities of a reasonable creature or man; belonging to or like a man.

HUMANE, a. (humaine, Fr.) kind; civil; good-natured; benevolent; ready to do good offices, and embracing all opportunities to relieve and compassionate our fellow-creatures.

HUMANELY, ad. in a kind, civil, compassionate, or benevolent manner.

HUMANIST, s. (humanista, Fr.) a person who teaches the rudiments or grammar of languages.

HUMANITY, s. (humanitas, from homo, Lat.) the nature of man; mankind, or the collective body of reasonable creatures; the exercise of all the social and benevolent virtues. Humanities, in the plural, signifies grammar, rhetoric, and poetry, known by the name of litera humaniores, human learning; for teaching of which there are professors in the university of Scotland, called Humanists. SYNON. Humanity denotes a fellow-feeling for the distresses of a stranger; tenderness is a susceptibility of impression more applicable to persons with whom we are nearly connected.

TO HUMANIZE, v. a. (humaniser, Fr.) to soften, or render susceptible of the impressions of tenderness or benevolence.

HUMANKIND, s. the race of reasonable creatures, called men.

HUMANLY, ad. after the manner, or according to the power, of men.

HUMBER, a river formed by the Trent, Ouse, Derwent, and several other streams. It divides Yorkshire from Lincolnshire, and falls into the German Ocean near Holderness.

HUMBLE, a. (humble, Fr.) having a modest or low opinion of one's own abilities; behaving with modesty, submission, and deference to others. Low, applied to situation or rank.

TO HUMBLE, v. a. to destroy or diminish a person's pride; to make less arrogant; to make submissive; to mortify; to subdue; to diminish the height of a thing.

HUMBLEBEE, s. in Natural History, a large wild bee, so called from its buzzing.

HUMBLEMOUTHED, a. mild or meek in speech.

HUMBLENESS, s. a disposition of mind wherein a person has a low opinion of his abilities, and is submissive to others.

HUMBLER, s. one who subdues either his own pride, or that of others.

HUMBLY, ad. with a proper deference and submission to others; without pride. Low, applied to situation or distance from the earth.

HUMBOLDT, CHARLES WILLIAM, BARON VON, a late celebrated philologist and grammarian of Germany. He first studied law, and afterwards, perhaps through his friendship for Schiller, devoted himself to literature. But he was soon called to the duties of a statesman, and during some of the most perplexed passages of European history, in the first twenty years of this century, took a very distinguished part. He was ambassador to the greatest courts of Europe from Prussia, and to the most important congresses and meetings of potentates. He retired at last, and followed uninterruptedly his own study; making himself master of the most important and curious languages spoken in the world, for the purpose of tracing their connexion, and investigating the remotest history of the nations using them. His published works and treatises are numerous, and of great value to philosophical students. He died in 1835, aged 68 years.

HUMDRUM, a. (hum and drone,) dull; stupid; not answering or taking notice when spoken to, on account of stupidity.

HUME, DAVID, one of the most famous of Scottish literary men and philosophers. The early part of his life he spent solely as a student, and travelled in France for retirement alone. He afterwards accepted a post as companion and secretary to a nobleman, and then to a military statesman, with whom he visited other parts of the continent. After another period of literary life and studentship, he attended the English ambassador to Paris, acted as chargé d'affaires; and returning, held an under-secretariat of state. He then retired to Edinburgh, and in 1776 died, aged 66 years. Hume's great work is his History of England, which will always remain a standard work; though more patient and complete examination of original records, &c., and a better understanding of the rationale of history, have taken from it its value as a record of our national progress. His philosophical works are, a Treatise on Human Nature, not much valued; and his Essays, some of which, especially on political subjects, are valuable. His philosophy was complete scepticism. He pushed his conclusions to the uttermost point to which logic would carry him, and having in his system denied all that men believe, in his daily life he denied his system. Neither he nor his admiring disciples ever thought of doubting, however, the propriety of such an employment of logic as this. His essay on Miracles made the most stir, and is the mark against which theologians discharge their sharpest arrows to this day. Hume and his opponents have all argued as if miracles were the sole evidence of revelation; and have incorrectly defined them as violations of the laws of nature; whilst his rejection of them is based on a most exaggerated view of the imperfection of human testimony. The damage he did to the established and authorized creeds was great; but he has done none to truth. His predilections for the martyr of Anglican Episcopacy, Charles I., show very singularly beside his cold and sneering scepticism.

HUMECTATION, s. [Fr.] the act of wetting or moistening.

HUMERAL, a. (humeral, Lat.) belonging to the shoulder.

HUMERUS, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, is the shoulder, or upper part of the arm, between the scapula and elbow.

HUMID, a. (humidus, Lat.) moist; or having the power to wet; wet.

HUMIDITY, s. [humidité, Fr.] moisture, or that quality which a fluid has of entering the pores, or wetting other bodies.

HUMILIATION, s. [Fr.] an act whereby a person voluntarily descends from a higher degree of dignity to a lower; mortification, or a sense and expression of our defects and unworthiness; abatement of pride.

HUMILITY, s. [humilité, Fr.] a disposition of mind wherein a person has a low opinion of himself and his advantages, is submissive to authority, and attentive to instruction.

HUMMEL, JOHN NEPOMUK, a celebrated German composer of the beginning of this century. He studied under Mozart, and was first known for his exquisite performance on the piano. He became chapel-master to the king of Wurtemberg, and afterwards to the duke of Weimar; but both before and afterwards he travelled in England and W. Europe. His music is very much admired. He died in 1837, aged 59 years.

HUMMER, s. a person who tells a plausible story to another in order to gain his credit, and induce him to believe a falsity; one who tells a lie.

HUMMING-BIRD, s. in Ornithology, the name of a numerous family of very small and exceedingly beautiful birds, natives of S. America, which often are seen there sipping with their slender beaks the honey of flowers as they poise themselves on the wing before them. Their nests are very exquisitely made. They are too delicate to endure any attempts to bring them alive to this country.

HUMMOCH, an island in the Eastern Indian Ocean, about 6 miles in length. The natives resemble the Malays, both in appearance and disposition, but speak the same language as the inhabitants of Mindanao. This island is exceedingly fertile, and produces most of the tropical fruits. But the principal articles of trade with the Dutch are bees' wax and honey. It lies about 15 miles S. of the S. point of Mindanao. Lat. 5. 27. N. Long. 125. 12. E.

HUMOR, HUMOUR, s. [Lat.] moisture; any fluid body. In Anatomy, the fluids in an animal body, or any corrupt matter collected in a wound or abscess. Temper, disposition, or the ruling passion, or present disposition, applied to the mind. Petulance; peevishness; caprice; whim; any odd medley of ideas which excite a smile, or raise a laugh; pleasantry; jocularly; a trick, habit, or practice. SYNON. Humour is an element of individual character, nearly allied to genius, expressing itself by the reference, tacitly or implicitly made, of things that are dealt with, to what is infinite and universal, so as to put all finite things and temporary, great or small, on a common level of littleness. Wit, which is akin to talent, is the bringing of dissimilar images and thoughts into contrast by the aid of one point of resemblance, so as to excite an agreeable surprise. Drollery is such association of dissimilar images and thoughts without a point of resemblance being indicated or existing at all.

HUMORAL, a. relating to the humours of the body. Humoral Pathology, a system or theory of the human frame, in which various humours play a conspicuous part, and their regular or irregular motions, slow or rapid formation, passage and excretion, account for all the varieties of health and disease. It is almost wholly superseded now, but it contained some grains of truth it has been as well not to have thrown away.

HUMORIST, s. [Fr.] one who is greatly pleased or displeased with little things, and conducts his actions, not by reason and the nature of things, but by caprice, fancy, or some predominant passion.

HUMOROUS, a. full of odd or comical ideas and sentiments; capricious; without any rule but the present whim; pleasant or jocular.

HUMOROUSLY, ad. in a jocular or pleasant manner, so as to extort a smile or raise a laugh; with caprice or whim.

HUMOROUSNESS, s. fickleness of temper; a disposition pleased or offended with trifles.

HUMORSOME, a. easily pleased or displeased with trifles; peevish; odd; of a changeable disposition, or not pleased long with any thing.

HUMORSOMELY, ad. in a peevish manner; in such a manner as to be pleased or displeased with trifles, or not to be pleased with any thing long.

To HUMOUR, v. a. to please or soothe, by complying with a person's ruling passion or peculiar foible. Figuratively, to suit any design in such a manner to an obstacle, as to make it rather an ornament than an impediment; to comply with.

HUMP, s. [corrupted, perhaps, from bump.] the swelling on a crooked back.

HUMPBACK, a. a crooked back, or a back which has a kind of hump or knob swelling above the other parts of its surface.

To HUNCH, v. a. [husch, Teut.] to push, as with the elbow.

HUNCHBACKED, a. having a hump or crooked back.

HUNCHEB, v. a. in Botany, swelled out, as the under part of the blossoms of the foxglove, the blossom of the honeysuckle, the cup of the fumitory, &c.

HUNDRED, a. [Sax.] a number consisting of ten times ten. Substantively, it implies a division of a county, perhaps so called from containing a hundred securities for the king's peace. Likewise a measure or certain quantity of things. A hundred of salt, at Amsterdam, is 14 tons. A hundred of deal boards consists of six-score, i. e. 120, which is likewise called the long hundred.

HUNDREDETH, a. [hundertegotha, Sax.] the ordinal of a hundred, or that which has ninety-nine placed before it.

HUNDREDWEIGHT, s. a measure of weight equal to 112 pounds Avordupoise.

HUNG, preterid, and past part. of To HANG.

HUNGARY, a kingdom of Europe, belonging to the Austrian empire, and which in its widest meaning included Transylvania, Banat, Slavonia, Croatia, and Dalmatia, beside Hungary itself. Hungary Proper is bounded by Austria, Moravia, Galicia, Transylvania, Turkey, Slavonia, Croatia, and Styria. Its mountains are the Carpathian range, some heights in which are 9000 feet in altitude; and its rivers are the Danube, the Drave, the Theiss, the Marosch, and their tributaries. Amongst its numerous lakes the chief are the Platten See, and the Neusidler See. For its productions, &c., see AUSTRIA. Presburg is its chief place. Its population is about 9,000,000.

HUNGARY-WATER, s. a distilled water prepared from the tops of flowers of rosemary, so denominated from a queen of Hungary, for whose use it was first made.

HUNGER, s. [Sax.] the pain felt on fasting long; a desire of food. Figuratively, any violent desire.

To HUNGERY, v. n. to feel pain on long fasting; to be desirous of eating. Figuratively, to desire any thing with great eagerness.

HUNGERBIT, HUNGERBITTEN, a. pained or worn out for want of food.

HUNGERFORD, Berkshire. It is seated on the river Kennet, in a low and watery soil, and noted for the best trout and craw-fish in all England. It is 64 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 2724.

HUNGERLY, a. hungry; wanting food or nourishment.

To HUNGERLY, HUNGRILY, ad. with a keen appetite, or like a person that wants food.

HUNGRED, a. pinched by want of food.

HUNGRY, a. feeling pain for want of food; wanting food; lean for want of food. Figuratively, not fat, fruitful, or prolific.

HUNGRY HILL, a lofty, steep, and rocky mountain, in Cork, Munster, Ireland. It is above 2000 feet high, and near its summit is a large lake, which produces one of the finest cataracts in the kingdom.

HUNKS, s. [hunskur, Isl.] a person who is covetous of money, and spends very little; a miser.

HUNS, a Scythian tribe, which emigrated to Europe in the 5th century, and took part in the overthrow of the Roman empire. They came from the very borders of China, and were a branch of the great Tatar family. Attila, the scourge of God, was their most distinguished leader. The settlements they made were principally in the frontier territories of the W. Empire.

To HUNT, v. a. [hunta, Sax.] to chase wild animals; to pursue with dogs. Figuratively, to pursue or follow close; to follow after; to direct or manage hounds in the chase.

HUNT, s. a pack of hounds; a chase after wild animals; pursuit.

HUNTER, s. [hunta, Isl.] one who chases animals for pleasure or exercise; a dog that scents, or is used in pursuing, beasts of prey; a swift and strong horse, that is fit to follow the chase.

HUNTER, the name of two celebrated anatomists and physiologists of the last century. William, the elder, studied under Dr. Cullen, and having settled in London, after a while obtained the post of physician extraordinary to the queen. He received

HUNT

INGDON

SHIRE.

BINCINGHAM

REFERENCE

to the boundaries

1 Huntingdonshire

2 Leicestershire

3 Norman Chase

4 Tiesland

The County returns 2 members.

Scale of Miles

Railway Stations thus

other honourable appointments, and collected a noble museum, now attached to Glasgow university. His chief attention was given to midwifery, and his most valuable works were published on subjects connected with it. He died in 1783, aged 65 years. John, the younger and more famous, was attached to the study by his brother's success, and under him commenced his career. He entered Oxford, but left it for St. George's Hospital, London. His first service was as army surgeon in Portugal, but on his return he took up his favourite pursuit, comparative anatomy. He held, later in life, the post of king's surgeon and hospital inspector. His costly museum belongs now to the College of Surgeons. He died in 1793, aged 65 years. His services to science are inadequately represented by the works he published, invaluable as they were. His great work was his museum, and the arrangement he adopted for it was almost the first truly scientific light thrown on this most interesting and valuable inquiry. When it is remembered that he struck out his path almost wholly for himself, the veneration with which his name is regarded will not appear to exceed his deserts.

HUNTING, s. the exercise or diversion of pursuing four-footed beasts of game. With us this is chiefly performed with dogs, and the chases are the hart, buck, roe, hare, fox, badger, and otter.

HUNTINGDON, HENRY OF, an ancient English historian, who wrote an abridgment of the history of this country from the earliest times to the death of Stephen. He flourished in the 11th and 12th centuries.

HUNTINGDON, SELINA, COUNTESS OF, a lady eminent for her piety and zeal in the revival of gospel preaching, in the last century. She was the generous patron of the celebrated Whitefield, and the chapels and colleges which she built or endowed are held by a denomination called after her name. She died in 1791, aged 84 years.

HUNTINGDON, called by the Saxons HUNTER'S DOWN, Huntingdonshire. It has 2 churches, a handsome market-place, and a good grammar-school. It was once very large, having 15 churches, which, in Camden's time, were reduced to 4, and now to 2; and it is still a populous, trading place. It is seated on the river Ouse, over which it has a handsome stone bridge, leading to Godmanchester. It is 65 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Saturday. Pop. 3507.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Northamptonshire, Cambridgeshire, and Bedfordshire. It is 22 miles long, and about 18 broad. The principal rivers are the Ouse and Non. It is divided into 4 hundreds, which contain 5 market towns, 78 parishes, and 279 villages. The borders of the Ouse, which flows across the S. E. part, consist of fertile and very beautiful meadows. The middle and western parts are finely varied in their surface, fertile in corn, and sprinkled with woods. The whole upland part was, in ancient times, a forest, peculiarly adapted for hunting, whence the name of the county took its rise. The N. E. part consists of fens, which join those of Ely; but they are drained, so as to afford rich pasturage for cattle, and even large crops of corn; and in the midst of them are shallow pools, abounding with fish. The largest of these is a lake of considerable size, called Whittlesea Mere. Its chief commodities are corn, malt, and cheese; and they fatten abundance of cattle. Huntingdon is its chief town. Pop. 58,549. It sends 4 members to parliament.

HUNTINGHORN, s. a bugle; a horn used to cheer the hounds.

HUNTRESS, s. a woman that follows the chase, or pursues animals for sport.

HUNTSMAN, s. one who diverts himself in chasing animals; a person who has the direction of a chase.

HUNTSMANSHIP, s. the qualifications of a hunter.

HURD, DR. RICHARD, a prelate and scholar of the English Church, rose from a very humble condition, by his industry and talent, and is chiefly celebrated for his friendship with the more celebrated Bishop Warburton, and for his Dialogues. He died in 1808, aged 88 years.

HURDLE, s. [hyrdel, Sax.] in Husbandry, frames of split timber, or hazel rods interwoven, or plaited together, to serve for gates, sheep-folds, or to stop a gap in a hedge. In Fortification, twigs of willows or osiers interwoven together, sustained by strong stakes, sometimes covered with earth, and used for strengthening batteries, or making a passage over muddy ditches, for covering traverses and lodgments from the stones, shot, &c. of the enemy.

HURDS, s. See HORDS.

To HURL, v. a. [hurth, Isl.] to throw, cast, or drive any thing with violence. To play at casting or hurling a ball.

HURL, s. tumult; riot; commotion.

HURL-BONE, s. in Farriery, a bone near the middle of the buttock of a horse.

HURLER, s. one who plays at hurling a ball. This name is given to seventeen large stones set in a kind of a square near St. Clare, in Cornwall, from an old tradition that they are men so changed for breaking the sabbath. They are of Druidical origin.

HURLY, HURLY BURLY, s. [hurldreht, Fr.] a tumult, uproar, or bustle.

HURON LAKE, one of the largest in N. America, lies on the boundary between the United States and Canada; and is about 220 miles long, and 180 broad. It receives the waters of Lake Superior through St. Mary's Straits, and discharges its own into Lake Erie through St. Clair river and Lake, and river Detroit. The Manitoulin islands stretch across its N. part. It is very deep, but generally shallow near the shores; there are however some good harbours in various parts. A river of the same name flows into it from the State of Ohio.

HURRICANE, HURRICANO, s. [huracan, Span.] a furious storm, arising from an opposition of several winds.

HURRIER, s. one that hurries; a disturber.

To HURRY, v. a. [hergian, Sax.] to drive fast; to make a person quicken his pace; to do a thing in haste.

HURRY, s. a tumult; a confusion attended with haste; a hasty or violent emotion of the mind.

HURST, [hyrst, Sax.] a grove or thicket of trees.

To HURT, v. a. preter. and past part. hurt; [hyrt, Sax.] to affect with pain; to wound; to impair or damage.

HURT, s. damage, mischief, or harm. A wound or bruise, applied to the body.

HURTER, s. one that does harm.

HURTFUL, a. mischievous; pernicious; affecting a person with loss, damage, or pain.

HURTFUL, ad. in a mischievous or pernicious manner.

To HURTLE, v. a. [hurter, Fr.] to strike or clash; to meet with a shock, and encounter.

HURTLESS, a. without injury or doing harm; innocent; harmless.

HURTFLESSLY, ad. without harm.

HUSBAND, s. [hus and bonda, Sax.] a man married to a woman. Figuratively, an economist, or one who understands and practises frugality; a farmer, or tiller of ground.

To HUSBAND, v. a. to marry, or supply with a husband; to manage with frugality; to till or cultivate ground.

HUSBANDLESS, a. without a husband.

HUSBANDLY, ad. in a frugal or thrifty manner.

HUSBANDMAN, s. one who works in tillage.

HUSBANDRY, s. tillage, or the act of cultivating land; parsimony, or a careful management of money or time; the care of a family.

HUSH, interj. [formed from the sound,] be silent.

HUSH, a. silent, quiet, or still, generally used in a comparative sense. "As hush as death." Shak.

To HUSH, v. a. to still; to silence; to quiet; to appease; used with up.

HUSHMONEY, s. money given to stifle evidence, or hinder information.

HUSK, s. [hulsch, Belg.] in Botany, the outmost covering of fruit and seeds.

To HUSK, v. a. to strip off the outward covering from corn or fruit.

HUSKED, a. bearing or covered with a husk or hull.

HUSKISSON, WILLIAM, an English statesman, who first appeared in the political world at the taking of the Bastille, happening to be at Paris at the time. He continued to take part in club proceedings there till the onward march of the Revolution developed other than constitutional principles; and was at one time secretary to the English ambassador. On his return to England he entered, after a short interval, on his public career, taking his seat in parliament, and occupying a subordinate post in the government, during the ascendancy of the Pitt party.

He subsequently rose to the more important situations, with few interruptions, till voting against the ministry during the Reform Bill debates, he resigned his post, and often appeared in the opposition. He died in consequence of injuries received from a locomotive engine at the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester railway, in 1830, aged 60 years. Huskisson's name is associated with the Corn Laws, and with measures relating to the currency of the country; but he was far behind the views which are now generally adopted, and even embodied in statutes, both by his colleagues and opponents, in respect of the duties on corn; though no advance in legislation has been made on his principles relating to the currency. He was moderately opposed to the Navigation Laws; but all his free trade predilections, which became more conspicuous during the latter part of his life, were marred by the condition of the reciprocity of the nations in whose favour restrictions should be removed.

HUSKY, a. abounding in, or consisting of, husks.

HUSS, JOHN, the Bohemian Reformer, and martyr. He was a priest, and whilst studying at Prague, learned from some of the writings of Wicliffe doctrines diametrically opposed to Romanism, which he warmly embraced. He was protected by the court from his first opponents; and in a contest respecting the university of Prague, he was the victor, and was placed at its head. He was more indefatigable in teaching Wicliffe's doctrines, for which he was suspended by the archbishop; and as that failed to silence him, he was summoned before the pope, and refusing to obey, was excommunicated. In Prague the greatest and most unjustifiable kind of warmth was encouraged, and street riots and bloodshed often took place. Huss continued with the greatest earnestness to study and to preach against Rome, whose repeated summons he defied. Being at length summoned by the council at Constance, and furnished with a safe-conduct by the emperor, he repaired thither; was seized, underwent the formality of a trial, and was burnt, along with his disciple Jerome, who had followed him to the council, in 1414, aged 44 years. Huss was one of those to whom we owe our Christian liberty. He took up the defence where Wicliffe left it; and in spite of all the mistakes and all the fanaticism of those whom he roused to stand up against the pope, and whom his persecutions and martyrdom inflamed to the highest pitch of martial fury, he was able to leave his record so that Luther could take it from his hands, and gain the first true victory against Rome. The ground he took up against the pope approached more nearly to that taken up by Luther, his great successor, than it did to that taken up by Wicliffe; and yet he left much for Luther to discover.

HUSSARS, (huzárs) s. a sort of troopers, that were first common in Hungary, but are now introduced into most European armies. They are light horse, and they usually do a great deal of service.

HUSSY, (hússy) s. [a corruption of huswife, used in an ill sense,] a bad manager; a bad woman.

HUSTINGS, a. [husting, Sax.] a court of Common Pleas held before the lord mayor and aldermen, at Guildhall, London. It is the principal and highest court belonging to the city of London, and existed so early as the reign of Edward the Confessor. Also the erection at which parliamentary elections are conducted.

To HUSTLE, v. a. to shake together in confusion.

HUSWIFE, (húswif) s. See HOUSEWIFE and HUSSY.

To HUSWIFE, (húswif) v. a. to manage with economy and frugality.

HUSWIFERY, (húswifry) s. management of household affairs; management of such branches of farming as fall within the province of women.

HUT, s. [hutte, Sax.] a low, mean, and poor cottage.

HUTCH, s. [hwecca, Sax.] a chest for corn, &c.; a kind of house with a wired door, otherwise resembling a chest, used to keep rabbits in.

HUTCHESON, DR. FRANCIS, a Scottish metaphysician of the last century, began life as a Presbyterian minister in Ireland, but was elected professor of Moral Philosophy at Glasgow, where he had studied. His works are numerous, and had the effect of raising up a school of Scottish philosophy, which was for a time the only original school in Europe. He died in 1747, aged 53 years. He is not much read now, although there are parts in his works worthy of regard.

HUTCHINSON, COLONEL JOHN, a country gentleman of 456

the 17th century, who, during the civil war, was governor of Nottingham castle and town; and at the Restoration was imprisoned in the Tower by the king, and afterwards removed to Sandown castle, where he died in 1664, aged 48 years. He was a courageous, right-minded man; not capable of appreciating any thing which his own rule would not measure. He was always in hot water in his governorship, and was not well-affected towards Cromwell, being of rigid republican and Anabaptist views. His lady, who has written a most charming biography of this sturdy Puritan, gives him the credit of being of somewhat greater consequence than he was, either in the Protector's or the nation's eyes.

HUTCHINSONIANS, a school of divines existing in some force at one time, but now reduced to a very small number, and found amongst all denominations,—who followed the principles of interpreting the Scriptures taught by John Hutchinson in the opening of the last century. The chief feature of this system is the supreme reverence paid to the Hebrew Scriptures, which were held to contain, not only all the gospel veiled by allegory, &c., but also all human science, including amongst the rest, Newton's Principia, according to Whiston, (who was no Hutchinsonian in most things,) though Hutchinson published what he deemed a refutation of that great work. The method of developing this hidden lore was etymology, not as it is studied now, but as it was devised by Hutchinson, with that special end in view. It might have been forgotten long ago, as it deserved, but Bishop Horne, by his elegant Commentary on the Psalms, made it popular; and Romaine's piety recommended it to the good; and Parkhurst's Lexicon spread it amongst the learned; and it was in itself only an exaggeration of the common belief respecting the typical character of the Old Testament, and of the spiritualizing scheme of interpretation held by the Romanists, and other semi-Romanist divines. Hutchinson died in 1737, aged 63 years. He was steward to the Duke of Somerset, and was the actual collector of the Woodwardian museum of Cambridge.

HUTTON, DR. CHARLES, an eminent mathematician, who held the professorship at the military college, Woolwich, and contributed greatly to the diffusion of mathematical knowledge by his various publications. Amongst his works, the Abridgement of the Philosophical Transactions, the Lectures, of which he was some time editor, the Mathematical and Philosophical Dictionary, and Mathematical Tables, may be specially named. He died in 1823, aged 85 years.

HUTTON, DR. JAMES, a distinguished geologist of the last century, who founded a school of theorists which was called the Plutonians, to distinguish it from Werner's, which bore the name of Neptunians. He was a physician by diploma, but he gave himself up to scientific pursuits, and was led by his study of the Scottish mountains, to hold that fire was one of the chief agents in producing the present appearance of the globe. The study of the phenomena of the earth's crust, in the spirit of inductive philosophy, has set aside these earlier theories, but justice is done to Hutton's clear views and bold statements of them. He died in 1797, aged 71 years.

HUXING OF PIKE, among fishermen, a particular method of catching that fish by means of hooks and lines attached to bladders.

HUYGHENS, CHRISTIAN, an eminent mathematician and astronomer, of noble birth, was trained at Leyden in the study of the law, and visited England and France, in which last-named country he settled for some time, under the patronage of Colbert. His scientific zeal led him to many important discoveries, as the ring and one satellite of Saturn, the application of the pendulum to clocks, some improvement in the air-pump, and others in mathematics and geometry. He died in 1695, aged 66 years.

To HUZZE, v. n. [from the sound,] to buzz; to murmur.

HUZZA, interj. a shout or cry of joy.

To HUZZA, v. n. to make a shout of joy.—v. a. to receive with shouts of joy or acclamations.

HYACINTH, a. [hyacinthus, Lat. hyacinthus, Gr.] in Botany, a flower, called also the harebell in England. Among jewellers, a gem of the size of a nutmeg, of various degrees of deepness and paleness, but always of a deadish red, with a mixture of yellow. HYACINTHINE, a. [hyacinthus, Gr.] made of hyacinths; yellow, or of the colour of hyacinths.

HYADS, HYADES, s. [Gr.] a constellation of seven stars in the Bull's head, the principal of which, called Aldebaran by the Arabs, is in the Bull's left eye. They were regarded by the Greek and Roman farmers as signs of rain, because of the season of their heliacal rising.

HYALINE, a. [hualos, Gr.] glassy; crystalline; made of or resembling glass.

HYBRIDOUS, a. [hybrida, Lat.] begotten between animals of different species.

HYDATIDS, s. [hudor, Gr.] in Medicine, little transparent bladders of water in any part of the body, most common in dropsical cases, from a distention or rupture of the lymphducts.

HYDER ALI, KHAN, an Indian prince, who, in the last century, was a formidable opponent of the English in Hindustan; who, introducing European discipline amongst his troops, and gaining the confidence of the Mogul's forces, acquired the sovereignty. He fell before the superior skill of the British general, but left his son Tippoo Saib to prosecute the war, dying in 1782.

HYDRA, s. [Lat.] a kind of water-snake, feigned to have many heads, which grew again when cut off. In Astronomy, a southern constellation consisting of 26 stars.

HYDRABAD, a very large city of Hindustan, capital of the province of Golconda, or Hydrabad, and at this time of the Decan. It is seated on a river that falls into the Kistna. It is 270 miles from Madras. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 17. 12. N. Long. 78. 51. E.

HYDRAULIC, HYDRAULICAL, a. relating to the conveyance of water by pipes.

HYDRAULICS, s. [hudor and aulos, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the science which investigates the laws of the motions of fluids through channels, pipes, &c., and which teaches the construction of machines for producing motion, as pumps, &c., and how to render of greatest use the force of fluids in motion, by water-wheels, &c.

HYDROCARBONATES, in Chemistry, combinations of carbon with hydrogen. Gas of this description is procured from moistened charcoal by distillation.

HYDROCELE, s. [hudor and kele, Gr.] in Medicine, a watery rupture, situated in the scrotum or groin.

HYDROCEPHALUS, s. [hudor and kephale, Gr.] in Medicine, the dropsy in the head, which is almost confined to infants and children.

HYDRODYNAMICS, s. [hudor and dinamicos, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, that part of the science investigating the laws of fluids which is usually included in Hydraulics, viz. the discovery of the laws of the motion of fluids, of the laws of their equilibrium, and the pressure exercised by them against bodies in motion in them. When this term is used, Hydraulics is restricted to the scientific statement of the rules for the construction of machines and engines, and moved by, or in, or for the purpose of giving motion to, water.

HYDROGEN, s. [hudor and gennao, Gr.] in Chemistry, a colorless, inodorous, tasteless gas, the lightest body in nature. It is one of the elementary substances, but when separated from other substances always appears as a gas. It is highly inflammable, and yet cannot support combustion; neither can it support respiration, but it seems to have no positively noxious qualities. The simplest mode of procuring it, is by putting pieces of iron or zinc into dilute sulphuric acid, and collecting and purifying the gas as it is evolved. By burning hydrogen and oxygen gases in a close vessel, pure water is generated, whence the name of this gas.

HYDROGENATED, a. in Chemistry, compounded with hydrogen.

HYDROGENIZE, v. a. in Chemistry, to combine with hydrogen.

HYDROGRAPHER, (hydrógrafo) s. [hudor and grapho, Gr.] one that makes maps or charts of the sea.

HYDROGRAPHY, (hydrógrafa) s. the art of drawing maps or charts of the sea.

HYDROMANCY, s. [hudor and manteia, Gr.] the act or art of foretelling future events by means of water.

HYDROMEL, s. [hudor and mel, Gr.] mead, or a drink made of honey diluted with water, and fermented by a long and gentle heat.

HYDROMETER, s. [hudor and metro, Gr.] an instrument to measure the specific gravity and density of fluids.

HYDROMETRY, s. the art of measuring the specific gravity and other properties of fluids.

HYDRO-OXIDES, s. in Chemistry, metallic oxides combined with water.

HYDROPHOBIA, (hydrophobia) s. [hudor and phobos, Gr.] in Medicine, an aversion or dread of water; a fatal disease caused by the bite of a mad dog.

HYDROPIC, HYDROPICAL, a. [hydropticus, Lat.] dropsical, or affected with dropsy. See DROPSY.

HYDROSTATICAL, a. [hudor and statikos, Gr.] relating to, or taught by, hydrostatics.

HYDROSTATICALLY, ad. according to hydrostatics.

HYDROSTATICS, s. [hudor and statikos, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the science which investigates the laws of the equilibrium, &c. of fluids. It also investigates the consequences of the immersion of bodies of various kinds in fluids. It is distinguished from Hydrodynamics, by treating of fluids at rest, while that treats of them in motion. By some, this is regarded simply as one branch of Hydrodynamical science.

HYDROSULPHURETS, s. in Chemistry, substances formed by the combination of sulphureted hydrogen gas with earths, alkalis, or metallic oxides.

HYENA, s. [hyene, Fr. hyena, Lat.] in Natural History, a wild beast of a darkish gray colour, spotted or striped with black, resembling a wolf, very untamable and ferocious.

HYGROMETER, s. [hugros and metro, Gr.] an instrument used to measure the degrees of moisture of the air.

HYGROSCOPE, s. [hugros and skopeo, Gr.] an instrument to show the different degrees of moisture or dryness of the air.

HYLARCHICAL, a. [hyle and arche, Gr.] presiding over matter.

HYMEN, s. [Gr.] in Mythology, a fabulous divinity, supposed to preside over marriages. He is described by the poets as crowned with flowers, dressed in a yellow robe, and holding a torch in his right hand, and a flame-coloured veil in his left. Figuratively, marriage.

HYMENEAL, HYMENEAN, a. relating or belonging to marriage.—s. a marriage song.

HYMN, (the n is mute), s. [hunnéo, Gr.] a religious song or ode.

To HYMN, (hym) v. a. to praise in songs.—v. n. to sing religious songs in worship.

To HY P, v. a. [contracted from hypocondriac,] to dispirit, or make melancholy.

HYPALLAGGE, s. [hypallatto, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure where in words change cases with each other.

HYPATIA, a celebrated female of Alexandria, daughter of Theon, the distinguished mathematician. She studied in the schools under all the great teachers of the day, and finally undertook to teach philosophy. Her eloquence and beauty brought her a numerous audience, and gained for her great influence. Cyril, the patriarch, enraged at her success, fired by his representations the zeal of some of his bigoted followers, who had her murdered in the most barbarous manner, in 415. She was truly a martyr to her philosophical creed, and the circumstances of her death give us the saddest picture of the condition of those who professed to be the only true church of Christ.

HYPERBOLA, s. [hyper and ballo, Gr.] in Geometry, a section of a cone made by a plane, so that the axis of the section inclines to the opposite leg of the cone, which in the parabola is parallel to it, and in the ellipsis intersects it. The axis of the hyperbolic section will meet also with the opposite side of the cone, when produced above the vertex.

HYPERBOLE, s. in Rhetoric, a figure whereby any thing is increased or diminished beyond the exact truth; as in the following sentence. "He was so gaunt, the case of a flagolet was a mansion for him," Shak.

HYPERBOLIC, HYPERBOLICAL, a. [hyperbolique, Fr.] in Geometry, belonging to, or having the properties of, an hyperbola. In Rhetoric, extenuating or exaggerating beyond the truth.

HYPERBOLICALLY, ad. in the form or after the manner of an hyperbola. In Rhetoric, in such a manner as to extenuate or exaggerate beyond the truth.

HYPERBOREAN, a. [hyperboreen, Fr.] northern.

HYPERCRITIC, s. [hypercritique, Fr.] a person who criticises or censures with too great nicety and rigour.

HYPERCRITICAL, a. critical beyond measure.

HYPERMETER, s. [hyper and metro, Gr.] any thing beyond or greater than the standard requires; any thing beyond a rule, or the usual measure.

HYPEROXYGENIZED, a. in Chemistry, a term applied to substances which are combined with the largest possible quantity of oxygen.

HYPEROXYMURIATES, s. combinations of the largest possible portion of oxygen with muriates of lime, &c.

HYPERSARCOSIS, s. [hyper and sarx, Gr.] in Surgery, the growth of fungous flesh.

HYPERTROPHY, s. [hyper and trophē, Gr.] in Medicine, the enlargement of any of the organs, or any part of the body, by the morbid excess of nutriment supplied to it.

HY'PHEN, (hyphen) s. [hyphen, low Gr.] in Grammar and Printing, a short line drawn between syllables or compound words, and showing that they are to be joined; as in God-head, ever-living, &c.

HYPNOTIC, s. [hypnos, Gr.] any medicine that procures or induces sleep.

HYPOCHONDRES, (hypochondres) s. [hypo and chondros, Gr.] in Anatomy, the two regions lying on each side the cartilago ensiformis, and those of the ribs and tip of the breast, one of which contains the liver, and the other the spleen.

HYPOCHONDRIAC, HYPOCHONDRIACAL, (hypochondriac, hypochondriacal) a. melancholy; disordered in mind; producing melancholy. In Medicine, it is a morbid state of the brain and nerves, which leads to the belief of all kinds of incongruous and absurd things, as to the health. It is one of the most painful conditions for any man, as it is so difficult of treatment.

HYPOCIST, s. [hypociste, Fr.] in Medicine, an inspissated juice, of a fine shining black colour when broken, considerably hard and heavy, expressed from the fruit of a plant of the same name, and brought from the Levant. It is a strong astringent.

HYPOCRISY, s. [hypocrisis, Fr.] the act of counterfeiting religion and virtue, in order to pass for religious and good, without being either.

HYPOCRITE, s. [Fr.] one who affects the external appearance of religion or morality, purely to gain the good opinion of others, without being really either devout or moral.

HYPOCRITICAL, a. [hypokritēs, Gr.] dissembling; affected.

HYPOCRITICALLY, ad. in a dissembling, insincere manner.

HYPOGASTRIC, a. [hypo and gaster, Gr.] seated in the lower part of the belly.

HYPOGENE, a. [hypo and gennao, Gr.] in Geology, that mode of formation of rocks of igneous origin, which has given rise to the granite and similar rocks. They are distinguished from volcanic products in having been fused and deposited, or forced to their present position under cover of other strata, &c.

HYPOGEUM, a. [hypo and ge, Gr.] a name which the ancient architects gave to all the parts of a building that were underground, as cellars and vaults.

HYPOSTASIS, s. [hypo and istemi, Gr.] a distinct substance. In Divinity, personality, used in speaking of the doctrine of the Holy Trinity.

HYPOSTATICAL, a. [hypostaticus, Fr.] in Chemistry, constituting as distinct principles. In Divinity, personal. The hypostatical union is the union of the human nature with the Divine.

HYPOTHENUSE, s. [hypotenuse, Fr.] the longest side of a right-angled triangle, or that which subtends, or is opposite to, the right angle. Pythagoras is reputed to have invented the celebrated theorem, that the square erected on the hypotenuse of a right-angled triangle, is equal to the sum of the squares erected on the sides including the right angle.

HYPOTHESIS, s. [hypothēsi, Gr.] a principle laid down by the imagination, to account for any phenomena; a supposition.

HYPOTHETIC, HYPOTHETICAL, a. [hypothetique, Fr.] including a supposition; conditional, opposite to positive.

HYPOTHETICALLY, ad. upon supposition; conditionally.

HYRAX, s. in Natural History, a genus of animals which bears some resemblance to the cavies.

HYSSOP, s. [hyssopus, Lat.] in Botany, the branches which were used by the Jews to sprinkle with in purifications, to which the Scriptures allude in several places.

HYSTERIC, HYSTERICAL, a. [hysteria, Gr.] troubled with fits; affected with disorders in the womb; proceeding from disorders in the womb.

HYSTERICS, s. fits of women, supposed to proceed from disorders in the womb; medicines given to cure the hysterics.

HYTHE. See HITHE.

I is the ninth letter of the alphabet. Its sound varies; in some words it is long, as in fine, shine, thine, which are usually marked with e final, but not always, as in high, mind, sign, &c.; in some short, as in thin, win, sin, bid, hid, &c. In others, it is pronounced like y, as in collier, union, &c. When prefixed to e, it makes a diphthong of the same sound with the soft i, or ee: thus field, yield, are spoken as feeld, yeeld; it has the same sound in machine, magazine, &c. Subjoined to a or e, it makes them long, as fail, neigh, &c. No English word ends in i, being either added to it, or else the i turned into y. I consonant (written J) has invariably the same sound with that of g in giant, genius, &c., as jade, jump, jerk, &c. I, as a numeral, stands for only one, and so many units as it is repeated times, as I, II, III, is one, two, three; and when put before a higher numeral, subtracts itself, as IV, four, IX, nine, &c.; but when set after it, so many are added: thus VI, is five and I, or six; VII, 5 and 2, or seven; VIII, 5 and 3, or eight. The ancient Romans likewise used IO for 500, IC for 1000, ID for 5000, ICM for 10,000, ICX for 50,000, and ICDCCCX for 109,000. Farther than this they did not go in their notation, but, when necessary, repeated the last number, as CCCLXXX, CCCLXXX, for 200,000, and so on.

I, pron. pers. [Sax.] used by a person when speaking of, or ascribing an action to, himself.

To JABBER, v. n. [Glaberen, Belg.] to talk idly, or without thinking; to prate or chatter; to talk inarticulately, so as not to be understood.

JABBERER, s. one who talks too fast, or so inarticulately as not to be understood.

JABIRU, s. in Ornithology, a large water-bird, which has some resemblance to the crane, and inhabits North America.

JABLONSKI, the name of three learned Prussians, the chief of which was Paul Ernest, who wrote a most erudite treatise on the Mythology of Ancient Egypt, and various other works, theological and archaeological. He died in 1757, aged 64 years.

JACANA, s. in Ornithology, a beautiful Brazilian bird, which has a remarkable membrane on its head, and is somewhat like the moor hen.

JACINTH, s. the same with the hyacinth.

JACK, s. [the diminutive of John,] a general term of contempt for a saucy or paltry person; the instrument with which boots are pulled off, or spits are turned. A young pipe, applied to fish. A cup of waxed leather; a small ball thrown out for a mark to bowlers; the colours or ensign of a ship, bearing the crosses of England and Ireland and the saltire of Scotland. Joined to the names of animals, when both sexes are signified by one word, it implies the male, as a Jack ass.—[from Jacque, Fr.] a coat of mail.

JACKAL, (jackal) s. [chacal, Fr.] in Zoology, an animal of the dog kind, vulgarly called the lion's provider.

JACK-A-LANTHORN, s. a vulgar name of the ignis fatuus.

JACK-A-LENT, s. a simple, sheepish fellow.

JACKANAPES, s. a coxcomb; a pert, impertinent fellow.

JACKBOOTS, s. large thick boots, used by the horse of an army to defend the legs.

JACK BY THE HEDGE, s. in Botany, a species of erysimum called also garlick, wormseed, or sauce-alone.

JACKDAW, s. in Ornithology, a bird of the crow kind, usually inhabiting steeples and towers; a very sly, knavish bird, and may be taught to speak.

JACKET, s. [jaquet, Fr.] a short coat, or kind of waistcoat, worn by boys, and by ladies as part of a riding-habit. To beat one's jacket, is to thrash or beat a person.

JACK-KETCH, s. a name given by the vulgar to the public hangman or executioner.

JACK-PUDDING, s. a person who plays tricks and other pleasantries, in order to divert a mob.

JACKSON, PORT, a large bay on the coast of New South Wales, thought to be the finest harbour in the world. The capes at its entrance, which is less than two miles across, are high perpendicular cliffs, and within it gradually expands into a noble basin, with soundings sufficient for the largest vessels, and space to accommodate, in perfect security, a greater number than ever were assembled at one station. It runs, chiefly in a westerly direction, about 13 miles into the country, and contains at least a hundred small coves, formed by narrow necks of land, the projections of which afford complete shelter from all winds. Sydney Cove lies on the S. side of the harbour, between 5 and 6 miles from the entrance. There is an abundance of fish in the harbour, most of which are unknown in England, besides oysters, cockles, and other shell-fish. See SYDNEY.

JACKSON, WILLIAM, a distinguished English composer, who was for a long time organist at Exeter, where he was born. His songs, glees, and other compositions are greatly admired for their chasteness and expression. He wrote a treatise on music, and was a very excellent landscape painter. He died in 1804, aged 74 years.

JACKSON, ANDREW, commonly known as General Jackson, one of the most celebrated presidents of the United States, was educated first to be a minister, but was recalled from that by the war of Independence, which made a soldier of him. He then studied law, and rose gradually, becoming a member of congress, and a major-general. In the last war with England, Jackson gained his great fame and renown in the States, by his defence of New Orleans. He was afterwards a member of the senate, and in 1828 was elected president, having been rejected only on account of an informality four years before. He was re-elected in 1832. His greatest transaction as president, was in reference to the United States' bank; which called forth some of the wittiest satires ever published, under the title of Major Downing's Letters. Jackson was a thorough republican, and almost the very type of the vulgar American. He died in 1845, aged 78 years.

JACOB'S LADDER, s. in Botany, the same with the Greek valerian.

JACOB'S STAFF, s. a pilgrim's staff, so called from the pilgrimage made to St. James at Compostella. In Astronomy, a cross-staff, used for taking elevations, so called in allusion to the ladder in Jacob's dream.

JACOBI, FREDERIC HENRY, a German philosopher, and writer, of the last century, whose name, eclipsed by the superior glory of other authors and philosophers, has not had just celebrity bestowed on it. After various occupations, he was appointed president of the Bavarian Academy of Sciences at Munich. He died in 1819, aged 76 years. His system of philosophy, if it can be truly called so, was founded on Kant's system, but it bore a closer resemblance to Coleridge's than to that of any other eminent inquirer. He was a most amiable and religious man, and his philosophy bears conspicuous traces of these admirable qualities. His brother, John George, who died in 1814, aged 74, was of greater notoriety than he as a writer.

JACOBINS, in Ecclesiastical History, a name of the Dominicans. Also the name given to a party in France during the Revolution, who were sincere fanatics in their political zeal, and gradually acquired power, by the overthrow of other parties, till they fully developed themselves in the Reign of Terror; so called from the club assembling in a house formerly inhabited by the Jacobin friars.

JACOBITE, s. in English History, a name given to those who adhered to the interests of the Stuart family after the revolution of 1688.

JACOBUS, s. an ancient gold coin worth 25 shillings.

JACQUARD-LOOM, s. a machine by which textures of the most complicated ornamental patterns are woven as easily as common fabrics, invented by a very ingenious Frenchman, named Joseph Marie Jacquard. He was one of the numerous artisans for which Lyons was famous; and he shared their miseries under the terrible rule of the Convention, at the Revolution. He returned when that power was overthrown, and devoted himself to the invention of machines. Beside the loom, he invented a machine for weaving fishing nets. He died in 1834, aged 82 years.

JACULATION, [s. jaculum, Lat.] the act of throwing a dart, or other missile weapon.

JADE, [s. etymology doubtful] a horse of no spirit or value; a tired horse. Figuratively, applied to women in contempt, or playful irony. In Natural History, a species of jasper, very hard, of a bluish gray and green intermixed; used by the Turks for handles of sabres.

To JADE, v. a. to tire or make weary; to overbear, or harass like a horse that is over-ridden; to ride or tyrannize over.

JADISH, s. used with trick, mischievous, applied to the qualities of a vicious horse.

JAFFA, an ancient, decayed sea-port town of Palestine, Syria, formerly called JOPPA. The inhabitants are Turks or Arabs, with a mixture of Greeks, Maronites, and Armenians. The houses are small, and surrounded with the ruins of the ancient walls and towers. The ancient harbour is destroyed, but there is a good road. Here pilgrims, &c. pay for permission to visit the Holy Land. It is 40 miles N. W. of Jerusalem. Lat. 32. 2. N. Long. 34. 53. E.

To JAG, v. a. [jagare, Brit.] to hack or cut into slits and notches, like the teeth of a saw.

JAG, s. any thing resembling the teeth of a saw; an escallop. JAGGY, (the g is pron. hard.) a. of an uneven surface; having extremities resembling the teeth of a saw.

JAGGEDNESS, (the g is pron. hard.) s. unevenness at the extremity; having its extremities resembling the teeth of a saw.

JAGO, ST., one of the largest of the Cape de Verd Islands, on the coast of Africa. It lies about 6 leagues westward of the island of Mayo, and is about 60 miles in circumference. The people, in general, are black, or, at least, of a mixed colour, except a few of the better rank. Cotton is produced in great abundance, as are also the finest and most delicious tropical fruits, and wine of a good quality, though not much celebrated. Indian corn is grown; and these, with cedar timber, and some of its native animals, are the articles of its trade. The chief towns are St. Jago and Praya. Lat. 14. 54. N. Long. 23. 30. W.

JAGUAR, s. in Zoology, a spotted South American animal, otherwise called the Brazilian tiger.

JAIL, s. See GAOL.

JAILBIRD, s. a person who has been confined in a prison for some time.

JAILER, s. one who has the care of a prison.

JALAP, s. [Fr.] a firm and solid root, of a wrinkled surface, a faintish smell, and acrid taste. It is an excellent purgative medicine, and received its name jalap, or jalop, from Xalapa, a town in New Spain, near which it was discovered.

JAM, s. a conserve of fruits boiled with sugar and water.

JAMAICA, the largest island of the West Indies in the possession of the British. It lies to the S. of Cuba, and to the W. of St. Domingo, and is about 150 miles long, and 45 broad. It is generally hilly, and there is in the part nearest St. Domingo, a range of mountains, called the Blue Mountains, which in some parts are 6000 feet high, while other ridges, running in other directions from this chain, attain even a greater elevation. It has numerous rivers, only one of which is navigable. The valleys and plains, which are numerous, are very fertile, and the greater part of them are brought into cultivation. It produces sugar and molasses, spices, arrow-root, indigo, tobacco, yams, cassava, Indian corn and other grain, rum, and abundance of tropical fruits. Beside these, great quantities of valuable timber and ornamental kinds of wood are exported. It supports also large herds of cattle; and thus is well supplied with all the necessities of life. Alligators are almost the only noxious animal. The climate is in some parts very unhealthy, and the hurricane season is often particularly destructive to life and property. It is divided into three counties, named Middlesex, Cornwall, and Surrey. Kingston is its capital; and Port Royal, Spanish Town, Montego Bay, and Falmouth, are towns of importance, from size and situation. Its population is about 500,000, the greater part of whom are either negroes, or mulattoes and other people of colour. Jamaica has always been well attended to in respect of religious teaching, and the preachers of some of the various communions have persevered in their work in the face of the most formidable opposition from the planters, and other persons of influence in the island.

JAMB, [s. iambe, Fr.] any supporter, particularly applied to those on each side a door, &c.

JAMBIC, [s. iambicus, Lat.] verses composed of iambic feet, or a short and long syllable; and being generally used in satirical compositions, is figuratively applied to signify satire.

JAMBlichus, a philosopher of the new Platonic school, who flourished in the 4th century. He studied under the celebrated Porphyry, and obtained great fame by his writings. He, in common with his school, borrowed largely from Christianity, although he opposed it; and was regarded as an upholder of the paganism of Rome, although his system much more resembled the dreamy theologies of the East. He regarded Pythagoras with great reverence, and wrote a book purporting to be his life, from which are derived the chief of the fables told of that ancient sage. Compared with the fathers and chiefs of the church, this philosopher appears to considerable advantage; and, indeed, much more resembled in his principles and life a Christian, than most of them. The symbolical language which most writers of those times employed, prevented his views from being clearly apprehended, even amongst his own disciples.

JAMES, the name of two of our Lord's apostles. One was the brother of John the evangelist, who was favoured by several special marks of favour by Jesus, in company with his brother and Peter. He was put to death by Herod Agrippa, in the year 44.

James the Less, called also the brother or kinsman of the Lord, was the son of Alphaeus, and held a distinguished position amongst the other apostles and the Christians at Jerusalem. It is said that he was martyred by the high priest, Ananias, in 62.

JAMES, THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF, one of the treatises of the New Testament, written by James the Less, and apparently addressed to the Jews generally, whether converted or not. It has more the character of the writings of the ancient prophets than any other part of the New Testament, being in good part a series of warnings and exhortations directed against crimes and errors which were common in those days. It contains some very profoundly spiritual views of religion, such as could refer only to the gospel, although it bears less of what is specially regarded as evangelical than any other apostolic writing. One part, which relates to faith and works, has occasioned great perplexity to biblical interpreters, by its seeming opposition to the teaching of Paul. But this perplexity has been occasioned by the technical mode of interpretation adopted. As Paul does not disparage good works, which are the fruits and signs of genuine spiritual life, or faith; but those formal works, which were looked upon by the Jews and others as recommendations to the favour of God. And James does not assert that faith cannot lead to God's favour, but that barren, unproductive faith, such as enters not into the very soul of a man, and so is a professional faith rather than a living principle;—that such a faith is of no account before God. The statements made by James and Paul do, in fact, harmonize most sublimely, when the true meaning and scope of their writings are examined. This Epistle was not very generally received amongst the early Christians, which arose from its character, and perhaps, too, from the persons to whom it was addressed; and amongst more recent Christians, Luther and some others have been unfavourable to it.

JAMES, the name of six kings of Scotland. The first was a prisoner in the hands of the English at the time of his father's death, and accompanied Henry V. to France. He was released after a captivity of no great hardship, save in name, which had lasted for 18 years. His reign was characterized by great vigour and diligence in repressing the disorders that had arisen during his absence, and in humbling the turbulent nobles. In consequence of his success in which attempts, he was assassinated by some of the discontented barons, in 1437, aged 44 years, and having reigned actually for 13 years. The second was a feeble prince, and was a mere child at the time of his accession. His reign completely undid all that his father had done in introducing order into Scotland. He was killed by the accidental bursting of one of the badly made guns of the period, as he was besieging the English in Roxburgh, in 1460, aged 29 years, having been king for 23. The third, son of the preceding, greatly resembled his father both in the circumstances and weakness of his reign. He fell in a brawl with some of the barons whom he had offended in 1488, aged 34 years, having reigned 28. The fourth, who was a youth at the time of his father's death, and, accomplished in all the arts cultivated by the nobles of the time, was the first who attended to the naval affairs of his country. He aided Perkin Warbeck in his attempt on the crown of Henry VII., but afterwards he married Henry's daughter. Having at last taken up arms against England, he fell, with the greater part of his nobles, at Flodden Field, in 1513, aged about 40 years, and having reigned 25. The fifth was son of the foregoing, and a mere infant at his accession to the throne. He was the prey of the conflicting parties for many years, for each of them wished to have possession of the king's person to sanction their illegal exercise of authority. He found great difficulties afterwards from the power of some of the old families of the nobility, and actually banished the Douglasses from Scotland. He married successively two French princesses, and was in consequence involved in the opposition made to the Reformation, and to England in particular, by France. He died from grief at the conduct of his nobles during a war with England, in 1542, aged 32 years, having reigned 28. The sixth was son of the unhappy Mary Queen of Scots, and was crowned, on her compulsory abdication, when he was not 2 years old. The earlier years of his reign he spent under the care of the successive regents, who were either appointed by the Scottish parliament, or obtained the office by conspiracy and insurrection. When he attained his majority he gave himself up to favourites, who flattered his vanity, and appealed to his timidity, and ruled as they listed. Elizabeth, queen of England, contrived to obtain such influence over him, that he very tamely submitted to his mother's long captivity and unjust execution. He was frequently conspired against by his nobles, and was held in great suspicion by the ecclesiastical leaders, (who were now Presbyterian,) for his manifest predilections in favour of prelacy. At length, by the death of Elizabeth, in consequence of his descent from Henry VII., he acceded to the throne of England, amidst such professions of admiration and gratitude from grave English statesmen, as are perfectly confounding, by the title of JAMES I. The people of both countries expressed the greatest joy at his accession, and all hoped for good from one who had been brought up in Scotland, where a stern and simple form of religious worship had obtained the affections of the nation. But plots and conspiracies soon broke out. The first was purely political; and the venerable Sir Walter Raleigh was at the head of an attempt to place Arabella Stuart (who was descended from the youngest daughter of Henry VII.) on the throne. The next was the famous Gunpowder Plot; a desperate attempt made by some Romanist gentlemen to overthrow the recently established government, and set up the elder faith in its ancient supremacy. The failure of both, and the execution of the principals, was the only result. The principal feature in James's character, was extravagant feebleness, which led him to such favoritism as disgusted the sober English. Ker and Villiers were the two who received most ridiculous tokens of the king's regard, and who obtained the greatest share of the people's hatred. Ker, raised to the dukedom of Somerset, was implicated in the poisoning of Sir Thomas Overbury, and fell as he deserved. Villiers, who succeeded him, continued into the next reign to inflame the popular indignation, and to prepare the ruin of the throne. He was created Duke of Buckingham, and was the chief companion and friend of Prince Charles, who, on his brother Henry's death, was heir to the throne. Another feature of the king's character, or what was truly another expression of his innate feebleness, was the exalted opinion he entertained of his theological attainments. Puritanism had made some way under Elizabeth, and it expected great things from James. After earnest petitions, a conference was appointed at Hampton Court, at which the piety and learning of the Puritan divines shone most conspicuously, but was contemptuously over-riden by the king and the bishops, amongst whom Laud appeared in his most fanatical mood. Having achieved this notable triumph, James directed his care to his native country, and in a royal visit to Scotland, began the work of replacing Presbyterianism by Prelacy, which produced such fatal consequences for his son and successor. To make his opposition to the simplicity of the gospel more apparent, the king sought alliance with the court of Spain, then more popish than popery itself; and Charles and the Duke of Buckingham were despatched on a most absurd pilgrimage thither, to obtain the Infanta in marriage. All Britain rejoiced at their unsuccessful return. But James was bent on making a first-rate match, whatever the nation might think, and negotiated a marriage for his son with Henrietta Maria of France, which, like most of what he did, aided in the ruin and death of Charles. The only popular movement of James, was the offer of protecting the Palatinate, the prince of which had married his daughter, but it ended in utter discomfiture, and the people bore it in mind. James died in 1625, aged 59 years, having reigned over England and Scotland for 21 years, and over Scotland alone, in name, before that, for 33. James had the misfortune to be born for a throne: he had all the qualifications for a most praiseworthy parish school-master, and might have served his generation most excellently in that office. As it was, with his pedantry, and incessant prate about kingcraft, with his arant pusillanimity, which his favourites and the bishops turned to their own account, he has received only blame, mitigated by contempt. One thing deserves mention beside;—at the suggestion of the Puritans at the Hampton Court conference, a new translation of the Scriptures was made, under royal authority, and at the expense of the king's priors, which has continued to be the only version in use in England and America to this hour, and is the basis of most of the translations into other tongues recently made. It was looked upon as a great boon, and the king has had all the credit of it. "This he never deserved, and it may be questioned whether the position this version was put in, (good as it is in general,) by the influence of royal authority, has not impeded the progress of enlightened study of the Bible rather than advanced it. It can be no question that the reverence paid to the common Latin version, (the Vulgate,) did great harm in the Roman Church; and this is but a translation, although it is in the national tongue, and certainly more faithful than the other.

JAMES II., son of Charles I., and successor of Charles II., who died without lawful issue. He escaped from England in the year before his father's execution, and played a considerable figure in all that went on in Charles's pretended court in Holland; he also served in the armies of France and Spain against England and her allies. After the Restoration he continued to excite the general hatred of the people against himself, by his cowardice when he was lord high admiral, and by his bigoted adherence to Romanism. He was the object of incessant hostility on the part of the Church, and the centre of all the real and pretended plots to restore popish domination. He was compelled to absent himself from the kingdom oftentimes; but he succeeded to the throne without demur, for the principles of the men who had taken the most active part against him were very supple, and the name of king was sufficient to allay all their zeal. James commenced his reign characteristically. He openly exhibited his attachment to Romanism, and he begged and obtained money from the French king. The parliament he summoned did his will in all respects, and he seemed to have succeeded in what his father lost his life in attempting, and his brother but partially accomplished. The subsequent movements that he made, with the general acquiescence of parliament, all tended to the ultimate re-establishment of Romanism and absolute monarchy. At the outset of his reign, attempts were made by the Duke of Monmouth, one of Charles II.'s illegitimate children, and the Earl of Argyle, to overthrow him, but both failed completely. The leaders perished on the scaffold, and all England was terrified at the brutal ferocity of Judge Jeffreys, who, by his bloody western assizes, killed all who had escaped in the battle of Sedgemoor, and many innocent persons besides. James at last published two successive edicts of toleration, by way of preparing the people's minds for his grand stroke: some opposition was made by some bishops, and he committed them to the Tower; but they were acquitted, notwithstanding all his attempts, and the people, who saw only the defiance of arbitrary power in their resistance of James, and not mere high-churchism, universally regarded it as a triumph. He endeavoured to introduce papists into places of trust at Oxford, but was always resisted. At length some of the nobility, wearied out by his attempts, entered into negotiations with William Prince of Orange, who was James's son-in-law; the upshot of which was William's invasion of England, and reception as deliverer by all classes, whilst James abdicated the throne and took refuge in France. He endeavoured in the following year to make good his claim to Ireland, but William's good fortune followed him still, and James was finally driven from his throne. He spent the remainder of his life at St. Germain's, and died in 1701, aged 68 years, having been king till 1688, but little more than three years. In addition to what is evident from this sketch, it only remains to say, that James was a profligate, only not so bad as his brother Charles, although he pretended to religion, which Charles did not. Respecting his family, more will be said under the word PRETENDER.

JAMIESON, DR. JOHN, a learned Scottish philologist, who was preacher to a seceding congregation at Edinburgh. His only works of eminence are his Scottish Dictionary, and one named Hermes Scythicus, on comparative grammar. He wrote many others. He died in 1838, aged 79 years.

TO JANGLE, v. n. [jangler, Fr.] to quarrel, or bicker in words; to make an untunable sound.

JANGLER, s. a quarrelsome, noisy, prattling fellow.

JANIZARY, s. [Turk.] an order of foot soldiers in the Turkish armies, reputed the foot guards of the grand seignior.

JANSENISTS, the name given to the followers of Cornelius Jansen, bishop of Ypres in the 17th century; respecting whom a most famous controversy arose at that time in France. This Jansen had published a work called Augustinus, teaching that system of doctrines we usually understand as Calvinism, and defending it out of Augustine's writings. After his death, the Jesuits, who held the opposite system, analogous to more modern Arminianism, obtained with great assiduity the condemnation of five propositions alleged to be contained in that book. A body of the most learned and pious men that ever graced the Church of Rome took up the question against the Jesuits, and contested it with various success for many years. See PORT-ROYAL, PASCAL, ARNAUD, NICOLE, &c. The following generation witnessed new ardour in defence of Jansen, and the tomb of an abbé named Paris, was the scene of more numerous and more astonishing miracles, as they were alleged to be, than almost any other vexed proposition was ever pretended to be determined by. Even deeper-dyed enthusiasm than this appeared; and in such displays, such as the name ceased to be used.

JANTY, JAUNTY, a. [corrupted from gentil, Fr.] showy; or carelessly adorned.

JANUARY, s. [Januarius, Lat.] the first month of the year, so named from Janus, to whom it was dedicated by the ancient Romans.

JANUS, in Mythology, a god worshipped by the Romans, represented with two faces, whose temple was kept open in war, and shut in time of peace. It was closed but twice, in the reigns of Numa and of Augustus.

JAPAN, an empire of Asia, whose territory consists of various islands lying to the E. of China and Tartary, the largest of which is named Nippon, and the other principal ones, Jesso, Kiusi, and Xicoco. (See these names.) The people of Japan are evidently of Tartar origin, and bear a greater affinity to the Chinese than to any other nation. In their arts and in their religion they especially resemble them. Their social system is not however so good as theirs, as the scheme of castes prevails. The power of the emperor is controlled by that of the nobles, and by the laws. The trade of the empire is conferred only on the Dutch, beside the Chinese, who have always maintained a friendly intercourse with Japan. Jeddo in Nippon is the capital. Its population is estimated at about 30,000,000.

JAPAN, s. [from Japan in Asia, where this kind of work was originally done,] wood varnished and raised in figures, painted in gold and other colours. Figuratively, china, or fine japanned porcelain.

TO JAPAN, v. a. to varnish, or embellish with figures glazed with varnish.

JAPANNER, s. one skilled in varnishing.

TO JAR, v. n. [corre, Sax.] to strike together with a kind of short rattling; to make a disagreeable, harsh tone. Figuratively, to clash, interfere, act in opposition, or be inconsistent; to quarrel or dispute.

JAR, s. a disagreeable, harsh, untunable sound. Figuratively, a quarrel, or state of discord. A door left ajar, is a door left half open. Also an earthen vessel.

JARDES, s. [Fr.] hard callous tumours in horses, a little below the bending of the ham on the outside. It is most common to manured horses, that have been kept too much upon their haunches.

JARGON, s. [Fr.] inarticulate and unintelligible talk; the use of words without ideas.

JARGONELLE, s. in Horticulture, a species of pear.

JASHER, BOOK OF, a book to which reference is made in the Books of Joshua and Samuel, but about which nothing is certainly known. Conjectures respecting it are numerous and contradictory, and one forgery of it has been attempted.

JASMINE, JESSAMINE, s. [jásmín, Fr.] in Botany, a kind of slender climbing shrub, having sweet-scented white or yellow flowers, very common in English gardens.

JASON, in the legendary times of Greece, was a young warrior who headed the first recorded naval expedition of the Greeks; the object being the obtaining the Golden Fleece from Colchis, and the name of the vessel, Argo. Jason, captivated by Medea, daughter of the Colchian king, and having captivated her, succeeded by her help in obtaining it, and married her. It did not prove a very happy marriage, as Medea was addicted to magical arts. See ARGONAUTS.

JASPER, s. [Heb.] a hard stone, resembling the finer marbles and the semi-pellucid greens. It is found in various countries, and of different colours, green, white, red, brown, yellowish, bluish, and black.

JATROLEPTIC, a. [iatro and aleipho, Gr.] that cures by anointing.

JAVA, an island in the Eastern Indian Ocean, lying S. of Borneo, between Sumatra, from which it is separated by the Straits of Sunda, and Bally. It is upwards of 600 miles in length, and from 60 to 80 in breadth. The N. coast has a great many commodious creeks, bays, harbours, and towns, with many little islands near the shore. It is a fertile island, producing sugar, and the various tropical fruits; and it has very high mountains. It has likewise impassable forests and wildernesses; but the N., between Batavia and Bantam, is a very populous country, full of rice-fields, and various sorts of wild and tame animals. Here also is plenty of salt, pepper, cassia, wood useful for building, gum benzoin, &c., besides flowering trees and shrubs, and most sorts of fruits proper to the climate. They have also cattle and fowls, both wild and tame, in great abundance. In the woods are tigers, rhinoceroses, &c.; and in the rivers are crocodiles. See UPAS.

The air is as temperate and healthy as any part of the East Indies. The rains, which begin in November, lay the low grounds under water, kill the insects, and continue till the return of May. The coasts of the island are mostly under the dominion of the Dutch. The inhabitants are of a brown complexion, have faces rather flat, short coal-black hair, large eyebrows, and large cheeks, with small eyes. The men are very robust and strong-limbed; but the women are small. These living near the sea-side are generally Mahometans; but within-sides the native Javanese, here are Chinese, Malaysians, Amboynese, and many other people, brought from distant countries by the Dutch. Batavia, Ceram, Samarang, &c. are its chief towns. Population, about 5,000,000.

JAVELIN, s. a wandering or dirty fellow.

JAVELIN, s. [javeline, Fr.] a spear or half-pike, with an iron-pointed head; formerly used either by foot or horse.

JAU/NDICE, s. [jaunisse, Fr.] in Medicine, a distemper from obstructions of the glands of the liver, which prevents the gall being duly separated by them from the blood, incident especially in hard drinkers. The outward sign of this disease is the yellow colour of the skin, and of all the secretions. The vulgar prescription of barberry bark scrapings and turmeric for this disease, may be referred to as affording an illustration of the principles of that old system of medicine,—the yellow colour of the alleged specifics being the only cause of their being held to be such.

JAU/NDICED, a. affected with the jaundice.

TO JAUNT, v. n. [jaunter, Fr.] to wander about.

JAUNT, s. a ramble, flight, or excursion.

JAU/NTINESS, s. airiness; a loose and careless air; genteelness. See JANTY.

JAW, s. the bone in the mouth in which the teeth are fixed. Figuratively, the mouth, a term of contempt.

JAY, s. [perhaps so named from his cry.] in Natural History, a bird about the size of a pigeon, with blue feathers of its wings, and of a kind of light brown or clay colour on its breast.

JAZEL, s. a precious stone of an azure or blue colour.

IBERIA, in Geography, the ancient name of Spain, as well as of Georgia in Asia.

IBEX, s. in Zoology, a kind of wild goat with large horns, which inhabits the Alps, Pyrenees, and Carpathian mountains.

IBIAU, s. in Ornithology, a Brazilian bird which resembles the goat-sucker.

IBIS, s. in Ornithology, a bird very useful to the Egyptians for destroying serpents, locusts, and caterpillars; and on that account had divine honours paid to it.

ICE, s. [is, Sax. eyse, Belg.] water rendered solid by cold; also, the name of a confection made with cream and preserved fruit, used as a refreshment in summer-time. Ice is one of the instances of apparent exception to the general law, that bodies contract with cold and expand with heat. This is owing to its highly crystalline structure. In consequence of this, ice swims on the surface of water, the beneficial effects of which arrangement are most apparent.

To ICE, v. a. to freeze water hard; to cover with ice or concreted sugar.

ICEBERGS, s. [icefields, icefloes, s. large bodies of ice in high northern latitudes, which either tower out of the ocean like immense floating rocks, or extend in vast level sheets on the surface.

ICEHOUSE, s. a house in which ice is preserved for use in the hot season.

ICELAND, a large island of Europe, lying N.W. of that continent. It is about 600 miles in length, and 300 in breadth. The middle of the island is mountainous, stony, and barren; but in some places there are excellent pastures. In some of the mountain-valleys are enormous glaciers. Mount Hecla is the most noted mountain, and is a volcano. See HECLA. The exports are dried fish, salted meat, butter, train oil, tallow, coarse and fine jackets of wadmal, woollen stockings and gloves, red wool, sheep skins, sea-horses' teeth, foxes' tails of several colours, feathers, and quills, which are almost the sole products of the island. The inhabitants are of Teutonic origin; their language is the old Runic, or Gothic, the vernacular tongue of the Swedes, Danes, and Norwegians, before it branched into the several dialects since spoken by the natives of these three kingdoms. It belongs to Denmark. Reikiavik is its chief town. Pop. about 50,000.

ICELAND-MOSS, s. in Pharmacy, a kind of lichen, common in countries of high N. latitude, used in decoctions for its strengthening properties.

ICELAND-SPAR, s. in Mineralogy, the rhomboidal crystals of carbonate of lime, which possesses doubly-refracting powers.

ICE-PLANT, s. in Botany, a very singular and beautiful plant, with a leaf resembling plantain, which is covered with silvery drops. It is a native of Africa.

ICH DIEN, s. [Germ. I serve,] the motto of the Prince of Wales, formerly that of John king of Bohemia, who was slain by Edward the Black Prince: he then assumed the motto, which has always been borne by the Prince of Wales.

ICHNEUMON, (ikneumon) s. [Gr.] in Zoology, a kind of large weasel which inhabits Egypt and other parts of Africa, and is much valued for its killing serpents, and destroying the eggs of the crocodile. They are kept in houses, and employed as cats are in destroying rats and mice. In Entomology, a family of insects, allied to the wasp and bee, which deposit their eggs in the nests or bodies of other insects, especially of those in the imperfect state; the larvæ from which eat up the insect. They thus form a very considerable and useful branch of the police of nature, in keeping under the numbers of other insects. Each species affects particular kinds of insects, and rarely destroys any others.

ICHNOGRAPHY, (iknography) s. [ichnos and grapho, Gr.] in Drawing, the plan of any building, city, &c.

ICHOR, (ikhor) s. [Gr.] a thin watery humour like serum; also, in Ancient Mythology, the blood of the gods.

ICHOROUS, (ikhorous) a. sanious; thin; undigested.

ICHTHYOLOGY, (ikthyology) s. [ikthys and logos, Gr.] that branch of zoology which treats of fishes.

ICHTHYOPLAGY, s. [ikthys and phago, Gr.] diet of fish; the practice of eating fish.

ICHTHYOSAURUS, s. [ikthys and saurus, Gr.] in Paleontology, a genus of marine reptiles allied to the crocodile, but having flippers, or fin-feet, like the turtle, whose remains are found through the whole range of the secondary strata, but are especially numerous in the lias. They have long tails, and short necks, with tremendous jaws; were covered with horny scales, and had a ridge along the back and tail like that of the newt. Their eyes were protected by bony plates.

ICICLE, s. [from ice,] a piece of ice, formed by water freezing as it runs over a ledge.

ICINESS, s. the state of water grown hard by cold.

ICON, s. [Gr.] a picture, resemblance, portrait, or representation; an image.

ICON BASILIKE, the name of a little devotional book, published soon after the execution of Charles I., purporting to have been the composition of that prince during his imprisonment. It is in good part owing to the impression produced by it, that the sympathy of religiously-minded people has been given to Charles, and turned against his opponents. It is known to be a forgery. And the events and characters of the actors of that age are being better understood now. The canonization of this remarkable martyr must rest now on his blind devotion to the most lordly church principles ever declared and acted on in England, from the days of the monk Austin, and may perhaps be rescinded.

ICONOCLAST, s. [ikon and klaos, Gr.] a breaker of images; a name which the Church of Rome gives to all who reject the religious use of images.

ICONOLOGY, s. [iconologie, Fr.] the science that describes the figures and representations of men and heathen deities with their proper attributes and appendages, as Saturn like an old man with a scythe; Jupiter with a thunderbolt in his hand, and an eagle by his side, &c.

ICTERICAL, a. [icterique, Fr.] affected with the jaundice. Good against the jaundice, applied to medicines.

ICY, a. full of or covered with ice. Figuratively, cold, applied to the touch. Frosty, applied to the weather; not warm. Free from passion, applied to the mind.

ID, contracted for I would.

